Holmes Coll

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

VOL. 10

Jan. to June 1847

LONDON:

PUBLISHED BY WILLIAM LITTLE, 198, STRAND.

INDEX TO ENGRAVINGS.

ÆTHER Graduated Dose Inhaler, 91
Æther Inhaler, Smee's, 69
Albert, His Royal Highness Prince, in his Robes as Chancellor of Cambridge University, 196
Alderney, Founding of a Harbour of Refuge at, 128
Algeria—Kabylia, Plain of Bougie from the Ramparts, Bougie from the Sea, 404
Algiers, the French in, from a Picture by Horace Vernet, 356
Alnwick Castle, 124
American Brig Somers, Loss of the, 49
Amesbury Coursing Meeting Prize Picture, 240
Ancient Jerusalem, Branetti's Model of, 52
Ancient Vase, Discovered in Lincolnshire, 141
Andrews, M.A., The Rev. G. T., Testimonial Presented to, by the Parishioners of St. James's, Westminster, 69
Aphis Vastator, the Supposed Cause of the Potatoe Disease; Fungi on Diseased Potatoe, Young Larva, Destroying of Aphides, &c., 48; Re-appearance of (with various Illustrations), 384
"April the First," Drawn by Kenny Meadows, 213
Archangel, View of, 236
Armorial Bearings of Distinguished Persons, 11, 27, 43, 59, 83, 102, 123, 142, 150, 170, 202, 222, 227, 251, 267, 283, 291, 307, 323, 365, 371, 403
Artesian Wells, 16
Ascot Prize Plate—The Emperor's Vase, The Queen's Vase, 353; Royal Hunt Cup, 354
Ascot Races—The Royal Corbige, 360; The Steward's Stand, 361
Astley's — M. Pablo Fanque and his Trained Steed, 189
Athens, House of Don Pacifico, after the Sacking, 400
Atmospheric Railway Tube of Messrs. Clarke and Varley, 309, 310
Austrian Railway Carriage (Third Class) on the Prague and Vienna Railway, 112

BANTAMS and Pigeons, Almond Tumblers, Gold and Silver Cocks and Hens, Bantams, 125
Barclay and Perkins's Brewery, a Visit to: Portion of the Great Brewhouse; The Ale "Rounds," 93; Store Vats; Stables, 93; Sections of Utensils and Machinery of the Great Brewhouse, 94
Barnsley, Explosion near, Great Ardsley Main Colliery; Explosion; The Funeral, 168
Barrack Canteen, Interior and Exterior of, 188
Battersea, Great Fire near, Sketched from Vauxhall bridge, 177
"Battle of Life," Song with Music and Illustration, 192
Birkenhead, Bird's Eye View of; Opening of the Docks; Entrance to the Park; Opening of the Park, 228, 229
Birkenhead Market, 221
Boar Hunting in France, The Prince de Joinville in the Forest of Crecy, 12
Boisjesmans at the Egyptian Hall Piccadilly, 381
Botanic Society's Garden, Regent's-park, Fête at the, 377
Bridewell Hospital, Relics of; Charub's Head; Norman Pellet Moulding, 180
British Ancient Shields, 61
British Association at Oxford, General Meeting in the University Theatre, 408
British Museum, Entrance Hall and Principal Staircase, 269; Budrum Marbles: Fragment of Altar; Draped Female Figure—Portions of Frieze, 80; Additions to the Museum; Peruvian Vessels; Mexican Remains, 220; New Coral Room, 221; Head of Apollo, 238; Egyptian Room; Etruscan Room—Shields; Torque; Horse-bit; Hammer-head, 108

CAB, Patent Mile Index; Exterior of Cab; Plate on which the Screw works; Rod and Tube at the back of the Carriage; Interior of Cab, 95
Cairo, Mr. Barford's New Panorama of, 181
Calcutta, Grand Field Day at; Arrival of the Captured Sikh Guns, 340—(See also "Indian War")
Cambridge University, Inauguration of H.R.H. Prince Albert as Chancellor of, 196
Cambridge Chancellorship Election—Exterior of the Senate House, Interior of Do., Railway Station at Cambridge and Arrival of Voters, Gateway of St. John's College, St. John's College, 153, 163
Cambridge, Grand Tercentenary of the Foundation of Trinity College—Hall of Trinity, Delivery of the Oration, Great, or Bishop's Court, Leaving Church and Going to Hall, 6
Cameron, Dr. Archibald, Monument to in the Royal Savoy Chapel 389
Canada—Toronto, The Capital of Canada West, Views of, 68
Cape of Good Hope, Mission ry Institution of Tyumie, 224
Carlsruhe Theatre, Burn g of The 189
Caxton's House, in the Almonry, 144
Ceylon, Cast Iron Lighthouse for, 12
Chalmers, Funeral of the late Dr., in the New Southern Cemetery, Edinburgh, 376
Chamber of Deputies, Procession of King Louis Philippe to Open the, 33
Chantilly, The Royal Stables at, 336
Cheadle, The Earl of Shrewsbury's Church at, 28, 29.—(See, also, "Decorative Arts.")
Chelsea Out-Pensioners, Review of, in Hyde Park, 365
Chess, 10, 32, 43, 64, 75, 87, 107, 126, 131, 166, 170, 187, 203, 215, 235, 250, 270, 288, 299, 314, 323, 362, 382, 395, 411
Chester—The Phœnix Tower at, 45; Scene of the late Railway Accident at, 348, 380; Elevation of Girders, &c., 380
Christmas Pantomimes and Burlesques—Haymarket, Lyceum, Drury Lane, Princess', 13
Constantine of Russia, The Grand Duke, Visit of his Imperial Highness to Woolwich, 396, 397.—(See, also, "Woolwich.")
"Coralia," Scene from the New Ballet of, 121
Cork Society of Friends' Soup House, 44
Cork Central Soup Depôt, Barrack-street, 176
Cork, Blackrock, and Passage Railway, Lady Deane Commencing at Dundanion, 405
Covent Garden Royal Italian Opera House, from the Stage, 225; Grand Staircase—The Interior, 232; Ceiling, 268
Cronstadt, View of, 308
Cramer, Berks, View of, 237

DANZIG, View of, 136
Decorative Art, Select Specimens of British:—Black Marble Lotus Cup and Tazza; Flaxman Dolphin, as a Candlestick; Ornament of the Time of George I.; Wood Carving by Machinery; Statuary Porcelain; Nurchests, after Gibson; Crouch Ware, Mug, &c., of the Time of George II.; Sutherland Vase, 172; Pompeian Vases, 189; Cast from the Scaldwick Dale Iron Works, 189
Decorative Arts:—Rood Loft of Church at Cheadle, 28; North Aisle, Lady Chapel, &c., Font in the Baptistery, Brass Screen to the Chapel of the Sacrament, and Interior, 29
"Desert," The, Scene from the Spectacle of, at Drury-Lane Theatre, 304
"Don Giovanni," Scene from the Opera of, 365
Dudley Counts Stuart, Gold Watch presented to, by the Poles, 309

EASTER MONDAY on the River Thames, and on Blackheath, 217
Easton Lodge, near Dunmow, Ruins of, after the Fire, 88; Relics destroyed, 112
Electric Printing Telegraph (Bretti's) and the Communicator, 304
Elephant (The Dead) at the Zoological Society's Gardens, Regent's Park, 385, 386
Elephant Plough, for Preparing a Sugar Plantation, 81
Elephants, Camels, &c., Procession of, 209, 210
Emerton, D.D., The Rev. James Alexander, Testimonial presented to, 356
Epsom Races, 1847:—The Railway Struggle for Tickets, Arrival at Epsom, 325; The Railway, First Class, Second Class, Third Class, The Race, Tattenham Corner, The Start for the Derby, 328, 329; "Cossack" and "Mundig," the Winners of the Derby and the Oaks, 340
Everybody's Column, Illustrated:
Domestic Daguerreotype; New Explosive Powers; Dancing London—Polka Pumps—The Polka as it ought to be danced—as it ought not to be danced—as it is danced, 26
Examples, Mr., Exploits, 51
The Battle of the Opera—Lumley's Monster Mortar—A Valse a Deux Temps—Masked Bouquet Battery—Trap to Catch Swedish Nightingales, 90
The Show—The Storm—Pictorial Ardour, 138
Various Illustrations, 170
Easter Novelties, &c., 238
Semi-final Matches, 266
Jenny Lind Excitement, 298
London Gardening, &c., 331
The Fishing Match, &c., 378
Exchequer Chamber, Renewed Case in the, 377
Exmouth Emigrant Ship, Wreck of the Ship—Recovery of the Bodies, 348

FASHIONS, 144, 208, 284, 285, 286, 349
Fast Day in the Metropolis—The Bishop of St. Asaph Preaching in Westminster Abbey, 201
Fast, The National Fast (Designed by Harvey), 200
"Favourite," The, Scene from the Opera of, 109
Field-lane, 61
Fine Arts:—
Agricultural Pictures, The Poultry Yard, 185
Andrea del Sarto Painting a Fresco, 197
Approaching Footstep, 122
Blind Piper, 409
Bonifil as Le Fare Turlutute, 413
Buxton, The late Sir Thomas Fowell, Model for a Statue of, 293
Cavan's Well, 265
Chocolate Girl, 76
Christmas Pie, by Hunt, 25
"Conventional Charity," 24
Deer Stalking in the Highlands, 60
Evening, 232
First Steps (Stetnary), 297
Fronde Rose, 105
Fruit, 104
Girl with Poultry, &c., 252
Hastings, Morning After the Battle of, 232
"Henry IV.," Scene from, 133
Holy Well, 120
Jealousy, 280
Jean Goujon, The Death of, 317
John the Baptist Preaching, 316
Johnstone's Picture in the British Institution, 173
Katherine, The Wooing of, 333
King Arthur Carried to the Land of Enchantment, 296
La Fleur des Salons, 89
Lamnet's Lecture, 253
Lover's Walk, 105
Milton Visiting Galileo, 333
Muscle Gatherers on the French Coast, 264
Orphan—Marble Group, 120
Return, The, 317
South Sea Bubble, 296
Spanish Beggars, 197
Spring Time—Neapolitan Peasants under the Royal Palace of Pausilipo, 148
Stocking Loom, The Invention of the, 257
Sweet Summer Time, 316
Village Church, 145
Vision of a Knight, The New Raphael (National Gallery), 302
The Visionary, 269
Winterhalter's Pictures of the Royal Family, 309
Fingard, H.M. Frigate, Struck by Lightning, 132
First and Last Inn in England, 12
Fishmongers' and Poulterers' Institution, Wood-green, Asylum of the, 416
"Flowers of the Forest," Scene from the New Drama of the, 237
Fog, a London One, 8
Foreign Corn Ports, 84, 136, 185, 256, 388
Forty-third Light Infantry Regiment—Presentation of Colours to the, by Lady Fakenham, 196
"Foscari, I Due," Scene from, at the Royal Italian Opera, 413
Fox, Long-eared, 224

GLOUCESTER, The Booth Hall, 64
Grand Ute, Burning of the Steamer, 268

HAMPTON COURT PALACE, The Celebrated Picture of "The Field of the Cloth of Gold," 341
Hampton Court, Whitsuntide at, "The Last Omnibus," 241
Hare, a Black one Shot in Suffolk, 45
Herring Fishery, Isle of Man, 156
Highland Society, Festival of the, 193
Horncastle, New Church at, 252
House of Lords, The New:—
Mr. Dyce's Fresco over the Throne, 241
Specimen of Panelling—Exterior of the New House, from the House Court, 245
Interior of the House from the South and from the Bar, 248, 249
Corridors, Clerks' Table, Standard for Gas Light, The Peers' Lobby, The Brass Gates, Peers' Lobby, 261
The Victoria Lobby, Chair and Tables in, and Fire-place, 281
The New Throne, The Prince of Wales's Chair, Her Majesty's Chair, Prince Albert's Chair, 293
Ornament from Back of the Queen's Chair, Warming and Ventilating Apparatus, Candelabrum, 309
Gas Lighting, 347
Hughes's Troupe of Elephants, Camels, Horses, &c., Procession of, 209
Hullah's Singing Schools, New Music Hall, erecting in Long-acre for, 405
"Hunchback," Scene from the, Amateur Performance of the, 377

IBRAHIM PACHA, Colossal Glass Candelabrum for, 140
Illustrated Literature: Portrait Gallery, Tavern Pens, The Balance of Happiness, 76; Paul and Sivas in Prison, 124
Indian War, The late: "Futteh Jung," the Conqueror; The Sikh Trophy Guns "forming up" in the Fort of Mooghyr, 184
Ipswich and Bury St. Edmund's Railway, Commencement of the, 149
Ireland:—
The Famine in, Funeral at Skibbereen, 65
Pay Clerks Travelling in the County of Kilkenny, 242
Sketches in the West of, by Mr. James Mahony: Funeral at Shepperton Lakes; Old Chapel Lane, Skibbereen; Woman Begging at Clonakilty; Harrington's Hut; Skull, from Ballidiclob; Skibbereen, from Clover Hill; The Hut or Watchhouse in the Old Chapel Yard, 100, 101
Boy and Girl at Cahera; Village of Menies; Mullins's Hut at Scull; Entrance to Dunmanway; Ballydehor, 116, 117
Irish Distressed, Grand Military Bazaar at the Regent's Park Barracks for the—The Royal Stall, The Marchioness of Londonderry's Stall, Banners, &c., 344
Irongate Wharf, Ruins of, after the late Fire, 32
Italian Opera House (her Majesty's Theatre), Her Majesty's State Visit to—The Royal Box, 393; Ceiling, 391

JERUSALEM (See "Ancient Jerusalem")
Juvenile Fancy Ball at Paris, 77

KALERGI, General, Superb Sword presented to, 140

LÆLIA SUPERBIENS in Flower, at Chiswick, 140
Lightning, Horses Struck by, on Middleham Moor, 292
Liverpool, New Landing-stage, St. George's Pier, 373
London Season: the Arrival, 305; the Débutante—the Boudoir—the Ball-Room—the Saloon—the Departure, 312, 313

MACKEREL FISHING — Brighton Boats, 357
Madrid—Procession of Corpus Christi, on Good Friday, 212
Malay Native of Borneo, 249
Manchester, New Branch Bank of England at, 157; New (Independent) Chapel, Cavendish-street, 181; New Race Course, 337
Manchester and Leeds Railway Plate, 128
"Matilda of Hungary," Scene from the New Opera of, 157
Maudslay and Field's, The Great Fire at Messrs., 373
Mauritius, St. Thomas's Church, Plaines Wilhems, 84
"Merchant of Venice," Sketches of the Performers in the Tragedy of, at Sadler's Wells Theatre, 21
Metropolis Churches, St. George the Martyr, Southwark, 160; Improvements, New Oxford-street, 16; New Model Lodging House, St. Giles's, 61
Mexico, Map of the War in, 396
Middlesex Election—Lord Robert Grosvenor Addressing the Freeholders, 89
Milton's House, and Tree planted by him in Petty France, 21
Months, The Heads of the, Drawn by Kenny Meadows—
January, 45
February, 85
March, 156
April, 240
May, 284
June, 357
Mouteal Cathedral, Great Bell for, 188
Moon, Eclipse of the, 198

NEWCASTLE Race Prize Cup, 413
Newcastle-upon-Tyne, High Level Bridge building at, 373
New Orleans, View of, 185
New Year, Bringing in the, Drawn by William Harvey, 9
New Zealand, Views in—Panorama of Port Nicholson—Mr. Bree's Cottage, Wellington—Hutt road, at the Gorge, 37; Sketches of late War in—Waitai Church and Burial-place—Commanding Officer's Wau—War Dance of New Zealanders—External Cavern—Internal Cavern and Connecting Passage—Group of Maories, 40
Nimroud Sculptures, at the British Museum—Bull Head, 409; Hawk-Headed Deity—Colossal Human-Headed Deity—Colossal Human Head—Lion Hunt, 412
Norfolk Island, The Convict System, 372
"Norma," Scene from the Opera of, at Her Majesty's Theatre, 400
Northumberland, Funeral of His Grace The Duke of, &c., 129, 137

O'CONNELL, To the Memory of, Designed by William Harvey, 243; Fac-Simile of the Handwriting of, 347
Odessa, View of, 136
Omnibus, The Improved, 288

PADDINGTON, St. Mary's Hospital, 96
Pakenham, Sir Hercules, Lieut.-Governor of Portsmouth, Candelabra Presented to, 44
Papworth, Esq., J. B., Testimonial to, 76
Paris, Opening of the Theatre Historique, 141; Serenade des Tambours, 276
Parkhurst Prison, General View of, 164; Interior of the Court, Prisoners' Cell, Dining Hall, Shoemakers' Department, Dresses of the Officers and Prisoners, Dormitories of the Prisoners, The Corridor, The Chapel, General Ward, The Probationary Ward, 164, 165
Parliament, the, Opening of—Her Majesty Leaving Buckingham Palace, 56; Reception of her Majesty in the House of Lords, Sketch in the House of Lords, 57
Patrick's, St., Day, Designed by James Mahony, 189
Pembroke Lodge, Richmond Park, 276
Pera, Great Fire at, 132
Ploughing Match at Newton Abbot, 149
Police Offices—Clerkenwell, 332
Porchester Castle, View of, 221
Portraits:—
Addison, Miss L., 21
Alboni, Mdlle., as Arsace, 237
Alderson, Mr. Baron, 377
Alice, H.R.H. the Princess, 269
Barrolhet, as Bruce, 24
Bennett, Miss Julia, 109
Bennett, Mr. G., 21
Bentin, Colonel Thomas H., 224
Bettini, as Arthur, in "Robert Bruce," 24
Branston, Mr., 21
Buckstone, Mr., 109
Butler, Mrs., as Lady Macbeth and as Lady Teazle, 189
Byng, M.P., George, Esq., 21
Chalmers, The Late Dr., 376
Coletti, Signor, 173
Colman, Mr. Justice, 377
Coleridge, Mr. Justice, 377
Combe, Mr., 332
Constantine of Russia, His Imperial Highness the Grand Duke of, 361
Constantine of Russia, His Imperial Highness the Grand Duke of, Admiral Lutke, M. Haurowitch, and Baron Fredericks, 372
Cooper, Miss, 21
Cresswell, Mr. Justice, 377
Das Antas, General, 4
Denman, Lord Chief Justice of England, 377
Dumas, M. Alexandre, 141
Erle, Mr. Justice, 377
Farren, Mr., 109
Fenton, Mr., 21
Fielden, Esq., M.P., John, 300
Fraschini, as Edgardo, in "Lucia," 173
Gardiner, Sign., 121
Glover, Mrs., 109
Grisi, Madame, as Semiramide, 237
Gurney, Baron Joseph, 44
Hatherton, Lord, 53
Hellmesburger, the Brothers, 336
Hook, D.D., The Rev. Walter Farquhar, 361
Hoskins, Mr., 21
Hudson, Miss, 21
Jenny Lind, as Alice, 282
Jenny Lind, Mdlle., as Maria, in "La Figlia del Reggimento," 349
Knight, Mr., 21
Lemaitre, M., as Robert Macaire, at the St. James's Theatre, 85
Lola Montez, 180
Ludwig, King of Bavaria, 216
Marston, Mr. H., 21
Maulé, The Justice, 377
Montemolin, The Conde de, 36
Morton, Mr., 21
Nisbett, Mrs., as Constance, in the "Love Chace," 256
Northumberland, The Duke of, 124
O'Connell, M.P., Daniel, 346
Patteson, Mr. Justice, 377
Phelps, Mr., 21
Platt, Mr. Baron, 377
Playfair, Major, 176
Pollock, Chief Baron, 377
Prussian Ministers: Savigne, Count Arnim, Duesberg, Eichhorn, Rother, Baron de Bodelschwing, Manteuffel, 401
Ricardo, Esq., M.P., J. L., 53
Robins, The late Mr. George, 128
Roebuck, Esq., M.P., J. A., 324
Rolfe, Mr. Baron, 377
Romer, Miss, 109
Royal Family, by Winterhalter, 300
Scharf, Mr., 21
Schwalbach, Viscount St. Ubas, 4
Scott, Major-General, Commander of the American Forces in Mexico, 356
Scrope, M.P., Poulett, 277
Selby, Mr., 109
Staudigl, Herr, as Bertram, 289
Stolte, Madame, as Marie, 24
Superchi, Signor, 121
Taglioni, Mdlle. Marie, 244
Tamburini, as Assur, 237
Travers, Mr., 109
Vernier, Le, 12
Wilde, Lord Chief Justice, 377
Williams, Mr., 21
Portugal, Insurrection in, and Progress of—Schwalbach, Viscount St. Ubas, Das Antas (Portraits of)—Evora, City of, 4
Torres Vedras, 20
Capture of the Fleet of the Junta, off Oporto, Fort St. Julian; Gate of Ditto, 388
Limeoira, at Lisbon, Escape of the Prisoners from the, 324
Prague and Vienna Railway, Carriage on, 112
Prati, the Rev. Josiah, Monument to, 416
Preston, Fleetwood, and West Riding Junction Railway, The Commencement of the, 64
Printing Machine, Little's Patent Double Action, 19
Prussian Diet, The Meeting of the—The White Hall, 257
Prussian Ministry—(See "Portraits.")

QUEEN, The—Parliament, Her Majesty Opening the Session of, 88, 97
The Queen's State Visit to Her Majesty's Theatre, The Royal Box, 393

RACING PRIZE TANKARDS, 332
Review, The late, Sketch from: Her Majesty, The Prince of Wales, The Princess Alice, 81; Duke of Wellington, 408
Riga, View of, 308
"Robert Bruce," Scene from Rossini's New Opera of, 24
"Roberto il Diavolo," Scene from, at Her Majesty's Theatre, 289
Rosieck, View of, 84
Rotterdam, View of, 236
Ronen and Havre Railway—Opening of the Bridge at Rouen, St. Catherine's Tunnel, The Malaunay Viaduct, The Barentin Viaduct, The Station at Harfleur, Benediction of the Railway, 204, 205
Royal Society, The Marquis of Northampton's Soirée, 117
Royal Thames Yacht Club, First Match, 378
Rusiia, Winter in, 1, 2

ST. ANDREW, Wells-street, Marylebone, New Church, 69
St. Petersburg, Easter Week at, 216
St. Stephen's, Coleman-street, Church, 416
St. Vincent, 120 guns, H.M.S., Sir Charles Napier, 321
Sandbach, Cheshire, Ancient Crosses at, 160
San Juan de Ulloa, and City of Vera Cruz, 293
"School for Scheming," Scene from the New Comedy of, 109
Scotland, Election of a Representative Peer for, at Holyrood Palace, 208
Sea-Lion Hunt off Callao, Coast of Peru, 97
Selwyn, John, and his Family, from a Rubbing from the Brass Monument, in the Church of Walton-upon-Thames, 400
"Semiramide," Scene from the Opera of, 237
Shetland Wool Shawl, folded, 74
Shrewsbury's, The Earl of, Church at Cheadle (See "Cheadle," &c.)
Sirius Steamer, Loss of the — The Steamer as left by the tide, Clearing the Wreck, Scene of the Wreck, 72
Skating, 8
Skating in Lincolnshire, 52
Skirbeck Rectory House, Destruction of by Fire, 60
Smith, Sir Harry, Gold Box containing the Freedom of the City of London, presented to, by the City of London, 341
Society of Arts Distribution of Prizes—Prize Design for a Roller Window Blind by Mr. Strudwick, Prize Mug by Mr. Sleigh, Messrs. Minton's Prize Mug, 389
Sodor and Man, The Consecration of the Bishop of, 41
Somers, Loss of the American Brig, 49
Somerset, Tablet to the Memory of the late Major Fitzroy, 268
Son...mpton and Dorchester Railway, Wimborne Station, and part of the Viaduct over the River Stour; Dorchester Station, from the Roman Amphitheatre, 368
Southgate Steeple-chase—Scene at the Finish, 72
Soyer's Model Soup Kitchen, 256
Spain—Pamplona, View of, 36
Speaker's, The, State Coach, and the Hind Standard, 53
Spiegne Steam Sloop, Floating of, 1 Stranded, 171
Stettin, View of, 84
Stettin, Bread Riots at, 220
Stetson's Steamer, The, Launc Cowes, 176
Surgical Operations Painless rums for Rendering, 30
Swedish Song, composed i Jenny Lind, illustrated,

"THE TEARS ON THE C ROCK," Song, by Crowquill; the Music by Edward Loder, 353
"Thes," Scene from the New Ballet of, 244
Thetis, H. M. New Frigate, 113, 114
Tothill Fields Pest House, 144

VAN DIEMEN'S LAND—Fern Tree Valley, Mount Wellington, 17; Hobart Town, from Kangaroo Bay, 20
Vauxhall Gardens, Picture Model of Venice at, 381
Venus and Jupiter in Conjunction, 278
Venus and the Pleiades, Position of, &c., 246

WAKEFIELD, The Chapel on the Bridge at, 85
Waterloo Banquet, at Apsley House, 396
Westminster Improvements, 144
Windsor Castle: St. George's Chapel—The Choir, 264; Grand Corridor—Green Drawing Room, 73
Woolwich, Visit of the Grand Duke Constantine of Russia to: The Foundry and Blast—Machine for Cutting the Interior of Screw Propellers—Machine for Planing—The Hold of the Royal Albert—Grand Review of the Royal Artillery—The Staff, 396, 397
Worcester, Chalces the Second's House at, 109
Wye College and Grammar School, 132

YORK HOUSE, Whitehall, Remains of, 60
ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY, Great St. Bernard Dog presented to the, by her Majesty, 320; Long Eared Fox in the Gardens of the, 224

THE GETTY CENTER LIBRARY

INDEX

ADDINGTON, the Hon. H. E., Suicide of, 71
Address of the Lords to the Crown on the Opening of Parliament, 53
Ady's, Joseph, Foreign Correspondence, 343
Agricultural Pictures, 185
Albert, His Royal Highness Prince, Inauguration of, as Chancellor of Cambridge University, 196
Alderney, Harbour of Refuge in, 128
Algeria: Kabylia—Bugeaud in Algiers, 404: The French in, 356
American Steamers, Independence on board of, 359
Ancona, Corn Ports at, 103
Andover, Swindler at, 35
Antas, General Dal, 4
April, Lines to, 212, 240
Archangel, 236
Army and Navy Club Competition, 279
Armin, The Count, 402
Artesian Wells, 15
Art Union of London, 279
Arundel, Interesting Antiquarian Discovery at, 218
Ascot Cup, 400; Prize Plate, 354
Ascot Heath Races, 360, 384
Athens, Brigandage in, 400
Atmospheric Railway, Clarke and Varley's, 309, 349
Avalanche in Germany, 389

"BALANCE OF POWER," New Song, 7
Balloon Ascents, 215, 379
Bank Clerk Robbed, 119
Bank of England, Bullion in the, 331
Bantams and Pigeons, 125
Barclay, Perkins, and Co.'s Brewery, A Visit to, 92, 93
Barnsley, Terrific Explosion and Loss of Life near, 167
Bathing Extraordinary at Bridport, 106
Baths and Washhouses for the Poor, 3
Battersea, Conflagration at, 178
Battersea Park, 115
"Battle of Life," a Song, 192
Bavaria, His Majesty the King of, 215
Beckford's Tower, Mr., Sale of, 323
Beer, Rise in the Price of, 18
Belgium, Food Riots and Murder in, 194, 322
Bentinck, Lord George, and the Corn-Law Question, 70
Bentinck's, Lord George, Railway Bill for Ireland, 83, 103, 122
Benton, Col. Thomas Hart, 224
Bessborough, The late Earl of, 338
Bible and Missionary Societies, Munificent Bequest to, 119
Birkenhead, Opening of the Port of, &c., 199, 221, 228
Birmingham New Cemetery, 227
Births, 14, 30, 46, 62, 78, 91, 110, 127, 139, 158, 174, 190, 206, 222, 238, 251, 270, 286, 302, 318, 343, 363, 371, 398
Blackburn, Clitheroe, and North Western Junction Railway, 3
Blind to Read, London Society for Teaching the, 269
Bear Hunting in France, 12
Bode, William, the Banker, Decease of, 259
Boiler Explosion, Fatal, 195, 231
Book Robbery by a Solicitor, 178
Bosjesmans, The, at the Egyptian Hall, Piccadilly, 381
Botanical, Royal, Society Fête, 377
Boxing Night, a Lay of, attributed to Alfred Tennyson (but not supposed to be his), 3
Braham, Characteristic Note of, 196
Brandeston Hall, Suffolk, Destruction of, by Fire, 279
Bread, Further Advance in the Price of, 59, 295, 327; Economy of, 341
Brechin Castle, Wreck of the, 130
Brick Machine, 41
Bride, Trightful Death of a, 27
Bridewell Hospital, Relics of, 180
Bright, M.P., Marriage of John, 200
Brighton and Portsmouth Railway, 355
Bristol and Birmingham Railway, 355
British Artists, Society of, 239, 269
British Association, Meeting of the, at Oxford, 407
British Institution, 104, 120, 133, 145, 148, 173
British Museum, 108, 115, 220, 221, 227, 269, 409
Broken Commission, The, 273
Budget, The, 129
Budrum Marbles in the British Museum, 80
Building Societies, 166
Burdett Coutts, Persecution of Miss, by Mr. Dunn, 161
Burdett Coutts's, Miss, New Church, 252
Burking of Horses in Essex, 135
Bury St. Edmund's, Execution at, 267
Butler, Mr., 189; Lines to, 302
Buxton, Bart., Testimonial to the late Sir T. F., 253

CAB, The New Patent, 96
Cairo, Panorama of, 181
Calcutta, Field Day at, 340
Calypso, H. M. Ship, Sea-Lion Hunt by the Officers of, 98
Cambridge University, Inauguration of Prince Albert as Chancellor of, 196
Cambridge, Grand Tercentenary Commemoration of the Foundation of Trinity College, 3; Chancellorship Election, 152, 153
Cameron, Dr., Monument to, 389
Canada, Music in, 395
Canteens in Barracks, 188
Cape of Good Hope, 224, 238, 279
Carlsruhe Tunnels, The, Destruction of, by Fire, 162
Catholic Cemeteries, 154
Cazenove House, Last Relics of, &c., 362, 379
Caxton Monument, 385
Cecil, Lord Brownlow, Accident to, 359
Ceylon, Cast Iron Lighthouse for, 12
Chalmers, The late Dr., 376
Chamilly, 36
Chaplin Decorative Arts; the Earl of Shrewsbury's Church at Cheadle, 28
Chelsea Out-Pensioners, Review of the, 365
Cheltenham, Fire at, 338
Chemistry, Royal College of, 290
Chess, Amateurs of England, Challenge to the, for One Thousand Dollars Aside, 131; Chess in America, 75, 270; at Brighton, 203, 219; in France, 87; in Germany, 126, 235, 250, 270, 286; in Italy, 64, 75; in Liverpool, 109; Yorkshire Association, 223
Chesterfield, Murder and Mutilation at, 195
China, the War in, 401, 402
Chinese, Dirk Keying, 284
Christmas Tree, The, 41
City Plate, The Adventures and Perils of the, 34
City-road, New Church in the, 226
City, Unhealthy State of part of the, 243
Clarkenwell New Model Prison, 162
Coalpit Accident near Sheffield, 88
Cobden, Mr., at Genoa, 67; Banquet to at Florence, 311
Cobden Testimonial, 356
Codfish, Remarkable instance of the Voracity of a, 8
Coinage, The, 181
Cold Night, A, 103
Coletti, Signor, 173
Colliery Fatal Explosions, 215, 323
Colonization, 353
Combe, Mr., 332
Congress, Cortes, and Commons, 33
Consecration of a Bishop, at Whitehall Chapel, 41
Constantine, Grand Duke of Russia, 361; Visit of the Grand Duke to Woolwich, Bristol, &c., 372, 396, 397, 403
Constantinople, Great Fire at, 132
Convict Ship, Literature in a, 48
Cork, Blackrock, and Passage Railway, 405
Corn-Doctor, Tricks of a, 3
Corn Ports, Foreign—(See "Foreign Corn Ports")
Corn Speculators at Liverpool, 96
Corn Speculators in a Fix, 354
Corn, Supplies of, 70
Covent Garden, Royal Italian Opera, Opening of the, &c., 233; Closing of, 268
Cracow, The Case of the City of, 86
Cracow, Meeting upon the Subject of, 155
Cronin, Dr., Trial of, for Manslaughter, 227
Cronstadt, 30
Croydon Atmospheric Railway, Fatal Accidents on the, 103, 407
Cunard, Line of American Steamers—Case of Mr. Douglas, 346
Curry, Bart., Sir William, Inquest on the body of, 183
Customs, Frauds on the, 387

DANZIG, 136
Dauntless, Launch of H.M. Steam Frigate, 18
Deaths, 14, 30, 45, 62, 78, 91, 110, 127, 139, 158, 174, 190, 206, 222, 238, 251, 270, 286, 295, 315, 334, 343, 363, 371, 398
De Bodelschwing, Baron, 402
Debt, The, and its Payment, 177
De Savigne, Dr., 402
Diplomatic Etiquette, 53
Distress Meeting at Exeter Hall, 87
Domestic Column, 11, 42, 74, 154, 251
Don Miguel, Departure of from Rome, 102
Drinking, Death from, 211
Dudley Coutts Stuart, 309
Dunsbury and Rother, 402
Dumas, M. Alexandre, 141
Dunn, Mr., and Miss Burdett Coutts, 363

EARLY CLOSING MOVEMENT, 182
Easter Fairs, Exhibitions and Amusements, 215, 217, 219
Easter Holidays—Greenwich Fair, 1847, 234
Easter at St. Petersburg, 217
Eastern Counties Railway, 35; Dinner to upwards of 1700 persons, 7
Easton Lodge, Destruction of by Fire, 88
Education, 225
Education, the Government Plan of, 183, 227, 262
Education, National, 186
Eichhorn, Dr., 402
Elections, The, 321
Electric Printing Telegraph, Brett's Subterranean and Oceanic, 304
Electric Telegraph, The, 23
Elephants, Camels, &c., Procession of Mr. Hughes's Troupe of, 210
Elephant at the Zoological Society, Death of the, 380
Elephant Plough, 92
Ely and Peterborough Railway, 35
Emerson Testimonial, The, 356
Employer, The "Great Employer," 81
English Influence, 289
Enlistment, 193
Enlistment Bill, 278
Epitome of News, Foreign and Domestic, 10, 19, 35, 51, 67, 83, 107, 123, 131, 147, 163, 179, 199, 211, 235, 243, 267, 279, 291, 307, 327, 339, 359, 371, 391, 407
Epsom Races, 325, 326
Essex, Poisoning Cases in, 71
Ether, Death from Inhalation of, 183
Ether, Inhalation of, 91
Eu, the Promise at, 103
Exchequer Chamber (Reserved Case), 377, 378
Executors, Important Points Connected with the Powers of, 99
Exmouth Emigrant Ship, Loss of the, with 240 passengers, 295, 348
Extraordinary Escape of a Miner, 311

FACTORY BILL, Division on the, 115
Fashions for February and April, 106, 210
Fast—the Proclamation by the Queen for a General Fast, 167
Fast Day, The, 180, 182, 183, 199, 201
February, Verses to, 85
Female Swindler, 67
Fielden, Esq., M.P., Jun., 390
Financial Statement of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, 138
Fine Arts, Royal Commission of, 407
Fine Arts—The Cheadle Girl, 75; Equestrian Statue of her Majesty, 339; Her Majesty Queen Victoria's First Council, 231; Landseer's Deer Stalking in the Highlands, 89
Fire, Society for the Protection of Life from, 3
Fires, 3, 7, 35, 60, 231, 250, 327, 343
Fitzgerald, H.M.S., Struck by Lightning, 191
Fishmongers' and Poulterers' Institution, 416
Fitzroy Somerset, Tablet to, 268
Flogging—Military, at Woolwich, 87; Naval, 187
Flores Expedition for South America, 27, 34
Food, High Price of, 336
Food Riots in Ancona, 103; In the West of England, 327
Food, Scarcity—Royal Example, 314
Food, Supplies from America, 230
Foreign Corn—Treasury Order Considered, 70; Foreign Corn Ports, 84, 136, 154, 236, 308
Forgeries at Leeds, 178
Forgeries on the London and South Western Railway, 247
Forgery of a Will by an Attorney, 375
Forty Third Light Infantry, Presentation of New Colours to the, 196
France, The Commercial Law in, 185
France, The Opening of the French Chamber, 34
Franklin, Sir John, Expedition in Search of, 381
Fraschini, Signor, 173
French Plays, 68
Frozen to Death, A Woman, 3

GAMBLING, Effects of Fatally, Illustrated, 242
Gardeni, Signor, 121,
Garter, The Vacant, 119
German Baroness, A, Committed for Robbery, 389
Gibler, Royal Bequest &c, 6
Gibbs, Alderman, and the Parish of St. Stephen, Walbrook, 167
Gladstone, Mr., and the Case of Sir Sir Eardley Wilmot, 374
Glasgow, Spread of Fever in, 231; Spinning Mill destroyed by Fire at, 276
Government Expenditure, 145
Grama Ute, Burning of the Steamer, 268
Gravesend, Another Fire at, 183
Great Britain Steamer, 151, 341
Great Western Railway, 71; New Engine on the, 292
Great Western Steam Ship, Sale of the, 268
Greenwich Railway, Fatal Accident on the, 338
Grimaldy and Godoy, the Prince of Peace, 374
Gun-Cot.on, Electricity of, 41

HAMPTON COURT, (Estimates for, &c.,) 294; Whitsuntide at, 341
Hathorn, Lord, 53
Health of Towns, 209; Lord Morpeth's Bill, 264, 246; Improvement of London, 61
Hellmesberger, The Brothers, 336
Herring Fishery, 136
Herschel, Miss, 194
Hibernia Wharf Destroyed by Fire, 231
Highland Society of London Festival, 194
Holy Guild, Funeral of a Sister of, 188
Hook, The Rev. Dr., 389
Hope's, Mr., Diamonds, 263
Horncastle, New Church, 252
House of Lords, The New, 199, 247, 246, 281, 282, 293, 309, 336, 347
Houses of Parliament, The New, 80
Houseless Poor, Nightly Shelter for the, 103, 290
Howbury Hall, Bedfordshire, Serious Fire at, 199
Hullah's New Music Hall, 405
Hungerford Bridge, New Pier, 227

IBRAHIM PACHA, Colossal Glass Candelabrum for, 140
Ice, Adventure on the, 10; Artificial Production of, 318
"Ignoramus" on Principle, 226
Incendiarism in Essex, 262
India, the Rival Routes to, 206
Indian War, The Late, 184
Inn, The first and last Inn in England, 13
Intervention, 369
Investments and Enterprise, 113
Ipswich and Bury St. Edmund's Railway, 149
Ireland—American frigate laden with provisions for relief of, 261, 262; Bessborough, Earl of, Funeral of, 338; Cork, Famine &c. in the County of, 14; Famine Relief Fund, 38, 268; Food Riots, 7, 19, 339; Murders, 7, 19, 119, 167, 183, 219, 242, 282, 295, 330, 335, 367; Police, Conflict with the, 7; Potato Disease, 304; Skibbereen, Mortality in, 66; Sketches by Mahony, 100, 101, 116; Soyer's arrival in Dublin, 188; Soyer's Kitchen, Opening of, in Dublin, 227, 295
Ireland and Scotland, Subscription for the relief of distress in, 22
Ireland and Scotland, Relief of distress in, Royal and other subscriptions for, 26
Irish, The Distressed, Grand Military Bazaar for Relief of, 344
Irish in Liverpool, 185
Irish, Immigration into London of, 262
Irish Landlords, &c., Remarks on, Debate respecting, 102
Irish Measures before Parliament, 135
Irish Pauper, 224
Irish Policy, 65
Irish Poor-Law, 70
Irish Poor-Law Bill, 310, 326
Irish Poor-Laws, Anticipatory Discussions in the House of Lords, 214
Irish Railroad Companies, Advance of Money to, 294
Irongate Wharf, Destruction of, by fire, 3, 7, 32
Italian Opera House (Her Majesty's Theatre), 301
Italian Opera House (Her Majesty's Theatre), Her Majesty's State Visit to, 358

JENNY LIND, Memoir &c. of, 272; First Appearance, 301; Correspondence with Mr. Bunn, &c., 187, 387
Jersey, Food Riots in, 324
Jerusalem, Model of Ancient, 52
Judges and Counsel, Contest between a, 43
June, Lines to, 357

KALERGI, General, 119, 149
Kearne, Death of Mr., the Viola Player, 14
Keller, Professor, 226, 263
King Stephen's Oath, 395

LABOURING Classes, Society for Improving the Dwellings of the, 144
Labuan—the New British Possession, The Island of, 212
Lady Swindler, Case of a, 27
Lambeth Palace, Improvement at, 103
Lasch, Harvey, Death of, 189
Leamington, New College at, 215, 231
Le Verrier, 12
Lightning, Horses Struck by, 292
Liverpool, Increased Revenue of Customs at, 19; The Mortality in in 1846, 227; State of, 343; Large Fires in, 71, 414; New Landing Stage, 373
Liverpool and Bury Railway, 198
Lola Montez, 180, 234
London Fog, 7
London Improvements—(See "Metropolis.")
London Season, The, 305, 312
London and Greenwood Railway, Fall of an Arch on, 407
London and North-Western Railway, 198, 231, 373, 386
London and South-Western Railway Company, Forgeries on the, 247
Lord Mayor's Entertainment to her Majesty's Ministers, 315
Louvre Exhibition, Opening of the, 197
Lowestoft and Reedham Railway, Opening of the, 311
Lunar Occurrence, A Rare, 18
Lunatic Asylums, Case of Manslaughter at a, 247
Lynch, Dr., Death of, 406

MACKEREL Fishery, 357
Magazine Column, 3, 107, 147, 283, 363
Manchester, The Earl of Lincoln at, 33; Distress in, 274, 388; New Race Course, 338; Poverty in, 338; Now Independent Chapel, 181; Fire at, 341; Statistics of, 221
Manchester and Leeds Railway Directors' Testimonial to Mr. Houldsworth, 128
Marriages, 14, 30, 46, 62, 78, 91, 110, 127, 139, 158, 174, 190, 206, 222, 238, 251, 270, 286, 299, 315, 334, 343, 363, 371, 398
Married Women, Non-liability of, 263
Mars, Mademoiselle, 206
Marshalsea and Palace Courts, 227
Maudsley's and Co. the Engineers, Great Fire at, 373
Maundy Thursday, 219
Mauritius, First Protestant Church Built in, 84
May, Address to, &c., 284, 285
Medals Awarded to the Army and Navy, 364
Mehemet Ali, Pacha of Egypt, 310
Metropolis, Cheap Travelling in the, 236; Crime in the, 416; Destitution and Sickness in the, 3, 130, 155; Health of the, 155; Improvements, 15, 69, 227; Mortality in the, 3, 35, 59, 71, 115, 199, 250, 262, 291, 327, 358, 390
Metropolis Roads, Sale of the, 327
Metropolitan Railway Termini, 162
Metropolitan Small Debts Courts, 183
Mexico—Capture of Vera Cruz, &c., 292
Middlesex Election—Lord Robert Grosvenor, 85, 90
Military Flogging, 87
Milton's House in Petty France, &c., 21
Mirage, The, in Uhn, 114
Mirfield, The late Murders at, 338
Mistake with Medicine, Death from, 167
Model Lodging-houses in the Metropolis, 251
Montemolin, The Conde de, Son of Don Carlos, and his Claim to the Spanish Throne, 36
Montreal Cathedral, Great Bell for, 188
Morgan, Bart., The late Sir Charles, 66
Mornington, The Countess of, a Pauper, 283
Mornington's, The Earl of, Answer to the Application of the Countess, 295
Mortality in the Last Quarter of 1846, 83
Mount St. Bernard's Dog (Zoological Society's Gardens), 320
Mouse, Gardner Singing, 19
Muhler, H. G., 402
Murders, 367, 283, 295, 311
Musical Copyright, 370

NATIONAL DEBT, 96
National Education, 186
National Gallery, 295, 392, 227
Nations, Unfortunate, Observations on, 17
Naval Expenditure, 110
Navigation Laws, 54
Nelson's Fighting Sword, 122
Newcastle Race Plate, 413
Newcastle-upon-Tyne, The High Level Bridge now in Progress at, 374
New Churches, Consecration of, 23
New Orleans, 185
Newton Abbot Poaching, 149
New Year, The, Our Remarks on, 1; Bringing in The, 10
New Zealand, 37, 39
Nightly Shelter for the Houseless Poor, 103
Nimrond Sculptures, 409, 411
Nooks and Corners of Old England, 12, 21, 25, 64, 85, 103, 132, 160, 195, 221, 237
Northumberland, Death of his Grace the Duke of, 103, 123
Northumberland, Murder in, 103
North Western Railway, 15; Melancholy Accident on the, 23

OBITUARY of Eminent Persons Recently Deceased, viz.:—Akbar Khan, Mohammed, 383; Amherst, Esq., Alexander, 183; Anson, Bart., K.C.B., General Sir William, 59; Argyll, The Duke of, 283; Ashbrook, Henry, Jeffreys, Viscount, 307; Aspinall, Esq., James, 407; Astell, Esq., M.P., William, 170; Austria, The Archduke Charles of, 307; Beckett, Bart., The Right Hon. Sir John, 359; Bessborough, The Earl of, Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, 223; Blackett, Esq., Christopher, 75; Blake, Bart., Sir Valentine, 103; Blomberg, Dr., 395; Bowley, Bart., Sir Thomas Crawley, 59; Booth, David, 27; Bradshaw, M.P., James, Esq., 155, 170; Brydges, Bart., The Right Hon. Sir Harford Jones, 262; Burrell, Esq., William, of Broome Park, 103; Byng, Esq., M.P., George, 43; Campbell, K.C.B., Lieut.-Gen. Sir Colin, 391; Carden, Bart., of Templemore, Sir Henry Robert, 222; Cartwright, Esq., M.P., William Ralph, 27; Chalmers, Dr., 355; Clayton, Bart., Sir William, 83; Clanmorris, Lord, 160; Clay, K.C., General J. Granby, 6; Clowes, Esq., William, 181; Collins, R.A., William, 119, 142; Colston, Esq., Edward Francis, 287; Cotterell, Bart., Sir John Tanner, 142; Cowley, G.C.B., The Right Hon. Henry, Lord, 282, 291; Crawford, Major-General, 384; Cripps, M.P., Joseph, 59, 160; Curtis, Bart., Sir William, 183; Curwood, Esq., John, 227; East, Bart., Sir Edward Hyde, 43; Elcoate, Rear-Admiral Edward, 83; Fellowes, LL.D., Robert, 123; Fitzgerald, Bart., Sir William, 355, 371; Forbes, The Hon. Jonathan Barrington, 11; Freke, Lieut.-Col. the Hon. Percy Augustus Evans, 53; Fulford, Esq., Baldwin, of Great Fulford, 267; Gaetner, Frederick Von, 359; Gibbs, K.C.B., Sir Edward, 83; Gilmour, K.C.B., Lieut.-Gen. Sir Dougald J., 227, 251; Gipps, Sir George, 161; Gould, G.C.B., Sir Davidson, 283; Grouchy, The Marshal, 371; Gunnesses, Prince Rohan, 11; Gurney, Bart., Sir Hudson, 63; Hall, Major-General, 170; Hawkins, Mr., 43; Harbert, LL.D., The Hon. and Very Rev. Wm., Dean of Manchester, 359; Hewlett, The Rev. J. T., 142; Hillary, Bart., Sir William, 43; Hooton, Mr. Charles, 142; Howard, Lord Bernard Thomas, 43; Joseph, the Archduke Palatine, 75; Kinsale, Lord, 59; Lake, Esq., Edward, 43; Willoughby, 142; Langton, M.P., Col. Gore, 183; Leahy, Esq., David, 407; Lee, Esq., Joseph, of Leyswood, M., 83; Lockyer, C.B., Captain Nicholas, 183; Lurgan, Lord Charles Brownlow, 291; Marriott, Lieutenant-General, 203; Martin, Esq., M.P., Thomas Barnewall, 283; Martin, Mrs. (late Miss Invernarly), 43; May, K.C.B., K.C.H., Major-General Sir John, 307; Michiel, General Georges, 11; Montrose, Duchess Downager of, 222; Napier, Professor Macvey, 133; Northumberland, Hugh, third Duke of, 123; O'Connell, Daniel, The Late, 327, 346; Oldershaw, B.D., Archdeacon of Norfolk, The Venerable John, 103; Palmer, The Right Hon. Lady Madeline, 356; Papworth, John Bunnarott, 391; Pearson, K.C.H., Lieut.-General Sir Thomas, 338; Percy, The Right Hon. Lady Susan, 267; Plants, G.C.H., The Right Hon. Josh., 227; Plasket, Sir Richard, 291; Pole, Bart., Sir William Templer, 227, 251; Poligmac, The Prince de, 227; Pollon, Count, 11; Price, Bart., Sir Charles, 283; Rokeby, Lord Edward Montague, 283, Rodney, the Hon. John, 267; Rolle, Lord, 7, 27; Roy, Count Antoine, 251; Saragossa, Palafox, Duke of, 160; Say and Sele, William Thomas Eardley Twisleton-Fiennes, Lord, 237; Scott, Bart., Sir Walter, of Abbotsford, 257, 276; Shepherd, The Right Hon. Lady Mary, 59; Soder and Man, Dr. Shirley, Bishop of, 283; Sommery, the Marquis de, 371; Stair, The Countess Downager of, 170; Stuart, The Hon. Charles, 75; Stuart, Lady Dudley, 353; Sutr, Thomas Skinner, 143; Temple, Bart., Sir Grenville Temple, 407; Thurlow, The Rev. Edward South, 160; Townsend, Col., Peregrine Edward, 27; Turner, Sharon, 143; Vavasour, Bart., The Hon. Sir Edward Marmaduke, of Haslewood, county York, 222; Watson, K.T.S., Lieut.-Col. Sir Frederick, 359; Webster, Knt., Sir Henry Pascal, 267; Welby, Lady Wilhelmina, 103; Wilmot, Bart., Sir John Eardley Eardley, 355, 371; Wood, K.C.M.G., Sir Alexander, 291; Wood, Bart., Sir Fras. Lindley, 7, 27; Young, Vice-Admiral, William, 95
O'Connell, Daniel, Memoir, &c., of, 346, 347
Odessa, 139
Old and New, The, 241
Old Story (In verse), 177
Orphan Heiress, 319
Oscar, Prince, of Sweden, 374

PAINLESS Operations, 69
Panter Prisoner, The, 410
Paris Serenade des Tambours on the 1st of May, 276
Parkhurst Prison, 164, 165
Parliament, The Opening of, and Proceedings in, 38, 39, 42, 54, 56, 57, 59
Parliamentary Events, 394
Parliamentary Portraits, 277, 300, 324
Parricide, Execution of a, 295
Pauper Clothed by a Potato, 279
Peel, Sir Robert, and the Birmingham Representation, 366
Pembroke Lodge, Richmond Park, 276
Peninsular Medals, 26
Penn and Mexico, Antiquities of, in the British Museum, 220
Planet, The New, Neptune, 253
Platts, the Murderer, Confession and Execution of, 315
Playfair, Major, of St. Andrew's, 176
Poaching Affrays in Sussex, 45
Poisoning of a Husband by his Wife, 215; in Norfolk, 231; in Suffolk, 311; of a Family at Kensal Green, 355
Poisonings in Essex, 274
Police Offices, Case at, 27, 34, 67, 151, 195, 211, 227, 247, 295, 315, 395, 398
Police Offices in London, 332
Polytechnic Institution, Royal Visit to the, 215
Poor Law Acts, 156
Portugal, The Insurrection in, 4, 20, 36, 50, 52, 99, and 142, 145, 210, 243, 258, 274, 324, 338, 359, 370, 387, 388, 390, 407
Post Office and the Parcels' Companies, 114
Potato Disease, 267; The Aphis Vastatrix the supposed cause of the, 48
Potato Plant, the Reappearance of the Aphis Vastator, 384
Potatoes, An Excellent Substitute for, 134
Potatoes, New, free from Disease, 356
Pratt, Rev. Josiah, Monument to, 416
Prerogative, Origin, Objects, and Transactions of the College of, 45
Preston, Fleetwood, and West Riding Junction Railway, 64
Princesses at Christmas, 7
Protectionist Banquets, 3, 70
Prussian Constitution, 97
Prussian Diet, The, 257
Prussian Ministers, 402, 403

QUEEN, The, Birthday of her Majesty, 339; Equestrian Statue of her Majesty, 339; House of Lords, Her Majesty's Visit to, 247; Reopening of her Majesty's Theatre, 121; Visit of her Majesty to, in State, 268; Letter in aid of the Distress, 54
Queen Downager, Proposed Status to, in London, 155

RACINE'S "ATHALIE," 95
Railway Accidents, 3, 23, 35, 71, 103, 119, 198, 231, 348, 355, 376, 380, 386, 407
Railway Bill of Lord George Bentinck, 83; of the Government, 407
Railway Companies and the Government Bill, 155
Railway Injuries, Compensation for, 183
Railway Labourers on the Caledonian Railway, Fever among, 231
Rate-paying Clauses of the Reform Bill, 3, 115, 130
Repeal, The Cause of, 354
Representative System, The, 150
Representative Reform for Scotland, Election of a, at Holyrood House, 309
Revenue, The, 22, 238
Review, The, Observations on, 385; A Sketch from the Late, 408
Ricardo, Esq., M.P., J. L., 53
Rice, 3
"Robert Bruce," First Performance of, at the Académie Royale de Musique in Paris, 320
Robins, The Late Mr. George, 198
Ross-shire, Disturbances in, 167
Rothschild, 402
Rotterdam, 236
Rouen and Havre Railway, The Opening of the, 304
Royal Academy Exhibition, 296, 333
Royal Society, Soirée, 117, 118
Rugeley, Poisoning Murder at, 106
Russia, Winter in, 3
Russian Tribute, 161
Russo-Dutch Loan, 154

ST. JAMES'S PALACE, The Royal Pictures at, 303
St. James, Westminster, Rectorship of the Parish of, 62
St. Patrick's Day, 1847, 170
St. Paul's Cathedral, The Charge of Twopence at, 406
St. Thos, Vicarage, 4
St. Vincent, 190, H.M.S., 322
Sadler's Wells Theatre, 41
Scotland, Destitution in, 54
Scott, Bart., Sir Walter, Funeral, 276
Scott, Major-Gen., U. S. Army, 356
Scrope, M.P., G. Poulett, 277
Sea Lion Hunt, 97, 98
Serpentine River, Bodies on the, 389
Servants' Characters, 251
Seventh Regiment Hussars, 265
Sheriffs for 1847, 91
Shipwrecks, &c., in the Channel, 130
Shoreditch, Murder in, 183
Shrewsbury and Chester Railway—Frightful Accident on the, 348, 380
Sirius Steam Packet, Loss of the, 55, 71
Skating Season, 8, 52
Skirbeck Priory, Destruction of, by Fire, 66
Small Debts, Act for the Recovery of 112
Smith, M.P., J. A., and the Spanish Robbers, 405
Smith's, Sir Harry, Return (a Sonnet), 99; Landing of Lieutenant-General, at Southampton, 279; Presentation of the Freedom of the City of London to, 341
Smithfield Nuisance, 23; Cattle Market, Removal of, 295
Snow-storm in the Country, 196
Society of Arts—Specimens of British Decorative Art, 172, 189, 389
Soder and Man, Consecration of the Bishop of, 41
Soham, Incendiary Fire at, 230
Soldier, Improvement of the, 122
Soup Store at Cork, 176
Southampton and Dorchester, Railway, 368
South Devon Railway, 379
South Eastern Railway, 119
South Western Railway, 35, 162, 250; Suicide on the, 386
Soup for the Poor, 119
Speyer, Grand Dinner in, 371
Spain — Degraded Condition of the Court of, 342; Arrest of M. Olozaga, 36
Spain and Portugal, Commentary on the Political Condition of, 278
Spanish Bondholders, Case of the, 198
Spanish Robber's Coolness, 405
Sphynx, Wreck of Her Majesty's Steamsloop, 67, 91, 106, 114, 171
Spontaneous Combustion on board Two Steamers, 227
Staffordshire, Riots in, 311
Stanfield, Fatal Accident on board of the Steamer, 167
Starvation, Death from, 3
Standigl, Herr, 304
Steeple Chase at the Croix de Berry, near Paris, 354
Stettin, 84; Bread Riots at, 339
Stockdale, John Joseph, Death of, 115
Stratford-upon-Avon, Celebration of Shakespeare's Birth-day at, 274
Suffocation in a Well, in Bow-street, 219
Suicide, Singular Instance of, 343
Suicide of Two Lovers, 88
Suicide by Jumping into a Copper, 403
Sultan's Yacht, The Grand, 176
Superchi, Signor, 121
Surgical Operations, Painless, The Apparatus for Rendering, 30
Switzerland, Insurrection in the Canton of Friburg, 34

TAWELL, JOHN, the Murderer, 391
Tears of the Shamrock" (Song), 352
Testoral Meeting at Kennington, 279
Thames, Travelling by Steam Boats on the, 255
Thames Royal Yacht Club, 379
Thames Tunnel, Fair in the, 199
Thetis Frigate, Iron, 114
Thistlewood, Fatal, in Lanc shire, 251
Tiber Steamer, Loss of the, 176
Tola, Mr., the City Toxicologist, Death of, 83
Toronto, 63
Torrington, Viscount, Presentation of Plate to, 346
Tower of London, 315
Trance, Case of a Woman in a, 341
Transportation, Suspension of, &c., 96, 180
Trent Valley Railway, Opening of the, 414
Trent, Loss of the Steamer and seventy-two Lives, 323
Twelfth Cake, Her Majesty's, 22

UNITED STATES brig Somers, 59
United States and Mexico, 2, 7, 34, 66, 114, 130, 162, 179, 194, 226, 243, 274, 306, 324, 370, 386, 402
Urquhart, Mr., Assault on, by a Polish Refugee, 151

VAN DIEMEN'S LAND, 19
Vauxhall Gardens, 381
Vell, Talking the, 192
Velasquez, Portrait of Prince Charles (afterwards Charles I.), 256
Vera Cruz, Bombardment of, 250
Victoria Park, Visitors at, Easter, 227

WARNER'S, CAPTAIN, Invention, 163
Warwick and Leamington, Bank, Robbery of the, 210
Water Colours, Exhibition of the Society of Painters in, 356, 409
Water Colours, Exhibition of the New Society of Painters in, 284, 316
Waterloo Banquet at Apsley House, 359
Weather during the Quarter ending 31st March, 1847, 341
Wellington Statue, Observations on the discussions respecting the, 135
Wesleyans and the Government Scheme of Education, 262
Westminster Bridge, 23
Westminster Improvements, 144, 372
Wheat, Extraordinary High Price of, 321
Whitsuntide Holidays—Whitsuntide at Hampton Court, 241, 249
Wife, Discovery of a Long Lost, 103; Sale of a, at Smithfield, 55
Wilhelm's Coronation Picture, 240
Window Tax—Illegality of such a Tax, &c., 35, 61
Windsor Castle, 24, 26, 264
Windsor Steeple Chase, 380
Winterhalter's Pictures of the Royal Society, 344, 361
Wood Pavement in the City, Removal of the, 315
Woolwich, Visit of the Grand Duke Constantine of Russia to, 396, 397
Worthpark House, Destruction of, by Fire, 23

YARBOROUGH, The late Earl of, 41
Yonatt, The Veterinary Surgeon, Suicide of, 49

ZOLLVEREIN, The Death of Dr. List, 5
Zoological Society, 224

CHRONOLOGY OF REMARKABLE EVENTS.

DECEMBER.

21.—Twenty persons killed in a steam-boat explosion near New Orleans.

24.—Death of Mr. Bevan, the banker; leaving £250,000.

The British took possession of the Island of Kabuan.

26.—The population of Paris in 1846, stated to be 1,053,967.—A tipsy woman found burnt to a cinder, in Southwark.

27.—A woman frozen to death at Broadheath, Worcester. —News that the States of Wallachia will no longer make their sittings public.—Death of the Rajah of Travancore.

28.—News of peace restored in Cashmere.—A soda-water bottle found in the belly of a cod-fish, at Blackpool.—News of continued insurrection in Portugal.

29.—The American President's Message received; very belligerent against Mexico, and justifying the annexation of Texas: continued success of the United States army in Mexico.—News of the grant of a new charter to New Zealand, creating powers municipal, legislative, and administrative; each province to have a House of Representatives: the capture of Rauparaha confirmed.—The thermometer at Paris 19 deg.

30.—The Blackburn, Clitheroe, and North-Western Junction Railway commenced.—Kossuth's opera of "Robert Bruce" produced at Paris.—Great scarcity of corn in France.

31.—Irongate Wharf, near the Tower of London, destroyed by fire.—News of continued war with the Kaffirs.—The Spanish Cortes opened by Queen Isabella.—Severe cold in London: thermometer, 16 deg.

JANUARY.

1.—Rent raised in London 1d. per pot.—Subscription opened for the relief of the Distress in Ireland and Scotland; headed by the Queen, for £2000.—The inhalation of the vapour of Ether successfully employed in London for rendering surgical operations painless.—Navigation of the Baltic in 1846 extraordinarily great: 18,765 ships passed the Sound, the largest number ever remembered.—2000 slaves unsaseered at Gallinas, on the coast of Africa.

2. Tax levied on tea and coffee to enable the American Government to carry on the War against Mexico.

4.—News of continued bloodshed in the Sandwich Islands, in the conflicts between the French and the natives.—By aid of the Electric Telegraph, a message sent from Norwich to London, and a physician reached there within 3 hours.—Increased Distress in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland.

—Death of Joseph John Gurney, at Norwich.—Amnesty proclaimed at Cracow, towards the patriots of "Captains of the Mexican City of Victoria by the Americans.

5.—News of an insurrection in Bosnia; 100 Bosnians killed by the Turks.—Large purchases of Russian Corn made on the Continent, for the supply of Ireland.—Three fires in Dublin; four persons perished.—News of the defeat of the Portuguese insurgents at Torres Vedras, on the 26th ult.; of a battle at Oporto between Casal and the Miguelites; 350 killed.—The advance on the year's Post-office revenue £85,000: Ordinary Revenue; Increase of £484,662 on the quarter, and £1,028,257 on the year.

6.—The London shipowners invited by placards to take letters of marque against the United States, under the decree of the Mexican Government.—Great depression in the English Funds in consequence of the embarrassed Continental Money Markets. Insurrection in the Canton of Friburg, Switzerland.—Leipsic New Year's Fair unsatisfactory.

7.—News from Mexico; Santa Anna and his troops rallied. —The custom of kissing the Pope's toe abandoned.—Rise in the price of coals, bread, and spirits.—Alarming Bread Riots in France.—Two labourers killed on the Eastern Counties Railway.—Total income of the country for the year ending January 5, £58,790,138 7s. 5d.; expenditure, £50,943,830 8s. 3d.

8.—News of the arrest of M. Olozaga on his entering Spain, and his imprisonment at Pampeluna.

9.—A man killed by jumping out of a train in motion on the South-Western Railway.—Inadequacy of the flourishing condition of New Zealand, and of the cessation of hostilities with the natives.—Serious riot at Pampeluna.

10.—Death of Mr. Byng, M.P., aged 83.—Twenty seamen and boys drowned by a French steam-frigate running aground off St. Louis du Senegal.

11.—The French Chambers opened by King Louis Philippe.—News of the submission of the hostile Kaffir chiefs.—Alarming Food-Riots in Dublin.—The Insurrection in Portugal crushed.

12.—A man apprehended at Sheffield for selling his wife.—Lord Lincoln declared his future line of politics to the Manchester electors.—Worth Park House, Surrey, destroyed by fire.—Continued success of Surgical Operations without Pain, by the Inhalation of Ether.—Renewed conflicts with the Kaffirs.

13.—News of the wreck of the United States war-brig Somers off Vera Cruz; 36 men lost.—Lamentable famine in the County of Cork.—Great Skating Match on the Cross-Dyke Wash, Lincoln, won by Clarke.—Queen's Letter issued in aid of the Distress.—The Pope himself preached a Sermon at Rome on the Festival of Epiphany.

14.—Fatal powder-mill explosion, near Exeter: two men killed.—Fall of Ashes at the Faroe Isles, supposed from Hecla.

15.—Riot at Naples, owing to the high price of bread and macaroni.—News of the repulse of an attack upon the Russian fortress of Golowin, in the Caucasus.—Seven engineers and firemen blown to atoms, by the bursting of a locomotive boiler at Philadelphia.

16.—Loss of the Sirius, Dublin and Cork steamer, and 20 lives, in Ballycotton Bay.—The Swedish Government protested against the Incorporation of Cracow.—Sprats taken in vast quantities on the Essex coast, and used by the farmers as manure.—Mr. Cobden entertained with great éclat at Genoa.—The Pope contributed £250 towards the Relief of the Distressed Irish.—News of the defeat of the Mexicans at Saltillo.

17.—Great fire in Queen-street, Glasgow: loss, £100,000. —Intense cold at Antwerp—9° below Zero.—Great scarcity at Perth: the poor ate the bark of the trees.—Great fire at Hull.

18.—Six men drowned off Compton Bay, Isle of Wight. —Commencement of the Preston, Fleetwood, and West Riding Junction Railway.—Lamentable distress at Bantry: 19 persons died of starvation.—A prohibitory export duty placed upon Lombardy Maize.

19.—Parliament opened by her Majesty in person: the Address in the House of Lords moved by Lord Hatherton, seconded by Lord Carew; in the Commons, moved by the Hon. C. Howard, seconded by Mr. Ricardo. The Distress in Ireland and Scotland, the Spanish Marriages, and a formal protest against the recent annexation of Cracow, were the main topics of the Speech.—A woman killed instantaneously by an express train, in crossing the Eastern Counties Railway.

20.—Continued Food Riots throughout France.—Great dissatisfaction in the Court of Common Council, the Lord Mayor having refused to put the third reading of a bill.—The Grocers' Company voted £1000 in relief of the Distress.—Continued Insurrection in Portugal.—The English war-vessels off Oporto.

21.—Total export of Wine from Oporto to Great Britain, in 1845, 12,065 pipes.—News of dreadful ravages by Cholera, in Bussora.—Suspension of the Corn and Navigation Laws proposed in Parliament, by Lord John Russell.—The Interris (Spanish) Ministry resigned.

22.—Frightful famine and fever at Skibbereen.—Food Riot at Aberdeen.—M. Guizot, in the French Chamber of Peers, defended the conduct of France towards Spain.—Intense cold in Canada: thermometer, 15° below Zero.

23.—News of the detection of treason at Lahore, in exciting rebellion in Cashmere: of a mutinous turbulence at Madras, (Nov. 25.)—Unusual mortality in London: deaths during the week, 1226.—A Constitution for Prussia signed by the King.

24.—Great Speculation in Grain at Alexandria.—Great Inundations in Calabria, and destruction of the Crops.

25.—Lord John Russell moved in Parliament for measures for the Relief of Ireland.—Two men struck dead instantaneously on the Great Western Railway, by an immense piece of tire from a passing express train.—General reduction in the prices of Beer, Spirits, and Bread, in the metropolis: the speculation in corn checked by the advanced value of money.

26.—A successful operation for Lithotomy performed at the Middlesex Hospital, by aid of Ether vapour.—Considerable fall in the price of Corn at the Markets of Rouen and Havre, from the United States.—Death of Mr. Clowes, the eminent printer.—Great fire at Pera (Constantinople.)

27.—The duty on the import of foreign corn suspended by a Treasury order.—Lloyd's books showed the recent loss of many grain ships on the west coast of Ireland.—King Leopold signed an Ordonnance authorising the importation into Belgium, duty free, of flour from any country whatever.

28.—A new Ministry formed in Spain, under the Duke of Sotomayor.—The American Congress resolved on vigorously prosecuting the war with Mexico.—Great fire in Boston; 100 buildings burnt.

29.—The Earl of Elgin, Governor-General of the Canadas, arrived at Montreal.

30.—News from Algeria of the defeat of the Arabs by the French.—Great rise in the prices of cotton and bread stuffs at New York: large sum of money raised there for the distressed Irish.

31.—Easton Lodge, near Dunmow, the seat of Viscount Maynard, destroyed by fire.—The South Staffordshire Railway commenced at Walsall.

FEBRUARY.

1.—Great complaint of the Immigration of Irish paupers (1124 in one day) into Liverpool.—News of the defeat of the Russians by the Circassians.—Great arrivals of corn and flour at Liverpool; prices fall.—Insurrection in Portugal: Saldanha gained supporters.—Conspiracy discovered at Lisbon; 39 principal officers immediately banished to Angola.

2.—Violent debates in the French Chamber, on the Incorporation of Cracow, and the Spanish Marriages.—News of tranquillity restored at the Cape of Good Hope.—Potatoes imported from Port Philip, Australia.—The progress of Famine and Fever in Ireland truly appalling.—The Judges reversed the decision of the Court of Queen's Bench in the well-known case of Howard v. Gossett.

3.—Continued Food Riots in France.—Middlesex Election: Lord Robert Grosvenor returned in the room of the late Mr. Byng.—Great excitement throughout the north of Scotland, owing to the continued destitution.

4.—News from India of the deposition of the Vuzeer Lall Singh, for treasonable connection with the Cashmere insurgents: 10,000 Indo-British troops to remain at Lahore, during the minority of the Maharajah, at the expense of the Sikhs: Gwalior in a very disturbed state.—Violent debates in the French Chamber of Deputies; M. Thiers pro, and M. Guizot con, "The English Alliance."

5.—Opening number at Wurtzburg: thermometer 44°.—Extraordinary Mirage at Ulm, repeated eight times.—(See page 120).

6.—A Comet discovered by Mr. Hind, in Cepheus.

7.—A man killed by a locomotive used on the Croydon Atmospheric Railway.

8.—Lord Denman gave judgment in the Court of Queen's Bench, in the Braintree Church-rate Case, that a minority could make a church-rate, if the majority refused, and that the Braintree rate was well made.—Death of Mr. George Robins, the celebrated auctioneer.

9.—The weather very severe in France; many roads impassable.—Trial in the Ball Court, in which Mr. Justice Erle decided that Executors had not control over the funeral of a deceased person, unless they had proved his will. A Select Committee of the House of Commons appointed on the Navigation Laws.—News of violent cholera on the shores of the Red Sea.

10.—In the Court of Common Pleas, Barker v. Lyndon, a claim upon a Railway Provisional Committee-man was defeated, there being no proof that he had attended any meetings, or authorised the debt.—£10,000 bequeathed by Mr. J. Wilkinson, of High Wycombe, to various religious institutions.—Great Snow Storm: delay of 119 mail bags: thermometer at Blackheath, 19°: railway trains much impeded. —A wretch at Lucerne sentenced to 18 years solitary confinement for murder.

11.—Death of Professor Napier, Editor of the Edinburgh Review.

12.—Three persons killed by the bursting of a new boiler at Dalston Corn-mill, near Archbuildings.—Thermometer at Blackheath, 6°; and on the 17th, 19°.—The first Harbour of Refuge founded at Alderney.—The steamer Tweed wrecked on the Alacrane Rocks, coast of Yucatan; 72 lives lost.

13.—Death of Sharon Turner, the historian.—Death of the King of Oude.

14.—A young man killed on the Newcastle Railway while attempting to enter a train in motion; and on the 15th, a person killed by a train on the South-Eastern line while crossing the rails.—Mr. O'Connell much indisposed of late.

15.—(St. Valentine.)—Three persons killed by the Post-Office, on this day, 422,000 letters and 145,000 newspapers. —Intelligence of 60,000 deaths by cholera among the Pilgrims to Mecca.—The price of bread two-and-a-half.—Debates in Parliament reflecting upon the Irish landlords, and their opposition to a real Poor-Law.—Great excitement among the French papers, in consequence of the publication of a despatch of the Marquis of Normanby, and the answer of Lord Palmerston, on the Spanish Marriages.

16.—Lord Geo. Bentinck's Bill for advancing £16,000,000 to Ireland lost by a minority of 214.—Death of Mr. Collins, R.A.—Riot at Leicester between the people and the police at an illegal fair.—Death of Lundin, bank-clerk robber, at Stockholm.—Ten persons drowned in an omnibus precipitated into the river between Bideford and Torrington.

17.—News confirming the defeat of the Miguelite General Macdonald, while fighting manfully.—The Oporto Junta until issued decrees in the Queen's name.—The Factory Bill read a second time by a majority of 59.—Abolition of the "Montem" triennial festival at Eton.

18.—News from the Cape: the Governor organising "British Kaffraria."—Great distress in Manchester: the streets crowded with paupers.—News of the wreck of the emigrant vessel, Creole, and fifty persons, on the coast of Cuba.—The French Ministry resolved to augment the army by 10,000 men.

19.—Wreck of the Brechin Castle, near Swansea Harbour: 24 persons perished.—Great excitement in Bavaria, by the influence of Lola Montes, the Spanish dancer, over the King.

21.—A schooner wrecked on the Nass Sands, British Channel: nine persons perished.—The Theatre Historique at Paris opened with a performance of nine hours.—The beautiful Tiber steamer wrecked about 12 miles from Oporto: crew and passengers, except four or five persons, saved; but the vessel entirely lost.

22.—Serious differences between the Marquis of Normanby and M. Guizot.—The Civil Tribunal gave judgment against M. A. Dumas for breaches of literary engagements. —The Chancellor of the Exchequer made his Financial Statement in Parliament.

23.—The General Assembly of Wallachia emancipated 60,000 Bohemian slaves, and 14,000 families.—Funeral of Dr. Buckland: the Monument in Westminster Abbey.

24.—Pacific news from the Cape of Good Hope; and intelligence of the trials and execution of the insurgents at New Zealand.—Bill carried in the House of Commons, for repealing the obsolete and disused statutes affecting Roman Catholics.

25.—Food Disturbances in Spain.—A Government Loan of £8,000,000 taken by Messrs. Rothschild and Baring, at £3 7s. 6d. per cent.—Commencement of the Ipswich and Bury Railway.

27.—Reconciliation of the Marquis of Normanby and M. Guizot.—News of renewed conflicts of the French with the natives of Tahiti.—Corn riots at Honfleur.—Severe cold at Paris: thermom. 19°.—Mr. Dunn, the barrister, sentenced to 18 months' imprisonment, for perjury.—Prince Albert elected Chancellor of the University of Cambridge by a majority of 16 over Earl Powis.

28.—Burning of the Carlsruhe Theatre: nearly 200 persons killed, or severely injured.—Two British ships boarded at Amoy by Chinese pirates, who massacred the officers and crew, and carried off £36,000 plunder.

MARCH.

1.—Bread distributed to the poor in Paris.—Great excitement as to the high price of Bread-stuffs in New York.—Great Confirmation from the Santa Lucia of the Distressed Scotch and Irish.—The Mexicans gained some advantages over the Americans near Tampico.

2.—Great Meeting to petition the Crown on the late annexation of Cracow to the Austrian dominions.—Lamentable destitution in Cork, &c.—News of conspiracies at Palermo and Naples.—Intense cold in Canada: winter very severe in the north of India: snow three feet deep.

3.—Two actions between the Portuguese insurgents and the Queen's troops, the latter victorious.—The Sphynx steam sloop floated from off the south side of the Isle of Wight, where she had been stranded 47 days.—Exhibition of Irish Decorative Art at the Society of Arts.

5, 6.—Alarming Food Riots in various parts of Belgium. —Earl Grey's Custody of Offenders Bill, substituting for transportation abroad separate imprisonment at home, read a second time.—First train passed on the Hamburg and Hanover Railway.

7.—Terrific Explosion at the Great Ardsley Main, near Barnsley; 80 lives lost.—M. Ronge sentenced to a month's imprisonment, for preaching at Madgeburgh without permission.

9.—Great dread of famine in France.—The dispute between King Otho, of Greece, and the Sultan still unadjusted. —The Pope determined on creating an order of knighthood.—Great Meeting at Leeds against the liberal policy of the Pope discovered at Ancona.

10.—Several persons killed by a Steam-boiler Explosion, near West Bromwich.—Affecting accounts of fever and famine in Ireland: deaths averaging daily from forty to fifty.

11.—The thermometer as low as 17 deg.—Two million of French stock purchased by the Russian Government, and placed at the disposal of the Bank of France.

12.—Death of M. Martin (du Nord), Paris.—40,000 mackerel in one lake near Devonport.

13.—The young Count de Liederkeke assassinated his two sisters in a chapel near Naumur.

14.—Great fire near Nine Elms, Battersea.—Inauguration of the Amiens and Boulogne Railway.

15.—The New County Courts Act came into operation.—At Paris, four editors sentenced to fine and imprisonment, and retractation in their own journals, for libels on M. Jules Janin.—News of several massacres of officers at Mohilew, in White Russia.—Corn riots in various parts of France.—Great distress in the canton of Berne: one-fourth of the people subsisting on charity.

16.—Cries of a long debate in the House of Commons on the Annexation of Cracow: Mr. Hume's motion withdrawn. —The Scottish Railway Directors resolved to discontinue Sunday trains.

17.—The Ministry in a minority of 78, in a division on a clause of the Factory Bill.—Reported massacre of 5000 Arabians by the Russians.—Great Fire in Cherbourg Dockyard.—Plunder and Riot, owing to the great scarcity in the Loiret.—Howbury Hall, Bedfordshire, Destroyed by Fire.— Lord Wilbraham, the Representative Peer of Scotland, in the room of the late Lord Rollo.

19.—Great Scarcity of Food in Madeira.

20.—Three persons killed by a Boiler Explosion at Burradon Colliery.—Opening of the Rennes and Havre Railway. —Death of Mdlle. Mars, the Celebrated French actress.— Average number of persons employed weekly on Relief Works in Ireland, 685,334, at a cost of £345,000.—News from Mexico: Gen. Taylor routed before Saltillo.—News from India, pacific. —In an action tried at Exeter, a Railway Company allottee obtained a Verdict for the recovery of deposit money.—Reported negotiation between the Portuguese Government and the Junta.—Fire-damp explosion in a coal-mine, near Mons: 26 persons killed.—The Turkish Government alike manufactories destroyed by fire; loss £300,000.

23.—News of the assassination of the King of Burmah by one of his own princes, who had usurped the throne of Ava. —Fall of 2 arches of the Liverpool Viaduct, on the Liverpool and Bury Railwry.—20,000 mackerel caught in one take at Plymouth.

24.—A general fast observed throughout England and Wales.—Great pressure on the English Money Market.— Conflict at Dagoladoo, between Guerillas and the Queen's troops.

25.—Inauguration of Prince Albert as Chancellor of Cambridge University.—Commodore Napier had usurped the throne of Ava. —171 deaths in one week in the Cork Workhouse.

27.—Resignation of the Sotomayer Spanish Ministry; succeeded by Isturiz.

28.—Great fire in Germany: 244 houses burnt at Wedningrode.—Riot at Rome, on account of the dearness of provisions.—Gift of wheat at St. Petersburg.

28, 29.—Bombardment of Vera Cruz, by the Americans; 200 lives lost.

29.—Death of the Prince de Polignac, the Prime Minister of Charles X.—Mr. O'Connell left Paris, on his way to Italy —The French Ministry retrieved their recent defeat.

30.—Fire near Leith.—Mr. O'Connell on his return to Spain; M. Salamanca the New Minister of Finance.

31.—News from Spain of the recognition of the justice of foreign claims by the Spanish Ministry.—Continued Riots, and —Intelligence of the assassination of Captain Gibson, Dr. Howell, and the Hon. Mr. Chetwynd, by the Kaffirs.—Death of Mr. Curwood, one of the oldest English barristers.

APRIL.

4.—News of subscriptions raising in the West India Islands for the Relief of the Irish and Scotch.—Nettles sold at 3d. per lb., at Preston.

5, 6.—Riots excited at Carlow, opened by M. Soyer, at Dublin.—Continued fever and destitution in Cork, Sligo, Mayo, &c.—The British Museum visited by 19,170 persons; the new Jail-window in the Queen's Bench Prison opened to the Park.—Revenue Account satisfactory: increase upon nearly every item.

6.—Rimouia Wharf, London-bridge, destroyed by fire.— Covent Garden Theatre, (the interior rebuilt,) opened for the performance of Italian Operas.

22.—Dreadful Riot at the Central Criminal Court, for Manslaughter, in administering improper medicines; but, the prescription having been incorrectly made up, he was acquitted.—Continued distress in the northern parts of France. The Queen of Spain became popular by her late determined conduct.

23.—The Edinburgh and Bathgate Railway commenced.— The foundation-stone of a barrage lock of the Nile laid at Alexandria, by Mehemet Ali.

30.—Imperial Cabinet in great confusion.—Three British vessels anchored off Athens.

31.—The Great Steeple Chase at the Croix de Berny, near Paris: the Great Hamlet won by Lord Strathmore's St. Leger.—The United Diet at Berlin opened by the King in person.—The Queen of Spain received with great enthusiasm by the people of Madrid—riot in the evening, and some arrests.

12.—News of the Queen of Spain having unceremoniously dismissed the Duke of Sotomayor's household, and annihilated the Camarilla.—Re-appearance of Mrs. Nisbett on the stage, at the Haymarket Theatre.—Olozaga returned to Madrid, and took his seat as a deputy.—News of two decisive battles between General Taylor and Santa Anna: the Americans victorious in both.—The newly-discovered planet distinctly named "Neptune."—The Emperor of Russia determined to invest four and a half millions in foreign funds.

13.—The first commitment under the New Small Debts Act, at the Westminster County Court: the debtor to be imprisoned ten days.—The Cobden Testimonial Fund amounted to nearly £200.—News of the burning of Bucharest, in Wallachia: many lives lost.—The Grand Duc steamer burnt off Lumbay: 22 lives lost.

14.—The Roman Catholic Relief Bill, in the House of Commons, lost by a majority of 39.—The Government Education measure excited great interest.—News of the winter at Santa Fé, the coldest ever known there: many persons frozen to death.—The Sultan contributed great for the relief of the distressed Irish and Scotch.

16.—The House of Lords occupied for the first time by the Peers: the public subsequently admitted to view the House, by tickets, on stated days.

18.—Three murderers executed at Bugeneals, in France.

17.—News of the capture of the Algerine chief Bou Maza by the French.—Queen Christina (of Spain) continued at Paris.—Spanish troops (6000 or 7000), on the frontiers of Portugal, ready to assist the Queen.—The Cassopus, for Sidon, and other British vessels in the Tagus, to protect the Queen of Portugal.—Four-fifths of the market-town of Great Sgalonta, in Hungary, destroyed by fire.—Decisive battle of Cerro Gordo, between Vera Cruz and Mexico: Santa Anna defeated by Gen. Scott.

18.—Changes in the Greek Ministry: re-appointment of Colletti.

19.—Intelligence of the renewal of the Kaffir War; and of the death of Akbar Khan.—An United States ship-of-war arrived at Cork, laden with provisions, as a free contribution from the States, for the Distressed Irish.

20.—News from Mexico: the 6000 Guinea States won by Conyngham.—Intelligence of the destruction of an entire town in Silesia, by Fire.—News of the continued mining success in South Australia.—Reconciliation of the Queen and King of Spain.

21.—The 2590th Anniversary of the Founding of Rome, celebrated by a Banquet to 800 Citizens.

22.—The Government Education Measure read a first time in the House of Commons, by a majority of 325.—Brandeston Hall, Suffolk, destroyed by fire.

23.—Serious riots in Berlin; 175 persons arrested.

24.—Bread Riots at Stettin, in Prussia.

25.—News of the surrender of the great mountain range of Kabylia (Algeria) of the French.—Conflict near Solosas, in Spain, between Montemolinists and Queen's troops.

26.—The Greek Chambers dissolved by Colletti.

27.—The Army Service Bill, limiting enlistment to 10 years, read a second time in the House of Lords, by a majority of 14.—Education Grant of £100,000 carried in the House of Commons, by a majority of 181.—Death of Lord Cowley, at Paris.—Loss of the Exmouth emigrant ship, off the north coast of Ireland, and 240 passengers.—The cold so severe at Stockholm that loaded carts passed over the frozen lakes.

29.—The Queen of Portugal consented to British mediation in her quarrel with the Junta.—Upwards of 100 prisoners broke out of the Limoëro at Lisbon, others followed, and, in an affray with the military, more than 90 prisoners were killed.

30.—The House of Commons voted £620,000 for Irish Railways.—Sir Harry Smith landed at Southampton from Algeria.—Launch of the first frame of Aldborough, with £6000 worth of plate-glass on board.—A declaration signed by a portion of the Prussian Diet against its entirety.

MAY.

2.—A large circus and two houses burnt near Stockholm. —The King of Prussia decreed new bread not to be sold until after Aug. 15 next.

3.—The Factories Bill passed in the House of Commons, by a majority of 63.—Two Italian pictures painted for her Majesty, exhibited gratuitously, at St. James's Palace.— Alarming Food Riots at Stuttgard.

4.—First appearance of Mdlle. Jenny Lind, as Alice, in "Roberto Il Diavolo," at Her Majesty's Theatre; received with wonderful enthusiasm.—Breaking up of the Neva commenced at St. Petersburg after 150 days' ice.

5.—The Court of Common Pleas decided that an individual's name being included in the list of members of a Railway Committee is no evidence against him.—Great scarcity of food in Germany: horse-flesh eaten.

6.—The Government in a minority of thirteen, in the House of Lords, on an amendment to the Poor Law Relief Bill.

7.—Mr. O'Connell arrived at Genoa, on his way to Rome.

8.—Wheat rose at Colchester eighteen shillings per quarter within the week.—Decided improvement in the state of the Money Market.—Food Riots, about this date, at Leon, Grenada, and Badajoz.—Riots at Brussels, Ghent, and Tourney.

10.—The Chancellor of the Exchequer proposed to Parliament a loan of £8,000,000, for the relief of the Monetary Crisis: appointment of Admiral Sir Charles Napier appointed to the command in the Tagus.—Gun Cotton proved by experiment, to be more advantageous than Gunpowder in blasting rocks and mining operations.

12.—A magnificent Gold Watch presented to Lord Dudley C. Stuart, by the Polish Emigrants.—The Queen review a muster of 63.—Two thousand persons painted for her Majesty, exhibited gratuitously, at St. James's Palace.— Alarming Food Riots at Stuttgard.

13.—First appearance of Mdlle. Jenny Lind, as Alice, in "Roberto Il Diavolo," at Her Majesty's Theatre; received with wonderful enthusiasm.—Breaking up of the Neva commenced at St. Petersburg after 150 days' ice.

15.—The Court of Common Pleas decided that an individual's name being included in the list of members of a Railway Committee is no evidence against him.—Great scarcity of food in Germany: horse-flesh eaten.

16.—The Government in a minority of thirteen, in the House of Lords, on an amendment to the Poor Law Relief Bill.

17.—Mr. O'Connell arrived at Genoa, on his way to Rome.

18.—Wheat rose at Colchester eighteen shillings per quarter within the week.—Decided improvement in the state of the Money Market.—Food Riots, about this date, at Leon, Grenada, and Badajoz.—Riots at Brussels, Ghent, and Tourney.

19.—The Chancellor of the Exchequer proposed to Parliament a loan of £8,000,000, for the relief of the Monetary Crisis: appointment of Admiral Sir Charles Napier appointed to the command in the Tagus.—Gun Cotton proved by experiment, to be more advantageous than Gunpowder in blasting rocks and mining operations.

20.—Inauguration of Prince Albert as Chancellor of Cambridge University.—Commodore Napier had usurped the throne of Ava.—171 deaths in one week in the Cork Workhouse.

21.—Resignation of the Sotomayer Spanish Ministry; succeeded by Isturiz.

22.—Great fire in Germany: 244 houses burnt at Wedningrode.—Riot at Rome, on account of the dearness of provisions.—Gift of wheat at St. Petersburg.

23, 29.—Bombardment of Vera Cruz, by the Americans; 200 lives lost.

25.—Death of the Prince de Polignac, the Prime Minister of Charles X.—Mr. O'Connell left Paris, on his way to Italy —The French Ministry retrieved their recent defeat.

26.—Fire near Leith.—Mr. O'Connell on his return to Spain; M. Salamanca the New Minister of Finance.

31.—News from Spain of the recognition of the justice of foreign claims by the Spanish Ministry.—Continued Riots, and —Intelligence of the assassination of Captain Gibson, Dr. Howell, and the Hon. Mr. Chetwynd, by the Kaffirs.—Death of Mr. Curwood, one of the oldest English barristers.

APRIL.

4.—News of subscriptions raising in the West India Islands for the Relief of the Irish and Scotch.—Nettles sold at 3d. per lb., at Preston.

5, 6.—Riots excited at Carlow, opened by M. Soyer, at Dublin.—Continued fever and destitution in Cork, Sligo, Mayo, &c.—The British Museum visited by 19,170 persons; the new Jail-window in the Queen's Bench Prison opened to the Park.—Revenue Account satisfactory: increase upon nearly every item.

6.—Rimouia Wharf, London-bridge, destroyed by fire.— Covent Garden Theatre, (the interior rebuilt,) opened for the performance of Italian Operas.

22.—Dreadful Riot at the Central Criminal Court, for Manslaughter, in administering improper medicines; but, the prescription having been incorrectly made up, he was acquitted.—Continued distress in the northern parts of France. The Queen of Spain became popular by her late determined conduct.

23.—The Edinburgh and Bathgate Railway commenced.— The foundation-stone of a barrage lock of the Nile laid at Alexandria, by Mehemet Ali.

30.—Imperial Cabinet in great confusion.—Three British vessels anchored off Athens.

31.—The Great Steeple Chase at the Croix de Berny, near Paris: the Great Hamlet won by Lord Strathmore's St. Leger.—The United Diet at Berlin opened by the King in person.—The Queen of Spain received with great enthusiasm by the people of Madrid—riot in the evening, and some arrests.

12.—News of the Queen of Spain having unceremoniously dismissed the Duke of Sotomayor's household, and annihilated the Camarilla.—Re-appearance of Mrs. Nisbett on the stage, at the Haymarket Theatre.—Olozaga returned to Madrid, and took his seat as a deputy.—News of two decisive battles between General Taylor and Santa Anna: the Americans victorious in both.—The newly-discovered planet distinctly named "Neptune."—The Emperor of Russia determined to invest four and a half millions in foreign funds.

13.—The first commitment under the New Small Debts Act, at the Westminster County Court: the debtor to be imprisoned ten days.—The Cobden Testimonial Fund amounted to nearly £200.—News of the burning of Bucharest, in Wallachia: many lives lost.—The Grand Duc steamer burnt off Lumbay: 22 lives lost.

14.—The Roman Catholic Relief Bill, in the House of Commons, lost by a majority of 39.—The Government Education measure excited great interest.—News of the winter at Santa Fé, the coldest ever known there: many persons frozen to death.—The Sultan contributed great for the relief of the distressed Irish and Scotch.

16.—The House of Lords occupied for the first time by the Peers: the public subsequently admitted to view the House, by tickets, on stated days.

18.—Three murderers executed at Bugeneals, in France.

17.—News of the capture of the Algerine chief Bou Maza by the French.—Queen Christina (of Spain) continued at Paris.—Spanish troops (6000 or 7000), on the frontiers of Portugal, ready to assist the Queen.—The Cassopus, for Sidon, and other British vessels in the Tagus, to protect the Queen of Portugal.—Four-fifths of the market-town of Great Sgalonta, in Hungary, destroyed by fire.—Decisive battle of Cerro Gordo, between Vera Cruz and Mexico: Santa Anna defeated by Gen. Scott.

18.—Changes in the Greek Ministry: re-appointment of Colletti.

19.—Intelligence of the renewal of the Kaffir War; and of the death of Akbar Khan.—An United States ship-of-war arrived at Cork, laden with provisions, as a free contribution from the States, for the Distressed Irish.

20.—News from Mexico: the 6000 Guinea States won by Conyngham.—Intelligence of the destruction of an entire town in Silesia, by Fire.—News of the continued mining success in South Australia.—Reconciliation of the Queen and King of Spain.

21.—The 2590th Anniversary of the Founding of Rome, celebrated by a Banquet to 800 Citizens.

22.—The Government Education Measure read a first time in the House of Commons, by a majority of 325.—Brandeston Hall, Suffolk, destroyed by fire.

23.—Serious riots in Berlin; 175 persons arrested.

24.—Bread Riots at Stettin, in Prussia.

25.—News of the surrender of the great mountain range of Kabylia (Algeria) of the French.—Conflict near Solosas, in Spain, between Montemolinists and Queen's troops.

26.—The Greek Chambers dissolved by Colletti.

27.—The Army Service Bill, limiting enlistment to 10 years, read a second time in the House of Lords, by a majority of 14.—Education Grant of £100,000 carried in the House of Commons, by a majority of 181.—Death of Lord Cowley, at Paris.—Loss of the Exmouth emigrant ship, off the north coast of Ireland, and 240 passengers.—The cold so severe at Stockholm that loaded carts passed over the frozen lakes.

29.—The Queen of Portugal consented to British mediation in her quarrel with the Junta.—Upwards of 100 prisoners broke out of the Limoëro at Lisbon, others followed, and, in an affray with the military, more than 90 prisoners were killed.

30.—The House of Commons voted £620,000 for Irish Railways.—Sir Harry Smith landed at Southampton from Algeria.—Launch of the first frame of Aldborough, with £6000 worth of plate-glass on board.—A declaration signed by a portion of the Prussian Diet against its entirety.

MAY.

2.—A large circus and two houses burnt near Stockholm. —The King of Prussia decreed new bread not to be sold until after Aug. 15 next.

3.—The Factories Bill passed in the House of Commons, by a majority of 63.—Two Italian pictures painted for her Majesty, exhibited gratuitously, at St. James's Palace.— Alarming Food Riots at Stuttgard.

4.—First appearance of Mdlle. Jenny Lind, as Alice, in "Roberto Il Diavolo," at Her Majesty's Theatre; received with wonderful enthusiasm.—Breaking up of the Neva commenced at St. Petersburg after 150 days' ice.

5.—The Court of Common Pleas decided that an individual's name being included in the list of members of a Railway Committee is no evidence against him.—Great scarcity of food in Germany: horse-flesh eaten.

6.—The Government in a minority of thirteen, in the House of Lords, on an amendment to the Poor Law Relief Bill.

7.—Mr. O'Connell arrived at Genoa, on his way to Rome.

8.—Wheat rose at Colchester eighteen shillings per quarter within the week.—Decided improvement in the state of the Money Market.—Food Riots, about this date, at Leon, Grenada, and Badajoz.—Riots at Brussels, Ghent, and Tourney.

10.—The Chancellor of the Exchequer proposed to Parliament a loan of £8,000,000, for the relief of the Monetary Crisis: appointment of Admiral Sir Charles Napier appointed to the command in the Tagus.—Gun Cotton proved by experiment, to be more advantageous than Gunpowder in blasting rocks and mining operations.

12.—A magnificent Gold Watch presented to Lord Dudley C. Stuart, by the Polish Emigrants.—The Queen review a muster of 63.—Two thousand persons painted for her Majesty, exhibited gratuitously, at St. James's Palace.— Alarming Food Riots at Stuttgard.

13.—First appearance of Mdlle. Jenny Lind, as Alice, in "Roberto Il Diavolo," at Her Majesty's Theatre; received with wonderful enthusiasm.—Breaking up of the Neva commenced at St. Petersburg after 150 days' ice.

15.—The Court of Common Pleas decided that an individual's name being included in the list of members of a Railway Committee is no evidence against him.—Great scarcity of food in Germany: horse-flesh eaten.

16.—The Government in a minority of thirteen, in the House of Lords, on an amendment to the Poor Law Relief Bill.

17.—Mr. O'Connell arrived at Genoa, on his way to Rome.

18.—Wheat rose at Colchester eighteen shillings per quarter within the week.—Decided improvement in the state of the Money Market.—Food Riots, about this date, at Leon, Grenada, and Badajoz.—Riots at Brussels, Ghent, and Tourney.

19.—The Chancellor of the Exchequer proposed to Parliament a loan of £8,000,000, for the relief of the Monetary Crisis: appointment of Admiral Sir Charles Napier appointed to the command in the Tagus.—Gun Cotton proved by experiment, to be more advantageous than Gunpowder in blasting rocks and mining operations.

20.—Inauguration of Prince Albert as Chancellor of Cambridge University.—Commodore Napier had usurped the throne of Ava.—171 deaths in one week in the Cork Workhouse.

21.—Resignation of the Sotomayer Spanish Ministry; succeeded by Isturiz.

22.—Great fire in Germany: 244 houses burnt at Wedningrode.—Riot at Rome, on account of the dearness of provisions.—Gift of wheat at St. Petersburg.

23, 29.—Bombardment of Vera Cruz, by the Americans; 200 lives lost.

25.—Death of the Prince de Polignac, the Prime Minister of Charles X.—Mr. O'Connell left Paris, on his way to Italy —The French Ministry retrieved their recent defeat.

26.—Fire near Leith.—Mr. O'Connell on his return to Spain; M. Salamanca the New Minister of Finance.

31.—News from Spain of the recognition of the justice of foreign claims by the Spanish Ministry.—Continued Riots, and —Intelligence of the assassination of Captain Gibson, Dr. Howell, and the Hon. Mr. Chetwynd, by the Kaffirs.—Death of Mr. Curwood, one of the oldest English barristers.

APRIL.

4.—News of subscriptions raising in the West India Islands for the Relief of the Irish and Scotch.—Nettles sold at 3d. per lb., at Preston.

5, 6.—Riots excited at Carlow, opened by M. Soyer, at Dublin.—Continued fever and destitution in Cork, Sligo, Mayo, &c.—The British Museum visited by 19,170 persons; the new Jail-window in the Queen's Bench Prison opened to the Park.—Revenue Account satisfactory: increase up

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No, 244.—Vol. X.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, JANUARY 2, 1847. [Sixpence.

THE NEW YEAR.

HOPE is the prevailing spirit of the Season, and, under its best influence, which is prolific of good wishes of all kinds, we greet the reader, at the beginning of a New Year and another Volume.

When standing between two periods, nothing is more natural than the disposition to look forward, except it may be the inclination to look back; most men, perhaps, do both; and at the present juncture we do not wish to be an unseasonable exception.

The year 1846 has just closed, and become as much a portion of the past as "the years beyond the Flood." Probably, no year ever passed over any one generation, that was not considered by those who saw it as an annus mirabilis. The present time is always the most important to those who have to live in it: thus, every year has been "momentous," or "extraordinary," or "unexampled"—equalled by none that went before it—to be matched by none that would come after it. Dryden wrote a whole poem on the year that saw the Restoration of the Monarchy, and the years that witnessed the Great Plague and the Great Fire wanted neither poets nor chroniclers. But years may be remarkable without events of such awful magnitude; and, though we cannot claim for 1846 the renown that may be fatally conferred by some overwhelming national calamity, it is still marked by occurrences that will make it remembered: it has not passed without bringing immense changes, a large degree of progress; and it does not close without a touch of misfortune to check our exultation; there is a cloud and shadow on its last hours. Amid wealth, and skill, and energy, and knowledge, unexampled in extent and degree, our power is baffled, and our pride humbled, by the presence among us of Famine and Disease, spread over a third of the kingdom. Here is the reproach of our wealth, and the abatement of our satisfaction; we cannot fully enjoy our good things, knowing that there are hunger and want at our threshold; Dives has his Lazarus at the gate; there is the fly in the "pot of ointment:" the lesson taught of old, and from on high, and intended for all time, is not wanting to us: shall we be able to do what it requires at our hands?

But for this calamity, which has hung over the whole of 1846, the results of the year would be almost wholly satisfactory. Peace has been preserved, even amid much talk of war. But the noise has been raised by the few—by diplomatists and their instruments, who disguise their petty jealousies in the garb of national questions, and endeavour to make the world believe it is interested in their squabbles. For half the past year, at least, Ministers and Journalists have been defying and challenging each other, through all the forms of official wrath consistent with official politeness, about a Royal marriage that is of no more consequence, as far as the people of France, Spain, or England are concerned, than any of the many alliances that have, in the same interval, been concluded at St. George's, Hanover-square. The whole thing was overrated and overdone. Royal Marriages, even two centuries ago, when Kings were powers, as often led to most Royal quarrels, as to the unity of interests and purpose, which is said to be a thing to be feared. Even in common life, few differences are fiercer than those between near relations; and how the Royal kindred of France and Spain have hated each other is proved from history. It is of very little consequence how they marry; of far more importance is it that the several nations should reach each other the hand; and, while all the clamour was kept up between Ministers and Ambassadors, threatening vengeance and slaughter for infractions of old treaties that everybody had forgotten and broken in turn, how were the people employed—what was their feeling as to each other? England was buying French wines, and sending out her capital to construct French railroads, and Spain was giving banquets to Mr. Cobden. Such things as these create a suspicion that, after all, the world is held together by something besides red tape—a useful thing enough in its way, but not so important as those who handle it think it is. At present, the two Governments of England and France are only frigidly polite; the entente cordiale has caught cold and looks chilly, and Lord Normanby expresses resentment by absenting himself from suppers and concerts. It is to be hoped the new year will bring with it more good humour and less absurdity.

WINTER IN RUSSIA.—DRAWN BY MANUEL.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

The political events of 1846, prove that the rise and fall of parties will hereafter depend more on social questions than those that once divided men into factions. Peel, as long as he led a party only, could afford to be a partisan, whose first object was to "build up" his influence with a section. But as soon as he became a Minister and led a nation, he was compelled by exigencies with which no man could dare trifle, to abandon the narrow path, and no longer "give up to party what was meant for mankind." The New Tariff was a departure from his party policy, and it was followed up by other measures in the same spirit, till, in the Session of 1846, the Corn-Laws sank after a troubled and stormy existence of thirty years. But the hour of his triumph was the hour of his fall. However good the act in itself, it was felt that it was not altogether good for him; all his past life had been a contradiction to his present course, and the cause of political consistency was avenged by his fall. Still the same necessities to which he bent will continue to exist for others; the path he took others will have to follow, either by change of old opinions, or adopting new ones, on questions yet scarcely thought of. Much of the future course of our statesmen will be on new ground. We have yet to create a plan of national education; questions of labour, and its employment have to be settled; the sanatory state of the people, their dwellings, the drainage of cities and towns, have all to be considered. A well arranged plan of emigration is yet among the things to be. These are the questions that are rising into the importance the mere cries of faction have lost: the problems they present must be solved by those who aspire to the position of the leaders and statesmen of the future. Time will bring the helping knowledge; for it is not one year, nor ten, that will see the complete settlement of some of them. Altogether, 1847 opens with more of doubt and difficulty—more in which past experience is of less avail—than many of its predecessors.

WINTER IN RUSSIA.

THE winter in Russia, we learn by recent arrivals, has set in with such rigour as fairly to entitle the empire to rank as "the icy North." We have, therefore, profited by the opportunity to introduce to our readers one of the modes of locomotion usual in Russian towns.

It appears that the genus "whips" of Russia—those who make it a point of honour to stand up for the national "drag"—generally have their sledges in winter, and droschkis in summer, harnassed to two horses; the one between the shafts, a trotter of first stamina, and his side companion free almost as air to gallop his best, which he does with extreme beauty and fire. Many a Russian phaeton has been laid low by those steeds of the Ukraine, immortalized by the story of "Mazeppa;" and strong must be the wrist, and steady and skilful, so curb and guide those horses, which even the Russians themselves acknowledge to be wild. Notwithstanding the manifest dangers of this "turn out," besides the cheering prospect of being in the country, "driving himself" by sundry packs of wolves, by wintry famine roused," and whose appetites are always extremely exigeant, the Russians love their national vehicle, to a pitch almost ultra-national.

Our illustration is from the faithful pencil of M. Manuel, a distinguished artist, whose five years' residence in Russia has enabled him to embody characteristics of the manners and customs with fidelity and picturesqueness, a somewhat rare combination of excellence even in this age of illustration.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

PARISIANA.

(From our own Correspondent.)

PARIS, Wednesday.

Foreigners of all nations are arriving like herrings or mackerel in season—by shoals. Need it be said that the most peripatetic of nations, as well as the freest to travel—the English—are the most numerous of our visitors: the list would be endless, were I to mention all the new arrivals—from Charles Dickens—just returned to sketch our follies—to young Lord Ward, come to give our galeries a contribution of two months of his revenue of £100,000 a-year. The most important arrival—for it is interesting in the eyes of political sages, as well as in those of men of pleasure—is the immediately announced return of that grande dame and amiable lady, the Marchioness of Normanby. Will her bland influence remove the asperity of Court intercourse? Will grand dinners, cooked by Louis, and bells, inspired by Musard, restore the gloom and laughter into the Embassy in Paris? Such are the questions put by all the beaux and belles of the two hostile quarters of Paris—the Faubourgs St. Germain and the Chaussée d'Antin, who, in past years, under the English ambassador's roof, meet on neutral ground. Our gay folks, ever hopeful, answer "Yes!"—but, the night before last, at Princess Lieven's, the greatest sage of the conclave said "No!" Still it is announced confidently, by the light of the countenance of Louis Philippe, that the Duchess de Nemours and her illustrious husband are going over immediately to visit their Royal cousins at Windsor; and, in the meantime, the Countess de St. Aulaire, our Ambassadress to your Court, announces her departure, although I believe it can scarce be expected before Easter. To the other crowds arriving in Paris, add that of Deputies hastening from all quarters to the grand field of battle—each eager to be in time to reconnoitre the position of the armies, and secure a commanding spot to pitch his tent—either to repose upon his laurels, or to retire, like Achilles, in dudgeon, and await the hour of the blandishments of the Ministerial Agamemnon. Apart, those who habitually reside in Paris—the newly-nominated provincial Deputies—are the worst dressed, the most singularly-mannered, and the most antediluvian body of men in France. At the last Ministerial réunion at M. Guizot's, I procured one of the most polished Englishmen in Paris the opportunity of beholding the strange medley. We came early—besides M. Guizot, there were no Deputies arrived but Desmousseaux de Givré, an amiable, laughing philosopher, who has the advantage, whilst he possesses a ready flow of squibs, of being too deaf to hear the attacks and angry rejoinders of his antagonists; with him was M. de Lasergne, the well-known writer of novels, feuilletons, and articles in the "Revue des Deux Mondes:" both these two Deputés are employed in the Foreign Office. These were followed soon by little M. Janvier, a shrewd politician, but looking the very image of an apothecary retired upon the profits of the laughs with which he has deluged a country town; and Baron d'Haubersaert, the no less striking likeness of another far different apothecary—that of "Romeo and Juliet;" but, morally, very unlike Shakspeare's hero, for he is the most mercurial of men; and is in his will, but not his poverty, that has made him the whipper-in—the Holmes—of the Conservatives of France. When the crowd of the country deputies began to arrive, it was a perfect carnival scene. Some opened in headlong, and then stopped suddenly to breathe, like the Dutchman in Washington Irving, who took a seven-miles spring to get up a hill, and then rested at the bottom to take breath. Others stopped at the first door, to examine the architectural details, and then thrust their hands into their breasts; others at the second door stuck both hands in their pockets to show independence. The amusement of your noble countryman was unlimited; but, at last, the anecdotian looks and speeches of one of these provincial representatives of the nation so excited his risible nerves, that, for fear of his breaking out into a horse laugh, he therefore withdrew, leaving the good deputies, some screwing up their courage and girding themselves for the coming fight; some lashing themselves up with anticipatory inflammatory oration, like Indians with their war dances; whilst the wide-awake were looking out to see what they could get for their votes—sooth to say, the most marketable commodities in France—whilst from the innumerable offices in the gift of Government, and from the deputies being those who are most influential in obtaining, the temptation to be a Ministerial member is almost irresistible. This multiplication of places, arising from the policy of Napoleon, who could only hold his usurped Crown secure by enlisting the whole nation either in the army or the civil service of his Government—this multiplication of offices, which is so extraordinary, that for each Judge in England, there are hundreds in France, only receiving, as pay, from £30, the lowest, and £1000 the highest—the temptation which

Council, and the Legislative Council will be nominated by the Crown. As its third estate, each province is to have a House of Representatives. This is to form the popular element of the constitution, and to embody the doctrine of self-government. In the choice of representatives, the principle applied is that of double election. A common council is to elect the representative; the borough is to elect the common council. The formation of boroughs involves a survey of the colony, a registration of its lands, and a division of the whole country into municipal districts. A Governor-in-Chief, a Legislative Council of the General Assembly, and a House of Representatives for the General Assembly, will be paramount to the provincial legislatures (or assemblies) in the way that an American Congress is paramount to the legislations of the states.

Letters from Wellington of July 25, announce the capture of the native chief Rauparaha, by Captain Stanley. Captain Stanley timed his visit to Rauparaha's pah so well, that he took Rauparaha, Charley, and three others before the latter had time to strike a blow; he also seized some 37 stand of arms and 6 or 7 kegs of powder. Rauparaha's men all decamped, and are supposed to have gone to Rangihaeata, in number about 35. Rauparaha himself, and Charley, and the three others are all safe on board the Driver, in irons. This is the most decisive step Governor Grey has yet taken. Rauparaha and Charley have been both at the massacre of Captain Arthur Wakefield, at Wairoa; and the settlers are in perfect ecstacy at this bold policy of the Governor.

ARRIVAL OF THE OVERLAND MAIL.

The Overland Mail, which left Bombay on the 16th of December, arrived by express on Monday. The intelligence is important, inasmuch as it announces a cessation of the difficulties in Cashmere

A letter from the camp of Sir John Littler, dated November 1, intimates that the advancing force had been ordered to retire, the insurgent chiefs having submitted. The misunderstandings at Mooltan have been satisfactorily arranged, and the Dewan, having been relieved with authority, has by this time returned to his capital and resumed his authority.

The Sikh Chief agreed to pay £35,000 in the shape of arrears of tribute—one-third of the territory formerly under his charge to be formed into a separate province, to be governed by Mir Bhugwan Singh. The revenue of the remaining two-thirds to be raised one-fourth above what was formerly charged on it.

The accounts from the kingdom of Lahore and the new kingdom of Jummoo, represent them as both propped up by the British troops. In Jummoo there are four armies besides the troops of the numerous mountain-Rajahs. The four armies are—first, that of Ghoolab Singh, who is struggling to obtain possession of his purchased sovereignty, composed, as it is, of the most discordant materials; second, the army (the strength of which is unknown) of the Sheik Eman-ood-Deen, who, secure in the vale of Cashmere, refuses to submit to Ghoolab; third, the force under the Lahore general, Dj Singh, which has one of the (to them) most repugnant missions of fighting for the traitor Ghoolab; and, fourth, the two British divisions commanded by Generals Littler and Wheeler, who are in possession of Jummoo, the capital, which they have undertaken to protect for Ghoolab, while he himself is engaged in the field.

From Scinde there is no news of importance. Sir Charles Napier was at Kurrachee, where the climate was pleasant.

In the interior of India tranquillity prevails. The Nizam's Government is undergoing a favourable change. He has at length named as Dewan, or Minister, the native nobleman whom the British Resident had previously proposed. He has dismissed his favourite eunuch, Mubarik Singh, had his revenue (to the tune of £300,000 a-year) restored to him, and consequently the (to them) most repugnant mission

THE INSURRECTION IN PORTUGAL.

GENERAL SCHWALBACH.

JOHAN SCHWALBACH is one of the Commanders of the Royal troops, at present operating with Marshal Saldanha, against Das Antas and the Insurgents. As evident from his name, he is a German; but he has been for many years in the Portuguese service. He was a favourite officer of Don Pedro, who raised him from the rank of Lieutenant to General, and gave him the title of Baron von Setubal. His latest achievement is the occupation of the place from which he takes his title (an important town). He is much dreaded by the Democrats, and they evacuated it—popular forces, Junta, and all—three hours before he arrived. The Queen's authority was immediately restored, and earolments for the Queen's volunteer battalions were proceeded with. Schwalbach is a brave soldier, and able General; he is a military commander, and nothing else, never having mixed himself up with politics at all. It is difficult to foresee what will be the issue of these convulsions. Constitutional Government is impossible; for no one can be trusted with power, and the mass of the people neither comprehend nor care for political principles.

JOHN SCHWALBACH, VISCOUNT ST. UBAS.

The Miguelites are stirring again, and with some chance of success, for it is well stated by the Correspondent of a leading journal:—"It may be difficult to believe in England, but it is a fact, that after describing a circle of a league or two's diameter round the two cities of Lisbon and Oporto, the rest of the Portuguese nation is anxious to see an absolute Government established—and why not? The old hidalgo families are discontented at seeing themselves pushed aside, and their order sneered at by adventurers of all kinds. The capitalist finds his safest investment a 'bad spec.,' from the constant recurrence of revolutions. His bags of good new crowns are turned into bank-notes (at 20 per cent. discount), by a stroke from the magic pen of a Finance Minister, in whom he probably recognises a former confidential clerk. The poor, upon whom, as usual, the burden weighs most heavily, are the most ardent supporters of the Absolute party. By the abolition of the convents, whose friars distributed daily alms to the neighbouring poor, the more needy have lost, as it were, their daily bread, no poor-rate being established, as in England, to supersede that mode of relief; and, further, the multitude of friars who formerly relieved them are now sharing their poverty. The labouring man, who gains at most in this part of the country a shilling a day, is forced to shoulder a musket and leave his wife and children to starve. The above is a true picture of the state of feeling in two estates of the realm. The feelings of the third, the Crown (and no thanks to the Junta if it still occupies even this humble position), may be easily inferred. Her Majesty has, apparently, the choice of two evils—Absolutism or exile."

GENERAL DAS ANTAS.

GENERAL DAS ANTAS is the leader of the Insurrection in Portugal, as a politician and an ex-Minister; he is also the commander of the Insurgents as a General. After the action, in which he was defeated, at Chaves, by Saldanha, he retired, with a force of about five thousand men, into Santarem, where he still remains, surrounded by the troops of Saldanha. But whether there is an indisposition on the part of the Queen's General to press matters to extremes against an old companion in arms, and political colleague of former years; or whether, in the "situation," the Fabian policy of delay is really the best; certain it is, up to the present time, he has not exhibited much anxiety to come to blows. Santarem, however, is a strong place; and, when held by Massena and the French against Lord Wellington, in 1811, it kept our army more than three months inactive before it. In the present case, however, political reasons may exist against a war to the knife. The Duke de Terceira is still a prisoner in the hands of the Insurgents—a kind of hostage, or security, for the good behaviour of the Government party. The possession of the Duke's person by the Insurgents has hitherto restrained the Queen's officers from punishing their prisoners by martial law, which proclaimed death to all who were taken in arms; but none have been executed. In fact, the Government is held in check; and, though affairs look very unpromising for the Insurgents, who are what we should in England call "the Opposition," yet it is not impossible the chapter of accidents may turn up something in their favour. There is every chance that the present hostile attitude of the parties may be terminated by a negotiation, or, as it is called there, "a transaction."

Das Antas, like Saldanha, served under Lord Wellington during our operations against the French in Portugal, though, at that time, only in inferior rank. Das Antas was a subaltern and Captain in the 7th Battalion of Cacadores; bravery was the only soldier-like merit he then had the opportunity of displaying; his talents were not put to any difficult test. He became more known in the civil war between Miguel and Pedro; he and Saldanha fought together in Pedro's army, and distinguished themselves particularly in the defence of Oporto, on the 25th of July, 1833, when Marshal Bourmont, who had entered Miguel's service, was completely routed, in a sanguinary battle, the loss being enormous in proportion to the numbers engaged. From this period Das Antas became one of those soldier politicians who are so unfortunately plentiful in Spain and Portugal. It would be tedious to follow him through all the ins and outs of Portuguese intrigue for the last ten years; but the obscure subaltern has emerged from them a General, a Viscount, a Minister, and a—Rebel!

We annex a view of the ancient City of Evora, the capital of the province of Alentejo, sketched by a Correspondent, from about half a mile southward. The city lies in a fine open country, on the road from Lisbon to the Algarve, about eighty miles south-east of Lisbon, thirty miles north of Beja, and fifty miles west by south of Badajos. Evora is an Archbishop's see, has a college, several good buildings, and a noble aqueduct, attributed to Sertorius; there is, also, a handsome temple of the Roman period. The town suffered greatly in the French Invasion of 1808, for having attempted an insurrection against the invaders; many of the inhabitants were put to death. The present population is about 12,000. The view shows the Cathedral, and some of the other principal buildings, mostly in the Moorish style.

THE PROGRESS OF THE INSURRECTION.

Letters and papers from Lisbon to the 20th ult. have reached us. The news is of a very contradictory character. The Government papers allow very little to be known, and the private accounts are in many respects founded on conjecture. All that seems certain is, that the insurrection does not advance, and that little has been effected, either by Saldanha or by the troops of Das Antas.

The bulk of Saldanha's army had marched northward to meet Bomfim, who, with his own and a number of Das Antas's soldiers, had occupied Caldas. But, notwithstanding these warlike appearances, there was some probability that matters would end in a compromise. The financial embarrassments at Lisbon continued to be very great, and trade was completely paralysed. The discount on Bank of Lisbon notes was at 20 per cent.

The number of Miguelites at present in arms in Portugal is from 4000 to 5000 men in different guerillas. These are almost entirely in the province of the Minho, where M'Donnell has held his ground for more than three months. Their chief head quarters are the towns of Braga and Penafiel. They latterly made two attempts on the town of Viana, but failed in both. Miguelite emissaries have contrived to introduce 100,000 stand of arms into Portugal during the last year.

General Schwalbach had taken possession of St. Ube's, which, however, was previously evacuated.

With respect to the movements at Cartaxo and Santarem, there is little to report. Saldanha's inactivity has very much incensed the Court party, who consider that every day's delay in making a strenuous struggle for mastery is only increasing the danger and disaffection. Das Antas does not imitate the example set him by his antagonist, but he harasses and annoys the Queen's troops in every possible way which his guerillas and irregulars fully enable him to do. On the 9th ult. a party issued from Santarem and took possession of the Ponte de Salleiros, capturing a picquet guard which was stationed there, in the very sight of the Marshal, who did nothing either to prevent or avenge this insult. The Count has detached another force of 1000 men (horse and foot), under Monzinho de Albuquerque; this has joined Bomfim's division, and altogether there are now 3000 good troops opposed to the 2000 men under Freire and Lapa.

A letter from Count Bomfim had been received at Lisbon, which states that on the 10th ult. Major Busto Valdez's force encountered the column under Lapa; that the first attack was made by the guerillas and irregulars commanded by his own son, who had the worst of it at first, and retreated to the castle of Arrun, when he himself brought up a reserve, and compelled the enemy to retire, with the loss of many men on both sides, and on that of the Queen's forces of a field officer killed. The subsequent movements of Freire and Lapa towards the main body of Saldanha's force may have been occasioned by this affair.

The accounts from Oporto of the 19th ult. prove that the Queen's cause has not prospered in that city. Casal lost much valuable time in reorganising his troops after the affair of Val de Passons, and did not arrive at Vallongo until the 8th, on which day he entered at the head of 1050 infantry and 150 cavalry, in fine order. He afterwards moved towards the sea, and established his head quarters at Leça de Ballo, his left and powder magazine being at Sao Mamede, and his right at Matozinhos, on the coast. According to another letter, Casal was in full retreat, it was supposed towards Braga. The latter report, however, seems to require confirmation.

Some advices from Lisbon, received in the City, dated the 20th ult., give the following report of the movements of the Government forces:—"On the 19th, a light brigade left Cartaxo at three o'clock in the morning, taking the road to Alcoentre. It consisted of the 16th Regiment of Infantry, the 1st and 8th Cacadores, and 600 horse. An hour afterwards, the rest of the division of infantry, consisting of the 1st, 8th, and 10th Grenadiers, with eight pieces of artillery and a brigade of congreves, departed on the same road. Saldanha followed to Alcoentre. The second brigade, commanded by Brigadier Mosquita, consisting of two regiments of infantry, with fifty horse and three pieces of cannon, left for Azumbuja, directing its march on Albandra. The force commanded by Antas, which was left at Santarem, consisted of four regiments of infantry. Bomfim was at Sanguinhal with his brigade, composed of four regiments of infantry, and contingents with 200 inferior horses and four pieces of artillery; and the Guerillas commanded by D. Jaime and F. de Villa Real were going in the direction of Torres Vedras."

DAS ANTAS.

Another letter (also from a Government writer) says—"At four o'clock this morning (Dec. 20th) an express arrived from Saldanha, which states that, when he left Cartaxo, Antas left Santarem, to which place, after having passed the Bridge of Assoca, he again returned, when a connection took place amongst his troops, and 200 of them left him and joined our brigade at Villa Nova."

SPAIN.

At the time of our latest advices from Madrid, the differences on the subject of the Ministry had been arranged, at least temporarily, and the Ministerial crisis was over. The conditions of the contract signed between M. Mon and the Bank of San Fernando had been made known officially. The latter is to continue to be the banker of the Government during the year 1847, and to receive the whole of the revenues and contributions of the State. Independently of the 67,000,000 of reals which the Bank is to supply the Government with monthly, it has undertaken to hand over to the Sinking Fund Board the amount required for the payment, at home and abroad, of the interest of the Three per Cent. Debt falling due on the 31st December and on the 30th of June, 1847.

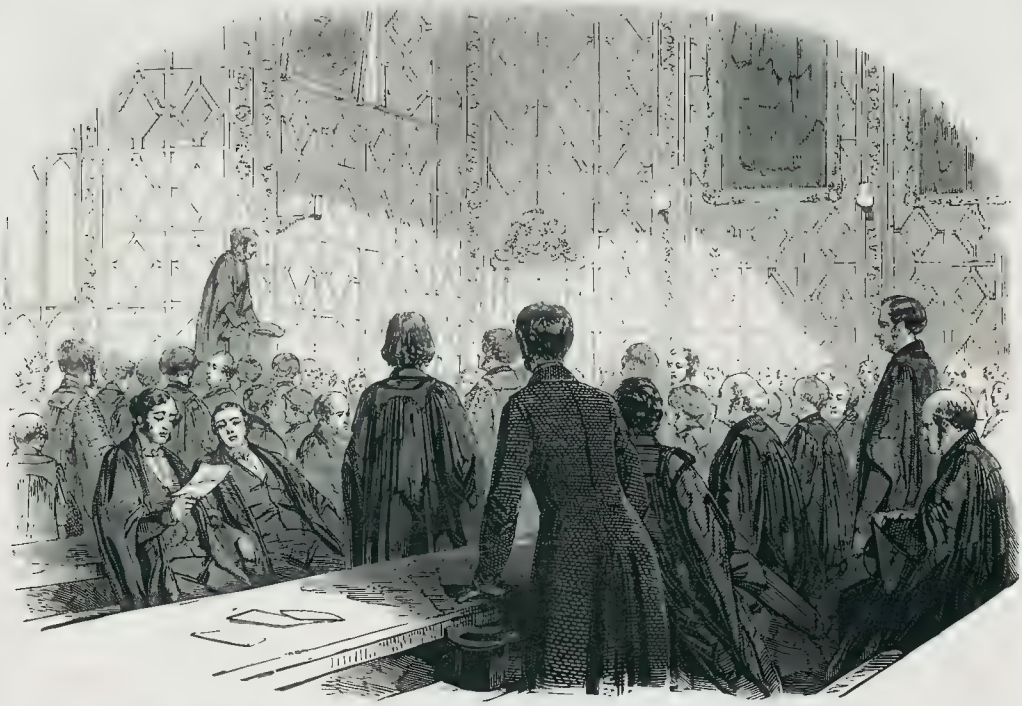
A Madrid journal of the 22d ult., says:—"Snow has fallen without interruption for a week; a great number of villages are almost buried by it. The inhabitants cannot communicate with each other; the cattle are perishing for want of food and hungry wolves prowl in the streets."

The Gaceta of the 22nd ult. publishes a Royal decree, whereby the meeting of the Cortes, which was to have taken place on the 25th of December, was postponed to the 31st, owing to the bad state of the roads, and the inclemency of the weather, which were likely to prevent a number of members from arriving at Madrid in due time. Although the unsettled state of the Cabinet may have contributed to the postponement of the opening of the Session, it is quite true that, in consequence of the snow and frost, most of the roads of Spain had become impassable, and that the public vehicles and couriers were delayed as much as three or four days. Nevertheless, it was believed, in some quarters, that the postponement was caused by the difficulty felt by the Ministers in arranging the terms of the Royal Speech.

Letters from various points of Navarre announce that a Carlist movement was on the point of taking place. It is also stated that the Carlist bands in Catalonia were beginning to excite some uneasiness, and that the Captain-General was about to set out himself, at the head of a light column of troops, in pursuit of the rebels.

THE CITY OF EVORA, FROM THE SOUTH.—SKETCHED BY A CORRESPONDENT.

GRAND TERCENTENARY COMMEMORATION OF THE FOUNDATION OF TRINITY COLLEGE, CAMBRIDGE.



HALL OF TRINITY COLLEGE, CAMBRIDGE.—DELIVERY OF THE ORATIONS.

The Third Centenary of the Foundation of Trinity College by Henry VIII., in 1546, was celebrated with great magnificence on Tuesday week (December 22) within the walls of that venerable institution. In a former publication, we have sketched and illustrated the history of the College itself (see the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, Nos. 78 and 79); so that, on the present occasion, our Illustrations and the accompanying details will commemorate in our columns the splendid hospitality of the Master (the Rev. Dr. Whewell,) and Fellows of Trinity on Tuesday week.

First, it is gratifying to observe that it was a religious festival, and was duly honoured with the pious observances of public prayer and praise, with solemn music and a commemorative sermon. The day began with the usual early service in the Chapel; and at ten o'clock, the Heads of Colleges, Fellows and Scholars of the College, accompanied by such of the guests as had then arrived, assembled in the Hall, where the distribution of prizes took place by the Senior Dean, the Rev. W. Carus, who made some appropriate remarks to each of the recipients.

At four o'clock, the religious service more immediately connected with the day commenced in the Chapel, which presented a most interesting spectacle in the number of distinguished men who had been attracted once more to the scene of their youthful labours.

The Rev. John Richards, B.A., Chaplain of the College, commenced the service. The choir chanted the three Psalms selected appropriately for the occasion, viz., Psalms 145, 146, and 147. The 44th chapter of the Book of Ecclesiastes was next read as the lesson of the day, by the Rev. W. G. Humphry, M.A., the Steward; which being ended, the Rev. James Amiraux Jeremie, M.A., one of the Fellows of the Foundation, Classical Professor in the East India College, Hailey-bury, and Examining Chaplain to the Lord Bishop of Lincoln, proceeded to deliver the commemoration sermon. The Rev. gentleman took his text from the 143rd Psalm, v. 5, and his discourse was exceedingly eloquent and appropriate; but we were unable, on account of an inconvenient position, and the low tone of the preacher's voice, to take many notes of it. We understood him to open with an eloquent and feeling allusion to the advantages of a sound classical and academic course of education, and to enforce his views by a retrospect of the events which had closed each of the three centuries of the foundation of the College, the last of which the proceedings of the day were intended to commemorate.

At the conclusion of the sermon, the Rev. Joseph Romilly, M.A., read a list of the benefactors from the foundation of the College to the present day; after which the Commemoration Anthem, "O give thanks unto the Lord," was given with admirable effect. This was composed by Professor Walmisley in 1834, and has been performed on every Commemoration-day since that time, that is, for the last twelve years. The beautiful style in which one of the boys sung the solo, "The righteous shall be held in everlasting remembrance," deserves especial commendation.

THE BANQUET

At the conclusion of the service, the company withdrew to the noble Gothic Hall, and the crowning ceremonial of the day. The banquet which took place in this magnificent apartment was worthy of those olden scenes of festivity which feudal hospitality cherished, when the gallery above was wont to send forth the "bray of minstrelsy." It was served by the cooks of the College, Messrs. Hudson, and the tables literally groaned beneath the weight of viands, rich and rare, which this great House set before its guests. A scene of such glorious festivity it falls to the lot of few to witness.

The band of the Hon. Artillery Company, under the direction of Mr. Smithies performed during dinner a selection of music from popular operas, and other pieces, in admirable style.

GREAT, OR BISHOP'S-COURT, TRINITY COLLEGE, CAMBRIDGE.—LEAVING CHURCH AND GOING TO HALL.

Dinner lasted somewhat more than an hour and a quarter, and after Grace, the anthem "Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem," by Jeremiah Clark, was sung by the choristers, the accompaniment for the military band being by Professor Walmisley, who conducted the performance. The following is the BILL OF FARE.

25 Dishes fish, 11 ditto stewed tench
25 Tureens potage à la Pate d'Italie
16 Tureens potage à la Paisanne
17 Dishes rissoles
17 Dishes turtles
64 Boiled fowls and oysters
22 Tongues
10 Mont Ina pine cream
12 Middles hashed
11 Dishes Salle de Perdreaux aux truffes
10 Tritles
18 Ragoût pâtés
1 Roast rump beef sauce hash
12 Roast saddle of plovers
10 Dishes curries of rabbit
10 Lobster salads
10 Dishes pastry
7 Haunches mutton
2 Haunches venison
6 Sirloins beef
17 Roast turkeys
22 Pheasants
20 Wild ducks
3 Hares
1 Relish puddings
11 Sir Watkyn's puddings
1 Ginger pudding
20 Dishes apple pies
12 Dishes sausages
1 Grape basket
1 Mongst basket
6 Dishes entrets à la reforme
5 Dishes entrets à la milanese
1 Dish Perdreaux en Charlreuse
1 Hotch Potch Ryder
2 Dishes prawns
1 Meringuem pommes
1 Rice entrets à la Montmorecid
1 Dish Vanity tatoes
1 Dish Macaroni
1 Dish Kickshaw sauce
Vegetables
Boar's Head, 5 centres, and 12 pieces mottoes, 18 waxes

We regret that we have only room for a list of the distinguished company at the dais table:—

Mr. J Brown

Dean of Canterbury	Lord Teignmouth
Master of Sydney	Lord Alfred Hervey
Lord J Manners	Baron Rolfe
Master of Christ's	Master of Jesus
Lord Melgund	Mr Gaskell
Lord Norreys	The Bishop of London
Mr Justice Williams	The Vice-Chancellor
Mr Romilly
Lord Fitzwilliam
Master of Corpus
Lord Montagle	The American Minister
Dean of Ely	Lord Hardwicke
Master of Pembroke	Mr Justice Coltman
Lord Castlereagh	The Master of Clare Hall
Master of Downing	Hon. Mr. Law
	Lord Godolphin
	Mr. Macaulay

The Vice-Master

These things being ended, and an overflowing supply of wine, and a superb dessert, supplied by Mr. Lishfield (the Gunter of Cambridge), having been placed upon the tables, the speaking began.

The Master said the first toast in that company was and must be our Sovereign Lady the Queen—the toast of all Englishmen coupled with an expression of affection and loyal devotion to her. And such a toast came with peculiar propriety in that Hall, for she was the living representative of their Founders, and from all her predecessors they had several countenances and support; whilst she herself had conferred grace and honour upon the College by that visit, a memorial of which was still existing in the Hall. (Loud applause.)

Toast—"The Queen."

Band "God save the Queen."

The Master proposed next "His Royal Highness Prince Albert, and the Royal Family." The position of his Royal Highness, and his relation to our most gracious Sovereign, secured their affection and devotion. But, in addition to any claim resting upon that foundation, it was known that he sympathised with the members of the College in the occasion which had brought them together, and they had had the satisfaction of already seeing him in that Hall. His Royal Highness had expressed great regret at being prevented from being present; for, since they had the honour of having his name upon the books of the College, they took the liberty of sending him an invitation, which he reluctantly declined. (Cheers.)

Toast—"His Royal Highness Prince Albert, and the Royal Family."

Band "God save the Queen."

The Master proposed next "His Royal Highness Prince Albert, and the Royal Family." The position of his Royal Highness, and his relation to our most gracious Sovereign, secured their affection and devotion. But, in addition to any claim resting upon that foundation, it was known that he sympathised with the members of the College in the occasion which had brought them together, and they had had the satisfaction of already seeing him in that Hall. His Royal Highness had expressed great regret at being prevented from being present; for, since they had the honour of having his name upon the books of the College, they took the liberty of sending him an invitation, which he reluctantly declined. (Cheers.)

Toast—"His Royal Highness Prince Albert, and the Royal Family."

Here we should explain that the space we are enabled to devote to the record of this impressive ceremony and festival —notwithstanding the importance and splendour of the event—will not allow us to give entire the eloquent addresses which preceded and followed the toasts of the day. The report occupies six of the large and closely-printed columns of the Cambridge Chronicle, to which ably conducted journal we are indebted for such portions of the speeches, &c., as our Limits will enable us to quote.

The Master, in proposing the toast of th day, glanced at the joyful retrospections of the common annual Commemorations, and then adverted to the deeper and more comprehensive feelings on the present Commemoration of the age of their College reckoned by centuries. "They could not fail to remember that they were connected by that period with almost every thing that is great, and stirring, and interesting in the intellectual and moral life of England. (Applause.) Far be it from the members of that College assembled there to speak as if they had a disproportioned share; but he might say this, and with thankfulness and pleasure too, that they, as members of Trinity College, could look with pride on names which are great in that portion of the world in which the English language is known—names which stir the hearts of men from pole to pole. (Cheers.) These names were to them as household words. The translators of the Bible, Bacon, Dryden, Newton, Porson, Bentley, these were names which adorned every faculty of man, and amongst these names they had lived. Their possessions had shared the same privileges which they (the members of the College) now enjoyed: they trod their halls, and worshipped in their temple, and were to them as friends, and brothers, and members of the same family to which they themselves belonged. (Cheers.) The Master then adverted to the great changes which they had outlived, and to the "long prosperity they had enjoyed; and, standing there at that point of time, they could not but hear the cry of the centuries that were now inviting them onwards, and of the centuries that were coming inviting and encouraging them onwards too." (Cheers.)

The responsibility of advancing with the times, the extension of the cause of Literature and Science by the College, and their sympathy with the extension of academical institutions in this country, were severally referred to, as well as the reflection that the University of Cambridge had, on such occasions, furnished both their system of instruction and the persons by whom that system was to be carried on. (Cheers). As the poet said with respect to the hills of Switzerland, they had supplied the iron and the man, the soldier and the sword. (Applause.) The Master, after referring to his recommendation of the additions, studies of General Jurisprudence, Civil Engineering, and Natural History, concluded a most eloquent address by proposing "Prosperity to Trinity College."

Lord Fitzwilliam then proposed "the Master," observing, in the course of his address, that if Bacon invented the inductive process of developing truth, he, (the Master) had made that science, by his writings, more accessible to future inquirers. (Cheers.)

The Master returned thanks, and next proposed "the Bishop of London and the Clergy."

The Bishop of London, in thanking the company, adverted to the Bishops' sense of the connection which now subsists between the Church and the Universities, adding no persons could be more determined than they to uphold and maintain to the utmost of their power that connection inviolate. (Cheers.) His Lordship then referred with emotion to his election as Fellow of Trinity College, feelings which he should always retain.

The Chairman next, in a brief speech, proposed "Mr. Macaulay and the Members of the Privy Council"

Mr. Macaulay, (who is a Member of the College,) in thanking the company, declared that—"through all changes of place, through all vicissitudes of fortune, in distant countries and in civil conflicts, there had been very few days in which his thoughts had not reverted with fondness, and perhaps with gratitude, to that beloved College—to its cloisters and river, to its library rich in varied learning of many nations and of many ages, to its chapel hallowed by so many illustrious monuments and names. With feelings like these it was impossible to assist with pleasure and delight at that most interesting festival. (Applause.) They looked back that day on a former existence of 300 years—300 years of a beneficent and glorious life." "Our first century," continued the right honourable gentleman, "was one not with just pride, [illegible] Our second century we may call with pride not less just the century of Isaac Newton. If our third century can be called by no such name, it is because the civilized world in that period produced no such man. But that century is one nevertheless which we may reflect upon with just pride: it was a century of repose and intellectual activity in this kingdom; it is just one hundred years since the last battle was fought on English ground. And just one hundred years since the last scaffold was set up on Tower-hill. (Cheers.) During that century, all good flourished under the combined influence of order and toleration, and nowhere did it flourish more than here." So society can display such a list as we can show of men eminent in active intellectual life—Geologists, Philologists, Divines, Advocates whose eloquence is the pride of the bar, wise and patriotic Statesmen, learned and upright Judges. My wish is, that the age which opens this day may be such as those which precede it. May our College produce men worthy to succeed those whose portraits, as the noble Lord reminded us, adorn this Hall: may it produce Philosophers who shall follow the precedent of our Bacon, and the example of our Newton; Divines as profound and eloquent as our Barrow; Magistrates who, with the learning and spirit of our Coke, may have a larger share of the same honour; Scholars who may approach the supremacy occupied by our Bentley; Poets who may have the immortality of our Cowley with a purer taste, and the fire and energy of our Dryden. With a prayer like this, such as I am confident, are the wishes of many who have been drawn from this venerable retreat to the active duties of life, and who have never ceased to remember it with gratitude and affection." (Loud cheers.)

The Master then proposed "The American Minister."

Mr. Bancroft returned thanks, and, in the course of his address, adverted, in [illegible] to the Master's "History of the Inductive Science," and to Mr. Adams's recent celebration in respect of the New Planet.

The Master, in next proposing "The Chancellor and Vice-Chancellor," felicitously remarked: They of that College knew well how much their interests were bound up with the interests of other Colleges, and how much was the prosperity which they shared in common with them. If they needed any [illegible] tion of that, they would find it in the reflection that that great [illegible] astronomy by which this age would be known was due to one of the [illegible] the other side of the wall. (Loud cheers.)

The Vice-Chancellor, having thanked the company, concluded his address by reference to the good fruit which Trinity College produced. That object was to give a complete and generous education, such as, in the words of Milton, to fit a man to perform justly, skilfully, and magnanimously, all the offices that fell to his lot. (Cheers.)

The Master next proposed "The Judges."

Mr Justice Coltman rose and returned thanks, observing that no less than twelve who occupied that distinguished position had been educated at Trinity College, and to the training they had received there, their success might, in a great degree, be attributed. (Cheers.)

The Master, in a complimentary speech, proposed "The Army and Navy, and the Lord Lieutenant."

Lord Hardwicke thanked the company, and, in the course of his address, observed it was this misfortune of this nation that science, when clothed in the garb of a slop-wright in the dockyards, had had the backs of those who ought to have supported her turned upon her. The noble Lord commented in spirited terms upon the neglect of science in its connection with the construction of our ships of war, and propounded that it would yet push its way, to the benefit of this country. He paid a high compliment to Professor Ingham, who had filled the important post of training and educating young men in the science of naval architecture.

Lord Montagle, in an eloquent address, during which he commented at some length, and in enthusiastic terms, upon the beauty of the friendships formed during the career of undergraduates, proposed "The Vice-Master and Seniors."

The Vice-Master (Professor Sedgwick) thanked the company in a very luminous address. After dwelling shortly on the glory of the College and early academic training, he pointed to the religious aim to which was given to all academic studies, which he regarded as the true element of their permanency. He added—"About twenty years since, I had an interview with the illustrious philosopher, La Place [illegible] in his sick chamber, which I believe he never left. He did not many days afterwards, and the words of a dying man are held to be prophetic. I can only give a single page of the long conversation I held with this great philosopher, and it bears on the sentiments of the present assembly. 'I consider it (he said, as nearly as I can translate his words), one of the misfortunes of my life that I have not been permitted to visit Trinity College, and the chambers in which Newton lived and made his great discoveries. When a young man, I was not in a condition to travel far from home; then came the long and terrible war of the revolution; and now that we have peace, I am too old to travel, and I must die without visiting the place where Newton lived, or seeing the monuments you have erected to his glory.' He then went on to enquire into the whole framework of our academic system."

At the close of Professor Sedgwick's address, the Master said there were many toasts which ought to have been proposed, and many gentlemen whom they ought to have heard; but he thought the time had arrived when it was advisable to end the meeting.

It was now ten o'clock, and the company broke up, some adjourning to the Lodge, where the Master had an evening party, and some to the Combination-room, where coffee was prepared for them.

In connection with the above imposing Festival it gives us sincere pleasure to notice that the Society marked its sense of the long and valuable services of Mr Charles Clayden, the Steward of the Hall, by presenting to that gentleman a massive silver tankard, bearing a suitable inscription.

Upon the same day the Library-keeper, Mr. Cranwell, was complimented by the presentation of a handsome testimonial, in the shape of two volumes.

These testimonials were presented by the Master, in the Lodge.

Upon Wednesday, the day following the above grand Commemoration rejoicings, a good and substantial dinner of roast-beef, plum-pudding, mall and nonpics, succeeded by a plentiful supply of wine and punch, was given to the attendants and some of the tradesmen employed upon the occasion. About 140 partook of this supplementary treat, the chair being filled by Mr. Cranwell, and the vice-chair by Mr. Carter, the oldest servant of the College.

Nor were the twenty decayed servants and tradesmen (called beadsmen) forgotten, for each of them had 5s. for a dinner, and a bounty of a sovereign besides.

We add a few notes on the most artistic points of the proceedings of Tuesday:

The appearance of the pulpit in the Chapel was very striking; especially on the evening closed in long before the service was concluded, rendering the roof, with its panelled compartments, and the eastern end, with its magnificent altar-piece by West, almost obscure, from the want of more light than was afforded by the candles affixed to the stall to display them. This clair-obscure, however, heightened the solemn effect of the celebration, which the black gowns of those present tended not a little to increase; and which was only broken, or rather enriched, by the scarlet robes of such as had attained to the degrees of D.D. and LL.D. The service was sung in a most magnificent manner by the choir, the splendid organ adding its peculiar charms to the voices. The musical performance, position, "Oh! give thanks unto the Lord," was perfectly enabling in its effect.

When the service was ended, the mighty "Hallelujah Chorus" was played by the organist, during which the lesser-old celebrants left the Chapel, not in regular order, but in little knots; and many as they raced through the ante-Chapel, glanced at the statues of Bacon and Newton, which so appropriately adorn the building, and which will be referred to in the discourse.

Emerging from the Chapel into the court-yard, the brightly-illumed windows of the Hall gave indication of the festal preparations withinside, and contrasted strongly with the dark and gloomy appearance of the night; and many directed towards the passage leading into the Hall, whence most of the guests proceeded to the Combination-room; but, before all could assemble there, the dinner was announced; and, in a few minutes, the Hall was filled with the company, and the war of knives, and the rushing in and out of waiters; and many were the narrow escapes of fowls, game, and joints, as the doors of the Hall, in swinging back, almost touched the dishes many hands were bearing from the kitchen; a marvellous was the celerity with which the attendants rushed in and out of the kitchen, and bore away the good things to the Hall. Meanwhile, music was heard from the gallery, where a band was stationed to play the dinner-music during the repast. Occasionally resounding within those walls, were floating in the air. A great many persons had ensconced themselves in the gallery, in order to gain a view of the proceedings; and others stood in the passage between the Hall and kitchen, to obtain a hasty glimpse of the scene, as developed by the ever-opening doors of the Hall.

Above the minstrel gallery is suspended the canopy which was placed over the chair occupied by her Majesty at the Banquet given in the Hall of Trinity, during the Royal visit to Cambridge, in October, 1843. The canopy is by no means an agreeable adjunct to the Hall, as it is placed in a place where no canopy was ever intended to be.

There was one peculiarity in the scene at Cambridge which was very interesting. Fellows who had taken their degrees forty years or more ago, were walking in their old haunts with those who have numbered scarcely as many days in their fellowships; and, as the delivery of the Orations in the Hall, these white-headed men, full of years and honours, were listening to the arguments of the aspirants to honour, as though they were all chums of the same standing. The declamations, both English and Latin, were delivered in the Hall, by Mr. Vansittart, the successful competitor in both languages. The subject of the former was, "The three Commercial Powers—Athens, Carthage, and England;" and of the latter, "Luthert Laudatio." Mr. Vansittart also bore away the prizes for Latin Hexameters and Elegiacs. The rostrum whence the Orations were delivered was placed in the western bay of the Hall; and along the dais table were seated the Master, Dean, Fellows, and most of the distinguished visitors invited to attend the celebration. The prisemen stood in the alleys between the tables ranged down the Hall, or seated themselves in the forms or seats to the tables, and, when the Orations were concluded, were summoned to the dais table, to receive their prizes. Silver cups rewarded the three highest prisemen, that awarded to Mr. Vansittart having a cover, as the most distinguished; they were all of elegant forms and workmanship; the other prizes were books, beautifully bound.

The arrangements for the dinner were on a most sumptuous scale, and visitors were permitted to walk round the tables, and see the preparations, early in the afternoon. Amongst the decorations on the centre table were statuettes of Queens Mary and Elizabeth, as benefactors to the College; and on the tables in the body of the Hall, were a large model of the Fountain in the Great or Bishop's Court, and statuettes, bronzed, of Queen Elizabeth and Henry the Eighth; the latter the founder of the College as it now exists, and the former, of King's Hall, which was incorporated by Henry the Eighth with other Collegiate Foundations in his Charter.

A boar's head was one of the dishes at the dais table, but no ceremony attended its carrying to table, as it is a standing dish at the College from Christmas to Twelfth Day, as is likewise a very large raised pie.

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES, &c.

CAMBRIDGE. Dec. 28.

QUEEN'S COLLEGE.—William Strutt Spencer has been elected a Scholar of this College.

ST. JOHN'S COLLEGE.—The Rev. Frederick Calder, B.A., has been elected Head Master of the Grammar School, Chesterfield, Derbyshire.

CHAPLAIN TO THE BRITISH EMBASSY AT PARIS.—The Rev. Archdeacon Keating has been appointed to the Chaplaincy of the British Embassy at Paris.

REMARKABLE OCCURRENCE.—On Monday last, a person at Blackpool, on opening a large cod-fish, found, as one portion of the contents of the stomach, a soda-water bottle, firmly corked. He drew the cork, and perceived a piece of paper, which he endeavoured, but found that impossible, he broke the bottle, and found that it had been thrown overboard from the Wisdom, Captain Cobbett, on her passage from Sydney to Liverpool. The document had been written by a Mr. Kenny, a passenger, and dated March 27th, 1845, and stated that they had then had a very heavy gale of wind three days, the ship had sprung a leak, the pumps were choked, and they had had several of their hands washed overboard, and he communicates these particulars that he had written the paper, in hope that the bottle being washed ashore, the facts might be communicated to some newspaper for publication.—Preston Pilot

A MAN SCALDED TO DEATH.—On Tuesday night, Mr. Payne entered into an inquiry at Guy's Hospital relative to the death of Wm. Minet, aged 32. The deceased was a stoker in the service of Mr. Chapman, Francis-street, Lambeth. On Monday morning, about ten o'clock, he was employed at the copper, in which [illegible] about seven feet of water nearly boiling, and in which he dropped a rasp. He put a ladder into the copper, and was descending, when he fell into the water. Assistance was promptly obtained, and he was taken to Guy's Hospital, where he died in a few hours, nearly the entire surface of his body being scalded. Verdict, "Accidental Death."

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, Jan. 3. Second Sunday after Christmas.
MONDAY, 4.—Jupiter sets at 5h. 31m. a.m.
TUESDAY, 5.—Venus sets at 4h. 34m. p.m.
WEDNESDAY, 6. Epiphany—Twelfth Day.
THURSDAY, 7.—Mercury rises at 6h 34m. a.m.
FRIDAY, 8. St. Lucian.
SATURDAY, 9.—Uranus sets 11h. 46m. p.m.

HIGH WATER at London-bridge, for the Week ending January 9.

Monday.		Tuesday.		Wednesday.		Thursday.		Friday.		Saturday.
M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.
h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.
3 43	3 59	4 18	4 36	4 51	5 9	5 26	5 43	6 7	6 30	6 59	6 59

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"F. L. B."—Almack's Great Room is 100 feet long and 40 feet wide.

"Restless," Edinburgh.—The pursuit is professional and lucrative.

Housewarmer is "a peculiar temper or disposition of body not belonging to another." (See Thomas Brown uses it as "peculiarity of constitution." (See Vulgar Errors.)

"Constant Bristol.—We cannot tell.

"T. R. H." is thanked for the intention.

"A Brick," Castle Eden.—"The Mechanic's Magazine" is published by Robertson and Co., 166, Fleet-street.

"N. F. N."—Buy the "Handbook of Oil Painting." (Wiley and Putnam.)

"De Dessin," Derby.—Sketches of Events or Localities, of immediate interest, are most desirable, and will be returned, if wished.

"A Wolverhampton Man."—"Hudson on Making a Will." (Longman.)

"Inquisitor," Brighton, must be aware of the unreasonableness of his request.

"T. C. H." is thanked for the "Railway Antiquities" we will see.

"A. B."—Booth's "Principles of English Composition;" Innes's "Grammar of Rhetoric."

"1830," Edinburgh, should apply to Mr. Wells, Bouverie-street, Fleet-street.

"Song for Twelfth Night," we have not room for.

"C. F. B." Walsall.—"Wood's Lectures on Electricity," a sound work.

"An Old Subscriber," Bristol.—"Bond's Arithmetic."

"Oldys Rex."—"The Sphynx," published by S. Orwood and Co.

"H. F." should order "The Pen-and-Ink Drawing-book" of any bookseller.

"D. E. F."—A Royal pardon is invariably granted at the recommendation of the Mercers.

"A Subscriber," Lanarkshire.—We give Theatrical Portraits from time to time.

"M. A." The price of "Ford's Hand-book of Spain," 3 vols., is 24s.: 2000 copies have been sold already.

"Sleagh."—Walker gives "Gaelic."

"Clorinda." -The moulting of an arms should correspond with the colour and metal of the shield and fix at charge.

"J. H."—courtesy accords his military title to a Captain in the Army, although he has sold his commission.

"Antiquarian."—The Unicorn was introduced as a supporter to the Royal Arms by James I. It was long previously the bearing of the Bohuns of England.

"J. B. B.," Brighton.—Our Correspondent's long letter shall be replied to next week.

"W. P. R. C."—The first-class carriages on the Great Western Railway can about £200 each.

"A Young Waltonian."—Mr. Jesse must be mistaken in asserting Walton to have been practically ignorant of angling.

"P. Q. R." Cambridge.—See the Memoir of M. Le Verrier in the present Number.

"A Correspondent," Trinity College, Cambridge, is thanked. We are indebted to the courtesy of Dr. Whewell, the Master of Trinity, for admission to the Festival.

"F. J." Aberdeen.—No.

"G. C." Stephens's "Book of the Farm" is the most complete work of its class.

"A. J. F." Vig.

"Eucalpus," Exeter.—Not for less than £100 per annum.

"A. M." Sidmouth.—See Mrs Jameson's charming papers "On Legendary Art," in the "Athenæum," for the history of St. Anthony.

"H." is thanked for the Local Poem.

"H. T." Cornwall.—"Innes's First Lessons in Chess"

"Inquirer," Somers Mews, 14, Mortimer-street, Cavendish-square.

"W. F." Maidstone, is thanked for the intelligence, though it did not reach us in time.

A few Replies must stand over for want of room.

ANSWERS TO THE RIDDLES IN OUR LAST.

THE ILLUSTRATIONS.

1. Cromwell keeping the rain from Charles.
2. A hail making a largesse (large s.)
3. A [illegible] Water
4. Content in a cottage is better than a broken heart in a palace.

ETHIOPIAN CON The Prisoner of Chill-on.

THEATRICAL DO.—Because a Miss-Fire would have made a hit.

CONUNDRUMS.

1. Because they felt disinclined to leave their beds.
2. Goats—(G)oats.
3. Because one eats thoroughly, and the other tho' roughly.
4. Because one breaks when the other fails.
5. Because he was a deep black.

A triangle have been made to answer the "Sir Hylary" charade—more or less ingenious. But none of them are satisfactory. We believe it to be a "sell."

RECEIVED Her Majesty Queen Victoria's First Council, painted by Wilkie; engraved by C. Lee. The Archæological Journal, No. 12.—A School Geography, by James Cornwell.—Nursery Rhymes, with the Old Tunes.—Christmas Carols, with the Old Tunes.—Orectors of the Age, by G. H. Francis, Esq.

THE SUPPLEMENT, (gratis), to complete Vol. IX., is unavoidably deferred till next week.

The Numbers of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS—Vol. I. to IV., cannot be purchased singly, but only in Volumes.

 We beg to inform our numerous Country Subscribers, that the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS may be received free from creases, if they will only request their Agents, who supplies the Paper, to send it in the same manner as it is sent direct from our Office. The beautiful and expensive Fine Art Engravings would then be received as perfect as they come from the Press; and the collection of Numbers at the end of each half-year would be in a perfect state for binding. The extra expense incurred, by increasing the size of the envelope for the Paper, would not amount to more than three halfpence a year for each annual Subscriber.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY JANUARY 2, 1847.

THE ZOLLVEREIN.

THE German papers have just given an account of the death, under melancholy circumstances, of Dr. List, the chief founder of the German Zollverein. The timidity of German Governments is excessive in all that relates to new experiments, political or social. They are generally behind the mass of the people in this respect; and where "pressure from without," in the shape of popular agitation, is unknown, no slight degree of merit is due to the man who, by the labour of many years, demonstrated the safety and advantage of a new financial and commercial arrangement, to authorities proverbially slow, and apprehensive of all that wears the form of national unity. Dr. List, however, lived to see his labours completely successful; and we take this opportunity of shortly explaining what the system is which he established, as considerable misconception prevails on the subject.

The German Zollverein is still regarded by many as a confederacy formed in a spirit of hostility to English manufactures, in order to exclude them from the markets of central Europe and encourage native production. This is not the case. Its name, to some extent, describes its purpose—being formed of Zoll (toll, or tax), and verein (union): it is sometimes called likewise the German Customs-Union—a very good definition. Its rise is easily accounted for if we take a glance at the political condition of Germany, where nearly 60,000,000 of people, one in race and language, have not yet obtained a national and political unity. Germany is still what France and Spain were at former periods of their history. Its people are divided into separate and independent Sovereignties, each with its separate systems of policy, military organization, and finance. The Kingdom of Spain now includes the Sovereignties of Castile and Arragon, and France has absorbed the territory that once belonged to the powerful Dukes of Burgundy.

While these States existed, they had their own frontiers, and levies of tolls and taxes; and, even after they were absorbed into the more powerful Kingdom, that, like the rod of Aaron, swallowed all the rest, still custom kept up many of the old distinctions. Even the Provinces that Louis the Fourteenth "annexed" to France—as Alsace—retained their frontier, and were considered as foreign dependencies rather than part of the Kingdom. The principle is not unknown among ourselves, for we still tax the produce and industry of our Colonies, though they are peopled by Englishmen, and form parts of the same Empire. Other provinces of France preserved remnants of the old feudal independence to the perpetuation of provincial pride and jealousies. Thus, within the bounds of what is now France, there were several lines and frontiers, each forming an impediment to commerce by barriers and duties, vexatious in operation and oppressive in amount. The abolition of these internal frontiers was often proposed by the Ministers of the two last Kings of the old Monarchy, and as often resisted by the French Aristocracy. The Revolution, however, came, and swept away the Throne and Aristocracy together, and with them all these old divisions, and made France "one and indivisible."

The evils of internal frontiers have been equally felt in Germany; but, happily, a remedy has been applied without bloodshed or violence. The Independent States of Germany are thirty-nine in number, some of them much smaller than a French province or English county. All intercourse between point and point, therefore, had to cross many frontiers, at each of which duties were payable, attended by endless trouble, expense, and vexation. Prussia, which itself consists of several provinces, formed, in 1818, the idea of an internal union for commercial purposes, under which goods imported should pay a certain duty at the first frontier, and afterwards pass free through all others. By negotiations and treaties, this principle was extended; other States joined the Union, and commercially became parts of a great whole, till, at the present time, the Zollverein includes 8252 square miles of territory, and more than twenty-five millions of people. All goods imported into this territory, pay according to the tariff at the first frontier, and are then free, just as a bale of tobacco, having paid duty at Liverpool, may be sent to the Land's End, or to Yorkshire. Thus, each State is relieved from the necessity of supporting a separate Custom-house establishment; it pays only its quota to the expense of that at the common frontier. The proceeds of all the duties are thrown into a common fund, which is divided annually among the States forming the Union, in proportions based upon their several populations. Bavaria, Saxony, Wirtemberg, Baden, Hesse, Hesse-Darmstadt, Hesse-Homburg, Nassau, Frankfort, are the independent members of the Zollverein, along with Prussia, and between these States, for all purposes of foreign trade, there are no frontiers. Austria has not joined the Union, and Russia isolates herself from all other States. In fact, the larger and independent powers do not feel the evils the Union was created to remedy. But as the States included in it, it has been of immense advantage. Smuggling has been destroyed; intercourse made more easy; taxation lessened, or more equalised; and, above all, what gives the system still greater value in the eyes of the German people, it is a step towards national unity. The Zollverein has called into existence a national coin, which passes throughout the Union; its value is two thalers (6s. English), which is equal to seven gulden; it thus represents the coins current in the north and south of Germany, and much simplifies monetary transactions. Commerce has, in fact, effected what politicians and philosophers have advocated in vain: the extension of railroads is doing still more towards levelling the old barriers that kept mankind apart. As far as England is concerned, her exports to Germany have rather increased than diminished since the establishment of the Zollverein.

IT is generally supposed that weak States stand in danger from strong ones; and, if a question of wrong arises between them, the least powerful of the two will be found the sufferer. The President's Message proves this to be a fallacy. The greater portion of that vast document is occupied by the wrongs America has suffered at the hands of Mexico. It is an Iliad of struggle and suffering, in which the United States has always had the worst. How the Republic that has no fleet, a very bad army, no cash and no credit, can have wrecked such damage to the Republic that is so much richer, so much more populous, with a fine fleet, plenty of dollars, and an inexhaustible mass of volunteers to fall back on, seems unaccountable; it is especially so, when we remember that the injured party has already deprived its persecutor of Texas, is possessing itself of California, and bids fair to absorb a very fair portion of the rest of the Mexican territory. To our thinking, America has long had hold of the best end of the staff.

It would be far better to say at once, we have made a quarrel whenever we wanted to take a province, and shall continue to do so; nobody believes that Mexico can have dealt such desperate blows at the United States as President Polk asserts. His long attempt at a justification of the war merely covers this—we will take as much of Mexico as we can get, and keep all we take. But even such a war as this, where space and climate are the enemies to be fought rather than armies, is expensive. Twenty-three millions of dollars are already wanted for the next year; and if America is blessed with a few more Presidents who exhibit their love of peace after the fashion of J. K. Polk, a dozen years will see the Republic settled down upon a respectable national debt. It is time the common sense of the people put an end to this absurd lust of territory, the worst vice of unbridled despotism.

THE LEADERS OF THE OPPOSITION.—Lord Stanley has issued a circular to the Protectionist Peers, as the leader of the Opposition party in that House; and it is reported that Lord Lincoln intends to assume the Leadership of the House of Commons.

THE WEATHER.

THE past week has been very cold, its average temperature having been only 30½°—a point 1½° below that of freezing water. The following are some of the particulars during the week:—Thursday, December 24, was a cold day; its average temperature being 31½°. Christmas Day was a fine, but a bitter cold day; the reading of the thermometer did not rise above 30° all the day, and at night it sank to 25½°: during a part of the day a keen east wind was blowing; since that time there has been uniformly cold. On Monday morning, at seven o'clock, the lowest reading occurred during the week—viz., 21½°. The reading of the barometer has increased rapidly since our previous notice. On Christmas Day it had risen to 29·7 inches, and since that time it has increased to 30·6. The barometrical changes have been remarkable during the past fortnight. The following are the extreme thermometrical readings each day:—

Thursday, Dec. 24, the highest reading was 35 deg.	the lowest was 26 deg.
Friday, Dec. 25,	30	25½
Saturday, Dec. 26	36	25
Sunday, Dec. 27	36	31½
Monday, Dec. 28	34	31½
Tuesday, Dec. 29	35	26
Wednesday, Dec. 30	33	27

Blackheath, Dec. 31, 1846. J. G.

P.S. The reading of the thermometer this morning at eight o'clock was as low as 18°.

EASTERN COUNTIES RAILWAY DINNER.—On Thursday, upwards of 1700 persons connected with the various departments of the Eastern Counties Line, were entertained by the Directors, in a vast shed, fitted for the occasion, at the Stratford Station. The Chair was ably filled by D. Waddington, Esq. The health of Mr Hudson was drunk with great enthusiasm; and, after several other toasts, the vast party rose from the table, and were joined by their wives and families, who had partaken of tea and coffee, and dancing was then commenced with great spirit.

ARISTOCRATIC MARRIAGE.—On Monday, Mr. P.W. S. Miles, M.P., for Bristol, was married, at Guernsey, to one of the daughters of Major-Gen. W. F. P. Napier. The next morning the newly-wedded pair left Guernsey for France.

POSTSCRIPT.

STATE OF IRELAND.

Our latest news from Ireland is of a very melancholy character. The Mayo Constitution publishes accounts of seven deaths from starvation within ten days.

ANOTHER MURDER.—On the morning of the 22nd ult., as the servant-man of Mr. Nichol, of Appletree, in the neighbourhood of Ballymena, was proceeding along the Randalstown road, his attention was attracted by a dog howling and crying; a woman lying in a field adjoining the road. Having alighted from his master's cart, he found the body of a female, having her throat most dreadfully cut, nearly to the severing of her head from her body. The body of the unfortunate girl has been identified; and there is a man in custody, charged with the murder.

FATAL CONFLICT WITH THE POLICE.—On Saturday night the police, four in number, stationed in the parish of Kilcoonty, in the county of Waterford (having a warrant against a most notoriously bad character of the name of Coghlan, for a murder committed that night two years in the parish of Rathcormac), proceeded to a house in the village of Garrane, where it was suspected Coghlan was spending the night at card-playing. On the police entering the house, the candle was quenched by one of those inside, and a most frightful conflict took place between the police and card-players, headed and encouraged by Coghlan. The police, having the worst of it inside, left the house much hurt; but Coghlan and another man, named Mooney, a very bad character, followed the police, who, it is supposed in self-defence, turned on the unfortunate fellows, and shot both dead.

THE DESTRUCTION OF IRONGATE WHARF.

FURTHER PARTICULARS

It is now believed that the fire originated in the top floor of the wharf, and was occasioned by the ignition of hemp and cotton waste, which were stowed there from a cargo in the course of being unladen from the Hawk, of Montrose, one of what are called the "clipper" schooners, which run between this country and the eight years ago, with the especial view of obtaining speed, in order to compete with the steam-boats plying betwixt London and Dundee, Montrose, and Aberdeen The hemp and cotton waste were, it appears, in a damp part of the warehouse, and on being stowed away in a hot part of the building, almost instantaneously ignited.

Next to the wharf premises is a private dwelling-house, which has been entirely destroyed, as would also the Marquis of Granby public house, but for the immediate and energetic exertions of the men connected with the wharf and docks.

Mr. Downing, the landlord of the Marquis of Granby, erected in the course of the last summer, at an expense of about £1000, a strong party-wall between his dwelling and the private house standing between him and the wharf, and to the thickness of this wall may be attributed the arresting of the progress of the flames. The Marquis of Granby became ignited on the roof, but, from the exertions of the men of the dock and wharf, the progress of the fire was obstructed, and the adjoining premises saved

The whole of the wharfs have been completely destroyed and reduced to a mere heap of ruins. Nothing whatever has been saved except a bale or two of leather and a few trifling things not worth mentioning. The adjoining private house has also been completely gutted, but the walls in front are still standing. The Hawk, clipper schooner, has been all but destroyed above the cut-water, but the hull is otherwise uninjured. The rigging and a part of the gear on and about the docks and bulwarks of the Busy have been destroyed, but the mast is standing, and no injury whatever has been received by the hull.

Subjoined is a copy of Mr. Superintendent Braidwood's official report of the damage done by this disastrous event:—Dec. 31, 1846, THREE, P.M.: A fire broke out in Irongate Wharf, Tower, the property of Mr. C. B. Coleman, wharfinger. The cause of fire unknown. The building belonged to the St. Katherine Dock Company, and the insurances at present are unknown. The premises are burned down.—Lower East Smithfield: Mr. Crowder, part of roof, staircase, and upper floors burned, and rest of house considerably damaged by fire and water.—Lower East Smithfield: Joshua Downing, victualler, Marquis of Granby, the building and contents considerably damaged by water and removal. Insured in the Licensed Victuallers' Office. The water-side along Irongate Stairs: the sloop Busy—the vessel and cargo severely damaged by fire—insurance unknown. The schooner Hawk similarly damaged—insurance unknown. The following engines attended at the fire in the Dockyard: The Tower and the parish ones, with 14 land engines of the Brigade, the two floats, and the West of England.

THE BLACKBURN, CLITHEROE, AND NORTH WESTERN JUNCTION RAILWAY.—On Wednesday the cutting of the first turf of this railway took place at Clitheroe, about five miles from Blackburn. A great number of gentlemen, in addition to the directors and shareholders in the line, were present on the occasion. The introduction of a railway into this locality was hailed as one of the most lively feelings of applause in the district around. The bells of the surrounding villages, including Whalley, Clitheroe, and other places, rang merry peals in honour of the event. The ceremony was performed by the Honourable Lord Ribblesdale (eighteen years of age), who cut the turf, and wheeled it to some distance from the spot. He expressed himself in the most favourable terms on the merits of the line, and immediately afterwards the procession started to Clitheroe, where a cold collation was provided, at which the health of the youthful peer was warmly drunk. Lord Ribblesdale returned thanks, and the company separated.

DEATH OF LORD ROLLO.—We regret to record the death of Lord Rollo, which took place in Edinburgh, on Thursday last. He is succeeded in his title and estates by his eldest son, William, Master of Rollo. The deceased Lord was one of the sixteen Representative Peers of Scotland in Parliament—having been elected on the demise of the late Lord Gray

DEATH OF SIR FRANCIS WOOD, BART.—We regret to hear that intelligence has been received of the death of Sir Francis Wood, Bart., father of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, at his seat, Hickleton Hall, near Doncaster.

LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

FRANCE.

Our latest letters from Paris state that the cold was unusually intense, although the weather was otherwise fair. At six o'clock on Tuesday morning the thermometer was 13 degrees below the freezing point, and, even at noon, it was still 8 degrees below it

Lord Normanby had an interview with M. Guizot on Wednesday afternoon, at which M. Guizot assured his Excellency that the Pope's Nuncio had, at the express instance of the King and the Government, renounced the intention of making an allusion to the Montpensier marriage in the diplomatic address on Friday.

The King and Queen of the Belgians left Paris on Wednesday morning for Brussels. It was said that the King would visit Paris again before his intended visit to London.

THE CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.

We have received Cape papers to the 25th of October. The accounts from the frontier are far from satisfactory, the Kaffirs still committing their petty depredations on the cattle and other property of the settlers with comparative impunity. The papers contain the details of the Kaffir depredations, and what is most surprising is that they continue to be committed within a mile or two of Graham's Town. There is no charge made against the regular troops for want of vigilance, but there are pretty broad insinuations that they look upon the service as laborious, and require more energetic stimulants in order to pursue half-naked savages into the bush.

The Kaffirs were said to have become much dispirited, so that it was believed the war might be speedily terminated, by a combined movement on all points. This, however, could not be undertaken; for, in the absence of means of transit, it was impossible to conduct military operations on an extended scale. To remedy such a state of things, the commissariat department was actively engaged, hurrying mules, horses, light waggons, and other modes of transit to the frontier.

The ship Catherine had been wrecked in Waterloo Bay; crew saved.

THE ABERGAVENNY RAILWAY.—His Grace the Duke of Rutland will cut the first turf on this line early in the ensuing week. The turf will be cut at Bottesford, near Nottingham.

THE ROYAL SOCIETY FOR THE PROTECTION OF LIFE FROM FIRE.—No less than nine persons were rescued from fire on the 24th ult., by means of the fire-escapes used by this Society. The fire took place at No. 26, Edward-street, Portland-place. The interior of the house was being rapidly consumed, and great confusion prevailed, when the Conductor directed, with the help of the police, assisted five persons and an infant down the escape-ladder. Three other persons were also rescued from the back of the house by means of the short ladder.

THE NELSON RELICS.—Capt. Perrott, of Plumstead, near Woolwich, has presented to the United Service Institution an interesting relic of the immortal Nelson, for which he has received a vote of thanks from the Committee of Council. It is a portion of the deck of the Victory, which is now replaced by a railing and brass plate, engraved with the words, "Here Nelson fell." The piece of wood is finely carved into a mural crown, and is part of the timber cut by order of George IV., when Prince Regent. It is now placed in a glass case for the inspection of the public, with other memento of the illustrious dead.

CURIOUS SUDDEN DEATH.—On Sunday evening, while the worship of the police, assisted five persons and an infant down the escape-ladder. Three other persons were also rescued from the back of the house by means of the short ladder.

THE NELSON RELICS. Capt. Perrott, of Plumstead, near Woolwich, has presented to the United Service Institution an interesting relic of the immortal Nelson, for which he has received a vote of thanks from the Committee of Council. It is a portion of the deck of the Victory, which is now replaced by a railing and brass plate, engraved with the words, "Here Nelson fell." The piece of wood is finely carved into a mural crown, and is part of the timber cut by order of George IV., when Prince Regent. It is now placed in a glass case for the inspection of the public, with other memento of the illustrious dead.

CURIOUS SUDDEN DEATH.—On Sunday evening, while the worship of the Rev. Wm. Webber, a master cooper and proprietor of a cooperage at Blackwall-point, near Blackwall-stairs, was killed by the fall of a wall, ten feet high, bounding the premises of Mr. Langley, house and ship joiner, latter known as Ashton's Wharf, adjoining the river. The wall was erected about sixty years ago, and gave no previous indications of decay. A few days ago upwards of 70 tons of sand were delivered from a barge on Ashton's Wharf, and piled against the wall. On Wednesday Mr. Webber left his house, which is about 50 yards from Ashton's Wharf, and was passing close close to the wall, on his way to the water side, when the wall suddenly fell towards the street, and Mr. Webber was knocked down and buried under the bricks and rubbish. The unfortunate man was soon extricated, and all aids conveyed to the public-house opposite, but he was quite dead. The body appeared to have been mutilated in a shocking manner. Mr. Webber was in his 53d year, and has left three children.

THE BALANCE OF POWER.

A NEW SONG TO A VERY ANCIENT TUNE

"Balances done, mes enfans! Balances!"

The French Dancing Master.

Great Nemesis! land wa the world that we live in,
Where perjury smiles 'neath an Emperor's plume;
Where treaties and oaths are forgot—and forgiven;
Where Liberty weaves at Penelope's loom;
Where the Court of the Gaul must reopen the ball
Of Diplomacy's peril'ous canny and cool
Then flies in a fuss, when the Run or the Russ
May deem it convenient so follow the rule;

Allons donc! Call Truth from her dwelling Artesian,
Wind up the lees with all delicate speed,
Ask her whose faith has at length the Phœnician?
Which is "perfide" in this hour of our need?
She'll say Count Bresson has become quite the ton,
Yet Nicholas knows very well "the sweet South,"
That the Duc de Bordeaux is not yet quite de trop,
France gave him the sack—Spain has opened its mouth!

A truce, then, with all thy fine treaties, Vienna!
With Utrecht, Verona, and Puffendorff's puff;
No Scowoists, now a days, menace Porsenna,
And Russia's a customer ready and rough.
The Treaty long since to the four winds was scatter'd
When Belgium and Greece independent became;
And though the last remnant of Poland is shatter'd;
Bah! 'tis but a pawn won for tyranny's game.

Your Balance of Power is a flimsy chimæra;
It never existed—it ne'er can exist.
From Moscow to Rome, from Pekin to Madeira,
The sword in the scale gives the balance a twist.
Still might is not right; and another Camillus
May rise to establish that dogma again;
Meanwhile, in the tactics of peace let us drill us,
And love the Cracovienne's beautiful strain.

COUNTRY NEWS.

REPRESENTATION OF CAMBRIDGE.—The Hon. W. F. Campbell, eldest son of Lord Campbell, and a member of Trinity College, Cambridge, is to be the Whig candidate, in conjunction with Mr. Adair, for the representation of the town of Cambridge.

NORTH LINCOLNSHIRE ELECTION.—There is no longer any doubt that the Whig candidate (Sir M. J. Directors), will be returned, as he is at length come forward to succeed Lord Worsley in the representation of the Lindsey division of this county, will be unopposed.

ELECTION FOR MANCHESTER.—On Monday night Mr. Bright addressed a meeting of the electors of the Ardwick district, at the Shakspeare Inn. The room was very crowded. Mr. Henry Rawson was called to the chair, and said the nomination of Mr. Bright by the Reform Association had been confirmed by a great general meeting of the electors, and by eleven district meetings, and their selection of a candidate thus endorsed must of necessity exercise a powerful influence on the result of the election, come when it might. Mr. Bright then spoke for upwards of an hour, and, in the course of his address, said he had been charged with inconsistency in now coming forward as a party candidate, after so frequently, as an advocate of League principles, advising the abandonment of political cries. But this was not an honest version of what he had said. Both Mr. Cobden and himself, in 1842, when their trade was almost annihilated, called upon the people of the country to abandon party cries and family nicknames, and to unite in driving the common enemy from their doors; but they never imagined that the agitation for other great principles of reform was to cease afterwards. What he did say was that the man who had fought and suffered for three principles for forty or fifty years past to suppose so. The same broad line of demarcation existed between parties now as ever.—The hon. gentleman was loudly cheered throughout his speech; and a resolution was carried unanimously approving of his nomination.

AGITATION FOR THE REPEAL OF THE MALT-TAX.—The agitation amongst the farmers for the repeal of the malt-tax has already commenced in Lincolnshire and the neighbouring counties. On Monday last a meeting was held at Oakham, in Rutlandshire, and at Spilsby, in Lincolnshire, when resolutions in favour of the repeal of the malt-tax were adopted. On Tuesday, a meeting was held at Brigg, Lincolnshire, and meetings are about to take place at Gainsborough and at Lincoln, for the same purpose.

STATE OF BIRMINGHAM. A letter from Birmingham says: "The weather in the Midland district has been very severe. Provisions are fast rising. Potatoes in Birmingham, are now selling at from 1s. 8d. to 2s. per peck. Bread is also advancing.

PRIMROSES AT CHRISTMAS. On the 26th of last February, Mr. Ottywill, of Ipswich, had four primrose plants from the garden of the late Thomas Clarkson, Esq., which have remained in blossom up to the present time, notwithstanding the hot summer, and the late severe frosts.

IRELAND.

THE REPEAL ASSOCIATION.—The Hon. Cecil Lawless, the son of Lord Cloncurry, presided over the meeting of the Repeal Association on Monday. He strongly denounced the Union, and recalled to mind Lord Byron's similitude, that it was the case of the shark and his prey. Mr. O'Connell's speech consisted chiefly of a lamentation over the existing state of distress in Ireland. He said that something must be done on a grand scale, or the people would perish in myriads. After ridiculing and abusing Mr. Smith O'Brien, Mr. O'Connell said it was true that the Repeal rent had fallen, but after the crisis had passed the people would contribute as heretofore; and the agitation should be carried on till success crowned their efforts. The rent was then drawn amid loud cheers. The amount of the rent for the week was £57 7s. 4d.

STATE OF ROSCOMMON.—Coroner's inquests were held on the bodies of three men in the course of last week; and, from the evidence adduced, it was fully proved that the wretched creatures had died from absolute hunger. In consequence of the continuance of outrage and robbery, the magistrates of the county have made an application for an additional police force to be stationed in the barony of Boyle. No man can count on the possession of his sheep or cattle for a single night.

HOUSE RIOT IN KERRY.—Three hundred men in one body attacked the Relief Committee's stores, at Kilorglin, on Monday last, and one member of the Relief Committee, the Rev. Mr. De Moleyn, a magistrate, seemed particularly obnoxious to the multitude. Fortunately for that gentleman, and for the public peace, the police kept the people at bay until further assistance arrived, and dispersed the rioters without doing any serious mischief. The cause of the attack was the stoppage of the public works in the neighbourhood the day previous. But still it is most extraordinary why Mr. De Moleyn should have been selected; for up to that time he was most justly popular. He exerted himself with Father Owen most unremittingly at the Presentment Sessions to obtain large grants for the district, and did obtain them. It can only be accounted for by the desperate circumstances of the people.

MURDER IN CORK.—The Cork Examiner records the brutal murder of a sister by a man named Patrick Galway, in that city, on Sunday morning. The act appears to have been committed by the culprit in a moody spirit of revenge, on some very slight provocation. The criminal has been arrested, and remanded until the result of the Coroner's inquest be known.

DEATH OF GENERAL J. GRANBY CLAY, K.C.—The above gallant and venerable field-officer died a few days since, at his residence, in Exeter. The deceased General was in his eighticth year, and had been sixty-four years in the army.

A ROYAL BOUQUET DE GIBIER.—A present extraordinary to the King and Queen of the French was forwarded from London to Paris on the 21st December, by M. Soyer, of the Reform Club, and was presented to their Majesties on the 24th, in the morning, at the Palace of the Tuileries. Their Majesties were delighted with the novelty, and, after a long examination, the King ordered it to be carried to the apartments of her Majesty the Queen of the Belgians, who was exceedingly pleased with it, and afterwards the whole of the Royal Family was summoned to see this bouquet. It was then, by the orders of his Majesty, carried by two gentlemen porters to the Council of Ministers then sitting at the Tuileries. It is reported that his Majesty intends to have a similar bouquet carved in wood, for ornamenting the grand sideboard of the banqueting-hall of the palace. The height of the bouquet is about six feet, and wide in proportion. The frame is richly-covered with holly, laurel, mistetoe, and evergreens, with a great variety of winter flowers. There were twenty-two head of game, consisting of larks, snipes, woodcocks, black pirds, teals, French and English partridges, grouse, widgeons, wild ducks, black cocks, pheasants, a hare, and golden plovers; the interstices were lightly filled with wheat and oats, the whole ornamented with tri-coloured ribbons and small flags at the corners, and fancy birds of beautiful plumage were spread in every part of this magnificent nosegay

A LONDON FOG.

ALL who are versed in our metropolitan meteorology are acquainted with those periodical visitors—"London Fogs," a dense specimen of which, by the way, was witnessed on Thursday, the last day of "dark December."

The half million of blazing coal-fires contribute the fuliginous matter, which, mingling with the vapour, produces that foggy darkness, which Londoners not inaptly term "awful." Sometimes, it is of a bottle-green colour; but, if the barometer rise, it will either totally disappear, or change into a white mist. At other times, it is of the colour of pea-soup, in the midst of which the street gas appears like the pin-head lamps of old. The latter is, perhaps, the genuine 'London Fog," which but too sensibly affects the organs of respiration; and a Scotch physician has asked, "if a person require half a gallon of pure air per minute, how many gallons of this foul atmosphere must he, as it were, have filtered by his lungs in the course of a day?" The "tottle of the whole" must be fearful, indeed.

SKATING.

Sometimes, the Fog is caused by a very ordinary accident—a change of wind—which may be accounted for as follows:

"The west wind carries the smoke of the City to the eastward in a long train, extending to the distance of twenty or thirty miles; as may be seen in a clear day, by any person on an eminence five or six miles from the City, and looking across in the direction of the wind; say from Harrow-on-the-Hill, for instance. In this case, suppose the wind to change suddenly to the east, the great body of smoke will be brought back in an accumulated mass, and, as this represses the City, augmented by the clouds of smoke from every fire therein, it causes the murky darkness alluded to. By accurate observation of the height of the Fog, relatively with the higher edifices, whose elevation is known, it has been ascertained that the Fogs of London never rise more than from 200 to 240 feet above the same level. Hence, the air of the more elevated environs of the Metropolis is celebrated for its pure and invigorating qualities, being placed above the Fogs of the Plain, and removed from smoky and contaminated atmosphere."

Be the cause whatever it may, our artist, Mr. Duncan, has produced a very clever picture from anything but a clear subject; and, it is one of the characteristics of the climatology of London which merits this graphic illustration.

THE SKATING SEASON.

Oh! jolly Van Frost has arrived just in town
From the shores of the Zuyder Zee,
To furbish the features of gentle and clown,
And to bid the blood circulate free.
The fish of the season, a prime pair of skates,
He brought, with a flask of Schiedam,
Then off to the Park, where you'll find him till dar
Cutting a nice diagram.

The Serpentine's ice he skims o'er in a trice,
And laughs at th' Humanity dregs;
He cuts the spread eagle—an elephant—beagle,
And beats all our skaters to rags.
Let's welcome his reign to the chrystallis'd plain,
For his merits are quite manifold:
Our chilblains he switches, and saves the poor fishes
From dying through pitiless cold.

Van Frost is a conqueror, too, in his way,
Bear witness, Napoleon!
The bravest and mightiest shrank at his sway,
When empires were lost and won.
y mankind's state he compelled to retreat,
Without toes to their feet, and sans noses,
For mankind Van Frost in himself was a host,
As history clearly discloses.

The shallowest waters are soonest congeal'd
As meanness is chill'd at misfortune;
But who to Old England has ever appeal'd
In vain, when distress might importune?
Then well may she skate over Time's broad domain
Without a funx pas or a blunder;
In frost or in thaw, over land, over main,
May her gallant soul never strike under.

A LONDON FOG.—DRAWN BY DUNCAN.

BRINGING IN THE NEW YEAR.—DRAWN BY WILLIAM HARVEY.

THE BRINGING IN OF THE NEW YEAR.

DRAWN BY HARVEY.

God's benizon beam o'er the Year
Now cradled in by hoary Time ;
May Earth resume her pristine cheer,
And progress on her path sublime !
Too darkly glooms bleak Winter's frown,
Yet Ceres will not cast aside
Her sickle fair and glorious crown—
Bright blazon of Britannia's pride.

God's benizon direct the sail
Whose wings in freedom are unfurl'd ;
Whose pennants brave proclaim the tale
That men are brethren o'er the world :
That Heaven's best high-road is the Sea,
Fore-typed by Him who walk'd thereon—
That Man and Man were meant to be Brothers beloved, as Son to Son.

God's blessing on our native loom,
Which still triumphantly competes
With lands that never felt the doom
Of battling after dire defeats.
But the great Cause, the true and just,
Sooner or later shall prevail ;
Struck to the earth is Conquest's lust—
Peace shall be Freedom's coat of mail.

Then welcome we with trustful hearts
The cradled Year of Forty-Seven ;
The Seasons—Agriculture—Arts,
Smile o'er the nascent child of Heaven.
Let Perfidy shrink in its den—
Fair Play shall ye be Britain's game ;
With hearts of Oak, and pluck of Men,
We scarcely shall disgrace her fame.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"B. T." You cannot Castle while in check.

"S. J. S.," Halsted.—Begin the announced New Series of the "Chess-Player's Chronicle," obtainable, weekly, through any Newsvender or Bookseller.

"S. G. H. C."—Thanks. Are you sure the mate cannot be effected in less than the stipulated number of moves?

"Sopracuta."—Enigma No. 95, in our last, can be solved, as you say, in three moves.

"J. B. T."—The New Chess work will form one of the Volumes in "Bohn's Scientific Library," price 5s. each, and will be published early in the spring. There appears to be some misplacement of the pieces in the Problem mentioned, which will be probably explained when the solution is published

"C. F."—"A. L. n."—All positions intended for publication should be subjected to rigid and frequent examination before they are sent to us. Without this, they are utterly valueless.

"G. W. G." must have the goodness to send the Problem of which he asks the solution.

"T. R.," Horncastle.—We believe your emendations are correct.

"Pio," Clonmel.—Your solutions of the Enigmas are right, but you have failed in No. 153.

"A Lover of Chess." -You are in error. A Pawn having reached his eighth square is entitled to the rank of a capital piece, and must be exchanged for one before either Player makes another move. In every Problem where the mate is to be given with a Pawn, it must be done before the Pawn reaches the eighth or "Queening" square.

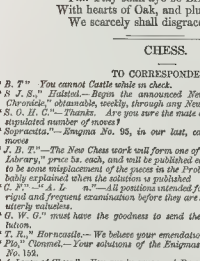
Solutions by "P. L. K.," "Sopracuta," "T. R.," "G. A. H.," "Budmanzir," "G. H.," and "Leyton," are correct. Those by "M. P.," "G. W. G," "D. B.," "F. R. S.," and "Stulus," are wrong.

PROBLEM NO. 154.

Translated from the Sanscrit by Trevangadacharya Shastree, and hitherto unpublished in England.

In this position, the player of the White men engaged to give checkmate in three moves with a PAWN, or to compel BLACK to checkmate him with a Pawn in five moves.

BLACK.



WHITE

Lively Game between Mr. Horwitz and an Amateur, Mr. H. giving his Queen's Rook, which must be removed from the Board.

WHITE (Mr. H.)	BLACK (Amateur.)	WHITE (Mr. H.)	BLACK (Amateur.
1. K P two	K P two	15. Q B to Kt 4th	K Kt to K 2nd
2. K B P two	P takes P	16. Kt takes Kt	P takes B
3. K B to Q B 4th	Q checks	17. Q Kt to Q 5th	Q to K Kt sq
4. K to B sq	K Kt P two	18. Q Kt to B 7th (ch)	K to Q sq
5. Q Kt to B 3rd	Q B P one	19. Kt takes R	Q Kt to R 3rd
6. Q P two	K B to K Kt 2nd	20. Q R P one	B to B sq
7. K Kt P one	P takes P	21. Q B to Kt 6th (ch)	K to R sq
8. K to Kt 2nd	Q to R 3rd	22. Q P one	K Kt P one
9. P takes P	Q to her 3rd	23. Kt to K R 4th	Q Kt to B 4th
10. K Kt to B 3rd	Q to Q Kt 5th	24. Q P one	Kt takes Q
11. Q to her 3rd	Q Kt P two	25. Kt to Q B 7th (ch)	K to Q sq
12. B to Kt 3rd	Q R P two	26. Kt to Q 5th (ch)	K to K sq
13. Q B to Q 2nd	Q R P one	27. Kt to K B 6th,
14. Q Kt to Q 5th	Q to K B sq	mate.

Entertaining skirmish between Mr. Harrwitz and Mr. W. P——g, one of the most brilliant players of the day.

WHITE (Mr. W. P).	BLACK (Mr. H).	WHITE (Mr. W. P).	BLACK (Mr. H).
1. K P two	Q P two	14. K to B sq	R to Q 3rd
2. P takes P	K Kt to B 3rd	15. Q to Q Kt 3rd	Q B to his 3rd
3. B to Q Kt 5th (ch)	B to Q 2nd	16. Kt to K 6th	B to Q 4th
4. B to Q B 4th	Q Kt P two (a)	17. Q B P two	P takes P (in passing)
5. B to Q Kt 3rd	Q R P two
6. Q P two	Q Kt P one	18. Q takes P	Q Kt to B 3rd
7. K Kt to B 3rd	Q B to K Kt 5th	19. Kt to Q R 3rd	K P one
8. Q to K 2nd	Kt takes P	20. Q P one	Q to K R 5th
9. Q to her Kt 5th (ch)	Q B P one	21. Q Kt to his 5th	Kt takes K Kt
10. Q to Kt 7th	R to R 3rd	22. Q takes Kt	R to Q 2nd
11. B takes Kt	P takes B	23. Q B to K Kt 5th	B takes K Kt P (ch)
12. Q to Kt 5th (ch)	B to Q 3rd	24. K to Kt sq	K B P one
13. Q takes Q P	R to K 3rd (ch)	25. Q takes K P (ch)	And Black resigns

(a) The opening of Q P against K P has utterly been brought into vogue in Germany by its successful adoption by Mr Bayenbrink, and the leading moves of the present game, both in attack and defence, will be found in an instructive article on this debut, which appeared in the "Berlin Schachzeitung" for September, subsequently translated for the new series of the "Chess Player's Chronicle."

ANOTHER GAME BETWEEN THE SAME OPPONENTS.

BLACK (Mr. H.)	WHITE (Mr. W. P.)	BLACK (Mr. H.)	WHITE (Mr. W. P.)
1. K P two	K P two	20. B takes doubled P	Kt to K 4th
2. K Kt to B 3rd	Q Kt to B 3rd	21. B to Q Kt sq	Q to R 4th
3. Q P two	P takes P	22. Q B P one	K B P one
4. K B to Q B 4th	K B to Q B 4th	23. Q to her 4th	Q Kt P one
5. P to Q 6th	P to Q 6th	24. Q B P one	Q R to R 3rd (b)
6. Q Kt P two	B to Q Kt 3rd	25. B to Q B 2nd (c)	Q to K B 2nd
7. Q Kt P one	Q to K 2nd	26. B to Q Kt 3rd	K R P two
8. Castles (a)	Kt to K 4th	27. Kt to K B 3rd	Kt takes Kt (ch)
9. Kt takes Kt	Q takes Kt	28. K R takes Kt	K R to K sq
10. Q to her Kt 3rd	Q to K B 3rd	29. K R P one	K to R 2nd
11. Q R P two	Q P one	30. Q to her 3rd	K to R 3rd
12. Q B to K 3rd	Q B to K 3rd	31. Q to her B 3rd	K R to K B sq
13. Q Kt to Q 2nd	K Kt to K 2nd	32. K to R 2nd	Q to K sq
14. Q R P one	B takes Q B	33. Q to R sq (d)	B to K B 2nd
15. K B P takes B	Q to K Kt 3rd	34. K Kt P two	R takes K P
16. K R to B 3rd	Castles on K's side	35. Q to K R 4th	Q to K 4th (ch)
17. K R to Kt 3rd	Q to K B 3rd	36. K to R sq	B to K 3rd
18. Q R to K B sq	Q R to K sq	37. R to R 5th
19. Q to Q Kt 2nd	Kt to K Kt 3rd	And wins.

(a) Both attack and defence are move for move the same as in the second game of the last match between Mr. Staunton and Mr. Harrwitz.

(b) This portion of the game is conducted with remarkable attention and ability.

(c) For the purpose of disclosing its adverse Queen from her present position

(d) The terminating moves on Black's side are marked by the usual vigour and precision of Mr. Harrwitz's best play.

SOLUTION TO PROBLEM NO. 153.

WHITE.	BLACK.
1. Kt to K fifth	K to his 4th
2. Q B to his sq	K to Q 4th, or (a)
3. Q B to Q Kt 2nd	K to his 4th
4. K to B 4th (discovering check)

(a) 2. P to K 6th

3. K to B 4th, and mates next move.

CHESS ENIGMAS.*

No. 97.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
K at his R 2nd	K at his R 2nd	P's at K R 3rd, K	P's at K R 3rd, K Kt
Q at K B 4th	Q at her sq	B 5th, K 5th, Q	2nd, K B 2nd, Q
R at K Kt sq	R at K Kt sq	Kt 2nd, and Q R	B 2nd, Q Kt 2nd
R at K R sq	R at K sq	2nd	and 3rd
B at Q B 2nd	B at Q B 3rd	White to play, and mate in six moves.
	Kt at Q B 4th

No. 98.—By ANDERSSEN.

WHITE.	BLACK.
K at R 6th	K at Q sq
B at Q B 3rd	B at K Kt 7th
R at K 5th	Kt at Q 8th
Kt at Q B 3rd	P's at Q 2nd, K B
P's at K B 6th, and	2nd, and K R 5th
K Kt 4th

White playing first, mates in three moves.

No. 99.—By M. LOUIN.

WHITE.	BLACK.
K at Q Kt 2nd	K at Q R 5th
B at Q B 6th	Kt at Q B 4th
Kt at K 4th	P's at Q 3d and 5th,
P's at Q 2nd and Q	Q Kt 4th, and Q
R 3rd	R 4th

White playing first, mates in three moves.

* In the Enigma No. 94, in our last, Black King's Pawn should stand on King's 5th, instead of his 4th square.

AN ADVENTURE ON THE ICE.

BY HEINRICH FICK.

SKATING is allowed by all the "initiated" to be a most delightful, exhilarating exercise, and, at the same time, most conducive to health, in a twofold respect, as giving tone to the mind as well as the body ; and no one who has ever tasted its thrilling enjoyment will give it up without regret ; but, to most of them, this sport of their boyhood will continue a cheerful companion through their later lives, which it will often cheer and enliven with the magic glow of days gone by. Having ever been a passionate votary of the gentle craft, I indulged in this pastime to my heart's content, in the cold winter of 1829-30, which I passed in Brussels. After having paid the visits to the great part of Holland, which abounded, on the frozen rivers and canals, which spread over the whole country in all directions, like a spider's web, I arranged my occupations in Brussels in a manner so as to be at liberty by two o'clock in the afternoon, at which time I skated regularly every day down the canal which unites that city with the Scheldt, and is about eight leagues in length ; a distance which I generally cleared in an hour and a quarter, or an hour and a half, provided the ice was fair. At the canal's mouth I always crossed over the Scheldt to Boom, a small ship-building town, where dinner was regularly waiting for me at the inn, at a certain hour—a meal which I relished wonderfully after the performance of my daily task. Being recruited by good cheer and some rest, I generally set out after nightfall on my return home by the same way, with a lighted torch in hand. Not meeting with a suitable companion to keep equal pace with my speed, it always fell to my lot to go by myself. At length, thawing weather set in, and softened the ice to such a degree, that, in order to prolong my sport, I made shift to substitute for the metal of my skates a pair of polished bones of a broader edge, that would not cut so deep in the ice, and help me better on. By means of this contrivance, I continued my solitary excursions, as the only skater left, like a belated swallow, for some time longer. A few days before my last run, the ether had become very mild and rainy—pools of water began to appear here and there on my course, which often forced me to a circuitous route. I arrived, however, at Boom at last, assisted by a moaning hollow moon, that was gallantly labouring in clearing the rails. On the Boom Railway a train was nine hours instead of one on the road.

A letter from Dresden states that the Saxon Government has subjected the sale of explosive cotton to the same restrictions as apply to gunpowder. No sale can take place of the cotton, unless it be coloured a deep yellow.

The late Mr. Dillon, of Liverpool, who died on the 15th December, has bequeathed the sum of £3600 to various charitable and religious institutions in that town.

A wolf was shot at Peckham on Wednesday. It was an old animal, and is supposed to have escaped from some travelling menagerie. Near its place of refuge a number of cats' skins were found, as if it had fed on the tables of the neighbourhood.

The British Museum is closed until Friday the 8th of January.

Formerly the Correspondence of all the Public Offices went free; but when the penny postage was established, that privilege, together with Parliamentary and official franks, was abolished. The different offices of Government paid for official postage, in the year which ended 31st March, 1846, £121,817 7s.

About one half of the 600 prisoners at Posen (charged with having taken a part in the late Polish insurrection) have been set at liberty. Several months must elapse before the remainder can be regularly brought to trial.

A returned convict, of the name of Brocksopp, delivered a lecture on the horrors of transportation last week, at Louth, in Lincolnshire.

The first cargo of Brazilian sugar under the New Act has arrived at Liverpool.

The Scottish Guardian says—"In the picture department of the Glasgow Philosophical Society's Exhibition, the visitor will be interested by No 79, which is an etching of two dogs' heads, by her Majesty Queen Victoria ; and 23, an etching by his Royal Highness Prince Albert. Her Majesty's etching is particularly well done."

It is stated that the North American Mail, which will sail from Liverpool on the 5th inst., will carry out a large quantity of specie, upwards of half a million. Insurance has been done at 13s. per cent.

The railway between Weimar and Weissenfels was inaugurated on the 19th inst. in the midst of a heavy fall of snow. The Reigning Grand Duke and his eldest son proceeded on it to Apolda, where a splendid banquet was prepared for them. The train returned in the evening to Weimar. The day after the line was opened to the public.

The opening of the South Devon Railway to Newton was fixed for Thursday last. The line would have been opened on the 22nd, had not the unfavourable state of the weather, during the past month, retarded the progress of the works.

A letter from Senegal states that M. Anne Raffenel had set out on an expedition, the object of which was to cross the African Continent. His journey, which is to last two years, when it will bring on a battle-field, prostrate and wounded—an abandoned, pitiable object of helpless wretchedness, trodden down under the horses' hoofs of friend and foe : still, the bright image of my Fatherland's rising star of glory shot a cheering ray, and lighted up the gloom of despondency. But here there was no relieving ray of light ; all was sheer, blank, hopeless despair—dark as the raven night, in whose horror-girt jaws I was writhing in agonies of death : a doomed, palpitating prey to destruction ! There is, perhaps, no adventure and escape of navigators round the globe, or to the Polar regions, on record, to equal the long-protracted horrors of my situation that night, on yonder flake of ice, the recollection of which has often since haunted and dismayed me in my dreams.

EPITOME OF NEWS.—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

A Marabout, named Sidi Abdallah, held in great veneration by the native population of Algiers, has just died there, aged 110 years. For twenty years he had not left his house, except to take a bath, and then always by night ; and during the same length of time he had not cut his beard or hair. The natives declare that he never beheld a French visage, so that unless by hearsay he could not be aware that Algiers had fallen into the hands of the Christians.

A letter from Homburg states that the Landgrave Gustavus Adolphus Friedrich, had published a rescript of the 17th ult., announcing that he had assumed the reins of Government on the place of his late lamented brother, the late Landgrave of Hesse Homburg, and ordering public mourning for three months.

All idea of raising the Great Britain steamer is now abandoned. Upwards of 400 proposals were made to the Directors of the Company upon the subject.

Accounts from Bologna of the 15th ult., describe the strong manifestations that have simultaneously taken place in most parts of Italy, on the secular anniversary of the expulsion of the Austrians from Genoa. Rimini Forli, and, above all, Ravenna, were lighted up, and the people walked through the streets, with banners, crying "Viva Pius IX ! Viva Italy !" Some persons have been arrested and sent to limbo. Arrests have also taken place at Modena in consequence of these manifestations. The Duke seems greatly indignant a these demonstrations.

Notwithstanding the heavy expenditure incurred by Mehemet Ali this year by his son Ibrahim Pacha's travels in Europe, and his own visit to Constantinople, his Highness has given the final orders to commence forthwith in the arsenal of Alexandria the construction of a steam-frigate for engines of 500-horse power, which are to be brought out from England.

Some of the recent private letters from Germany represent the deficiency of the potato crops in some of the small states as much greater than was supposed earlier in the season, and the sufferings of the poorer classes as much aggravated by the cold.

Greek papers to the 10th ult. represent brigandage to be as prevalent in Greece as ever. In the village of Drumio, in the province of Corinthia, the steward of the Senator Vlassi and his servant were assassinated on the 29th November, and the house robbed of about 3000 drachmas. A letter from Missolonghi announces that a band of 36 malefactors had completely pillaged the little village of Vato, near Varnaka, after having killed two individuals, and wounded two others.

The last accounts from Syria state that the Turkish Government is rebuilding the sea-wall of St. Jean d'Acre, and when finished it may be said that the entire fortifications have been rebuilt or put in perfect repair since Ct town was bombarded by the English fleet in 1840. St Jean d'Acre is the only place throughout Syria capable of offering any resistance to an invading army.

Last week, at Burnley, one of the elephants in Wombwell's menagerie bit off the tail of another. A considerable time elapsed before the bleeding could be stopped ; no ill consequence has, however, ensued.

It is estimated that on the yearly supply of the London market —150,000 beasts and 1,500,000 sheep—the saving, by railway conveyance, is £675,000

A vessel, arrived from Hamburg, has brought, among a variety of other productions, 154 barrels of Horseradish.

A serious financial crisis has declared itself at Vienna, and great anxiety is felt among the commercial classes. A letter from that city of the 15th ult. says that failures are impending on all sides. The limitation of credit by the national bank had begun to produce most alarming consequences. Second rate houses were every day stopping payment, both in Vienna and in the provinces. Nothing like the present condition of things has been known since 1840. The Bourse is deserted and business paralyzed.

The Royal Academy of Sciences, at Berlin, has unanimously elected M. Le Verrier, the discoverer of the new planet, to be its corresponding member in the class of physics and mathematics

The Berlin and Hamburg Railway was thrown open to traffic in its full length on the 15th ult. The first train destined for Berlin quitted the Hamburg station at seven o'clock, a.m.

The Impartial du Nord announces the speedy establishment of a great number of new manufactories of beet-root sugar in France. Several are being built in the arrondissement of Lisle, and others in the communes Fresnes, Landain, Onnaing, Thiriez, St. Saulve, and the town of St. Amand.

A Nuremberg journal asserts that Austria and Prussia had positively declined to refer the question of the suppression of the Republic of Cracow to the investigation and decision of an European Congress.

An agreement has been signed by many of the most eminent City houses, and addressed to Lord Palmerston, calling his Lordship's attention to the existing state of affairs arising out of the blockade of Buenos Ayres and other ports in the River Plate.

A letter from Pernambuco mentions the discovery of a conspiracy among the blacks to raise that city into an independant state.

It appears that the late Right Hon. Thomas Grenville, by a codicil to his will, cancelled his bequest of his library to the Duke of Buckingham, and has left it to the British Museum.

The German journals contain accounts of heavy falls of snow in that country. Between Aix-la-Chapelle and Cologne trains stopped running on the 19th ult. In the tunnel beyond Dürsu two or three engines were buried in the snow, and 300 men were employed in clearing the rails. On the Bonn Railway a train was nine hours instead of one on the road.

A letter from Dresden states that the Saxon Government has subjected the sale of explosive cotton to the same restrictions as apply to gunpowder. No sale can take place of the cotton, unless it be coloured a deep yellow.

The late Mr. Dillon, of Liverpool, who died on the 15th December, has bequeathed the sum of £3600 to various charitable and religious institutions in that town.

A wolf was shot at Peckham on Wednesday. It was an old animal, and is supposed to have escaped from some travelling menagerie. Near its place of refuge a number of cats' skins were found, as if it had fed on the tables of the neighbourhood.

The British Museum is closed until Friday the 8th of January.

Formerly the Correspondence of all the Public Offices went free; but when the penny postage was established, that privilege, together with Parliamentary and official franks, was abolished. The different offices of Government paid for official postage, in the year which ended 31st March, 1846, £121,817 7s.

About one half of the 600 prisoners at Posen (charged with having taken a part in the late Polish insurrection) have been set at liberty. Several months must elapse before the remainder can be regularly brought to trial.

A returned convict, of the name of Brocksopp, delivered a lecture on the horrors of transportation last week, at Louth, in Lincolnshire.

The first cargo of Brazilian sugar under the New Act has arrived at Liverpool.

The Scottish Guardian says—"In the picture department of the Glasgow Philosophical Society's Exhibition, the visitor will be interested by No 79, which is an etching of two dogs' heads, by her Majesty Queen Victoria ; and 23, an etching by his Royal Highness Prince Albert. Her Majesty's etching is particularly well done."

It is stated that the North American Mail, which will sail from Liverpool on the 5th inst., will carry out a large quantity of specie, upwards of half a million. Insurance has been done at 13s. per cent.

The railway between Weimar and Weissenfels was inaugurated on the 19th ult. in the midst of a heavy fall of snow. The Reigning Grand Duke and his eldest son proceeded on it to Apolda, where a splendid banquet was prepared for them. The train returned in the evening to Weimar. The day after the line was opened to the public.

The opening of the South Devon Railway to Newton was fixed for Thursday last. The line would have been opened on the 22nd, had not the unfavourable state of the weather, during the past month, retarded the progress of the works.

A letter from Senegal states that M. Anne Raffenel had set out on an expedition, the object of which was to cross the African Continent. His journey, which is to last two years, when it will bring on a battle-field, prostrate and wounded—an abandoned, pitiable object of helpless wretchedness, trodden down under the horses' hoofs of friend and foe : still, the bright image of my Fatherland's rising star of glory shot a cheering ray, and lighted up the gloom of despondency. But here there was no relieving ray of light ; all was sheer, blank, hopeless despair—dark as the raven night, in whose horror-girt jaws I was writhing in agonies of death : a doomed, palpitating prey to destruction ! There is, perhaps, no adventure and escape of navigators round the globe, or to the Polar regions, on record, to equal the long-protracted horrors of my situation that night, on yonder flake of ice, the recollection of which has often since haunted and dismayed me in my dreams.

Two Weeks in November. By Mrs. Gore. 3 vols. (Colburn.)

Mrs. Gore has a peculiar talent for the delineation of fashionable life, and the present work is a very amusing specimen of her powers. The plot is slight, but the characters are well drawn, and the dialogue is lively and natural. The scene is laid in the country, and the "two weeks" are spent in a round of visiting, dining, and dancing. The heroine is a young lady who has been brought up in the country, and is introduced into the gay world by her aunt, a fashionable widow. The contrast between the simplicity of the one and the artificial manners of the other is well sustained throughout. The heroine is loved by a young nobleman, who is also admired by a married lady, who is jealous of the attentions paid to the heroine. The jealousy of the married lady leads to a duel between her husband and the nobleman, which is prevented by the heroine, who, by a stratagem, induces the husband to leave the ground. The husband, however, is wounded by the nobleman's friend, and the nobleman is obliged to leave the country. The heroine, who has refused the nobleman's offer of marriage, is left to mourn his absence. The husband recovers, and the married lady, who has been separated from her husband, is reconciled to him. The heroine is married to a rich old gentleman, who dies, and leaves her a widow with a large fortune. The nobleman returns, and the heroine accepts his offer of marriage. The characters are well drawn, and the dialogue is lively and natural. The scene is laid in the country, and the "two weeks" are spent in a round of visiting, dining, and dancing. The heroine is a young lady who has been brought up in the country, and is introduced into the gay world by her aunt, a fashionable widow. The contrast between the simplicity of the one and the artificial manners of the other is well sustained throughout. The heroine is loved by a young nobleman, who is also admired by a married lady, who is jealous of the attentions paid to the heroine. The jealousy of the married lady leads to a duel between her husband and the nobleman, which is prevented by the heroine, who, by a stratagem, induces the husband to leave the ground. The husband, however, is wounded by the nobleman's friend, and the nobleman is obliged to leave the country. The heroine, who has refused the nobleman's offer of marriage, is left to mourn his absence. The husband recovers, and the married lady, who has been separated from her husband, is reconciled to him. The heroine is married to a rich old gentleman, who dies, and leaves her a widow with a large fortune. The nobleman returns, and the heroine accepts his offer of marriage.

The Chambers of the States of Hanover have just addressed a petition to the King, beseeching him to extend the civil rights of the Jews ; and, particularly to abrogate Lex Imperial law, passed at Augsburg in 1571, forbidding Jews to pass to Christians such credits as they might have on other Christians.

In Switzerland, the frost has been so intense, that, at Neufchatel, last week, the thermometer fell to 27 degrees below zero of the Centigrade scale (17½ below zero of Fahrenheit). On the banks of the lakes the thermometer stood at 20 Centigrade. The weather has also been very severe at Florence. There had been a heavy fall of snow, and the ice was so firm that skating took place daily : two sledges also were seen -a very unusual sight for the Florentines —driving through the streets. The frost at Florence, on the 19th ult., is described as being of Russian severity.

The Frankfort Journal entirely confirms the report of the annihilation even of the name of Poland. It says, "The fate of Poland is decided. It is to receive the title of New Russia, and is to be divided into two Governments, viz., that of Warsaw, and that of Lublin. Instruction is to be given in the Russian language. Several Latin schools are to be transformed into special schools Prince Paskewitch is to be replaced by Prince Gortschakoff."

OUR DOMESTIC COLUMN.

TO A CHILD'S QUESTION ON CHRISTMAS DAY.

Now rustling on the blue, cold river's bank,
The withes are gathered, basket makers' store,
The rushes fall where they grow green and dank,
And form "Chairs to mend" from door to door.
Ice crisps the pool, where swallow did skim o'er,
Strange water-fowl are here; but where are they,
The flocking children that were seen no more
'Mid wint'ry corn crops, a sunshine holiday?
Come shrinking round the hearth, they now forgot to play

There is a land far sunnier than our own,
Strange fruits and flow'rs, strange men not clad as we,
But in an all, for ever luv'd and known,
Through witnesses of things full strange to see.
For there came God, to teach us charity.
He as it lived him could his visit pace,
But close when he came down to think and be
As a small child, with God's thoughts in his face,
Leaving his heaven to that around an infant's place.

The helplessness of infancy, the shame
Of homeless want, through fears he deign'd t' abide—
Taunts of the wicked, the High Council's blame,
Sorrow and tortures:—thus, he lived and died
Night came and went, and came, and opened wide
The tomb; as he had promised, it was so.
Who can know God? Who wondered by his side,
Thro' years, their teacher, now they see and know;
And, witnessing 'twas God, through all lands suffering go.

All lands were loose their faith: Faith opes the heart,
To take in feelings tow'rd great truths unseen;
And of times after death makes us a part;
Strangely they mixed to be with what hath been;
The sculptor carved some shape of awful mien,
Or to rude stock, or stone, men knelt in prayer;
While for them heav'n high roofs in marble sheen.
Then, told the witnesses, God dwelt not there,
But in pure hearts had rear'd his temple fair.

But, lat'ning, heard of God, who liv'd and died,
To prove Himself the Being He had made;
They saw a life that firing wrote it sadly—
A death, in an undying trust array'd.
And their hearts fell on what He wrought and said
And they might be his own if they would be.
Altar and fane went down, and blood was stay'd
Of sacrifice—for on that fatal tree
Wherein He died was Heaven's full offering free.

So began Christian truth in life and feeling;
Men learn'd the way to heaven was in His path
To walk (His life an angel's trust revealing):
To live as brothers, calming strife and wrath,
Not set apart by differing clime or cloth;
Not won by seeming, nor ourselves a show,
The high and pure discerning as He hath.
We, as our fathers, at this tide forego
All common cares, through love of Him who came below. G. B.

COTTON

THE nomenclature of Science is sometimes outrageously droll. Now, who could possibly imagine that Gossypium Religiosum did not mean something about clerical intelligence, or ecclesiastical on dits? Nothing of the kind. It simply designates species of Cotton in which the cotton pod's juvenile nankeens rejoiced; and why Linnæus gave it the epithet of "religiosum" would puzzle Œdipus himself to conjecture

As various as they are valuable are the species of this plant; but three chiefly are known to commerce—the herbaceous, the tree cotton, and the shrubby, or religiosum; the first being the most valuable of all. The importance of this plant to mankind generally, and to England in particular, may be estimated from the fact, that, in this country alone, the Cotton Trade adds to the national wealth thirty millions a year; which, with about ten millions for the raw material, counter full ninety short of forty millions annually! Well and truly has this trade been called "the right arm of British commerce." From it arose the Peels and the Cravrights: through it are eighteen or twenty millions annually expended on human life in England and Scotland: by it was Manchester founded; and it constitutes the pith and sinews of that wonderful town up to this hour.

But Cotton has not only benefited Man in a manufactural and commercial, it has also been a blessing in a medical point of view. Cotton flat is the best cure for burns and scalds—a fact, like many others of utmost import, discovered through the agency of the merest chance. A Negress was working in a cotton-field in Jamaica, which was growing near a fire; she fell in, and was burned dreadfully. Wrapping up the screaming sufferer in cotton, the mother ran for medical aid. On her return, the child was out of pain The cotton had cured him.

Yet another phase was wanting to the celebrity of this plant, and that is now supplied. The "villanous saltpetre" will have a sinecure employment so far as fire-arms are concerned. Sir Frank Crossley, of Manchester—Schönbein or Otto explosive cotton—and why Germans, who are no fire-eaters, should amuse themselves with those inventions is a question almost worthy of fair solution. Nitric acid is the solution for cotton.

LINES BY SIR WALTER SCOTT.

Sir Walter Scott, when a very young man, visited the Roman wall between Newcastle and Carlisle, and gathered some flowers, which he presented, with the following verses, to a young lady, with whose beauty he was charmed:

Take these flowers, which, purple waving,
On the ruin'd rampart grew,
Where the sons of Freedom braving,
Rome's Imperial standards flew.
—The Patriotes, No. 8.

Warriors from the breach of danger
Pluck no longer laurels there;
They but yield the passing stranger
Wild-flower wreaths for Beauty's hair.

NURSERY RHYMES.

An ingenious antiquary, Dr. R. F. Rimbault, has proved the antiquity of the following Songs of the Nursery.—"Sing a Song of Sixpence" is as old as the 16th century; "Three Blind Mice" is found in a music-book, date 1609; "The Frog and the Mouse" was licensed in 1580; "Three Children Sliding on the Ice" dates 1633; "London Bridge is Broken Down" is of unfathomed antiquity; "Girls and Boys come out to Play" is certainly as old as the reign of Charles the Second; as to the "Lucy Locket lost her Pocket," no one has the time of which the song of "Yankee Doodle" was written "Pussey-cat, Pussey-cat, where have you been?" is of the age of Queen Bess; "Little Jack Horner" is older than the 17th century; "The Old Woman Tossed in a Blanket" is of the reign of James the Second, to which Monarch it is supposed to allude.

TO REMOVE OLD IRON-MOULD.

Dr. Thomson recommends that the part stained should be re-moistened with ink, and this removed by the use of muriatic acid diluted with five or six times its weight of water, when it will be found that the old and new stain will be removed simultaneously.

ADVERTISEMENT EXTRAORDINARY

A furrier, of New York, named Knox, has caused the following advertisement

"Furs! Furs!! Furs!!!
"The Fur that warms a monarch, Warmed a bear."
"Now is the weather your discontent,
Made glorious summer by the Furs of Knox."
[Shakspeare improved.

HINTS ON CROTCHET.

A steel crotchet needle is generally advisable;—with expert workers it makes the most even stitches, but an ivory is easier to work with.

The second sized netting silk is prettiest for purses

The coarsest or crotchet silk is best adapted for bags, with steel or gold beads

Where many colours are required in a pattern, and the same do not very frequently occur, it is advisable to introduce them in short lengths instead of carrying on each thread. This should always be attended to when working with purses.

When beads are used, they are to be strung on the silk with a needle

The average number of stitches for the length of a purse, in fine silk, is one hundred and eight. In coarse silk, one hundred and ten.

From ninety to one hundred stitches form the circle of a purse in fine silk

One hundred and thirty stitches may be taken for the round of a bag in crotchet silk.

A table-cover, in six thread fleecy, is generally computed at about four hundred stitches in length

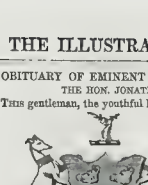
Borders of flowers may be worked in crotchet, but it would be impossible to convey a complete idea even to the most experienced worker, unless accompanied with coloured patterns, which the nature of our illustrations precludes us from offering. But the expert needlewoman will soon perceive the best method of copying any pattern of this description she may desire.

WOMAN'S PERCEPTION.

The perception of a woman is as quick as lightning. Her penetration is intuition; almost instinct. By a glance she will draw a deep and just conclusion Ask her how she formed it, and she cannot answer the question. A philosopher deduces inferences; and his inferences shall be right; but he gets to the head of the staircase, if I may so say, by slow degrees, mounting step by step. She arrives at the top of the staircase as well as he; but whether she flew there is more than she knows herself. Whilst she trusts her instinct she is scarcely ever deceived, and she is generally lost when she begins to reason. Sherlock.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED.

THE RON. JONATHAN BARRINGTON FORBES.



THIS gentleman, the youthful heir of the noble house of Forbes, died a few days since, aged 18. He was a member of the University of Oxford, and resided at Oriel College. Few families in Ireland—a country flourishing in ancestral celebrity—hold a more distinguished place than that of Forbes; and, from the earliest period, the name occurs on the page of history, as borne by warriors, statesmen and patriots.

In the struggle for national independence against Edward I. of England, Alexander de Forbes, a man of great personal valour, lost his life in defence of the Castle of Urquhart, in Moray, and in two centuries after, Sir Alexander de Forbes, distinguished also as a soldier, went to France, to oppose the English under Henry V., carrying with him, in his train, one hundred horse and forty lances. He was the first peer of the family, and the common ancestor of the subsequent Lords Forbes, the Forbeses of Pitaligo, and the Forbeses Earls of Granard. In comparatively recent times, Alexander, tenth Lord Forbes, adopting the profession of arms, rose with considerable rapidity to the rank of General in Adolphus, of Sweden; and, during the rising of '45, another scion of the race, the famous Duncan Forbes, Lord President of the Court of Sessions, rendered the most important service to the House of Hanover.

The youthful heir of the noble line of Forbes, whose death has occasioned this brief reference to his distinguished ancestry, was the eldest son of Walter, present Lord Forbes, by Horatia, his wife, daughter of Sir John Gregory Shaw, Bart., and grandson of the late General Lord Forbes, by Elizabeth, his wife, eldest daughter of Walter Hunter, Esq., of Polmood, Co. Peebles.

GENERAL GEORGE MICHELL.

THIS gallant officer, who would have completed his eighty-ninth year if he had survived only a few days longer, died, on the 22nd ult., at Fisherton-de-la-mere, near Salisbury. His first commission bore date 8th February, 1776, and that of full General 10th January, 1837. In 1793, and the two following years, he served in Flanders, and participated in the actions from Tourney to Bremen, the sieges of Valenciennes and Dunkirk, and the affairs at Famars, Cateau, Tourg, and Geldermalsen.

General Michell was known to every person residing at Salisbury and its vicinity from the singularity of his habits, and many tales are told of his eccentricities. He repeatedly called in the poorest of his neighbours to share the hospitalities of his table, and he dispensed, with the most bountiful benevolence, aid and comfort to the poor.

COUNT POLLON.

NOMEN, COUNT DE POLLONE, or, as usually called, Count Pollon, was a very distinguished nobleman in Sardinia, and had earned a high reputation in the diplomatic service of that country. He was a Major-General in the Sardinian army, and a Knight of the Order of St. Maurice, in Belgium. For many years past, Count Pollon was Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary from the King of Sardinia, at the Court of Saxe-Weimar. His great integrity, his amiable disposition, and his agreeable manners, rendered him a general and esteemed favourite in this country, to which he was particularly attached. The Count died on the 22nd ult., in consequence of a cold, caught while shooting at Shrubland Park, about a month ago: he was interred, at his own request, in the cemetery at Kensal Green. Count Pollon is succeeded in his title by his brother. His mother and sister are also living.

PRINCE ROHAN GUEMENEE.

ROHAN GUEMENEE is a branch of the illustrious house of Rohan, and a Princedom, having estates and residences in Bohemia and France. The venerable head of this princely family, whose death we here record, Prince Victor Louis Mérédacr, Prince of Guémenée, Duke of Bouillon, Duke of Montbazon, and a Field Marshal in the Austrian service, was born the 20th July, 1766. He was the son of Prince Louis, and succeeded his brother, Prince Charles, the 24th April, 1836: he espoused, by dispensation from Rome, his niece, the Princess Bertha de Rohan, Duchess of Bouillon, and inherited her duchy at her decease, the 22nd of February, 1841. The Prince died on the 10th ult., at his estate in Bohemia; and his honours devolve on his nephew, Camillus, now Prince of Guémenée, and also Prince of Rochefort and Montauban.

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE (Friday).—A very moderate supply of English wheat has been received up to our market-day, and the demand for it has been very firm, and prices fully supported. These circumstances, together with the brisk advices received from the whole of the country districts, had considerable influence upon the minds of both holders and dealers. Although we cannot call the English wheat trade brisk, on account of the absence of supply, the transactions consequent on the short arrivals have been to a quantitative extent to us, in some instances, 2s per quarter. Free foreign was in excellent request, and some fine cargoes of Odessa, as fully 2s per quarter more money. Corn under lock was held at a similar advance. The best parcels of barley produced 1s per quarter more money, the value of all other kinds being steadily supported. Although the supply of malt was on the increase the sale was firm at 1s per quarter more money. Very few fresh oats were on offer The trade was steady, at an improvement of quite 6d quarter. Beans, peas, and flour—the supplies of which were short—were firmer, and the quotations exhibit an upward tendency.

ARRIVALS.—English: Wheat, 3690; barley, 2050; malt, 5640; oats, 1960. Irish: Wheat, —; barley, —; malt, —; oats, 4130. Foreign: Wheat, 3360; barley, 600; malt, —; oats, 2640 Flour, 4180 sacks, 7890 barrels.

English.—Wheat, Essex and Kent, red, 65s to 71s, ditto white, 68s to 78s; Norfolk and Suffolk, red, 52s to 66s; ditto white 68s to 73s; rye, 42s to 44s; grinding barley, 32s to 34s, distilling, 34s to 44s; malting ditto, 46s to 50s; Lincoln and North Country ditto, 34s to 36s; brown ditto, 42s to 46s, Kingston and Ware, 71s to 72s, Chevalier, 72s to 73s; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire feed oats, 20s to 21s, potato ditto, 22s to 24s, Youghal and Cork, black, 23s to 27s; ditto white, 27s to 29s, Irish beans, new, 41s to 45s; ditto old, —s to —s; grey peas, 42s to 43s; maize, 47s to 49s white, 30s to 34s, bollers, 35s to 36s, per quarter. Town-made flour, 50s to 60s; Suffolk, 47s to 50s; Stockton and Yorkshire, 47s to 50s, per 280 lbs. Foreign.—Free wheat, —s to —s; Dantzig, red, 64s to 68s ditto white, 70s to 75s per quarter. In Bond.—Barley, —s to —s; oats, new, s to s; ditto. feed, —s to —s, per quarter. Flour, American, 32s to 37s; Baltic, s to s per barrel.

Tea Sale Market.—Holders of congou have been firm, and this week's prices are well supported. In other kinds of seeds next to nothing is doing. Linseed cakes are firm, but not dearer

Linseed, English, sowing 50s to 60s, Baltic, crushing, 44s 0d to 46s; Mediterranean and Odessa, 44s 0d to 46s. Hempseed, 36s to 38s per quarter. Canary, quite steady enquiry, and fresh Mustard-seed, 5s to 10s; white ditto, 8s to 10s. Tares, 5s 6d to 6s 6d per bushel. Rapeseed, new, 42l to 43l per last of ten quarters Linseed cakes, English, 11l 0s to 11l 10s; Foreign, 10l 0s to 11l 2s per 1000. Rapeseed cakes, 5l 5s to 5l 10s per ton. Canary, 55s to 60s per quarter. English Clover-seed, red, —s to —s; extra, —s to —s; white, —s to —s; extra, up to —s. Foreign, red, —s to —s; extra, —s; white, —s to —s.

Bread.—The prices of wheaten bread in the metropolis are from 9d to 9½d; of household ditto, 7½d to 8½d per 4lb loaf.

Imperial Weekly Average.—Wheat, 61s 6d; barley, 42s 2d; oats, 26s 10d; rye, 43s 7d; beans, 43s 6d; peas, 43s 6d

The Six Weeks' Average.—Wheat, 60s 0d; barley, 42s 11d; oats, 26s 4d; rye, 43s 1d; beans, 43s 8d, peas, 43s 8d.

Duties on Foreign Corn - Wheat, 4s 0d; barley, 2s 0d; oats, 1s 6d; rye, 3s 0d; beans, 3s 0d; peas, 3s 0d.

Tea.—Although only a moderate business has been transacted in this article during the present week, prices are well supported.

Sugar.—The best qualities of West India Sugar are held at a trifle more money; while the value of all other qualities is well supported. Mauritius and Bengal parcels are quite as dear. Refined goods move off freely, at full quotations.

Coffee.—Although the supplies of Coffee on offer are by no means large, the general inquiry is inactive, at late rates

Rice.—There is a fair business doing in most descriptions, at full prices.

Provisions.—Owing to the generally cold weather, Irish butter moves off freely, and, in some instances, a trifle more money has been paid for the best qualities. English butter is in good request, and quite as dear The best foreign butter is fairly steady, at full prices, but other kinds hang on hand. Bacon is steady, at extreme currencies. Lard, and all other provisions remain quite as dear

Tallow.—In this market, a full average amount of business is doing, but we can notice no further improvement in value. P. Y. C. on the spot is selling at 34s to 34s 6d. Town Tallow, 34s per cwt cash.

Oils.—Business to a fair extent is passing to this market, and prices have an upward tendency.

Hops (Friday).—The show of samples here to-day was by no means large, considering the extensive produce of the late season. The very finest qualities are steadily enquired, and previous rates were fairly supported. In all other kinds, exceedingly little business was transacted, yet we can quote no alteration in value. Sussex, 4os to 70s; Weald of Kent ditto, 80s to 98s; Mid and East Kent ditto, 85s to 102s Per cwt.

Coals (Friday).—Adair's, 18s 6d; Wylam, 21s 3d; Harton, 22s 9d; Haswell, 22s 6d, Berwicks and Co., 21s 3d; and Hesleurth, 22s 6d per ton.

Seeds (Friday).—The supply of boasts on offer to-day being more than adequate to meet the wants of the buyers, the best trade was ill a sluggish state, per we can notice no alteration in prices. With sheep, we were nowhere ely supplied; while the sale for that description of stock was steady, but by no means brisk, at full prices. Calves were in moderate request, at a trifling advance on last week's quotations. There were in the markets only 92 beasts, 80 sheep, and 3 cows from abroad. Of all sorts coll, at from 21s to 21s each, including their quarters, inclusive of

Per 8lb. to stink the offals.—Coarse and inferior beasts, 3s 6d to 3s 8d; second quality ditto, 3s 10d to 4s 0d; prime large oxen, 4s 0d to 4s 2d; prime Scots, &c., 4s 4d to 4s 6d; coarse and inferior sheep 3s 10d to 4s 0d; second quality ditto, 4s 2s to 4s 4d; prime coarse-woolled ditto, 4s 6d to 4s 10d; prime South Down ditto, 5s 0d to 5s 2d, large coarse calves, 5s 10d to 6s 2d; prime small ditto, 4s 4d to 4s 8d, large hogs, 3s 8d to 4s 0d; neat small porkers, 4s 8d to 5s 0d. Suckling calves, 18s to 28s; and quarter old store pigs, 16s to 18s each. Beasts, 480; cows, 186, sheep, 3070, calves, 176; pigs, 70

Newgate and Leadenhall (Friday).—We had a steady trade here to-day, at full prices.

Per 8lb. by the carcass Inferior beef, 3s 10d to 4s 0d, middling ditto, 3s 2d to 4s 4d, prime large ditto, 4s 6d to 4s 8d, prime small ditto, 4s 8d to 5s 10d; large pork, 3s 8d to 4s 4d; inferior mutton, 3s 6d to 3s 8d, middling ditto, 4s 10d to 4s 8d; prime ditto, 4s 4d to 4s 8d; veal, 3s 8d to 4s 8d; small pork, 4s 4d to 4s 8d.

ROBERT HERBERT.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From Our City Correspondent.)

There has been a good demand for Money during the past week, and extensive transactions took place at the end of the year. The price has consequently advanced about ¼ per cent. upon the best securities, and good bills are rather in advance of the Bank of England rate

The amount of business transacted in the English market during the week has been extremely limited, and Consols have only varied about ¼ per cent. In Ireland the aspect of affairs is considered more favourable, and this caused some fantasy towards the close of business. Prices left off at a slight decline compared with Monday's quotations. Exchequer Bills continue heavy, and quote also a point worse. Business generally has been limited to the daily purchases, and sales made on behalf of the public, and the dulness that has prevailed is always anticipated at the termination of the year. The subjoined list will show the last quotations:—Three per Cents. Reduced Annuities, 94; New Three-and-a-Quarter per Cent. Annuities, 93½; Long Annuities, 30 years, 9 11-16; Consols for Opening, 16 pm.; Exchequer Bills, £1,000, 1d., 9 pm.; Ditto, £500, 11 pm.; Ditto, Small, 8 pm.

The principal occupation in the Foreign Market has been the preparation for, and settlement of accounts, not only for the half-month, but for the year. The amount of business has consequently been less than usual, and the fluctuations proportionately slight. Spanish has been inactive; and the news that the Bank of San Fernando had undertaken to find the dividend on the Three per Cents., both for January and July next, did not influence a purchase on Thursday; the only transaction being in Passives. Mexican has been firm at 24¼ to ⅝, at which price it closes. Portuguese is heavy at 38; on the last day of 1845 its quotation was 60. Grenada Bonds are 20. Dutch Two-and-a-Half per Cents. are 51; at the termination of 1845, the price was 62¾, showing the steadiness and confidence of the public in this Stock. The Four per Cents. Certificates are, nominally, 93. From the small amount of business transacted at the close of the week, no actual quotations can be given of the prices of the other Foreign Securities.

Although activity and some extensive transactions characterised the commencement of the week, dulness and decline marked the close. The account was rather heavy, and some of the Shares that had been most dealt in, declined upon the close of transactions. French shares are heavy, and the market closes anything but buoyantly. The following are the prices of shares last dealt in Ambergate, Nottingham, Boston, and Eastern Junction, 2¾ ex. int.; Birmingham and Dudley, 7 premium; Birmingham and Oxford Junction, 11¼; Bristol and Exeter, 76; Buckingham, 1 premium; Caledonian, 30; Ditto, Half Shares, 2½; Chester and Holyhead, 25½; Direct Northern Scrip, 2½; Eastern Counties, 23½; Ditto New, 7⅞ pm.; East Lincolnshire, 3½; Ely and Huntingdon, 14½; Gosls, Great Northern &c., 23; Great Northern (London and York Registered), 24½; Great Southern and Western (Ireland), 28½; Great Western, 131; Ditto, Half Shares, 75½; Ditto, Quarter Shares, 17½; Ditto, New, 7½; Leeds and Bradford, 79½; Leeds and Thirsk, 16½; Liverpool, Crosby, and Southport, 3½; London and Blackwall, 8½; London, Brighton, and South Coast, 58½; Ditto, Fifths, 4¼; London and Greenwich, 5½; Ditto, Preference, 1 London and North Western, 109½; Ditto, Quarters, 27½; Ditto, New, 16½; Ditto, Fifths, 2⅜; Ditto, £40 (M. and B.), 7½; London and South Western, 69½; Ditto, New, 2⅞; Ditto, Tenths, 5½; Ditto Scrip, 6, Ditto, ditto, 4½; London and York, 2½; London and North Western, Lynn and Ely, 17½; Lynn and Dereham, 16½; Ditto, Fifths, 11½; Manchester, Buxton, and Matlock, 1¾ pm.; Manchester and Southampton, 1½; Midland, 130; Ditto, New, 6⅝; Ditto, Birmingham and Derby, 107; Newcastle and Berwick, 34½; Norfolk, 19½; Northern Counties Union, 1½; Ditto Half Shares, 15½; Ditto Quarters, 3¾; North Staffordshire, 9½; Portsmouth Direct, 4½; Shrewsbury and Birmingham, 5½; Ditto, ditto, Class B, 2½; South Eastern and Dover, 40½; Ditto, No. 3, 2½; Ditto, No. 4, 3½; South Wales, 3½; Taw Vale Extension, 2½; West Riding Union, 2½; Wilts, Somerset, and Weymouth, 9½ x in; York and Newcastle, 38½; Ditto Preference, 7½; York and North Midland, 19½; Ditto Half Shares, 46½; Ditto Scrip, 2½. Ditto Preference, 14; Ditto East and West Riding Extension, 18½; Northern of France Constituted, 10½; Rouen and Havre, 26½, Sambre and Meuse, 4½; London and Hamburgh, 28½.

SATURDAY MORNING. Consols did not fluctuate yesterday, closing at 93⅜ ⅞ for the Opening. The only registered bargain in the foreign speculative Stocks was done in Mexican at 24¼. The Share Market was better in tone, but without any change of quotations worthy of record.

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

TUESDAY, DEC. 29.

WAR-OFFICE, DEC. 29.

1st Life Guards: Lieut. the Hon. W. H. S. Cotton to be Captain, vice Anderton; Cornet and Sub-Lieut. H. W. Boulton to be Lieutenant, vice Cotton; E. C. J. Lord Elliott to be Cornet and Sub-Lieutenant, vice Boulton.

2d Light Dragoons. Cornet E. J. Thackwell to be Lieutenant, vice Ireland, T. C. B St. George to be Cornet, vice Thackwell. 6th Major Lord G. A. F. Paget to be Lieutenant-Colonel, vice Vandeleur; Capt. H. Fane to be Major, vice Lord G Paget; Lieut. F. B. Baron Maule to be Captain, vice Gerrard; Cornet and Adjutant H. Gerrard to be Lieutenant, vice Barron; Cornet and Sub-Lieut. Hon. Montgomery. 9th: Surgeon R. J. G. Grant to be Surgeon, vice Wood. 16th Surgeon A. Wood, M.D. to be Surgeon, vice Grant.

Coldstream Foot Guards Lieut.-Col. Lord T. Cecil to be Captain and Lieutenant-Colonel, vice J. H. Trevor; Lieut. Hon. A. Cochrane and Capt. C. A. Windham to be Captain, and Lieutenant-Colonel, vice Lord T. Cecil; Ensign and Lieut. (Adjutant) F. C. B. Seymour to have the rank of Lieutenant and Captain, Ensign and Lieut. G. J. W. Melville to be Lieutenant and Captain, vice Windham; W. H Reeve to be Ensign and Lieutenant, vice Melville.

1st Foot: S. H. E. Muller to be Ensign, vice Rivers. 5th: Capt. S. B. Jeffries to be Captain and Lieut.-Col. vice Wemyss; Lieut. Hon. W. H. C. Pelter to be Captain, vice First Lieutenant, vice Master; G Beauvoir to be Second Lieutenant, vice Potter. 13th: Assist.-Surg. T. Yaupert to be Surgeon, vice Gilchrist. 17th: Lieut. J. C. Taylor to be Adjutant, vice Palmer 27th: Acting Serg.-Major W. Crealer to be Ensign, vice Dickson. 30th: Ensign J. Sawyers to be Lieutenant, vice Moore. 32nd: Ensign C. Rowe to be Lieutenant, vice Anderson; F. J. G. Saunders to be Ensign, vice Barclay; Ensign H. J. Tolcher to be Lieutenant, vice Anderson. 34th: Ensign J. Chaplain to be Lieutenant. 51st: Capt. C. Parker to be Captain, vice Ward; Lieut. J. F Brickdale to be Captain, vice FitzRoy; Ensign E. S Sawyers to be Lieutenant, vice Maher; Ensign R. G Beauvoir to be Lieutenant, vice Sandilands. 54th: Ensign and Adjt. J. Cooper to be Lieutenant, vice Powys; T. H. Harrison to be Ensign, vice Brackenbury. 56th: Ensign H. Wilson to be Lieutenant, vice Maddison; E. W. Armstrong to be Ensign, vice Bickerstaff 60th: J. T. La Prade to be Assistant-Surgeon, vice Cowper. 67th: Lieut. De Lacherois Jekyll to be Captain, vice Hamilton—Lieut. W. Hay Mackenzie to be Captain, vice Graham. Ensign F. Pratt, vice Coape. To be Ensigns: Gent Cadet E. Bunbury; Gent Cadet J. A. Johnstone. 73d: Ensign H. Wilson to be Lieutenant, vice Price. 77th: Ensign H. W. Palmer, to be Lieutenant, vice Taylor. 77th: Ensign R. Mostyn, to be Lieutenant, vice Walpole. W. Rundle, to be Lieutenant, vice Moreton. 85th: Brevet-Major C. H. Brewer, to be Lieutenant-Colonel, vice Sir J. G. Le Marchant; Major R. Taylor, to be Lieutenant-Colonel, vice Brewer; Capt. J. Hankinson, to be Major; Lieut. Taylor; Lieut. R. L. Parratt, to be Captain, vice Patterson; Lieut. Lord Spencer Scott Compton, to be Captain, vice Hankinson; Ensign W. A. Fisher to be Lieutenant, vice Parratt; Ensign the Hon. William Stuart Knox, to be Lieutenant, vice Lord Compton; H. H. Edwards, Esq., to be Ensign, vice Fisher; J. Chichmaster, to be Ensign, vice Knox. 94th: Lieut. W. H. Dore, to be Captain, vice Deere; Ensign H. T. Deane, to be Lieutenant, vice Dore; E. H. Lewis, to be Ensign, vice M'Crea.

2nd West India Regiment: Ensign A. W. Dickson, to be Lieutenant, vice Hill; C. De Blaquiere, to be Ensign vice Dickson.

BREVET

Lieut.-Col. Lord T. Cecil of the Coldstream Foot Guards, to be Colonel in the Army; Capt. S. B Jeffries, of 5th Foot, to be Major in the Army; Capt. G Fitzroy, of 51st Foot, to be Major in the Army

UNATTACHED

Lieut. H. Capadose, from 8th Foot, to be Captain, without purchase.

HOSPITAL STAFF

The Rev. W. W. Jackson, M.A., to be Chaplain to the Forces.

Assist.-Surg. J. T. O. Johnston, M.D., from the 60th Foot, to be Staff Surgeon of the Second Class; Assist. Surg. A. A. Pruen, from the 1st Foot, to be Staff Surgeon to the Forces.

OFFICE OF ORDNANCE, DEC. 28.

Ensign Le Geyt, of the 92nd Foot

Has Gentleman Cadet the Hon. J. J. Bury, to be Second Lieutenant, in the Royal Regiment of Artillery, read, to be Second Lieutenants, in the Corps of Royal Engineers, vice De Butts, promoted.

BANKRUPTCY ANNULLED.

T. W. CLARK, Strood, Kent, brewer

BANKRUPTS.

MARY ANN SHENSTON, Brewer-street, Golden Town, scale-manufacturer. W. W. COLEMAN, Southampton, provision merchant. R. BREWER, Great Waltham, Chelmsford, Essex, draper. J. B. MORRIS, Kingston-upon-Hull, ship-broker. J. P. MOORE, Plymouth, chemist and druggist. T. NORTON, Birmingham, builder.

FRIDAY, JAN. 1.

ST. JAMES'S PALACE, JAN. 1.

The Queen has been pleased to appoint Colonel the Hon. Sir Edward Cust, K.C.H., to be her Majesty's Master of the Ceremonies, in the room of Sir Robert Chester, Knt., resigned.

WINDSOR CASTLE, JAN. 1.

The Queen has been pleased to appoint George Edward Anson, Esq., to be the Keeper of her Majesty's Privy Purse, in the room of Major General Sir Henry Wheatley, resigned.

WINDSOR CASTLE, JAN. 1

His Royal Highness Prince Albert has been pleased to appoint Lieutenant-Colonel the Hon. Charles Beaumont Phipps to be Private Secretary to his Royal Highness, in the room of George Edward Anson, Esq., resigned.

ST JAMES'S PALACE, JAN 1.

The Queen has been pleased to appoint Lieut.-Col William Henry Cornwall to be her Majesty's Assistant-Master of the Ceremonies, in the room of Col. the Hon. Sir Edward Cust, K.C.H., promoted.

The Queen has also been pleased to appoint the Hon. Spencer Lyttelton to be her Majesty's Marshal of the Ceremonies, in the room of Lieut.-Col. William Henry Cornwall, promoted.

WAR OFFICE, JAN. 1.

Royal Horse Guards: Lieut. T. Brunt to be Captain, vice Brevet-Major Trent.

1 Dragoon Guards Regimental Major R. J. Gray to be Adjutant (with the rank of Cornet), vice Knight.

1st Foot: Brevet Lieut.-Col. R. Carruthers to be Lieutenant-Colonel, vice Beamgardt; Brevet Major M. S. H. Lloyd to be Major, vice Carruthers; Capt. D. St. Vincent Hamilton to be Captain, vice Graham; Lieut. C. K. A. Yonge to be Captain, vice Lloyd; Ensign W. W. Kirby to be Lieutenant, vice Yonge; J. C. L. Gordon, Esq., to be Ensign, vice Kirby. 3rd: Assist.-Surg. J. Jago, M.D., to be Surgeon; F. Smith to be Assistant-Surgeon. 55th: Ensign R. C. Clifford to be Lieutenant, vice De Wesselow; W. Barry to be Ensign, vice Clifford. 76th: Capt. F Grehan to be Captain, vice D. St. Vincent Hamilton.

Brevet: Major Regiment: Major R. J. Gray to be Lieutenant-Colonel, vice Brent; Brevet Major L. S. O'Connor to be Major, vice Hill; Lieut. A. W. Mackenzie to be Captain, vice O'Connor. Ensign R. Johnstone to be Lieutenant, vice Mackenzie; S. Head to be Ensign, vice Johnstone.

BREVET.

Capt. W. Blezy, of the East India Company's Depot, at Warley, to have the local rank of Major, in the East India Army, while so employed.

The under-mentioned Cadets, of the East India Company's Service, to have the local rank of Ensign, during the period of their being placed under the command of Lieut.-Col. Sir Frederick Smith, of the Royal Engineers, at Chatham, for field instruction in the Art of Sapping and Mining:—D. C. Hume, Gent.; R. H. Hutchinson, Gent.; F. W. Pulle, Gent.; J. Watson, Gent.; A. S. Johnstone, Gent.; E. H. Sankey, Gent.; J. S. G. Close, Gent.; J. A. Fraser, Gent

UNATTACHED

Lieut. J. M. Brown, from the 32nd Foot, to be Captain, without purchase

BANKRUPTS.

G WHITE, Chichester, Sussex, patten maker. G. F. HOWE, Chester-place, Kennington, Surrey, merchant. F. A. HANNAFORD, High-street, Exeter, bookseller W GIBBS, Wilford, Gloucestershire, baker. R KIRKE, Leeds, linen-draper. J. GRIFFITHS, Liverpool, stationer. T. MORRISON, Waverton, Liverpool, builder.

M. LE VERRIER.

Pending the controversy respecting "the Discovery of the Planet exterior to Uranus," the presentment of M. Le Verrier will, doubtless, be acceptable to our readers. The official confirmation of the discovery by the Minister of Public

M. LE VERRIER.

Instruction, in France, M. de Salvandy, contains the following statement of the respective claims of M. Le Verrier and M. De Galle:—

"1846.—A great discovery one of the rare efforts of the human mind has conferred honour on France and on your reign. A French youth, Le Verrier, of the Academy of Sciences, by the unaided power of profound thinking, using the mathematics as its instruments, has grasped, in the regions of space beyond our solar system, a Planet which, but for him, might have remained for ever undetected by observation. In general, observations have preceded science; but, in this case, science has only had to follow the steps of theory, and to look at the exact point indicated for the unknown star which theory alone had as yet seen (by the mind's eye). There has not, in the history of science, occurred any more striking event than this. It would be impossible to produce a more remarkable computation of the series assigned to our astronomical system. In recommending M. Le Verrier for the Legion of Honour, I also recommend M Galle (of Berlin who has been the first to discover the Planet Le Verrier He thus united with M. Le Verrier in a discovery which has astonished the scientific world." M. Le Verrier has, accordingly, been raised to the rank of Officer of the Legion of Honour; and M. Galle to that of Chevalier of the same Order. Other honours, too, await the French discoverer in his own country. The Minister of Public Instruction has informed the Principal of the College of Saint Lô—where M. Le Verrier received his literary education—that a bust of that astronomer, from some eminent chisel, will be given to the college. From Caen, it is stated that all the students of the two departments of Calvados and La Manche are about to subscribe for a testimonial, in the form of a medal or an optical instrument, to the same discoverer, their compatriot.

At the recent Anniversary Meeting of the Royal Society, too, a Copley Medal was awarded to M. Le Verrier, for his discovery, and received for him, at his request, by Sir John Herschel.

M. Le Verrier has published in the Comptes Rendus, many valuable papers on his researches upon comets, and upon planetary motions. In the Connaissance des Temps, for 1843, he published an elaborate memoir upon the secular variations of the elements of the orbits of the seven principal planets. In the Connaissance des Temps for 1848, is a valuable paper from him, on the theory of the planet Mercury; and, just published, in the additions to the Connaissance des Temps for 1849, is a full account of the successive steps he followed, &c., for the discovery of the New Planet.

The discovery has likewise been claimed by Mr. J. C. Adams, of St. John's College, Cambridge, to whom we perceive our Correspondent, "P. Q. R.," of Cambridge, thinks we have done less than justice in our previous accounts. We beg, however, to remark, that we have only spoken upon published facts. A valued correspondent is, he believes, "in possession of nearly all that has been published upon the discovery, and, as it is England that we have honourable position, thanks to Mr Adams, notwithstanding the actual discovery was made independently of him altogether. If confidence were felt in Mr Adams and his friends as his results, it certainly seems very strange that they should have been kept silent for nearly two years; and that, for the greater part of this time, not a single telescope was directed to the predicted place. Those who had the results would not use them, neither would they let others do so. We certainly do not wish to detract from the merit of Professor Challis or Mr. Adams, both of whom are deserving of honour—the latter particularly; yet we cannot do an act of injustice by withholding the merit of the discovery from M. Le Verrier, to whom it certainly belongs. We wish to say no more on this subject till Mr. Adams is in print—M. Le Verrier has this advantage."

We perceive that Professor Challis has just furnished to the Observatory Syndicate, at Cambridge, a Report of his exertions to discover the New Planet, founded on the theoretical Calculations of Mr. Adams. We regret that we have not room to reprint this interesting document, which reflects high honour on Mr. Adams, Professor Challis, the University, and England in general.

"In the whole history of astronomy, I had almost said in the whole history of science," asserts the Astronomer Royal, "there is nothing comparable to this discovery. * * * The motions of Uranus, examined by philosophers who were fully impressed with the universality of the law of gravitation, have long exhibited the effects of some disturbing body: mathematicians have, at length, ventured on the task of ascertaining where such a body could be; they have pointed out that the supposition of a disturbing body moving in a certain orbit, precisely indicated by them, would certainly explain the observed disturbances of Uranus; they have expressed their conviction with a firmness which I must characterise as wonderful, that the disturbing Planet would be found exactly in a certain spot, and presenting exactly a certain appearance; and in that spot, and with that appearance, the Planet has been found. Nothing in the whole history of Astronomy can be compared with this!"

NOOKS AND CORNERS OF OLD ENGLAND.

"THE FIRST AND LAST INN IN ENGLAND"

This singular hostel is situated in the parish of Sennen, about three-quarters of a mile from the Land's End, in Cornwall. As the traveller advances further from Inland, he may read upon one face of the sign-board "the Last Inn in England;" and, upon the opposite face of the sign-board, as he approaches the house from the Land's End, "the First Inn in England." It is, altogether, a traveller's "wonderment;" and, although the house is small, the landlady assured our Correspondent he could be provided with a dinner of "fish, flesh, and fowl," in the course of an hour. Sennen lies about nine miles south of Penzance, over rather a wild country; and at three miles distance from Sennen is the famed Logan or Logging Stone, probably formed by the decomposition of granite, but long regarded as a relic or memorial of Druidical superstition.

In Delmon's Magazine for the present month is an interesting anecdote of this locality, which may be quoted here:—

"The Land's End, in Cornwall, consists of a promontory covered with greensward, of which the granite cliffs present to the ever stormy sea that dashes against that coast, a grand and most precipitous rampart. The descent from the high road, distant about a quarter of a mile from the sea, to the very brink of the cliffs, is by an extremely steep smooth lawn. Some years back a gentleman on horseback was run away with on this spot. Horse and rider were seen rushing down the green declivity with ungovernable speed, and the immediate destruction of both seemed inevitable; but, upon the very ledge of the precipice, the horseman had the luck or dexterity to let himself drop on the turf, thus saving his life. The horse leapt into the sea, and the impress left on the sod by his hinder feet, about a yard from the brink of the precipice, has been preserved to this day in commemoration of the event."

The late Sir Henry Fetherstonhaugh, Bart.—Sir Henry Fetherstonhaugh, Bart., late of Up Park, Sussex, has left the whole of his estates, real and personal, to his relict, Lady Fetherstonhaugh. The personal and funded property was estimated at £30,000. He lived to the advanced age of 92

The late Mr. Alsager. The will of the late Thomas Massa Alsager, Esq., has just been proved by his executors and trustees, H. H. Cannan, Esq., of Tulse Hill; John Oxenford, Esq., his nephew; and Alexander Dobie, of Lancaster-place The personal estate was valued at £25,000. The will was executed in the presence of three witnesses, on the 12th of November, three days before he expired. He has left to his son, Thomas Hicks Alsager, when of age, his share in the Times newspaper; in the meantime, the profits to be applied for the benefit of all his children. But if his said son should not arrive at that age, his interest in the Times to be valued at six years' average, and to be offered to his nephew, Mr John Oxenford; and should he decline to purchase, then to be offered to any one of the proprietors of the paper, or sold, as most advantageous to the estate. The trustees to sell all his real estate. Mr. Alsager leaves to each of his executors £50, and appoints them guardians of his children. He bequeaths all his personal estate to his daughters, equally amongst them. His age was 67.

The "Great Britain" Steamer.—A report from Mr. Brunel, on the state of the Great Britain, and on the best means to be adopted for saving the property, has been circulated among the proprietors. He reports the ship to be, as yet, essentially uninjured, and that the injuries could easily be repaired if the vessel were in dock. He rejects altogether the notion of breaking the vessel up, but he is of opinion it would be impossible to complete the preparations for floating her under three months, and, in the meantime, the ship must be protected, or, at the end of three months, she will be valueless. As the best means of protection, he recommends that the exposed part of the ship should have a shield, formed by a mass of faggots bound together by ropes, and secured by rods run vertically through the mass, and chains laid horizontally, and binding the whole tightly to the ship. Mr. Brunel calculates that to form this shield effectually, would require eight or ten thousand faggots, and he has given directions for immediately procuring the quantity, and setting about constructing this means of protection.

Surgical Operations Without Pain.—Accounts were recently received from the United States, of several surgical operations which had been performed without pain to the patient, the insensibility being produced by the inhalation of the vapour of sulphuric ether. The inhalation has since been tried in London with success in the extraction of teeth. Mr. Liston has performed two surgical operations at the North London Hospital, as he says, in a note to Dr. Booth, "with the most perfect and satisfactory results." It has not been attended by an unfavourable results in Boston, nor in the trials made of it here. The patients inhale the vapour through the mouth, while the nose is held, and the mouth-piece has a valve by which the expired air is made to pass into the room. In the first trial, made, on the 19th ult., by Mr. Robinson, of Gower street, a young lady had a molar tooth drawn, and the whole process of inhaling, extracting, and waking, was over in three minutes. She had no sense of pain; not a muscle moved during the operation, and she awoke in half a minute after quite unconscious of what had occurred. On the 21st ult., Mr. Liston amputated the thigh, and operated in a case requiring excision of both sides of the great toe nail, "one of the most painful operations in surgery," with the same results. At St. Bartholomew's Hospital, six patients had teeth extracted on the 24th ult., before Mr. Lawrence and the medical officers of the Hospital, and all the patients were insensible to pain. It is said that the process has been used at Boston for some time, and that many hundred teeth have been drawn, that limbs have been amputated, breasts and tumours cut out, and arteries tied, by the distinguished surgeons there.

The Father of the French Bar.—The senior member of the Paris bar is at present M. Girard de Bury, who has just completed his 100th year. At the period of the Revolution, after the dissolution of the Parliaments, he was named Juge, and sat at first at the Châtelet, and afterwards at the Minimes. On the 22nd ult. a family fête took place at his residence, at Petit-Montrouge, on the occasion of his completing his 100th year. Several members of the Paris bar were present, and amongst the rest, M. Berryer. In the evening, it was M. Girard de Bury himself who led off the ball with one of his young relatives.

BOAR-HUNTING IN FRANCE.

The forests of Crecy and Arman Villiers, in the department of Somme, belonging to her Royal Highness Madame Adelaide, were, a short time since, reported to the official authorities to be greatly infested with wolves and boars. Accordingly, orders were sent to the keepers to use all their exertions to get rid of the predatory visitors. About a fortnight since, the Prince de Joinville, desirous of ascertaining how far these orders had been carried into execution, his Royal Highness journeyed to the forest, attended only by one servant, to carry and load his gun. On reaching a hunting party in the forest, the Prince found that three boars had already been killed, and that three more, with a wolf, had been given chase to. His Royal Highness joined in the pursuit, and after two hours' hunt, the three boars were killed, one falling by the hand of the Prince, at the moment the boar was making a desperate rush at him.

The wolf and the wild boar are common in forests of any extent in France, and the chase of these animals is a systematic sport; and in great hunting establishments, the equipage used for the purpose forms a separate department, in which particular officers and attendants are employed.

THE FIRST AND LAST INN IN ENGLAND.

THE PRINCE DE JOINVILLE BOAR-HUNTING IN THE FORE-T OF CRECY.

CAST-IRON LIGHTHOUSE.

This Lighthouse is intended for the Point de Galle, in the Island of Ceylon. It is constructed of cast-iron plates, varying from 1½ inch to ¾ inch in thickness, united at the joints by wrought-iron bolts and nuts, and finally secured by iron cement. The height of the structure, from the base to the apex of the lantern, is 80 feet; the diameter at the base, 12 feet 6 inches; the diameter at the top, 7 feet; the extreme diameter of the cap, or gallery, 12 feet. A railing, 4 feet in height, surrounds the gallery, for the protection of the attendant whose occupation it is to keep the glass windows clean. The weight of the whole structure is about 50 tons. The lantern is of brass, glazed with thick plate glass, and roofed copper. It is lighted by 13 brilliant argand oil burners, each of which is fitted with a beautifully polished silvered parabolic reflector, forming a fixed light, with a horizontal range of upwards of 180 degrees.

CAST IRON LIGHTHOUSE FOR CEYLON.

A spiral staircase is provided, and secured to the interior of the tower, for ascent to the lantern. The two uppermost floors are lined with sheet iron, leaving a space for a free circulation of air, by which their temperature will be modified.

The base of the tower will be secured to the rock on which it is to be founded, by stout iron bolts and nuts passing through a strong flange provided for the purpose; and in order further to insure the stability of the whole structure, the lower portion, for about 20 feet upward, will be occupied by masonry, through which a staircase will be formed. The cost of the Lighthouse, when erected, will be about £3000.

The maritime service is greatly indebted to Mr. Alexander Gordon, C.E., for the successful introduction of this peculiar construction of Lighthouse, which, from its great economy, and the facility which it offers for transport and prompt erection, cannot fail to interest every Government in the protection of its coasts, which, from the coolness, and other practical difficulties attending similar structures of stone, has been unwillingly deferred. This Lighthouse is the third on the same principle which has been constructed in this country under the immediate direction of Mr. Gordon, viz. one for Morant Point, Jamaica; one for the Island of Bermuda; and the subject of the present notice, for the Island of Ceylon. The tower is of truly elegant design; it has been constructed by Messrs. Robinson, Engineers, of Flinders, on whose premises it is now erected; at whose works, also, the first of the above-mentioned Towers (for Jamaica) was made. The beautiful lighting apparatus of this, as well as the Jamaica Tower, was manufactured by Messrs. Deville and Co., of the Strand.

THE CHRISTMAS PANTOMIMES AND BURLESQUES.

HAYMARKET.

LYCEUM.

Our contemporaries have given, in the past week, such copious details of the different holyday entertainments, that there is little necessity for us to enter into an exact [illegible] of them. Each has been [illegible] and, although we have [illegible] remarkable we [illegible] But as regards the [illegible] has failed to [illegible] hits which [illegible] more than [illegible] pleasure which accompany the progress of a burlesque. People do not hiss them as they would a dull play, because they have a traditionary conventional idea that they ought not to do so. But they sit, and yawn, and vote the whole affair a bore; only tolerated like some of the dull old remedies on account of their [illegible]. The secret of this quasi we will try to show.

Whilst everything else has been progressing with marvellous go-a-head speed for the last twenty years, pantomime has not only not kept pace with the spirit of the time, but has actually fallen far behind it. Everybody except pantomimists and managers of Vauxhall Gardens is aware that what amused our grandfathers becomes but a sorry entertainment at the present day: certain practical jokes must always command a laugh, as we have urged. There are ludicrous associations connected with putting a sweep in a milk-pail, or knocking over an image-man; and an assault upon any of the recognised authorities (especially a policeman) is sure to be hailed with shouts from the gallery. But, when these are over, the insipidity of the attempts at comicality, and want of sustaining interest in the action, become very tedious. Not one person in one hundred has the slightest idea what the Harlequin and Columbine, Clown and Pantaloon, are running about after. All their connection with the opening [illegible] they go, because [illegible] and [illegible] their various [illegible].

The want of any meaning in these pieces arises, we take it, from the distinclination of dramatic authors to trouble their heads about pantomimes: and when they do, we know their efforts are rarely [illegible]. The opening scenes, in which all the fun and humour now [illegible] are [illegible] as if [illegible] quently the Clown is the last [illegible]. And as the [illegible] are as much the most conventional [illegible] in nothing but what they [illegible] their own ideas, and that a very limited one, and utterly opposed to all innovation; it follows that very few things calculated to surprise an audience result from their labours. Topics of the day, on which all the tricks and situations in a pantomime should be based, are the most difficult things to seize readily upon, although they are constantly before our eyes, and everybody knows them when allusion is made to them. In their place are substituted jokes of the dullest or most feeble description, although the subjects for [illegible] they no longer see anything else to make [illegible] at the [illegible] strike us. "Oysters has not [illegible]" placard which turn down after the [illegible] and [illegible].

It is generally acknowledged, as we have stated, that amusement is only to be found in the openings of the pantomimes; and that the dreariness begins as soon as the characters are changed. We think that a great deal might be [illegible] during a pantomime a [illegible]. Let us [illegible] the [illegible] made [illegible] and farce [illegible] but work at the [illegible] pieces [illegible] the Clown and [illegible] Columbine. We would [illegible] Mr W. H. Liston as an [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] presence of the Earl of Westmoreland, our English Minister at Berlin. Within the last fortnight, the Drury-Lane Manager has addressed a formal notice to the Swedish Nightingale, that he will not give up his prior claim, and that he will not consent to her singing at any other theatre but Drury-Lane. It has been asserted by a contemporary that Jenny Lind has resolved to stand her ground of any action Mr. Bunn may bring against her, having received a special guarantee for the costs and damages; but a letter in her own handwriting has been received in London, in which she declares that she will not sing in Italian whilst Mr. Bunn's contract exists.

Our letters from Rome of the 10th ult. state that Madame Oury, the pianiste, and Mr. Oury, the violinist, were giving concerts with success.

DEATH OF MR. KEARNS.

In the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, it has been the constant care of the writer of the musical department, to draw attention to the merits of the instrumentalists, whose abilities are too often concealed from public view by the general term of "orchestra." Mr. Kearns, who died on Monday last, in his fifty-third year, was for many years a viola player at Her Majesty's Theatre, the Ancient and Philharmonic Concerts, and had been engaged for the band of the Covent Garden Royal Italian Opera, by Mr. Costa. But few professors, however great in name, possessed the extraordinary talent of Mr. Kearns, and no one was more accomplished in the philosophical and historical bearings of art. Mr. Kearns was, however, one of those musicians who preferred to work for others, rather than for his own name; and thus the artist, who was the main mover and working man of the English Opera in Mr. Arnold's palmy days, was scarcely known to the general public. Mr. Kearns scored the works of all the great composers for many years, for theatres, festivals, military bands, &c. His notion, in justice, ought to have appeared in many operettas, &c., which others got the credit for. He was a first rate master, and the celebrity of Miss Hawes, our unrivalled contralto singer, may be ascribed in his valuable tuition. Mr. Kearns was the writer of the scores for Spohr's "Azor and Zemira," Weber's "Der Freischütz," Maverbeer's "Robert le Diable," Mirschner's "Vampyr," &c., developed extraordinary skill in orchestral combinations. Weber was so much pleased with Mr. Kearns's arrangement of his great opera, that he presented our English artist with a sketch of the original "Freischütz" overture. Mr. Kearns's last engagement as a tenor player, was at the Birghham Festival, returning from which he caught a cold that led to his death. We regret to learn that he has left a large family unprovided for. He was a member of the Philharmonic Society, and of the defunct Musical Fund, but, unfortunately for his widow and children, did not belong to the Royal Society of Musicians.

DEATH OF MR. CALKIN.—We regret to announce the decease of this respected member of the musical profession, who expired on Thursday afternoon, at his house, in Fall Mall, in the 66th year of his age. Mr. Calkin was a pupil of Spagnoletti, and was a member of the Birghham Sacred Harmonic Society, which he caught a cold that led to his death. We regret to learn that he has left a large family unprovided for. He was a member of the Philharmonic Society, and of the defunct Musical Fund, but, unfortunately for his widow and children, did not belong to the Royal Society of Musicians.

INTERESTING MUSICAL DOINGS AT WINDSOR CASTLE.

WINDSOR, Thursday, Dec. 31, 1846.

In the course of last summer, we understand that Dr. Felix Mendelssohn had the honour of forwarding to her Majesty a copy of the score of Racine's tragedy of "Athalie," the choruses, &c., of which have been set to music by him, and performed at Berlin, after the two Greek tragedies of "Œdipus" and "Antigone." The music of "Athalie," from what we hear, is quite worthy of his author, who has in it shown the flexibility and powers of his genius, by giving to its choral parts a very different character to that of the Greek tragedies, which, by their Pagan and etymological features, resemble in no manner the more exalted and pure character of this scriptural subject.

It is highly gratifying to find that such works as these should be so well appreciated and encouraged by our Gracious Queen and her Royal Consort, and that no expense nor pains should be spared by these illustrious patrons of art for its promulgation. "Athalie," which would have been performed in London last season, if, as we have heard, Mdlle. Rachel's bad state of health had not precluded all possibility of her reading Racine's chef-d'œuvre, is, we understand, to be now read, by order of her Majesty, in the presence of the Court, at Windsor Castle, on the night of the 1st of January.

M. Brassour, Professor of French language and literature at King's College, at the Charter House School, &c. &c., has had the honour of being appointed to read the tragedy; and a numerous and select troupe of choristers from the chapel, Ancient Concerts, and E. exe Hall, headed by three soli singers, with the addition of several leading instrumental performers from London, will rehearse and contribute, with her Majesty's private band, to the performance of this new and classical composition. Several preparatory rehearsals have already taken place at Buckingham Palace, and first with the Queen, has occurred to-day, at Windsor, in the Grand Reception Room, at the entrance of which, coming from St. George's Hall, a proper amphitheatre has been erected, to contain the reader, the singers, and three trumpets, who would be heard from the side doors, were the tragedy acted. Instead of being read. The orchestra, with its conductor, Mr. Anderson, is at the foot, and before the amphitheatre: this well-planned arrangement will give as much as was possible, for such an occasion, a scene effect to the coup ensemble. We doubt not, from the favourable reports that have reached us of the well going of the rehearsals, that the final one, which is to take place on Friday morning, with all those sharing the honours of this interesting performance, will ensure to the production of this grand work the success it deserves, and afford to her Majesty, His Royal Highness Prince Albert, and the Court, the high intellectual entertainment expected, and so well deserved by the illustrious promoters of this most interesting musical event.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

Gold?

Thus much of this will make black white—foul fair.—TWELFTH Night.

It is fit to commence the year's notice of the popular pastimes which that genius the course with the Queen of Sports, whose popularity has won for it unquestioned precedence. Striking as the advance of the taste for horse-racing was during the last four or five seasons, there is proof that in the coming one the Turf will be on a scale of magnificence such as it has certainly never yet attained since its establishment in this country. The observation, true to the letter, applies, however, most emphatically to its national character. For example; the Derby at Newmarket, once the high place of that resource of latter chivalry, is by no means progressing, pari passu, with its march elsewhere. Even the new contrivance in aid of exciteuent, the handicap, instead of improving is on the decline. Last year the great Handicap Stakes for the Craven Meeting had 170 nominations, while in the present they amount bat to 76. Contrast this with the demonstrations at almost all the leading courses in the kingdom, and you will perceive that the one is on the wane, the other in the zenith.

It was but the other day that the Spring Races at Epsom were little better than the exhibitions in Olympics at the Rosemary Branch, or any such meeting in the metropolitan suburbs prone to the sport; whereas they are endowed with one race alone having a bonus of £500, and which will probably be worth the winner on the 16th of April next, some twelve or fourteen hundred pounds. This was the result of the efforts of a few liberal spirits of London, with spirit enough to see what might be done, and energy enough to do it. A vast number of the influential stakes of the year closed last night: so far as might be gleaned from the betting on the course of the day, these will greatly exceed all former precedent. Indeed, it could scarce be otherwise, from the supply of blood stock which our great studs are now annually producing. The "Book Calendar," published at Newmarket, gave the names of upwards of fifteen hundred mares used in 1845 in breeding race-horses. According to that authority, nearly fourteen hundred animals appeared on our courses in the year, a number far in excess of any on record. To judge from the growing taste, too, of this, especially calculated to serve the convenience of the racing circles, called the Turf Club, is in process of organization, an institution that certainly seemed to be called for by the exigency of the case.

Thus fares the prospect of the lover of horse-racing—a pastime peculiar to our country, and in its spirit adapted to the times in which we live. It has, indeed, a conclusive about it: it is social in its connection—meaning of the term—if not moral in the most convenient sense. But we are hardly to look for very rigid properties in a holiday saturnalia: whatever Smell-fungus may say or do in the contrary, there will be "room and verge enough" as long as there are palates to relish and purses to pay for them. And, apropos of paying, is that portion of Turf economy to betting now, not only the offset, but the cause of so much having reference to the course. Of the thirteen hundred gentlemen, name above spoken of, how many ran upon their merits? how many did their devoir how many succumbed to circumstance? This is an inquiry, perhaps, impossible as an abstract proposition; but, nevertheless, to be grappled with generally. It is our purpose, during the coming season, in dealing with racing, to keep our eye upon the speculation connected therewith, with a view to show how Much of this will make black white.....

TATTERSALL'S.

MONDAY.—The three favourites were in good demand; but, although backed for upwards of £200 each, left off at nearly the same prices we quoted in our last. The investments in other horses were in small amounts, and without any influence on the market

TWO THOUSAND GUINEA STAKES.

5 to 1 agst Flexel (t) 5 to 1 agst Glenelg (t)

CHESTER CUP

50 to 1 agst Newcourt (t)		66 to 1 agst Punch (t)
60 to 1 — Diomed (with an entry—t)		66 to 1 — Pam (t)
	30 to 1 agst Mermaid and Morocco (t)

DERBY.

6 to 1 agst J. Scott's lot	33 to 1 agst Insulaire	50 to 1 agst The Liberator (t)
6 to 1 — J. Day's lot	28 to 1 — Old Port	50 to 1 — Christopher (t)
13 to 2 — Van Tromp (t)	40 to 1 — Miss Mowbray	50 to 1 — Bingham (t)
13 to 1 — Epi ode (t)	40 to 1 — Project le	50 to 1 — The Helver
170 to 8 — Flexel (t)	45 to 1 — Tantivy	66 to 1 — War Eagle (t)
25 to 1 — Glenelg (t)	45 to 1 — Conyngham (t)	100 to 1 — Clarendon (t)
28 to 1 — Wayward

,000 to 90 agst The Liberator,'Christopher, and Conyngham, in one bet (t)

OAKS.

3 to 1 agst Slande (t)	10 to 1 agst The Farmer's Daughter
10 to 1 — Clementina (t)	25 to 1 — Claribel

THURSDAY.—The prices the same as on Monday, and the investments generally on a small scale; in short, a particularly dul. wind up to the year.

CHESTER CUP.

50 to 1 agst Annler		66 to 1 agst Crown Prince (t)
66 to 1 — Punch (t)		66 to 1 — Pam (t)
	100 to 1 agst Bannockburn (t)

DERBY.

15 to 1 agst Epirote (t)	40 to 1 agst Red Hart (t)	50 to 1 agst Cossack (t)
25 to 1 — Faust	40 to 1 — Margrave	50 to 1 — The Dey of Chaos (t)
25 to 1 — Glenelli	40 to 1 — Miss Martin c	100 to 1 — Occasion (t)
33 to 1 — Lmiedale	50 to 1 — Conyngham (t)
	100 to 1 agst Browning (t)

OAKS

10 to 1 agst Clementina (t)	14 to 1 agst The Farmer's Daughter (t)

SCOTLAND.

CASE OF COPYRIGHT. An interesting case of copyright came before the Jury Court of the first division of the Court of Session on Wednesday and Thursday, the 23d and 24th ult., and was as follows:—The late Archibald Constable, publisher, applied to the late Dugald Stewart to furnish preliminary dissertations on mental philosophy for the supplement to the fourth, fifth, and sixth editions of the "Encyclopædia Britannica," and at completion paid him the sum of £1800, being a sum equivalent to double the sum at which Sir Walter Scott and other distinguished contributors were remunerated. On the failure of Constable, Adam and Charles Black purchased the property of the "Encyclopædia," and after some years issued a seventh edition, in which the dissertations of Stewart were included, besides being published in a separate form, in common with other treatises furnished to the work—but were in the latter edition withdrawn from sale within the sixteen years of copyright. The action was brought by Professor Stewart's son, on the ground that his father had disposed of the dissertations for insertion in the supplement alone, and he craved damages from Messrs. Black for the copies of "piratically" sold in the seventh edition, as well as in a detached shape. The Jury unanimously found for the defendants.

IMPORTANT COMMERCIAL DECISION.—A case of great importance to the commercial interest, since the extension of the railway system has given so much facility to our postal arrangements, has just been decided in the Jury Court at Edinburgh. The facts of the case are, that a house in the iron trade, at Glasgow, addressed a letter to a firm that had been their customers at Liverpool, offering them two thousand tons of pig iron at a certain named price. On the evening of the day on which this letter was received by the house at Liverpool they replied, accepting the terms, and from letters which passed between the parties at Glasgow declined to fulfil the engagement voluntarily offered by themselves. The ground of their objection was, that the letter was not dispatched from Liverpool until a quarter past six o'clock in the evening, whereas there was an immediate post at half-past two P.M. This they contended was not in due course, and on that point issue was joined. The Jury, after due deliberation, gave their verdicts in favour of the plaintiff. Damages to the amount of £500 were sent by any post, dispatched on the same day, should be held as in due course.

BIRTHS.

On Friday, the 26th, at 11, Dalston-terrace, Mrs. James Williams, of a daughter.—On the 30th ult., at Bridge-house, the lady of Samuel Peacock, Esq., of a daughter.—On the 2nd inst., at 2, Cumberland-terrace, the lady of Commander Henry A. Ross, R.N., of a daughter.—On the 3rd inst., at Hyde-park-gate, the wife of Mr. John Chubb, St. Paul's Churchyard, of a son.—On the 27th ult., the lady of Wilson Marr Hodgson, Esq., of a daughter.—At Chapelcombe, Dorset, the lady of John Humphery, Esq., M.P., of a daughter.—At Montagnu-place, Russel-square, Lady Fellowes of a son.—On the 31st ult., at Stanley Hall, Mrs. Cyril Lewis Hopkins, of a son.

MARRIAGES.

At Stockwell, J Nightingale, Esq., to Julia, daughter of J. Nolthorpe, Esq.—At Camberwell Christopher Liddell, Esq., to Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Benjamin Smith, Esq.—On the 24th instant, at Edgbaston Church, near Birmingham, by the Rev. H. Pirell, M.C., Samuel Thomas Newman, to Mary, youngest daughter of Mr. Thomas Parsons, both of Birmingham.

DEATHS.

At St. Duke-street, Westminster, aged 87, Jane, widow of the late Samuel Momfray, Esq., and sister of the late Sir Charles Morgan Bart., of Tregegar-park, Monmouthshire, having survived her brother only 17 days.—At Brighton, Ann, relict of John Telford, Esq.—At Bradstone, Essex, Hannah, wife of the Rev. Bernard Seale.—At Canterbury, Georgiana May, the wife of Major Randall Jackson.—In the Queen's-parade, Bath, Mary Ann Deacle, aged 83.—On the 22nd ult., almost suddenly, of apoplexy, aged 54, the Rev. T. W. Thirlwall, B.D., domestic Chaplain to the Bishop of St. David's.—At Falmouth, Ann Charles, relict of the late Rev Charles Baker

ADVERTISEMENTS.

NIGHTLY OVERFLOWS to the Splendid JUVENILE HOLIDAY FETES at ASTLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. W. Batty.—Every evening, by desire, and for the amusement of the Royal Prince Albert, and the Royal Family.—Unrivalled Success of the Grand Christmas Pantomime, introducing the Pas de Fascination by Madame Pablo to conclude with a most magnificent and novelty MONDAY, Jan. 4, 1847, and during the Week, at Half-past Six, 47th Time the Magical Romance of THE DEVON BOOR AND THE TWELVE WITCHES, illustrated by Batty's SCENICS OF THE CIRCLE, by his extensive Corps of British and Foreign Equestrians, with his beautiful and unrivalled Troop of Arabian Steeds; with Humorous Performances by Mr. Somerset as Clown. Concluding with the successful Comic Romancian, Fairy scene of Mr. Somerset as Clown. Concluding with the successful Comic Romancian, Fairy Pantomime of the FORTY THIEVES; or, Harlequin Ali Baba and the Merry Men. Dresses by Mr. and Mrs. Batty. Music by Mr. Leach. Machinery by Mr Leach. Dresses by Mr. and Mrs. Batty. The Music Composed and Selected by Mr. T. Cooke. Scenes and the whole arranged and produced by Mr. W. H. Batty. Commence each evening at 7 till 9

ETHIOPIAN SINGERS.—ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.—The celebrated ETHIOPIAN SERENADERS, PELL, HARRINGTON, WHITE, SEARING, and GODFREY, will APPEAR EVERY EVENING during the Holidays in their ENTERTAINMENTS at the above Theatre, every Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday Evening during the Christmas Holidays. Doors open at 7, Performance at Half-past during the Christmas Holidays. Doors open at 7, Performance at Half-past Seven. Stalls, 3s.; Pit, 2s.; Gallery, 1s. Grand Juvenile Performance on Wednesday Morning next, will (by desire) be repeated on Saturday Morning next, at 11. Pit, 1s. Doors open at Two o'clock, commence at Half-past. Private Boxes and Stalls may be secured at the Box-office, daily from Ten till Five. Seven till Ten. Acting Manager, Mr. Mitchell.

NEW ARRANGEMENTS.—DIVISION OF PRICES.—COLOSSEUM. ADMITTANCE, ONE SHILLING.

Panorama of London and Blackfriars Bridge, by Summerstowne, Swiss Cottage, Mont Blanc, &c. &c. &c.; Stalactite Caverns of Salzburg, &c. The Prize Cartoons on view, no extra charge. Mr. Banvard's Grand Panorama, Museum of Sculpture, Models, Statuary, Classic Fountain, Swiss Cottage, Mont Blanc, and Stalactite Caverns, &c. &c. Marvellous Panorama of London by Night, with Atmospheric Effects every half hour, 1s. extra; Stalactite Caverns, 1s. extra. Open from Ten till Dusk. Admittance, One Shilling.

Family tickets for four persons and upwards, to view the whole, 5s. 6d. each person, may be had from Ten till Dusk, at the Colosseum only. Schools and Children admitted at Public Libraries. Children Half-price, Day and Evening. Open from Seven till Half-past Ten.

The whole Establishment lighted with Gas. Open on Sundays.

"WEIPPERT'S SOIREES DANSANTES," PRINCESS'S CONCERT ROOMS. On MONDAY, JANUARY 4th, and Every Monday during the Season.—Director, Mr. Weippert. Conductors, Messrs. Jullien and Weippert. A Subscriber of Two Guineas is entitled to a Double Transferable Ticket for the Season. The subscription also commences with any Monday. The Ball-room Band consists of the same Artistes that attend her Majesty's State Balls and Almack's. Conductor, Mr Weippert; leader, Mr. Sainton; violoncello, Mr. Lucas; double-bass, Mr. Hardie; clarionets, Messrs. C. G., Mr Cooke, Connoisseur at Ton o'Clock. Tickets, Seven Shillings each, at Weippert's Quadrille Office, 9, Echo-mews.

SACRED CONCERTS, CROSBY HALL.—FIFTH SERIES. THIRD CONCERT, TUESDAY, JANUARY 5th, 1847.—Anthem, "Behold I bring you glad tidings," Pierce.—Misses Rainforth and Dassauer, "O Loving Power," Handel.—Mr. Francis, "Angels ever bright and fair," Handel.—Miss Rainforth, "Praise, O Zion," Naumann.—Recit. and Air, Mr. Lockey, "Call forth thy powers," Handel.—Miss Rainforth, "Lord and Master mine," Beethoven.—Miss Rainforth, "O Lord, God," Marcello.—Mr. J. A. Novello, "Behold, O Lord, Thy tender children," Pergolesi.—Trio and Chorus, "Thanks be to God," Handel.—Miss Mounsey, Miss Rosanna, "The Blind Maiden," Proch.—Trio, Misses Rainforth and Rosanna and Mr. Francis, "Praise the Lord, O my soul," Spohr.—Grand Chorus, "Hallelujah," with Chorus, "Methinks I hear the full celestial choir," Dr Crotch.—Miss Rainforth, The Alps, F. Schubert.—Duett, Misses Rainforth and Dassauer, "Praise the Lord, ye servants of the Lord," Handel.—Miss Rainforth and Mr. J. A. Novello, "Praise Jehovah," D. Koning —Chorus, "Praise ye Him in 3rd Jn," Mozart.

The Programme of the remaining Concerts will be sent to each Subscriber's residence. The remaining Concerts will take place on the following Evenings:—Wednesday, January 27th, 1847 | Friday, February 19th | Friday, March 5th and 19th.

UNPRECEDENTED SUCCESS of M. SOYER'S MONSTER BOUQUET DE DAMES, pronounced to be a perfect GEM OF BEAUTY WALLACK, late Miss Lacy, and Mr. Leffler, Madame Macready, and Mr. Anderson, in a TABLEAUX VIVANS.—New and Splendid Tableaux will be presented of "Christmas in the Olden Time," "The Queen's Visit to Edinburgh," "Queen Dorothea," "Lord and Lady of the Wood," and the much-admired Tableau of a "Grecian Harvest Home," &c. Juveniles in the Stalls and Reserved seats, half-price. Each Juvenile accompanied by a Parent admitted to the Stalls and Reserved seats, half-price. Commencing at Seven. Conducted by Messrs. Adams, of the Royal Gardens, Vauxhall. Morning Performance at Three; Evening, at Half-past Eight. Stalls, 3s.; Reserved Seats, 2s.; Promenade, 1s.

CHRISTMAS HOLIDAYS

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION. — Professor SCHERENBERG'S GUN COTTON and other Explosive Compounds, with brilliant Experiments, lectured on by Dr. Ryan, Daily at Half-past Three o'Clock, and on the Evenings of Mondays, Wednesdays, and Saturdays. The perfection of the various Models of the SCIENTIFIC TELEGRAPHS, explained daily by Professor Backhouse, including the Patent of Messrs. Cook and Wheatstone, which is in use on the Blackwall and the Great Western Railways. Models of the Steam Engine, Various Models explained. Magnified Specimens of DISEASED NERVE and Gamble. The Dissolving Views illustrating Mr. Pepper's Lecture on the DESTRUCTIVE INSECT, supposed by Mr. HOWITT, F.M.S., to be the cause of the disease. A BEAUTIFUL DIORAMA of NEW DISSOLVING VIEWS. The DIVING-BELL and DIVER, with EXPERIMENTS. The PHTHEUSCOPE. New CHILDREN'S LECTURE, by Dr. Ryan, entitled "A Schools Holiday."

"ENOUGH TO MAKE A CAT LAUGH."—FOLLIT'S ILLUSTRATED BLACK LECTURES, by BLACKWELL LILLYWHITE, Esq., B.A.N. Berry Black Nigger; Dr. Sambo's Lecture on the Sable Skull; the Scientific Negro; Punch's Locomotive Picture Gallery, 350 changes. Punch in Search of a Separate Id.

Just Published, Price Sixpence, No. I. of

THE MAN IN THE MOON;

A Monthly Review and Bulletin of New Measures, New Men, New Books, New Plays, New Jokes, and New Nonsense; being an Effort towards the AMALGAMATION OF THE HIGH-WAY GAUGE OF FANCY with the NARROW GAUGE OF FACT, into the GRAND GENERAL AMUSEMENT JOURNEY.

EDITED BY ALBERT SMITH, AND ANGUS B. REACH,

With Cuts by PHIZ, MEADOWS, HINE, and THOMAS.

London, CLARK, Warwick-lane, and all Booksellers; and sold at every Railway Station in the Kingdom.

Just Published, a Novel and Appropriate Print, Called

THE LILY AND THE ROSE:

FROM THE GRACEFUL PENCIL OF

KENNY MEADOWS,

ENGRAVED IN THE FIRST STYLE OF ART BY THAT CELEBRATED ENGRAVER, HENRY ROBINSON.

The design represents two lovely Girls, characteristically grouped, surrounded by th. Flowers of which they are the types. Their artist cannot fail to charm admirers of Feeal Overlasse; or, set forth over the approval of Artistic taste. s. d.

One Hundred Proofs before Letters 1 1 0

One Hundred Proofs after Letters 0 15 0

Prints 0 10 6

Published by J. HOGARTH, opposite the Opera-house, Haymarket, London.

THE BUILDER, an Illustrated Journal, Price Threepence, or Stamped to go by post Fourpence, addressed to the Editor, and forwarded to the Publisher, essentially essential for Architects, Engineers, Artists, Operatives, Lovers of Architectural Antiquities, Clergy who are interested in Sanitary Matters, or concerned in Home Property. It is considered to be an authority, and is regularly quoted by all the London and Provincial Papers. the FIRST NUMBER FOR 1847 will contain A VIEW of the NEW CHURCH in MARYLEBONE, and other ILLUSTRATIONS, with numerous papers by able writers on Architecture, at the London Farmers' Club, proceedings at the Anniversary Dinner of the Mem bers of the Civil, and of the Smithfield Club Cattle Show; Resolutions of various Architectural Societies and Clubs on the subject of "Vacant Hight," &c. &c. &c.

The FARMERS' MAGAZINE is published Monthly, price Two Shillings, and may be had of every Bookseller in every town in the United Kingdom.

Office: 24, Norfolk-street, Strand, London.

EDUCATION in CONNECTION with the CHURCH of ENGLAND, in one of the most salubrious parts in the neighbourhood of Town. At ESTABLISHMENT hitherto conducted on the principles of the Church of England, has been transferred to the immediate superintendence of the Clergy of the parish in which it is situate The Course of Instruction will be such as to qualify Pupils for admission to the Universities, the Royal Military and Naval Indie Colleges, and also for Mercantile Business.—Apply Rev. C. E., Church Association, 38, Southampton-street, Strand.

EDUCATION.—YOUTH are PREPARED for the UNIVERSITIES, CIVIL SERVICE, and PROFESSIONAL LIFE, by Mr. J. POCOCK, assisted by Masters of Eminence in the different departments, comprising the Chief European and Oriental Dialects—the Physical Sciences, Mathematics, and Natural Philosophy. Handy access is granted to a well-selected Library. Pupils under ten years of age are under the more immediate superintendence of Mrs. Pocock. A Prospectus containing Terms, and a View of the Establishment, may be had by application to the Principal Mr. E. POCOCK, Arno's Court, Brislington, between Bath and Bristol.

LESSONS in MILLINERY and DRESS MAKING.—MRS. H. JONES, of No. 8, Argyll-street, Regent-street, begs to inform the Nobility and Gentry that she has a Class for Young Ladies, for Instruction in the above Branches, which commences on the 1st of every month, and takes place on Tuesday evening, January 5th, 1847. The Class to be delivered on January 5th, 1847, consists of four lessons, at 1l. 1s. the course, or 5s. 6d. each lesson. One hundred Albums, one hundred and fifty Reticules, and many other elegant and useful articles, to be Disposed of by Raffle, at the Close of the Course.

GRAND TWELFTH NIGHT DISTRIBUTION.

ALL PRIZES. T. TEATES, Confectioner, 23, Strand, and 9, Duke-street, Westminster, established upwards of 80 years, begs to inform his friends he intends to distribute Twelve Hundred Pounds worth of rich Twelfth Cakes, in 3000 shares at 5s. per share, to take place on Tuesday evening, January 5th, 1847. The Cakes to be delivered on January 6th, 1847. Each share for at 5 guineas, and at 2 guineas, one hundred at 1l. 1s., one hundred and sixty at 5s., and 2000 at 1s. Persons residing in the country can have a Cake forwarded by the Post-office order, and have the number required to make the amount of the Cake awarded by return of post. Rocks, Balls, Suppers, Dinners, and Wedding Cakes, in the first style, at the lowest prices. High Almond Iced Wedding-Cakes always ready. Iced Stands, and every description of Rocks, Glass, China, Chandeliers, Lamps, &c., lent on hire.

COUNTY FIRE OFFICE, 50, Regent-street, Established 1807.

—It is respectfully notified to parties Insuring Property in this Office, the Premium on which fall due at Christmas, that the same due'd be Paid within Fifteen Days after Christmas Day. The Insurances lying at the Inland Office will be found in the several Agencies.

The terms of the County Fire Office are highly advantageous to the assured, who is secured to a large extent on public appreciation. All claims are settled with promptness and liberality. Full particulars will be immediately forwarded on application at the Office, or to any of its Agents who are appointed in all the principal towns of the United Kingdom and Ireland.—JOHN A. BEAUMONT, Managing Director

MUTUAL INSURANCE BENEFIT INSTITUTION, 3, Threadneedle-street, London.

Instituted 1839. Under the Patronage of the Duke of Sussex.

Present Patrons—The Duke of Cambridge, Lord Dunmore, &c. &c. &c.

INSURANCE of 1l. 2s. 4d. to 500l. on CHILDREN, YOUTH, and MATURE LIVES, may be secured by cash, or by ... ions, payable Monthly or Quarterly, at the Office, 3, Threadneedle-street.

EXAMPLES.—The Premium for a Child, aged 3d. will secure 20l to be paid when a Child, now under 7 years old, becomes 14 years of age.

The monthly payment of 3s. 6d. will secure 50l to be paid when a Child, now under 2 years old, becomes 10 years of age.

The monthly payment of 3s. 6d. will secure 50l to be paid when a Young Person, now under 21 years old, becomes 60 years of age.

Other ages, and higher or lower sums in same proportion Should the Child or Youth die before the above sums are due, all money paid on will be returned And Insurers can, at any time, borrow two-thirds of the value of their Insurance, on the security of Policy, without any other expense than interest for the amount at 5 per cent. per ann

ANNUITIES, Immediate or Deferred, from 12l to 150 per ann may also be Insured

Prospectuses and Forms of Proposal, and Tables of Payments, may be obtained at the Office 3l, Threadneedle-street, London or of any of the Agents

PROVIDENT LIFE OFFICE, 50, REGENT-STREET, LONDON Established 1806. Invested Capital, £1,320,000

Annual Income £140 000. Bonuses Declared, £520,000

Claims paid since the establishment of the Office, £1,520,000.

PRESIDENT—The Right Honourable Earl Gray.

DIRECTORS.

The Earl of Macclesfield.	Frederick Squire, Esq
Sir John Osborn, Bart.	Rev. James Sherman.
John Deering, Esq	Thomas Bell, Esq.
Alexander Henderson, M.D.	Richard Sharwood, Esq.

1. The Rates of Premium are those adopted by the principal Life Offices, the Rate without bonus is lower than that of most other offices

2. The Bonuses are added to the Policies, or applied to the reduction of the Premiums, or may be received in cash as soon as declared, at their annual value.

3. Loans are granted upon the surrender of Life Office, or the Policies are purchased at their fa r value.

4. If a party neglect to pay for the renewal of his P... he may repair the ob... at any time within 12 months, upon proof of good health, and pay

Bonuses paid upon Policies which have become Claims

Life insured.	Sum insured	Sum paid
	£	£ s. d.
John Wharton, Esq., Skelton Castle	5000	7706 5 0
Sir John Saunders Sebright, Bart.	5000	7653 13 3
Sir William Wake, Bart.	5000	7503 0 0
Earl Strathmore	3000	7188 15 0
Nov. H. W Champneys, Canterbury ..	3000	4509 1 1
The Marquis Wellesley	3000	4311 0 0
Earl Cathcart	3000	1862 4 11

Prospectuses and full particulars may be obtained upon application to the Agents of the Office in all the principal towns of the United Kingdom; and at the head Office, No. 50, Regent-street

JOHN A. BEAUMONT, Managing Director.

LEGAL and GENERAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY, No. 10, Poultry-street, London. Established 1836

The attention of the Public, and particularly of persons contemplating Assurance, is invited to the several very important improvements which have been made in the Policy of the Society, at the termination of the first decennial period from its establishment

Among other advantages now for the first time offered by the Directors of this Society, are these:—

1. Persons Assuring their Lives in this Office, may, without payment of any extra premium, reside in New South Wales, Cape of Good Hope, Canada, Northern States of North America, and in any place distant more than 33 degrees from the Equator: and may also, without any extra charge, pass by sea between any two places in the same Hemisphere, distant more than 33 degrees from the Equator.

2. The charging of low rates of extra premium for permission to go to the East Indies, the West Indies, or to any place distant less than 33 degrees from the Equator.

3. The immediate issue of the policy in force when the party's life is assured goes out of the limits allowed provided that the requisite additional premium be paid as soon as the fact of such departure becomes known to the party interested in the policy

4. Persons who have appeared before the examining medical officers of the Society, are not required to appear also before the Board of Directors The amounts Assured by policies will be paid in all cases of death by duelling, or by the hands of justice In case of suicide by the party who is entitled to the benefit of the policy, the value of the premiums received will be returned Notices of assignment of policies will be acknowledge.

The persons Assured by this Society are entitled to receive one-fifth of the profits The first division will take effect at the present time (31st December, 1846) One-fourth of this division will be very shortly declared.) The future periods of divis on will not exceed seven years No admission or entrance fees are required

Medical officers for the examination of lives proposed for Assurance are in attendance at the Office every Tuesday and Friday at two o'clock.

By order of the Board, R. T. EDMONDS, Actuary.

HORSES and STOCK taken into STRAW-YARD or to GRASS, Loose Boxes for Hunters or Aged Horses, with hay and corn if required. The Parks and Fields are warm and well sheltered, with sheds for stormy weather. Apply to J. REX. Farmer, West Hill, Wandsworth, Surrey.

MEDICO-GALVANIC INSTITUTION, 25, Coventry-street, for the cure of Paralysis, Nervous, Asthmatic, Stomach, and Liver complaints. Conducted by Dr. REID and assistant, both English graduates. It aims to disconnect Ga.vanism from quackery, by treating eligible cases only, and at moderate terms Attendance, from seven to five

DEFORMITIES OF THE SPINE, &c.—Mr. COLES'S PATENT SPINAL SUPPORTING BODY for the treatment of every variety of Distortion of the Spine and Chest. It contains, under the semblance of an ordinary stay, the Prone Couch and six varieties of exercises, calculated for restoring muscular energy, and for the due co-ordination of contortile parts. It can be effectively employed at home, or at school, and without quitting the superintendence of the family surgeon An Illustrated Guide to its use is published, price 1s., by HOUL STON and STONEMAN, 65, Paternoster-row, London

ALL this hubbub, in two or three provincial towns, about the Tea Duties, will most likely end, as usual, in smoke Even if there be a reduction, will the public have the benefit of it? Half-crown tea-boards! That is the price at which the EAST INDIA TEA COMPANY supply a useful Stock in Cu bags; other sorts, 2s. 10d., 3s. 4d., and 3s 10d.: Coffees, 9d., 1s., and 1s. 2d.—Offices, No. 9, Great Saint Helen's Churchyard.

DANCING TAUGHT, in the most fashionable style, by Mr. WILLIS, 41, Brewer-street, Golden-square. Private Lessons in the Polka, Cellarius Valse, and Valse a Deux Temps, at all hours, to Ladies and Gentlemen of any age wishing private instruction, at their own residences. An Evening Class on Monday and Friday. A Juvenile Class on Wednesday and Saturday. Terms may be had on application as above.

PIANOFORTES.—The cheapest house in London to purchase these first-rate instruments is at H. TOLKIEN'S, manufacturer, 26, King William-street, London-bridge. H. T. having completed his extensive alterations begs his friends to view his splendid stock of PIANOS, which is not to be equalled by any maker, and at about half the price charged by them. H. T.'s Cabinet Grands, each price £35. Old instruments taken in exchange.—TOLKIEN, 26, King William-street, London-bridge.

ELEGANT PICTURE-FRAMES, &c. — JEPHTHA'S DAUGHTER. WM. FOLLIT, 68, Fleet-street, has designed chastely ornamented frames, for this beautiful Engraving, at a cost hitherto unattempted. Subscribers who have not obtained the Print, are solicited to forward their orders to receive the same to WM. FOLLIT, which will ensure the good impression. Manufacturer of superb Looking-Glass and Picture-Frame Designs. &c., on receipt of six stamps.—FOLLIT'S Old-established Economic Carving and Gilding Establishment, 68, Fleet-street.

JONES' £4 4s. SILVER LEVER WATCHES are selling at the Manufactory, 338, Strand, opposite Somerset House. They comprise every modern improvement, and are warranted not to vary more than half a minute per week. The accurate reduction of price at once sets aside all rivalry, either of the Swiss manufacturers, or any other house. On receipt of a remittance for 4l. 4s., Jones for 3l. 3s., one will be sent free Read Jones' Sketch of Watchwork, sent free for a Twopenny Stamp

SILVER TEA and COFFEE SERVICES.—Printed lists sent gratis into the country, in answer to a post letter, with full particulars of size, weight, and prices, of the various well fin ished and extensive assortment of the Silver Services in the Show-rooms. Either tea-pot, sugar-basin, cream-ewer, or coffee-pot, may be had separately T. COX SAVORY and Co., Silversmiths, &c., 47, Cornhill (seven doors from Gracechurch street), London.

THE BEST ENGLISH WATCHES.—A. B. SAVORY and SONS, Watchmakers, No. 9, Cornhill, London, opposite the Bank, request the attention of purchasers to their stock of London-made PATENT LEVER WATCHES, which are manufactured by themselves, in their own house. In silver cases, with the detached escapement, and jewelled; the prices are five guineas and a half, 6l., and 6l. 6s. each; or in gold cases, 10, 12, 14, and 16 guineas each. The very large stock offered for selection includes every description, enabling a customer to select that which is more particularly adapted to his own use

SILKS and SATINS for EVENING and MORNING DRESSES. Good Fancy and Glacé Silks, at 1s. 6d. per yard.

Rich Glacé and Fancy French Silks, at 2s. 6d.

Rich Watered Silks, Black and Coloured, at 2s. 6d

Very Rich White, Black, and Coloured Satins, at 2s. 6d.

The Richest Black, White, and Coloured Pou de Soies Damas, at 7s. 6d., 8 wide.

Patterns sent for Ladies free of expense in any part of the Kingdom.

Address KING and SHEAFH, 264, Regent-street

N.B French Merinos, Cloths, and all yard wide Muslins, two yards wide, 10½d.

CHILDREN'S FROCKS, COATS, and PELISSES; Infants' Cloaks, Hoods, Hats, and Bonnets; Long and Short Robes, French Cambric Caps, Day and Night Gowns, Robe Blankets, Lawn and Cambric Nightcaps, with every other requisite in Baby Linen, at SHEARMAN'S, 7, Finsbury Pavement, several hundreds of Children's Dresses constantly on view, from the useful Infant at 1s. 6d. medium 5s 6d. to 10s. 6d., up to the rich embroidered Silk Velvets, &c., with every ... requisite required for a young family; thus obviating the trouble and inconvenience ... ing complained of in going to different Warehouses for Ladies free of expense in any part of the Kingdom.

Address as above.

MESSRS. NICOLL, Registered PALETOT Makers, 6th and 7th Vic., cap. 65, and TAILORS to their Royal Highnesses Prince Albert, Prince George of Cambridge, his Grace the Duke of Wellington, &c., respectfully beg to announce that the same moderate prices are still maintained; and that the Fashionable Winter Over-coat, the Paletot, is patronised by Lords, Princes, and the High Nobility. The present season in which one has been so highly patronised for both its useful qualities and sentimental appearance, having the late summer features and true bad cold, by London; at 114, Regent-street, and 22, Cornhill; and of the recognised agents in the country

TROWSERS! TROWSERS!! TROWSERS!!!—A good pair, 6s. 6d., in this garment are seldom be obtained. NICOLL, Fashionable Trowsers' Maker and Tailor, 22, High Holborn, after many years' experience and study in this garment, which, from the nature of construction, that he can fit gentlemen with this garment better than any other person in London.—Address as above. N.B. Observe the Number 22 by the high perfect ease for stooping, sitting walking, or riding A well-assorted stock of the newest Designs in Cloths, Cassimeres, and Vestings.

BERDOE'S WINTER OVER-COATS REALLY WATERPROOF.—An extensive and superior assortment of first-rate Outside Garments, adapted for every purpose, combining elegance with durability, may now be inspected at this well-known and universally admired PALLIUM, may now be inspected both at his West End and City Establishments. The established reputation for efficiency and respectability of W. B.'s well-known Garments, obtained by ten years' extensive trial, renders any further observations upon them unnecessary. As both establishments are business will continue to be conducted upon the principle of supplying at equitable charges, satisfactory articles, such as will ensure permanent satisfaction and future confidence. W. BERDOE, Tailor and Over-Coat Maker, 96, Cornhill, north side, and 96, New Bond-street, near Oxford-street, (recently opened.)

TO THE TEA-DRINKERS throughout the KINGDOM.—The Public has been anxiously awaiting the result of the present high rate of the Tea Duties, we will endeavour to show the present market value of Tea, which the public now well know, on all descriptions, pay a duty of 2s 1½d. upon every pound of Coffee, which, with the increase of importation, &c.

BLACK Teas.	British Sterling rate of Duty.	Sterling rate to Purchaser.
	s. d. s. d.	s. d. s. d.
Congou, Mixed leaf kinds from 11 to 13 or from 14 to 16	1 1 to 1 3	from 1 0 to 1 2
Blackish leaf .. 14 .. 16	0 11½ .. 1 1 ..	2½ .. 1 3 .. 1 5
Strong ditto .. 18 .. 21	1 3½ .. 1 6 ..	2½ .. 1 8 .. 2 0
Pekoe flavour .. 23 .. 29	1 5 .. 2 2 ..	2½ .. 2 7 .. 3 0
Souchong .. 15 .. 24	1 4 .. 1 11 ..	2½ .. 2 6 .. 3 3
Flowery Pekoe .. 31 .. 34	1 10 .. 2 6 ..	2½ .. 3 2 .. 3 10
Orange Pekoe .. 18 .. 54	1 3 .. 3 0 ..	2½ .. 3 6 .. 5 5
GREEN
Twankay .. 13 .. 22	0 11 .. 1 3 ..	2½ .. 1 1 .. 1 10
Hyson .. 20 .. 71	1 7 .. 3 10 ..	2½ .. 1 9 .. 4 0
Young Hyson .. 26 .. 64	1 3 .. 3 0 ..	2½ .. 2 7 .. 5 4
Imperial .. 26 .. 64	1 3 .. 3 0 ..	2½ .. 2 7 .. 5 4
Gunpowder .. 35 .. 85	2 0 .. 4 8 ..	2½ .. 4 6 .. 7 0

[illegible] ... [illegible] ... [illegible] ... [

NEW OXFORD-STREET.—(SEE PRECEDING PAGE.)

class above-mentioned, may, by filtration, be sufficiently cleansed for even table use. But, as regards the waters of the Thames! The class of foreign substances that enter into combination with it, as it sweeps along and gathers up the vomitings of the metropolitan sewers, put all artificial filtering at defiance; it may be fined, but never can be sweetened so as to render it wholesome and palatable for culinary purposes. On this point all are agreed; the question now is, how can the evil be remedied?

Differences of opinion have existed on the subject of supplying London from the lower spring in the chalk formation, called the London Basin; some having thought that the experiment would involve the exhaustion of the rivers Wandle, Lee, Verulam, Brent, Colne, and others; that the supply from such source would be uncertain and insufficient; and that a series of wells, adequate to raise enough for the consumption of London, would exhaust each other. Without presuming to set this important question at rest, we will endeavour to explain, by reference to diagrams, the construction and extent of the so-called London Basin; believing that a correct idea of its magnitude will materially aid in estimating the probable supply to be expected from it.

FIG. 1.

Figs. 1 and 2 show the surface and sectional arrangement of the main strata; and also convey a very nearly correct idea of the proportion that London and its suburbs bear to the whole formation. A, Fig. 1, represents the area of the denuded surface, or chalk hills, forming what may be termed the rim of the Basin;* B, stratum of green sand; C, rubble; D, mottled sand; E, plastic or London clay, through which no water can penetrate; F, a thin layer of gravel, sand, loom, &c.; G, proportionate space occupied by London and its environs.

* See Geological Map for exact form.

FIG. 3.

The belt or rim A comprises an area of from 1000 to 2000 square miles; upon this surface the average annual fall of rain is 21 inches; and, deducting about one-third for evaporation, &c., every square mile will furnish upwards of THREE MILLIONS—every 100 square miles upwards of 320 millions; and the supply from the whole area of the denuded surface will exceed THREE BILLIONS of hogsheads of water annually, or ten times more than the present supply to the Metropolis from all other sources put together—which, according to returns published for 1845, amounted to 314,553,012 hogsheads

Below the chalk formation is a stratum of blue sand, held in a lower bed of blue or weald clay, through which the water from the chalk cannot escape.

Of the arrangement of the fissures, or water vessels in the chalk, different opinions exist. The Rev. Mr. Clutterbuck has inclined to the opinion that the connection is so extensive and ramified that the raising of water from one well in the chalk, would be simultaneously felt by other wells drawing from the same source; others are in favour of the opinion that the fissures are independent channels, each having a column of pressure varying according to the altitude of its origin in the sides of the Basin. The relative value of these opinions will be best explained by the following facts. In 1841, Mr. Robert Stephenson was engaged for a London Company, who proposed sinking works in the vicinity of the Birmingham Railway for raising water from the chalk; this being also in the vicinity of the Rev. Gentleman's residence, it was objected to on the ground that the Wells in the neighbourhood would be drained. In reply to this Mr. Robert Stephenson offered to try (at the Company's expense) any experiment that Mr. Clutterbuck might propose to test the fact. Accordingly, on the third of March in that same year, the experiment was made as proposed by Mr. Clutterbuck, that gentleman personally superintending the carrying it out. The experimental engines were put to work for three days and nights, but without, in the slightest degree, reducing the level of the water in the neighbouring Wells, supposed to be within the influence of the works. In Trafalgar-square both the deep well pumps were put to work for a long period, raising six hogsheads per minute, for the purpose of lowering, if possible, the water in the old Artesian Well, in St. Martin's Workhouse, scarce 300 yards distance, but without producing any effect.

At Ramsgate, in a similar formation, but not within the London Basin, is a Well, sunk in 1836 by the Water Company; this is within forty yards of an old Well, sunk many years ago in the chalk; and it is a fact quite in keeping with the generally observed results, that the lowering the water in the Company's Well does not in the least affect the level of that in the old one. These facts go far to prove that the chalk is divided into cells, each independent of the other, and each capable of supplying a continuous stream of water of greater or less magnitude.

Of the Wells in the Metropolis, but few are entitled to the appellation of "Artesian"—that is, of obtaining their supply from the chalk—the majority of them only entering the sand immediately below the clay; this was the case with the well in Covent Garden, which, for upwards of fourteen years, failed to supply the ordinary wants of the market, and was, in fact, chiefly valued as a standing argument against Artesian projects of all sorts; but having, within the last six months, been deepened and carried 90 feet into the chalk, now yields an abundant supply for the entire demands of the market; is constantly worked, without materially reducing the level of the water.

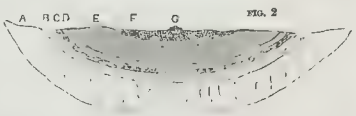
Fig. 3 shows the position, and Fig. 4, the relative depths of twenty-five of the principal Wells in and about the Metropolis, all of which, except No. 6, are partly constructed by boring and driving pipes varying from six to ten or more inches in diameter; but, as was before observed, many of these do not penetrate the chalk, and, therefore, do not really come under the denomination of Artesian Wells, as commonly understood.

REFERENCES TO DIAGRAMS
FIGS 3, AND 4.

1 Brentford Brewery
2 Chiswick } Horticultural Gardens
3 Ditto } Brewery
4 Hammersmith } Mr. Scott.
5 Ditto } Mr. Bird.
6 Knightsbridge
7 Berkeley-square.
8 Camden Town.
9 Tottenham Court-road, Meux and Co.
10 Liquorpond-street, Reid and Co
11 Chiswell street, Whitbread and Co.
12 Brick-lane, Spitalfields, Hanbury and Co.
13 Castle street, Long-acre, Coombe and Co.
14 Covent Garden Market.
15 Upper Thames-street, Calvert and Co.
16 Trafalgar-square, Government.
17 Lambeth-walk, Brewery.
18 Southwark, Bethlem.
19 Southwark, Potts and Co.
20 Southwark, Barclay and Co.
21 Pimlico, Elliot and Co.
22 New Cross, Naval School.
23 Regent's Park, Colosseum.
24 Ditto. Zoological.
25 Royal Mint, Tower Hill.

On reference to Fig. 4, it will be seen that in Nos. 1, 2, 4, and 5, the water rises from 10 to 30 feet above the surface; these and some others penetrate the chalk at the depths indicated by the short ragged line; those not so marked do not reach the chalk.

FIG. 2



The height to which the water rises in the several Wells is remarkably dissimilar; the difference being 130 feet between Nos. 4 and 8. The power of supply also varies considerably; but it would occupy too much space to give a detailed account of these interesting operations; and it is for the present rendered unnecessary, inasmuch as they tend chiefly to confirm the facts already established by the results previously referred to.

FIG. 4.

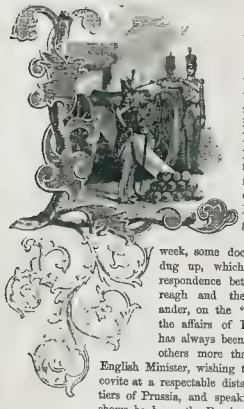
LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement, Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, 198, Strand aforesaid.—SATURDAY, JANUARY 2, 1847.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 245.—Vol. X.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, JANUARY 9, 1847. SUPPLEMENT GRATIS [SIXPENCE.

UNFORTUNATE NATIONS.



LIFTING the veil from State mysteries is one of the many, and among the best, offices of time, through whom the world is often helped to late knowledge and tardy explanations. It has taken thirty years to reveal all that was done in behalf of Poland at the Congress of Vienna.

Within the last week, some documents have been dug up, which contain the correspondence between Lord Castlereagh and the Emperor Alexander, on the "arrangement" of the affairs of Poland, whose fate has always been in the hands of others more than its own. The English Minister, wishing to keep the Muscovite at a respectable distance from the frontiers of Prussia, and speaking in a tone that shows he knew the Russian much better than he trusted him, pleads hard to the Czar for forbearance and generosity, and urges him to consent to the making Poland an independent kingdom, with a real existence. He shows what a good political "fender" it would form between Prussia and Russia, which, without it, would be always in danger of collision. Considering the arguments were written more than thirty years ago, they do great credit to Castlereagh's sagacity—the events of the past month were foreseen by him with singular clearness: but, like most good advice, it was all thrown away. With the deepest respect and most sincere regard for his adviser, the Emperor replies that he will agree to no such arrangement; having got Poland, he'll keep it, or, at least, his share of it; indeed, he rather makes out that he has been "done" by his Royal brothers, and is obliged to put up with the worst portion of it. He does not like independent kingdoms; does not think the Poles could stand alone if they were allowed the chance; and, finally, he won't do it because he does not choose—a reason that might have saved us all the others. So a compromise was the utmost that could be made of the business. Poland was allowed a nominal independence, that all parties knew to be a mockery; Cracow was made a "free city" without a shadow of freedom; and Russia, Prussia, and Austria were left to do as they liked with their own: what they have chosen to do we now perceive.

But, amid all the negotiations about Poland, one thing must strike everybody—the absence of care, thought, respect, or regard for the Poles themselves. Neither Emperor, Minister, nor Congress think of them for a moment but as so much material, to be cut up and used, or kept together in a mass for the state convenience of the contracting parties; a flock of sheep sold at a fair have quite as much voice in their transfer as the Poles had in the bargain of which they were the objects. Nay, when they are specially mentioned, it is with some unfavourable expression; Castlereagh, who was inclined to do his best for them, calls them "a frivolous and disorderly people." There is something significant in this; nothing happens in this world without causes; how came Poland to sink to this utter vassalage, and, large, populous, and fertile, to fall into the misery of weakness? How came she to descend to be the eternally pitied and never helped, to become perpetually "that unfortunate nation?" We will try to ascertain.

The truth is, that when sympathy has to convert itself into action, the difficulty of doing anything becomes apparent. There are some men and nations whom it is impossible to help; there is no spring or energy left in them, and their course is from one fall to another into the lowest depths of misery and degradation. Poland seems to have been one of these "unfortunate nations." Everybody was always anxious to lend her assistance, but her internal condition furnished nothing on which they could base their efforts. In 1814, England tried to secure to Poland a national independence, as far as it could be done by advice and representations; Prussia and Austria wished to have an independent State between them and Russia. Everybody seemed anxious and interested, and yet nothing effectual was done; a nominal existence, and the shadow of an independence, were all that resulted, and now even those are destroyed. The utter extinction of Poland as a State, is one of those phenomena which can only be explained by causes acting within the nation itself, as well as those to which it was exposed from without. These causes have occupied the attention of Historians; and, from one of the latest who have written on this subject, we borrow a few passages, which will be at once new to the English reader, and interesting from the events now passing.

Arndt, one of the most liberal of German writers, says in his "Enquiry into the Comparative History of Nations":—"Our unfortunate neighbours, the Poles, have had for centuries a tragic history; it does not date merely from the last century of our era. The Russians we may detest and denounce, for they are victorious and powerful, and think themselves much more powerful than they are in reality. The Poles we must lament for and pity; if we overlook what is occurring among them, the cry of Poland may become that of Germany and Europe. But, with that sympathy, we must still judge all things, good and evil, as they exist. The feeling that the Poles awoke in Europe, in their emigration across it, to France and England, after the fall of Warsaw, was a natural one; yet, with every many, that feeling cooled down, when they became more intimately acquainted with them. Let no one cast a stone at his neighbour for a passing failing or an offence: we may all be liable, in turn, to a similar reproach. At present, every heart in Europe is inclined to feel for the down-trodden and martyred Poles; but truth is truth; History is the stern judgment-bar of nations, and the writer can only record according to what he finds, in dark characters or bright, graven upon the tablets of the past. The history of Poland exhibits instability, frivolity, ferocity, and confusion, from its beginning to its end. The Pole has always been a great boy, without the innocence and candour of youth —or the grey-haired man, with all a youth's passion and heedlessness. He was gay, proud, fond of pleasure—passing lightly from the ball-room to the duel-ground—spurring his horse and flourishing his sabre to admiration. But, if you ask, what have been his works, his deeds, his labours—close the book at once; he has none to show you. His castles are in ruins, his estates mortgaged, his peasants delivered up to the extortion of Jews and money-lenders. He would saddle his last horse, don his last embroidered suit, and, swinging the sword of his grandfather, in the face of ruin, with the morrow pass away into repentance and beggary: not much milder can we make our judgment of him. Why have such nations as Poland and Ireland been created, who are always dependent, infants, in a state of pupilage? Can any one determine? The Irishman is amiable, truthful, with something child-like in his dependance. The Pole, compared with him, is more cunning, more adroit, more polished, more licentious, and by so much the more hard to help than the other: he belongs to that class among individuals that families are obliged to renounce as hopeless casaways and profligates. The Pole has lost his wealth and power not merely through frivolity and carelessness, which, even in nations, may sometimes find a sort of excuse: no, he has squandered them away amidst the crimes of pride, injustice, falsehood, disobedience, and treason. He has always had before his eyes examples of civil policy, legal government, and national industry, in Sweden, Prussia, and Germany. He has not been—like the Irishman—placed beyond the influence of European arts and knowledge; yet his insolence and vanity would never learn anything; he would never acquire the strength necessary to his national existence—not even through war, which for centuries he waged against Sweden, Russia, and Turk: Tyrannical nobles above, wretched serfs below, Jews and usurers between them—that was all; no third condition; no other middle class but them; no citizens in the towns; no industry, no frugality; no preserving toil; borrowed splendour covering the beggar's rags; licentiousness, cruelty, extravagance, and dissipation—such was Poland for three centuries. And with these, could a land and kingdom exist? Poland could not but fall! We can enjoy the light, lively, boasting spirit of the Frenchman; we appreciate the silent, stiff, Englishman, the proud Spaniard, the quiet German: why should we not admire, also, the light and cheerful disposition of the Slavonian? Yes, we do so; but delight and pleasure end where misfortune and misery begin, especially when they seem deserved; and such appears to us to be the misery of Poland. Even in the sixteenth century, when the Swedes, with twenty thousand men, drove eighty thousand Poles before them; again, in the eighteenth century, when Field Marshal Munnich, with thirty thousand troops, forced a King upon it; again, under Catherine the Second, when Russian armies, ten thousand and twenty thousand strong, entered the country of twelve thousand square miles, were able to play the lord and master, the Poles were warmed with blood and scourges, 'Reflect for once, and at last, and begin, at least, to create something like order and Government among you.' They were equally warned by the prophetic and mourning voices of patriots among them; but they were voices crying in the wilderness. The people were too light; and because they were too much in the hour of trial, they have been scattered like chaff before the wind."

VAN DIEMEN'S LAND.—FERN-TREE VALLEY, MOUNT WELLINGTON.—(SEE PAGE 20.)

The reader may be inclined to think that "If faith, these be very bitter words." But they give a clue to a side of the question never touched on at public meetings, in platform speeches, and strong resolutions. The great want the friends of Poland have always felt was something they could rally round—some man, some name, some system. But they have not been found. The greatest efforts of the Poles themselves have produced nothing but insurrections and plots—not the things that build nations. They were eight millions strong, and had many fine military qualities; yet they could not preserve their existence. It was because they wasted their strength in civil wars and the insane feuds of their nobles. Once they turned back the invading Mahometan from the frontiers of Europe; but the same courage was not always so well employed; in their later conflicts, they lost by fighting what they gained in the field, and even the heroic achievements of the last revolution were rendered fruitless by scandalous quarrels and intrigues. It would hardly be too much to say that their most formidable enemies have been found among themselves. It is this that explains the remarkable peculiarity in the fate of Poland, that, with the sympathy of all Europe, the efforts of Cabinets, the dislike of the Western Powers of the encroachments of Russia—with all this, nothing has ever been done, but she has been blotted out from the list of nations. It may seem harsh to tell the unfortunate how and where they have been to blame; but when there is such constant fatality, it seems impossible but that there must be many faults.

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

DEATH OF A REAR-ADMIRAL.—Rear-Admiral of the Blue Francis Beauman died at Genoa last month. He was a Lieutenant of 1796, Commander 1805, Captain 1807, and obtained his flag promotion in November, 1841.

DEATH OF LIEUT.-COLONEL BROOKE FERMAR.—This veteran Peninsular officer expired, late in the past week, at his residence near Boulogne.

NAVAL COURT-MARTIAL.—A Court-Martial was held on Tuesday, on board the St. Vincent, 120, flag-ship at Portsmouth, Rear-Admiral Superintendent Lyde Parker, C.B., President; Captain Pasco, of the Victory, Captain Chads, C.B., of the Excellent, Captain Milne, of the St. Vincent, and Captain Giffard, of the Pembroke, members; Mr. D. Greetham, Deputy Judge Advocate; to try Mr. Thomas King Beatty (1840), assistant surgeon of the Daphne, 20, Captain Onslow, just arrived from the Pacific, on a charge of insubordination, &c., preferred by Captain Onslow. The charges were deemed to have been fully proved, and the Court sentenced Mr. Beatty to be cashiered.

LAUNCH OF THE STEAM FRIGATE "DAUNTLESS."—A new steam frigate, to be fitted with a screw propeller, was launched from Messrs. Pitcher's premises at Northfleet, Thames, on Tuesday. The ceremony of naming the Dauntless was performed by the Right Hon. Lady Emily De Burgh, a daughter of the Earl of Charlemont, her Ladyship having handed to the bow of the vessel by Admiral Sir Charles Ogle. So soon as this was done, and the bottle passed to a sailor, who drunk success to the Dauntless, the signal was given, and the workmen having knocked away the shores, the Dauntless floated from off the slip, amidst the cheers of several hundred spectators, and the workpeople of the yard. The Dauntless was immediately hauled into the basin, preparatory to being docked, and got ready to be navigated to Glasgow, to have her engines and machinery put on board. This frigate is intended to carry twenty-eight guns, in twenty-four 32-pounders on the main deck, and four 6-pounders on the upper deck. She is to have Napier engines of 540 horse power; her tonnage is 1453, and the length 216 feet, and breadth 39 feet

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF OF BOMBAY.—Accounts have been received from Bombay, which mention the serious illness of Lieutenant General Sir Thomas M'Mahon, Commander-in-Chief at that Presidency. It is understood that, in the event of the gallant officer resigning the appointment, his successor in office will be Sir Charles Napier.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE

PARISIANA.

(From our own Correspondent.)

PARIS, Wednesday.

In the way of entertainment we have great advantages [illegible]. You have only theatrical entertainment on the stage and by festive character- we have performances everywhere—off the boards, and by characters of real life; and by these theatricals our year begins, and these theatricals are at Court.

We cannot call them Christmas.

Full justly was January, and the present one particularly, devoted to the custody of Janus the double-faced, ever-changing God, whose temple was shut, and whose rites were abolished, during peace. For, at the New Year festivities at the Tuileries, never was the double-faced art—that for which language is said to have been given to political men—more thoroughly practised, and the aspect of the times, as regards foreign relations, was never more favorable since 1830.

Of all the mummers of the day—a few solemn, the remainder more or less jocose and satirical none had a more difficult part to play, were it only to keep his countenance, than Lord Normanby. All eyes were fixed upon him. On this part of his Sovereign, he had to look grave, if not forbidding; and, in his own character, he had to remain himself—that is to say, affable and courteous, and in all things gentlemanly. He did his spiriting à merveille; he looked at the King dignified and severe at the same time as respectful; whilst every now and then he turned to the youthful and fairer members of the Royal Family, all smiles, with compliments such as utter the most gallant cavaliers. Lady Normanby, as I foretold, is returned; but nothing is changed. The Court is as forbidding as ever; Guizot and his Lordship are at daggers drawn, and three times have I met the former's rival, M. Molé, and the English Embassy. Nor does there appear any prospect of immediately restoring amity. In the heart of Louis Philippe—if he possess such an organ—in his amour propre, at all events, still festers and rankles the last sentence of a letter sent by an august hand to England, in answer to that in which the Royal Statesman attempted to colour and garnish over the Montpensier marriage. The words were these—"You are the first King of France who has not kept his word of honour, and has betrayed his guest!" Oh: that unfortunate conversation at Eu! it will be the extinguisher of Royal visits

Our universally artistical population is at this moment absorbed by the fates of the different theatres, most of whose destinies are either dawning in sunshine, or sinking in clouds below the horizon of public opinion. As to the former, the new theatre—the new lyrical stage of the well-known composer Adolphe Adam—has found at last "a habitation and a name" in the locale of the Cirque, the Astley's of Paris. The new abode of conjurors, ventriloquists, rope dancers, and other professors honourable of the marvellous, has opened on the Boulevard Bonne Nouvelle, and there has been enthusiastic applause for everything within, from the bright frescoes on the walls to the neck-or-nothing feats on the stage. As to the new theatre of literary reprieval, A. Dumas, it has excited much amusement here; whilst the lessee is coolly, or rather hotly taking sketches of society in Algiers, on the very eve of the approaching campaign. The privilege of erecting the theatre having been obtained through the Duke de Montpensier, it was to have been called the Theatre Montpensier. But when, on the termination of the exterior of the edifice, the Ministers were appealed to for authority to inscribe its title on the façade, the Minister of the Interior, the Intendant of the Civil List, and the Steward of the Royal Revenues, inexorably protested against the contemplated title. "The theatre may fail," urged that most unromantic personage, "whilst very romantic A. Dumas may be on the point of bankruptcy; and then the Royal Duke, his name and influence being involved, cannot do less than advance five or ten thousand pounds to his protégé; and when that is gone, he must advance more. I profess against this folly." And so it appeareth is, that parsimonious was withdrawn, and that this theatre, destined principally to perform dramas drawn from the novels of Dumas, so full of anomalies, anachronisms, and defying all classic souvenirs of the past, has been definitively christened Théâtre Historique!

Whilst such is the incipient career of the new theatres, the two oldest and most important in France are on the eve of complete revolution. A committee of judges is now sitting, as you know, to decide the fate of the Théâtre Français; they have put the ruling spirit of the establishment to question and to torture, to extract the secrets of the mysteries, and it is supposed that, mainly decided thus, instead of the artists governing themselves, instead of the real literary republic, so singularly established by the most absolute of Sovereigns, Louis XIV., a monarch is to be re-cast to the form of its direct opposite.

Still more portentous is the state of things at the Académie de Musique. M. Pillet, a clever partisan and writer for the press, as a reward for his devotion to a past Ministry, was raised to the direction of this splendid, but ruinous, establishment. Under his régime he has fixed his residence at six years. Openly, madly in love with a prima donna, to her he yielded all power and all profit; she reigned supreme, and excluded all talent that might eclipse or even approach her own unquestioned gifts.

Each Journal in turn has fired its broadside at the establishment, and demanded that the Government supplies should be stopped. These are enormous. The Chambers vote to the Académie 800,000 francs per annum; it has found for nothing; and, in fact, what, in England, would be equal to a contribution of £45,000 per annum. One feels how enormous this is when one knows that the subscription before the season at one of the first theatres in Europe, amounts to more than £15,000; and at your enormous Opera in London, where you accumulated such a superfluous number of first-rate dancers as well as musicians, the subscription before the beginning of the season, I hear, has never, in the best of years, exceeded £34,000. All the cry arises from Government rewarding its newspaper adherents with offices, for which they are the most incompetent: and of this system, we had the day before yesterday another outrageous instance. M. Mazeppa, late political writer in the Courrier Français, M. Bridoisan, late editor of the defunct Government evening journal the Messager, and several other of the political quill driving fraternity, have been named by ordonnance such a Government commissary to superintend a particular railroad: no doubt the lives of hundreds being destined to be sacrificed to their ignorance of engineering generally, and of railroads in particular. Such follies committed openly, and without unmeaning version, is a illustration of the "system with method" possessing France.

FRANCE

There is no news this week in the French papers of striking importance, and, in the meantime, they are chiefly occupied upon conjectural topics

The Bey of Tunis embarked at Toulon to return to his dominions, on the 25th ult., on board the Labrador steamer, his suite accompanying him in the Dante steamer

The King and Queen of the Belgians arrived on Monday evening in Paris from Brussels, by a special train of the Northern Railway.

The usual felicitations were made to Louis Philippe on New Year's Day. As no direct allusion was made to the marriage of the Duke de Montpensier, the Marquis of Normanby was present on the occasion among the diplomatic body. The King, in answer to their address, read by the Pope's Nuncio, said—"I am deeply touched by the sentiments you have just expressed for France, for my family, and for myself, in the names of the diplomatic body, and of the Sovereigns whom you represent at my Court. I feel, with you, the confidence that Heaven will continue to bless our common efforts to secure the maintenance of general peace, that fruitful source of all the prosperity of states and of the happiness of their people. It is as much in my own name as in that of the Queen and of all my family, that I thank you for the interest that you feel in the renewal of the family joys which Providence has reserved for us, and which are to us so precious it, one of the sweetest consolations that could be accorded to us. You know how agreeable it is to me to receive, through your organ, the expression of the wishes of the diplomatic body."

In the course of his reply to the address from the Chamber of Peers, the King said "May our example convince States and Kings that Monarchy and Liberty may live and prosper together, by that they cannot do so, except at the price of mutual confidence. If the national will has raised me to the Throne, it is because the tenor of all my life presaged that all my efforts would tend to insure the triumph of this principle, and that there was nothing I sought to be apprehended from me. You have so well seconded me in the task, that in this seventeenth anniversary we can congratulate ourselves on having happily accomplished it. I hope that, with your loyal assistance, as long as it shall please God to preserve me in this world, we shall continue to strengthen our institutions and the prosperity of France. I thank you for your felicitations on the marriage of my son; I see with pleasure how much this event, so happy for my family and myself, has been appreciated by the Chamber of Peers."

This reply was followed by cries of "Vive le Roi!"

His Majesty, in acknowledging the address from the Chamber of Deputies, said "I am much touched with the sentiments that you express for my family and for me. You know well how devoted all who belong to me are to France; but the expression of these sentiments is at once so dear to my heart, and so great and a great consolation for what we have suffered. The way in which you have spoken of the marriage of my youngest son has gone straight to my heart. It is delightful to me to see that this alliance, which can but consolidate the good relations which have so long and so happily subsisted between Spain and France, is generally appreciated in the two countries in the way in which you have just expressed it, and that there is no doubt but that it will contribute to their reciprocal independence and for the constitutional liberty which both enjoy."

It was remarked that the various bodies were a shorter time in the Royal presence than usual, and that the delays between their introductions were unusually long This, it was surmised, was to enable his Majesty to take as much rest as possible. The diplomatic corps had to wait like the rest.

The young Duchess de Montpensier, who is the first of the ladies of the Royal family dressed in white, pink being the prevailing colour for the rest. The young Duchess presented quite a blaze of diamonds, and looked exceedingly pretty.

Some interest has been excited at Paris in the recent purchase of M. Rothschild the elder, known Paris banker, to London, in order to purchase bullion from the Bank of England for the Bank of France. The Presse has an article upon the subject. After stating that the delays between the two Banks were authorised the purchase of bullion to the amount of 20,000,000f., La Presse adds:—

"That which is most remarkable in this important operation is that the Bank of France has not had recourse to the Bank of England, except to purchase from it purely and simply the precious metals at the price fixed for any ordinary purchaser, a price which secures to the seller a very considerable profit. In order to pay for this specie, the Bank of France has procured the necessary funds by contracting a loan with certain English capitalists, to be repaid at a distant period, which may be extended, if necessary. We most congratulate the Bank of France on having avoided incurring any obligation towards the Bank of England. No doubt the Directors of the Bank of France would have found the same accommodation from the Bank of England which they afforded the latter in the year 1839; but it was better, for many reasons, that they should not claim that reciprocity, and that the respective situation of the two Banks should remain such as it was created by the precedent to which we have referred."

The Débats of Monday devotes three spaces usually allotted to its political leaders to a review of a work by M. Ardant, a writer on military subjects, and a member of the Chamber of Deputies, whose object appears to be to protest against the contemplated outlays of money upon coast fortifications. He agrees with English writers who argue that, while France and England have vast means at their disposal for mutual annoyance, invasion from either side could hardly be undertaken with any likelihood of success. M. Ardant particularly insists on the various disconformities that Steam has introduced between the old system of defence and the present, and alludes to the additional security possessed by France against invasion from England, and by England against invasion from France, in the railroads, which must greatly enable either Government to send troops off rapidly to the coast. The Débats does not expressly declare itself in favour of the conclusions of the writer, though, in general, it appears to agree with them.

SPAIN.—OPENING OF THE CORTES.

The Session of the Spanish Cortes was opened on the 31st ult., by Queen Isabella, with the following speech

"Messieurs the Senators and Messieurs the Deputies,

"With [illegible] the most lively satisfaction than to find myself once more amongst you, and to yield myself again to the hope that your loyalty and your utmost efforts will be devoted to cement the union of the Throne with the institutions of the Monarchy, and to continue the work of the prosperity and happiness of our beloved country.

"I have contracted a marriage with my august cousin, Don Francisco d'Assis Maria de Bourbon, in accordance with my announcement to the late Cortes. I hope that Heaven will bless this union, and that you also, gentlemen, will join your prayers to those which I offer up to the Almighty. The marriage of my beloved sister has likewise taken place—an announcement of which was also made to the late Cortes.

"In our relations with Foreign Powers there is no change worthy of remark.

"The internal tranquility of the country that first blessing of nations—has been constant, in spite of all the attempts made to disturb it. I am confident that legitimate opinions, harmonising in the vast and free field of our Constitution, will discountenance factions whose objects are inimical to the public peace, and will contribute to consolidate the Constitutional Government, and to efface the traces of the troubles which have for so long a period of time agitated the country.

"In order to attain this important end, I have granted to the persons implicated in the late troubles an amnesty as ample as the good of the State permitted; and, for the good of the State, I shall consider how much further I may, at a future time, be enabled still further to extend a similar amnesty to those who, with grave reasons, have hitherto been made to benefit by it. I am confident that legitimate opinions, harmonising in the vast and free field of our Constitution, will discountenance factions whose objects are inimical to the public peace, and will contribute to consolidate the Constitutional Government, and to efface the traces of the troubles which have for so long a period of time agitated the country.

"In order to attain this important end, I have granted to the persons implicated in the late troubles an amnesty as ample as the good of the State permitted; and, for the good of the State, I shall consider how much further I may, at a future time, be enabled still further to extend a similar amnesty to those who, with grave reasons, have hitherto been made to benefit by it.

"It is a great satisfaction for me to be able to announce to you that, thanks to peace and to the reforms to which the preceding Cortes gave their support, the public prosperity has made remarkable progress. My efforts will be especially directed to the extension and increase of those advantages; and I reckon, in this respect, upon your co-operation and assistance

"The different branches of the Administration of the State have undergone great ameliorations; these are owing to the regularity which has been introduced in the payment of the public servants of the State, the preservation of public tranquility, and the order and harmony which the laws recently established have introduced into the Government machinery.

"In the organisation of the army some reforms imperiously demanded by the public good have been accomplished, and improvements have been produced a considerable saving in the expenses, and it is a matter of great satisfaction to me that their introduction has in no respect injured the rights nor prejudiced the interests of the classes who compose this interesting portion of the people. As regards their discipline and soldier-like appearance, the state of both the land and sea forces is all that can be wished, and the fidelity of the men forms a sure guarantee that the sacred objects committed to their care are sheltered from every danger:

"My solicitude and that of my Government has not been less directed to the state of the marine. For the first time during many years the labour connected with all the branches of the service has been carried on under cover. Works of reparation on a large scale have been effected within the arsenals, and an impulse has been given to naval architecture, in public, as well as private, dockyards, which will enable the vessels of the fleet effectually to perform their public duties, as well as protect the mercantile marine, the rapid increase of which is a fact to the most flattering hopes

"The revenue of the State is advancing progressively, and there is room to hope that it will be still more considerable when the projected alterations in the law shall have been carried into execution. My Government shall inform you on the subject in the proper manner.

"Some ameliorations have also been introduced into the import system; and the pernicious defects that existed in it will disappear as soon as all the data that are inquired after with the utmost solicitude, to arrive at a just and equal division of contributions, shall have been contained.

"My Government shall present to you the Budgets of receipts and expenditure for the year 1847. You will find in them that amelioration and economy which it has been possible to introduce. I regret that the past troubles, and even those of Navarre, which most heavily produce good results, do not permit me to commence from the present moment all the reductions that I desire

"It has been also impossible for my Government to arrive at the regulation of the public debt, in virtue of the authorisation which I had given them. Nevertheless, as I ardently desire to satisfy the just demands of the State creditors, both Spaniards and foreigners, the measures that shall appear best adapted to arrive at this end shall be submitted to your wise deliberations.

"Conformably with the law of the 9th June, 1835, a loan of 200 millions reals (two millions sterling) has been contracted for the purpose of completing the new roads and works that are commenced; as several lines, which are to form the vast plan of international communications which Government has proposed to realise.

"Besides the Budget, other measures required for the public good shall be proposed to you

"A fixed and suitable dotation of the public worship and the clergy is an urgent duty of religion; for the good of religion is for that of the State. My Government shall shortly present to you a law on this important subject

"Deputies, Senators, and Deputies, with the aid of Providence, and while the efforts of all are directed with courage and firmness in the pursuit of the same aim, that the ameliorations introduced in a political, economical, and administrative point of view will be consolidated, that such ones will be introduced, and that, after so much agitation, peace, order, and prosperity will be restored to this nation blessings to which her great qualities and her many virtues give her so great a claim."

There is no news of importance in the Madrid papers, but on the 30th ult a report was in circulation at the Bourse that Cabrera had entered Catalonia at the head of 1000 men.

THE WEST INDIES AND MEXICO.

The Clyde arrived at Southampton on Thursday, with the West Indian and Mexican mails.

The news from Mexico is rather adverse to the cause of the United States. General Taylor had attempted to negotiate with Santa Anna for peace, who had refused to treat with him. Not a single American soldier remained in arms on Mexican ground, or an American man-of-war blockaded a Mexican port. Santa Anna had published a letter in the Mexican newspapers, entirely approving the late proceedings of the Congress, and declaring his abandon of the ships was off Tampico, awaiting the arrival of the troops from America, to make a land attack on Alvarado. Santa Anna had collected 25,000 troops at San Luis Potosi, to which place the Congress of Mexico had removed. They occupied Saltillo with 5000 men; and a report was current in Vera Cruz that Santa Anna had advanced against him with 9,000 men, and compelled him to fall back on Monterey. The American prisoners being in a state of insubordination, the Mexican Government were making strenuous efforts to strike a decided blow.

DEATH OF JOSEPH JOHN GURNEY. This gentleman, who has been so long before the world as the character of a philanthropist, died at Norwich, on Monday last.

A RARE LUNAR OCCURRENCE.—In the present year, there will be thirteen full moons and in January, not one in February, two in March, and one in each succeeding month. A phenomenon of this kind will not occur again for many years.

RISE IN THE PRICE OF BEER.—In consequence of the increasing price of barley, the principal brewers have had a meeting, at which it was resolved to raise the price of beer 5s. per barrel, or 1½. per butt. The price of beer has, therefore, been raised in many parts of the metropolis 1d. per pot, and a rise to the same extent on porter and ale will become general. We believe that there has not been any advance in the brewers' charges for malt liquors for the last seventeen years.

A WOMAN SUSPECTED OF POISONING HER HUSBAND.—On Tuesday at the New Bailey County Court-house, Salford, Susannah, the widow of the late Samuel Binns, formerly of Barton-upon-Irwell, was charged with having poisoned her husband, by putting arsenic into a breakfast pie which she had made for his supper. It was stated that Johnson died about three or four weeks ago, in circumstances of suspicion, and that an inquest was held on the body. On the evening before his death he partook heartily of a pie, which the prisoner, his wife, had prepared for his supper, and soon afterwards he was seized with vomiting and other symptoms of poisoning, which resulted in his death. The surgeon, who made a post-mortem examination, stated to the Jury that he found no marks upon the stomach, but that the coatings of the stomach had the appearance of having been strongly affected with arsenic; and he further stated that, having heard that a surgeon who had attended deceased in a previous illness had administered antimony, he could not say that death was produced by poison, because the effects of antimony would resemble those of arsenic. This being the only evidence against the widow on that occasion, she was set at liberty, and the Jury found what is called "an open verdict," leaving the Coroner the option of calling them together again, should anything further transpire. The additional evidence produced in court, on Tuesday, was that the prisoner, a fortnight or so before the death of her husband, had bought some arsenic at the shop of a druggist in the neighbourhood; and this having come to the knowledge of the police, they obtained a warrant against her, and apprehended her. The inquest was adjourned.

EPITOME OF NEWS.—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

The Nuremberg Correspondent of the 28th ult. quotes a letter from the banks of the Maine, stating that King Leopold has accepted the mission of mediating between Queen Victoria and King Louis Philippe.

The Shrewsbury Journal states that the rent roll of the late Sir Charles Morgan, Bart., was little short of £90,000 per annum.

Letters from Constantinople of the 17th ult., mention that on the 11th a salute of 21 guns announced the birth of another son of the Sultan, who was named Mohamed Zis-ed-Din. Colonel Robert Taylor, the English agent at Bagdad, had arrived at Constantinople, on his way to England.

Last Saturday the rudder of the Edgar, sunk at Spithead in the year 1711, just 71 years before the loss of the Royal George, and recently recovered by the operations of Major-General C. W. Pasley, C.B., was presented by that gentleman to the United Service Museum.

Letters from Vienna, dated the 24th ult., confirm the reports relative to the health of the Archduke Palatine of Hungary, who is again seriously ill. Prince Metternich, whose recent indisposition was occasioned by a slight attack of apoplexy, is now convalescent.

Accounts from Athens of the 19th ult., represent that considerable excitement had just been created there by the publication, in the Athenian newspaper, the Epoi, of a document forwarded to the editor from Munich, in which it is asserted that the Court of Vienna has proposed to the three protecting Powers of Greece—England, France, and Russia—to replace the present constitution by a charter similar to that of Bavaria, and to occupy Greece for ten years with an auxiliary corps of 8000 Austrian troops.

The transmission of messages by the New York and Philadelphia electric telegraph was recently suspended for several hours by the following curious incident:—"A large owl was found suspended from the wires, with his talons entangled among them, the copper wire having been twisted round the iron cords. The owl was dead when discovered, and it is supposed that he had lighted upon the iron wire, and while in that position the other was blown against him, and a connection being thus formed, he received a shock of the electric fluid, which deprived him of life."

A county conference, chiefly of Congregational Dissenters, has been held in Lewes, at which Thomas Turner, Esq., M.P., Henry Fuller, Esq., M.P., and Joseph Sturge, Esq., of Birmingham, attended, and addressed the meeting, and it was resolved by the conference to form a county association, and to raise a fund of £10,000 for promoting the complete voluntary system.

It appears, by a paragraph in the Nuremberg Courier, that there is a project of marriage between Count Trauttmansdorff and the youngest daughter of Archduke Charles of Austria, the Princess Caroline.

The number of workshops, warehouses, and private dwellings, that were entirely destroyed by fire in the past year, was 1,264. The number of similar buildings that were slightly damaged by fire, water &c., was 976, making a total of 834.

A letter from Berlin of the 25th ult. states, that by Royal ordonnance the long formula hitherto in use in courts of law, when an oath is taken, is to be replaced by the words, "I swear before God to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth." The witness is to hold up the thumb and the two first fingers perpendicularly, in sign of the Holy Trinity, the other fingers bent down.

The Pope has abolished the custom of kissing the cross on his slipper, commonly called "kissing the Pope's toe," and, instead, extends his hand to be kissed.

In consequence of the excitement in the Liverpool market for the raw material, a letter states, the price of paper has been advanced one half-penny per pound.

The Emperor of Russia had, it seems, a much narrower escape from [illegible] than was at first reported, [illegible] Upon the occasion, when the [illegible] was passing, it was observed that upon the [illegible] water, which was up to his breast, with the Emperor on his shoulders, to the shore.

Amongst the novelties in the shape of joint-stock companies to which the present age of speculation has given birth, is one for an insurance against rain, the company, for a premium of 30s., undertaking to guarantee all loss from peculation to the amount of £50.

The Journal du Cher states that on the 27th ult. some disturbances having taken place at Marenil, in consequence of the dearth of provisions, the Deputy Mayor, M. Pasquier, repaired to the theatre of the riot, and had scarcely opened his lips to harangue the multitude, when he dropped dead.

The Earl of Elgin, the new Governor-General of Canada, has embarked at Liverpool for his destination.

On Tuesday a hawker stood with his barrow close to Temple-bar, selling green peas, just arrived from Holland, at 6d. per quart, shelled. They were with a ready sale.

The sale of pictures at the Liverpool Academy's Exhibition, has this year amounted to £1700

A Secret Consistory was held at the Quirinal Palace at Rome on the 6th inst. The Pope announced that he had raised to the Cardinalate Mon. G Balaffi, Archbishop and Bishop of Imola, and Mon. F. Maccai, Governor of Rome. His Holiness afterwards preconfirmed ten Bishops. The following appointments have recently been made, viz :—Cardinal Amat, to be Legate at Bologna, in the room of Cardinal Vanicelli Casoni; Cardinal Ferreti to be Legate at Urbino and Pesaro; and Monsignor Grassellini to be Governor of Rome, instead of Cardinal Marini.

The Scotsman announces that Lord John Russell will bring in a bill for the [illegible] in the present session.

Some valuable additions to works of antiquity have been made to the [illegible] and crew of her Majesty's surveying vessel Beagle, who, when prevented by the bad weather from prosecuting their surveying labours afloat in the waters of Scalbo and Scapulo in the Grecian Archipelago, amused themselves in digging and excavating about the ruins of the ancient Halicarnassus. From one of the tombs a coffin was extracted containing two eggs, which might easily be confounded with "newly laid" ones, though nearly 2000 years have elapsed.

According to the estimate made by the officers of the Royal H[illegible] the number of [illegible] in the course of the present year in Kensington Gardens, from the commencement of the frost up to the 4th instant, was 240,000, and yet only one fatal accident has occurred.

A Mr. Eleazar Judd, aged 106, died on Monday night week, at Mrs [illegible] Lincoln. Previously to his last illness he had been in the habit of walking [illegible] miles a day.

The Government have determined at once to supersede the Admiralty mail packets employed between Malta and Marseilles, and Dr. Pearce's steamers [illegible] Company are to carry the Indian Mails and Marseilles from Malta.

The Lancaster and Carlisle Railway, which was recently opened [illegible] the route to the far-famed Gretna, and if the contemplated [illegible] be carried into effect, the journey between Liverpool and Edinburgh will be performed in [illegible] hours.

The Constantinople letters of the 19th ult., state that a short time [illegible] Albanian mercenaries [illegible] the district of Banaluka, in Bosnia, by the chief Aganey and at the instigation of Austria. The instrument used on this occasion was the Albanian chief Ibrahim Pasha. About the middle of September he attacked and laid a heavy fine on the city Velkera, and on [illegible] refusing to pay the [illegible] demands, he [illegible] from [illegible] and [illegible] the Pasha [illegible] Known [illegible] Pasha [illegible] Bosnia [illegible] Pasha [illegible] Bosnia [illegible] Pasha [illegible] Bosnia

VAN DIEMEN'S LAND.—HOBART TOWN.—FROM KANGAROO BAY.

807,924 bushels of wheat, 174,405 of barley, 221,105 of oats, 13,319 tons of potatoes, and 29,880 tons of turnips. The live stock consisted of 15,350 horses, 85,302 horned cattle, and 1,145,089 sheep. There were 493 convictions in the year before the Supreme Court and courts of quarter session, of which 172 were crimes against the person, and 321 for crimes against property.

By another return, we find the military charges of New South Wales and Van Diemen's Land to be, in the year 1843-44, £189,005 10s. The net civil expenditure for New South Wales and Van Diemen's Land in the year was £220,027 18s. 8d. Three appendices appear in the document, giving a detail of the military, civil, and naval charges, in one of which some useful information is given respecting the convict establishments in New South Wales and Van Diemen's Land supported by Great Britain. It appears that in the one year 1843-44) the charges for the transport of convicts and of stores for convict departments amounted to £59,688 1s. 1d.; of which £3,376 17s. was on account of New South Wales, and £56,309 4s. 1d. for Van Diemen's Land. The provisions and stores for the convicts in the year on their passage to the settlements amounted to £29,423 16s. 10d.; and for clothing, stores, and tools for the convict departments, and miscellaneous expenses, £59,915 6s. 10d. The establishments for the superintendence of convicts, police, and gaols in the penal settlements, cost Great Britain in the year, £69,215 6s. 10d.

These documents show the necessity of some immediate revision of the convict system; as well by its cost as by its inefficiency.

Again, we learn from late journals, the insubordination of the military, and their frequent outbreaks, had become so alarming, that many of the inhabitants contemplated the carrying of pocket arms; and it was feared that some future excesses on the part of the soldiery, with whom remonstrance had proved ineffectual, would terminate in bloodshed. Among the proposed measures of retrenchment in the Government expences, any reduction in the large and costly police establishment is deprecated by the Van Diemen's Land Colonists in general.

We have annexed two views of this fine Colony, from Tasmania Illustrated, a beautiful work, by Mr. I. S. Prout, published in Hobart Town, not long since.

The entire surface of the island is estimated, roughly, at 24,000 square miles, or about 4000 square miles less than the extent of Ireland. The country is, however, but yet imperfectly explored, having been in the possession of the British little more than 40 years.

One of the Illustrations shows the capital, Hobart Town, or Hobarton, as it is now called. It is built upon an undulating surface, receding from a cove on the left of the river Derwent. Seen from the water, it seems to run up before you on a variety of ascents, and to spread itself upon the hills in the distance. Mount Wellington, which, during nine months of the year, is capped with snow, and which rises 4000 feet above the sea-level, stands at the back, in darkness and sublimity, and overlooks the surrounding scenery. The town is well laid out, and some of the houses are large and handsome: a commercial establishment has lately been completed here, at a cost of £4000.

The companion View presents a specimen of the luxuriant vegetation of the settlement—Fern-tree Valley, Mount Wellington. The forests consist principally of different kinds of Eucalyptus, pines, and tree-like ferns. They are all evergreens, and have a sombre olive hue, without a single lively tint, except that of the native cherry, to break the monotony.

PORTUGAL.—VICTORY BY THE QUEEN'S FORCES AT TORRES VEDRAS.

The Bijou steamer has brought us Lisbon letters and papers to the 28th ult., by which we learn that the insurgents, under Bomfim, had sustained a serious defeat at Torres Vedras, on the 23rd.

The Duero contains an official account of this battle, addressed by the Duke of Saldanha to the Queen. This document is written in rather a bombastic strain, but we gather from it that, on the 20th, Saldanha obtained a trustworthy account of Bomfim's plans, and on the 22nd, at half-past ten in the morning, he determined to attack him. The Marshal, before recounting his achievements, gives a long description of the lines of Torres Vedras. At a quarter past eleven, on the 23rd December, the firing commenced, and the Queen's troops, having done their duty in "a glorious manner," were victorious. Colonel Fernando de Fonseca particularly distinguished himself, and though the Queen's troops were harassed by the horrible state of the roads, put the enemy, says Saldanha, were beaten on all sides. The action was so decisive in its results, that of the entire force of the insurgents not a man escaped, all who were not killed or wounded having been made prisoners. The loss on the Queen's side is stated to have been 386 (including 38 officers) in killed, wounded, and missing; but all private accounts agree in stating it at a much greater number, and some go even so far as to say that it did not fall much short of 800 men. The casualties on the insurgents' side were much fewer, as, during a great part of the action, they fought from behind walls and barricades, and it was only towards the close, when the Queen's troops had forced their way into the town, that the bayonet came into play. Even then the issue was very doubtful, as the insurgents retired into the castle, where, if the conflict had been renewed next day, they would have been able to fight at still greater advantage; but three companies of the 2nd Infantry, who had charge of Fort Forca, went over in a body to the enemy, and that post—the key of the position—lost, the castle became untenable; and surrendering, or being slaughtered to a man, was the only choice left. The insurgents, in consideration of the gallant resistance they made, were allowed to march out with some of the honours of war—the officers with their swords, and the men with their knapsacks.

A Lisbon letter gives the following account of the affair:—

"Bomfim was, on the 22nd of December, very strongly posted at Torres Vedras, having possession of the lines, the redoubt of San Vincent, two bridges covering his flanks, the old tower, and the town. Saldanha, having divided his troops into four brigades, made the onset at about ten o'clock A.M., on the 22nd. The first he sent to attack the redoubt of San Vincent, which they did in good style; whilst this was going on two other of his divisions attacked the bridges simultaneously, and, after a hard struggle, the redoubt was surrendered (some assert, treacherously), and the 300 men who defended it gave up their arms.

TORRES VEDRAS.—FROM THE NORTH.

The bridges were taken one after the other, and then the 4th division, by Saldanha's orders, entered the town on the south-west side, and thus Bomfim and about 1500 of his men were completely hemmed in the old Moorish tower, where he had posted some of his troops. On the following day (the 23d), Saldanha having got his cannon into position, sent a summons to surrender, ere he opened fire, on which the whole of the troops (1500 in number), then remaining under Bomfim's command, together with the chiefs, have laid down their arms. The prisoners taken were Bomfim, Mouzinho (who was badly wounded, and is since dead), Villa Real, the two Valdez (Bomfim's sons), and many others. Mouzinho, who was formerly Minister of Marine, has left a large and helpless family. The regular troops being disarmed, were also retained as prisoners. The armed peasants and guerillas either took themselves off or were allowed to disperse, and numbers of them have since joined Das Antas.

Bomfim and his principal officers were brought into Lisbon on the 26th of December, and then immediately lodged on board the Duana Portuguese frigate which was lying in the river."

It is certain that seven Queen's officers have been killed, and 31 wounded; and one of these, Captain Pedro de Sousa de Canavarro, of the cacadores, has lost both his eyes, and Lieutenant-Colonel Mathew Padrao, of the infantry, a leg. Saldanha states in his despatch that 900 infantry, 400 cacadores, and 200 horses left the fort, and that the Duke vowed to her most faithful Majesty not to lay down his arms till the rebels were subdued.

It was thought at Lisbon that if the Septembrists and Miguelites coalesce, the Queen's Throne incurs a real danger.

That there is a probability of their coalescing is already apparent, for the two insurgent parties were already negociating at Oporto—the Oporto Junta having named Mendez Leite to conduct the conference, and the Miguelites Colonel Gaudio.

Das Antas was at Tagarro on the day after Saldanha's victory at Torres Vedras, and remained there during the night following. Saldanha ordered part of his forces to Cercal, and another portion to Cadaval, his evident object being to cut off Das Antas's retreat to Oporto. On the appearance of his advanced guard however, Das Antas's picquets precipitately retired, and, with the main body of Das Antas's force (which, including irregulars, is now under 9000), fell back upon Leiria, about 70 miles from Lisbon, and 35 from Coimbra.

Saldanha marched from Torres Vedras on the 26th ult., northward, with his army recruited and newly organised after the action, including the embodiment of the 700 men who came over from Das Antas at the close of the battle. His design is to pursue Das Antas closely, but the latter will probably attempt to raise the siege of Oporto.

The Iberia has since arrived with accounts from Oporto to the 1st inst. A battle had been fought between Baron Casal and the Miguelites, under M'Donnel in the immediate neighbourhood of Oporto. They were not completed when the fire commenced on Cruz da Pedra, the key of the position, valiant resistance being offered from within. Casal ordered an attack to be made on both sides at Flamos and Conega, and for a whole hour Casal's corps was engaged at Cruz da Pedra; the right advanced to Conega, and the left towards Flamos. Three times they advanced on the trenches of the latter, and three times were they repulsed. They rushed a last time to the charge, and succeeded in reaching the other side. Casal then excited his men to force the whole entrenchment. They poured into the town on all sides, and, rushing through the streets, reached the square of Santa Anna. M'Donnel fled with 25 men, taking the road to Carvalho d'Este and stopped to sleep at the foot of Povoa de Lanhoso, on the night of the 20th. On the 21st, he went in the direction of Senhora do Porto, as if he were going to Penafiel. The loss, on the part of Casal, was 106 killed and wounded. Of M'Donnel's men, whose bodies lay strewed in the streets, 312 were buried, including many unarmed people. At the last, no quarter was given to any one found in the streets. A series of plunder and excesses was then enacted by the troops, which lasted from the 20th till the 22nd.

When the Iberia left, every preparation was being made at Oporto to resist the threatened attack of Saldanha. The fortifications were nearly complete.

A Lisbon letter of the 31st Dec., brought by the Iberia, says: "Saldanha has commenced his march northward, in pursuit of the insurgents under Antas. His head-quarters yesterday were at Caldas, and he was to reach Alcoba[illegible] to-day. Antas has the start of him by about eight leagues (thirty miles). [illegible] cavalry, which has been sent on in advance of the rest of Saldanha's force. The Duero contains a decree, abolishing trial by jury in political and some other cases.

A wide stride towards absolutism. Typhus fever has broken out on board the Rodney, 90, in this port. There are no less than sixty cases, but only one death as yet."

The Lines of Torres Vedras, famous in the military annals not only of Portugal, but of the whole world, were the barrier which for the first time checked the rapid flight of the French eagle. It was there that the armies of Napoleon for the first time found an invincible obstacle. Torres Vedras is itself the strongest part of these lines. The heights of St. Vincent, covered by a magnificent redoubt in very good condition, that of Forca, and that of Sues, on the right bank of the river Ceandro (in Napier's "History," and the map of the Lines, this is marked as the Zezandre), are flanked by the fire of the Castle, which may be considered as the true citadel of these works, whose corps it defends. Between these heights and the town runs the Cezindro, which is crossed by three bridges, approached by considerable paved ways, which are all enfiladed by the fire of the Castle, and flanked by the fire of the redoubts. This exceedingly strong position had been carefully occupied by the rebels, whose leaders had frequently said to the inhabitants of this town, that, even though the forces under Saldanha's command were four times what they were, he should be beaten if he dared to attack such a position.

SADLER'S WELLS THEATRE.—FROM A SKETCH MADE IN THE GREEN ROOM.—CHARACTRES IN "THE MERCHANT OF VENICE."

SADLER'S WELLS THEATRE.

Our Illustration pourtrays the majority of the cleverly-working company of Sadler's Wells—that prosperous home of the Olden Drama, now that she is driven from the very houses in which, a few years since, it was attempted to set up a monopoly of her wealth of intellect.

The group has been sketched in the Green Room of the Establishment, and it shows the performers dressed for their very effective representation of Shakspeare's "Merchant of Venice." In the centre, seated, is Miss Laura Addison, as "the gentle Portia," by the performance of which this lady had added to her merited fame. On the opposite side of the table is Mr. Scharf, a comic actor from one of the Liverpool theatres, as the clown Gobbo; and vis-a-vis, is Old Gobbo (Mr Williams). To the right, in the front, is Mr Phelps, as Shylock, "the Jew that Shakspeare drew;" next is Mr George Bennett, as Antonio, "the Merchant;" and, to the right, is Mr. Hoskins as Gratiano. In the rear are Salarino, Mr. Fenton; Bassanio, Mr. H. Marston, one of Mr. Macready's company a Drury Lane; and Mr Branson, the Salanio. To the left of the table, is Nerissa Miss Cooper, who will be remembered as a promising actress in Madame Vestris's Covent Garde: company an expectation which has been fully realised. To the left is Jessica, a niece of Mrs. Warner. In the rear is Mr. Knight, as the Duke and the tall figure, wearing the gay bonnet, is Mr. Morton, as Lorenzo, the lover of Jessica The play is altogether very judiciously cast; and we are happy to add, has proved very attractive.

GEORGE BYNG, ESQ., M.P.

Mr. George Byng, the oldest member of the Legislature, "the father of the House of Commons," has just announced his intention of quitting public and political life. When this Parliament expires with the close of the ensuing session, he does not intend to offer himself again to the electors of Middlesex. Thus terminates a connection between a constituency and its representative of unex-

MR. BYNG, M.P.

ampled duration. He was returned for the county in 1790, and has sat for it without interruption till the present day; and, when he retires, will have completed a political service of fifty-seven years—in itself the term of more than an average life! It almost confounds the faculties to endeavour to reckon up the changes in men and systems this Nestor of St. Stephen's has witnessed, what empires have grown and decayed, what Kings and Sovereigns have passed away, what Ministers have risen and fallen! He himself briefly touches on the improvements he has witnessed, in his farewell address

"I have lived to see every disability by reason of religious opinions removed the representation of the House of Commons placed upon a most popular, and, in my judgment, sound and substantial, foundation all restriction upon the procurement of human food in the course of permanent abolition—the people of England contented and prosperous at home—their power universally felt and respected abroad, and their policy and free institutions exercising a most beneficial and salutary influence in every quarter of the globe."

Mr. Byng, of Wrotham Park, Middlesex, is the son of the Hon. Robert Byng, brother to Lord Strafford, and great grandson of the celebrated Admiral Byng. He was born in May, 1764, and, therefore, entered Parliament comparatively young. He was the friend and follower of Fox, and was always a steady supporter of liberal principles, though not an active or leading advocate of them. His career, therefore, has not been eventful: he never held office; he never headed a party; and the respect in which he was held secured him from the conflicts in which others have wasted temper, reputation, and fortune. The reflections excited by such a life as that of the venerable member for Middlesex are well expressed by a contemporary: "A connection of fifty-six years standing between a popular representative and his constituents is one of the noblest proofs that can be offered of the healthy spirit of English institutions, and of the value attached in England to character in public men. In England the example of a great constituency like that of Middlesex adhering through all the changes of fifty-six years to the same representative is a proof that there may be as much constancy in the bestowal of power by popular choice, as in the political arrangements of the closest aristocracy, or of the most uncontrolled despotism. Talents, however showy, are not alone sufficient to secure a hold upon any electoral body, but the instances are numerous in which rectitude of intention and consistency of conduct are found to render the connection between representatives and constituencies as firm and lasting as if elections took place for life."

NOOKS AND CORNERS OF OLD ENGLAND.

THE HOUSE OF MILTON, AND TREE PLANTED BY HIM,

IN PETTY FRANCE, WESTMINSTER.

Few eminent men have been so happily associated with their places of abode as John Milton.

By a remarkable faithfulness on the part of his biographers we are enabled to note the entire series of localities rendered famous by his residence, from the house in Bread-street where he was born, to that humble abode in Bunhill fields, where at last, in physical darkness, but with transcendent illumination of those inner powers which vanquish space and material impediment, he completed his temporal career in poverty and contumely, yet not without a prophetic vision of the justice which time would render in acknowledgement of his high mission.

The intermediate stages in the career of Milton, between the first and the last of his London abodes, are each characteristic of his fortunes, and of the progress whereby he was raised to a considerable degree of political consequence, which, however, departed on the death of his patron, Oliver Cromwell, that strong and daring swimmer in troubled waters, who may be said to have held his adherents between drowning and salvation by the hair of the head. In Aldersgate-street, the attention of Milton was occupied in the practical work of conducting the education of his nephews and a few other pupils. From this place, likewise, issued the first of a series of polemical treatises, viz., "The Reason of Church Government" St. Bride's Churchyard witnessed the unpropitious commencement of his ill-assorted union with a vain and selfish woman; and the separation which ensued was succeeded by the publication of a treatise on divorce, some of whose arguments, however, Milton failed to justify by his own conduct; for, in spite of that incompatibility of disposition, which he urged as a sufficient ground for severing the marriage bond, a reconciliation was effected at the house of a relation in St Martin's-le-Grand.

Milton's next residence was in Barbican, and here a house is still pointed out upon questionable authority, however, as that inhabited by him. Hence, he presently removed to Holborn, where he still carried on the education of a few scholars.

But the "Tenure of Kings and Magistrates" and the "Iconoclastes" were works which by the time had distinguished their author as one suited to a higher but more perilous trust than the tranquil business of the pedagogue; he presently removed to Whitehall at the behest of the Council, and became a participator in the mysteries and intrigues of Government under the nomination of Secretary to the Council for Foreign Languages. After remaining upwards of two years in Whitehall, Milton removed to Petty France in 1652, where he continued to hold the office of Foreign Secretary. The trust and emolument of this appointment were no sinecure in such hands, and the demands of the Government, together with the zeal of its instrument, produced a succession of works, among which the most conspicuous was the "Defensio pro Populi Anglicano," that were the admiration, not only of England, but of the whole of Europe, and directed the eyes of all men towards their author, as the defender and justifier o a revolution the most stern and eventful in the world's history. But the public career of Milton was closed in blindness ere the period which must have involved the political dissolution had yet arrived. It appears that, in 1655, he resigned the office of Foreign Secretary, continuing, however, to reside at his house in Petty France, retaining the friendship of the Protector, and receiving the homage of many distinguished foreigners, some of whom are said to have visited Italy and expressly to behold Cromwell and to converse with the author of the "Defensio pro Populo Anglicano" and controversial opponent of Salmasius, the pugnacious Leyden professor, who was said to have erected his throne upon a heap of stones, that he might have them at hand to throw at every one's head who passed by.

MILTON'S HOUSE AND TREE PLANTED BY HIM IN PETTY FRANCE WESTMINSTER

Aubrey, who testifies to the admiration which brought many foreigners hither for the sake of seeing Milton, likewise adds the fact of a degree of veneration seldom accorded until time shall have consecrated all that appertains to a great name. He says they would also "see the house and chamber where he was born." The house of Milton's nativity is no more; and, with one exception, those which he subsequently inhabited have likewise disappeared. The only unquestionable London residence of the great Poet is that of which a representation accompanies this brief notice.

Such pious pilgrims as would look upon it ere it, also, shall be swept away (for it is condemned), may easily discover it by wending to No. 19, Duke-street, Westminster. But the view will fail to be completed when they arrive, for it represents that part which is now considered to be the back of the premises, and was taken from the garden which crowhile belonged to Jeremy Bentham Dandelea, however, this was originally the front, the latter room having existed in that aspect, facing Whitehall. This room, on the first floor, was, for some time, inhabited by William Hazlitt, whose association with the spot will somewhat enhance its interest in the eyes of such as may visit the place.

The house, in its best time, must have been but homely: it is now the tenemented dwelling of poverty, and neglect and squalor have invested its walls and chambers. The tree, of late sort occasionally called the cotton willow, but properly of the poplar tribe, said to have been planted by the hand of Milton, is now separated from the house by a wall which bounds the neighbouring garden.

A little stone tablet appears over the upper window, inscribed by the piety of Jeremy Bentham, in this wise:—

Sacred to Milton,
Prince of Poets

But utility more utilitarian than even Jeremy Bentham ever dreamed of hath need of the sacred ground, and the house of the poet must give way to its demands. Be it so. If the thing be of necessity it is wrong to condemn it; if it be inevitable it is equally vain to be over clamorous in regret. Yet, while we submit with decency to provisions more substantial than such as minister to the predilections of the antiquary and the chronicler, let us show such veneration as the time yet admits of.

ZIGZAG THE ELDER.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, Jan 10.—First Sunday after Epiphany.
MONDAY, 11.—Hilary Term begins —Plough Monday.
TUESDAY, 12.—Outbreak at Sheffield, 1840.
WEDNESDAY, 13.—Cambridge Term begins.
THURSDAY, 14 Oxford Term begins.
FRIDAY, 15 Venus sets 4h. 52. p.m.
SATURDAY, 16 Battle of Corunna, 1809.

HIGH WATER at London-bridge for the Week ending January 16

Monday.	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday.	Saturday
M. | A.	M. | A.	M. | A.	M. | A.	M | A.	M | A.
h. m. | h. m.	h. m. | h. m.	h. m. | h. m.	h. m. | h. m.	h m | h m	h m | h m
8 14 | 8 50	9 03 | 9 36	10 36 | 11 12	11 49 | 0 0	0 18 | 0 45	1 06 | 1 36

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"Mysterio" will find the desired information in the "Farmer's Almanac," or in Dr. Rham's "Dictionary of the Farm," a very useful work.

"S. R." (The Christmas Carades in our Number of Dec. 26.) We have received several Letters in reply to these Riddles, which we have not space to acknowledge separately. We believe the "Sir Hilary" Charade to be by the late W. M. Praed, not by Sir W. Scott. "S. R." informs us that he heard the word Bonnes grace mentioned as the only word "Sir Hilary in the Charade) spoke by way of prayer. In Dr. Jamieson's) Dictionary, Bongrace is mentioned as a forehead-cloth, or covering for the forehead.

"A Student of History"—Hallam's "History of the Middle Ages" extends from the middle of the fifth to the end of the fifteenth century. (Price 24s.) Hallam's "Constitutional History" extends from the accession of Henry VII. to the death of George II. Mr. Hallam's works are published by Murray, Albemarle-street. Histories named by our Correspondent. The "Gallery" contains a mass of useful information

"A Subscriber," Edinburgh, had better consult a Surgeon; we cannot speak, with confidence, of such technical matters

"A Subscriber," Huddersfield. "Hints on Etiquette," published by Longman and Co

"M. D. Y." and "Bumpkin."—Æsthetics, in the fine arts, is the science which derives the first principles in all the arts from the effects which certain combinations have on the mind, as connected with nature and right reason. It is intimately related to sentiment, and links together with feeling the different parts of a composition. (Buchanan's Technological Dictionary.)

"Ludi Bavarici," Cambridge.—We are not aware of the reported abolition of the "Montem" after this year be authorised by the Provost and Head Master of Eton College

"Stanton." Yes, to both questions

"F. W.," Bedford-street.—The MS. is left at the Office, for return.

"J. M. W.," Isleward. The Sketch shall be engraved as soon as consistent with other arrangements

"J. T." Cornwall.—Address, Dublin.

"Ino.-Rumbing." We cannot speak of the performances in question.

"M. S." (various), is thanked.

"M. B." The information from Bishop Wearmouth did not reach us in time.

"H. P." Address, care of Mr. Mitchell, Old Bond-street.

"E." should apply to a respectable Stockbroker.

"B. R." is thanked for his suggestive letter.

"Y. E.," Brighton.—We have not room.

"J. D." His Royal Highness Prince Albert obtained a Prize at the Smithfield Cattle Show of 1845.

"An Old Captain," Cork. We are not in possession of the information sought, or would cheerfully afford it.

"A Young Sculptor," Manchester. A small volume on Anatomy applied to Art has lately been published. (Highley and Son, Fleet-street.)

"T. C. H." traces the Railway Transmission and Two Tables to a communication to the "Mechanic's Magazine," No. 19, Jan. 3, 1823. We have not room for his paper, or would print it.

"Alice."—Normal signifies—1 Perpendicular, as, a normal line which forms with another line a right angle 2 Relating to the rudiments or elements of education; as, a normal school. (Buchanan's Technological Dictionary, just published.)

"Curious." Your friend is correct.

"J. B. B."—1 The Sculpture in question is not in the British Museum. 2. Intelligence from the Arctic Expedition is very anxiously looked for. 3. The Shilling fee will suffice

"An Irish Subscriber."—We really cannot answer as to the Uniforms of the Colonial Regiments of Rifles

"An Old Subscriber" has put a question which it would, probably, occupy two or three days to decide. We can only give, at an approximation, that, at present, there are about 2150 miles of working Railways in Great Britain.

"J. B. C." Vauxhall.—Westminster Bridge was completed in 1746; the funds being raised by lottery. Its management is in the hands of twenty-four Commissioners, twenty-one at by virtue of their office; fifty-seven by virtue of their seats in the House of Commons, as representing the metropolitan counties; and eleven as elected by virtue of the Bridge Act, 9th George II. For the History of the Bridge, see No. 77 of THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

"Constance," Stoke Newington.—Probably, next Examination.

"J. A. V." Windsor.—The Penny Postage Stamp, if no mistake not, were originally black.

"Sabra-al-Yemen," Aden, is thanked for his long letter, assuring us that Pasha is compounded of two Persian words, Pas, meaning the feet of, and Shah, a King: namely, the king's feet

"A Subscriber" may search the Register, by application to the Registrar of the District: the fee is trifling

"J. C." should address her letter to Mr. Alderman Farebrother, Treasurer to the Distressed Needlewoman's Society, Lancaster-place, Strand

"A Constant Reader." The precise proportions of the ingredients of Gunpowder are (Sporting) Nitre, 75; Charcoal, 12; Sulphur, 10: thus differing from the reputed ancient mode. The charcoal is prepared from alder, willow, or dogwood.

"A. F. T."—The British Navy consists of 671 ships and vessels of all classes, of which number 270 are in commission; the number of officers is 7940. —(See the Times of Tuesday).

"L. S. F." Major and Minor differ from each other by a semi-tone.

"R. S." 1." No fold-sewn. The letter declined.

"T. T."—The quotation, "The man who has no music in his soul," &c., is from "The Merchant of Venice." The other line is not Shakspeare's.

"Z." Islington.—A note addressed to one of the Secretaries of the Church Missionary Society, Salisbury-square, Fleet-street, would, doubtless, elicit the information required.

"A. F."—Curtis's short Treatise on the Eye, published by Whittaker and Co.

"I. M. H.," Islington. Christmas evergreens are employed to deck houses at Christmas, because of their use among the ancient Romans as the emblem of peace, joy, and victory. In the Christian sense, it may be applied to the victory gained over the powers of darkness by the coming of Christ.—Bourne.

"J. E. H.," Northallerton. The suggestion shall be considered.

"A Young Watchman." In the reign of James I., certain parts of Surrey were considered to belong to Windsor Forest, and a few years after the accession of Charles I., attempts were made to include within the Forest limit the western part of Surrey. These vexatious claims, through the advocacy of Noy, of "ship money" notoriety, were decided in favour of the King; they were, however, set aside by an inquiry in 164., revived by Charles II., but again defeated by the landowners; and since that time, the bailwick of Surrey has been considered as portion of the Forest only.—(See the "New History of Surrey," vol. I, pp. [illegible] 196.)

"A Subscriber." Rococo (French) signifies, generally, trivial, burlesque, satiric It has, also, a specific application to the back-style of French art in the reign of Louis XV.

"L. M. P.," Compton Ledge, is thanked for the information as to the Christmas Tree Custom; such traces of existing customs are peculiarly interesting.

MULREADY'S "CHOOSING THE WEDDING GOWN." "W. B.," Oldham.—"An Artist;" and "An Old Subscriber."—"AN Amateur Artist." Brighton.—We can only see the colours of the dresses of the figures: the lady wears a blue hat with white feathers, and amber dress over a green skirt; complexion fair, hair light; the cravat upon the chair at the end of the counter is crimson; shawl; the pouch blue, and counter brown, the mercer has a dark puce coat and blue stockings; hair, powdered: the boy at the further counter has a blue coat and cap; and the shopwoman, brown dress, lighter brown shawl, and puce ribbon in her cap: the candle-shade is blue, and the figures on the shop walls are rose-colour and blue.

"H. P.," Dublin, is thanked for his suggestion for the recovery of the Great Britain; though we have not room to print it.

"No-Ho," St. Clere's. Strawberry Hill has been occupied since the sale.

"A Leeds Subscriber."—A translation of "Berthelet on Dyeing" is announced.—Apply to Highley and Son, Fleet-street.

"A Widow," Honiton.—If a person die intestate, and have a wife and children, guardians of the property goes to the widow, and the remaining two-thirds among the children, in equal proportions.

"A Reader." The late Sir M. Biscoan did not serve the office of Lord Mayor of London, but of Dublin.

"J. G.," Dungannon.—It is difficult to say who is the greatest Naturalist of the present day. Owen, Agassiz, and Edward Forbes are distinguished for their Zoological researches; and the sound philosophy of the eloquent Humboldt can scarcely be too highly rated. (See his "Cosmos").

"Harriett S." See "Prout's Elementary Drawing Book." (Bogue, Fleet-street.)

"Agrippa" is thanked for his suggestive letter on Buckingham Palace; but we have not room to insert it.

"Anna." The Print is not published coloured.

"Crossed Cheques." The ground in dispute is too nice for us to decide

"Port Hope," Upper Canada.—We have not room for the Sketch, &c.

"Surpass." A Gerund is a kind of verbal noun in Latin, which governs cases like a verb. A Supine is another kind of verbal noun.

"J. G. B.," Windsor, is thanked for the Sketches; though we have not room to engrave them

"S. P. P.," High Beech. The same as last reply.

"G. S." may be accommodated by calling at the Office.

"A Welsh Mountaineer," Vale of Clwyd. Order "Hints on Ecarté," of any Bookseller

"C. O.," Chelmsford, will be more likely to obtain accurate information as to the Branch Bankers in question, in his own town than elsewhere

"A Subscriber," Wales.—Holdsworth's Nets" Law Dictionary," price 9s. to be had, by order, of any bookseller.

"Curry, junr." Address a note to the Ordnance Office.

"J. W."—We have not room for the Song. We do not know Mr. Wilson's town address

"Gamma," Huddersfield. The practice of the Trade governs the length of the day's work, in apprenticeship.

"16,128" is thanked; but we have not room.

"Pyro."—See "Whist, illustrated by Kenny Meadows."

"A. B.," Lichfield, may, probably, recover by action at last.

"Argus," Manchester.—The London Catalogue of Books published in the Present Century," price 21s.

"Eleu." We cannot speak of the Establishment in question.

"Chatsworth."—Her Majesty's Visit to the "Queen of the Peak," in 1843, will be found illustrated and described in No. 64 of our Journal.

"W. P. C." Apply to the Rev. W. Hetherington's Charity for the Blind; Clerk, G. Trollope, Esq., Christ's Hospital, London

"J. W. B." See "Macdonnell's Dictionary of Quotations" "Johnson's Dictionary," (unabridged), contains many quotations, as does, also, "Chambers's Cyclopædia of Literature." See John Herschel's "Treatise on Astronomy" quoad the information required. The "Philosophical Magazine" contains a daily meteorological register.

RAILWAY LEGISLATION "R. H."—There has been an alteration in the standing orders, by which proof of service of a notice upon a proprietor or occupier of property, may be shown by affidavit instead of viva voce evidence

"H. F. T." Lyon's Bonded Debt as it is not yet in operation. A preliminary notice of a month, in the Gazette, was required, and that was only inserted about the middle of December

"Merchant." See Perceval's "History of Italy."

"J. R.," Rothwell. The Police Act and Game Laws may be had, by order, of any Law Bookseller: we cannot state the prices.

"J. J. P." Dublin. The Subject for his letter on the Extinct Irish Deer: but we think the matter had better be left to Professor Owen and the Archæological Association, who have more time than a public journalist can spare for the decision of such matters

"M.'s" "Thought for the Rich" is well intended, but objectionable in its phraseology.

"†††"—"Grandpapa's Evening Tale" is much too long.

"L. P. S." The question was answered in our Journal about two months since.

"Alpha," Weston.—The nights of November 12 and 13 of the year 1846 were both wholly clouded over in London, so that there was not a star visible.

"We have not seen any account of observations of meteors on those days, at any place Opinion is divided with respect to whether they are wholly within our atmosphere or not; but we are inclined to the belief that they are so.

"R." —White and Black

"Curiosia." We will endeavour by next week to obtain the information our Correspondent seeks.

"A Weekly Subscriber."—There are instances of arms, without any crests, appertaining to families. The mode of proceeding to supply the defect is by memorializing the Earl Marshal, through the Garter Herald's Office, to grant a new crest. The expense is about £50. An application to any member of the Heralds' College, Doctors' Commons, will effect the purpose.

"An Inquirer."—The Baronet, Charles Percy, youngest son of Algernon, first Earl of Beverley, married, in 1822, Anne Caroline, grand-daughter and heir of the late Bertie Bertie-Greathead, Esq., of Guy's Cliff, county Warwick. Both Mr. Percy and his wife are dead.

"Esculapius" The Durham University offers opportunities for a Clerical preparation at a lower rate than Oxford and Cambridge.

BOOKS, &c., RECEIVED DURING THE WEEK.

Scotland Delineated. Part 1.——Knight's Weekly Volume. CXI.——Life of Dr. Johnson.——Brashaw's Guide.——The Shepherd's Manual.——Kenny's Manual: Chess.——Work-Table Magazine.——Post Magazine Almanack. 1847. Tait's Magazine.——Fine Arts Journal. No. 9, Vol. I.——Maland Florist.——Griffin's Chemical Recreations. 8th Edit.——Landseer's Deer Stalking in the Highlands.——The English Matron, by the Author of The English Gentlewoman, &c.

Music.—Rembrandt's Cathedral Service.——The Elfin Farewell.——The Musical Times. Novello.——Haydn's Creation. Novello. Parts 2 and 3. Handel's Messiah. Novello. Parts 5 and 6.——Haydn's Creation. Whittemore. Part 1.——Handel's Messiah. Whittemore. Part 1.

SUPPLEMENT, GRATIS.—With each copy of the present Number of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS is given a SUPPLEMENT, containing the Chronology of the Remarkable Events of the last Six Months; and the Title-page and Indexes to Vol. IX.

 We beg to inform our numerous Country Subscribers, that the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS may be received free from crease, if they will only request their Agent, who supplies the Paper, to send it in the same manner as it is sent direct from our Office. The beautiful and expensive Fine Art Engravings would then be received as perfect as they come from the Press; and the collection of Numbers at the end of each half-year would be in a perfect state for binding. The extra expense incurred, by increasing the size of the envelope for the Paper, would not amount to more than three halfpence a year for each annual Subscriber.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, JANUARY 9, 1847.

AMID the gloom cast over public affairs by the distressing state of Ireland, it is satisfactory to see that the power of this country to bear up against the pressure remains undiminished. If the enormous expenditure of public money now going on in Ireland had to be supported on a falling or a failing revenue, our position would be most discouraging; but, as far as financial returns can be taken as indications of prosperity (in the money meaning of the word), we have much to congratulate ourselves upon. The reductions of commercial duties have not been followed by a diminution of revenue; on the contrary, there is a large increase in that department in which the reductions have been made. The figures and details will be found elsewhere. They are full of encouragement for the advocates of reducing duties to the "revenue point;" and, were we freed from the expenditure which the failure of one of the chief articles of food will occasion, it might be possible to effect the reduction of some of the most obnoxious of our taxes—the Window Duty, for instance, and (though it is almost hoping against hope) the Income Tax. But no Minister will absolutely give up and abolish a source of revenue with the future prospects of Ireland rising so darkly before him: it may be that an immense outlay of the public money will be required in that country for years to come. The inability to cultivate the earth for the ensuing year, which is described as existing over a wide surface, and the precariousness of the crop that is sown, must render us anxious for at least the two ensuing years To meet these prospective evils, it is of the last importance that our revenue should be kept fully up to its largest average; if possible, raised above it. It is this that makes the present revenue returns more than usually satisfactory.

THE subscription for the relief of the distress in Ireland and Scotland, headed by her Majesty, promises to be a magnificent proof of collective generosity. But, large as the amount may be, it cannot, unfortunately, be out of proportion to the misery to be alleviated. The accounts grow darker every day; and there is intense suffering altogether beyond the reach of official boards. The old and infirm cannot work, neither can women or infants; and disease is fast swelling the list of those incapable of the aid that depends on the ability to toil. What can be done with them? All that depends on legislation requires time, and that rolls along slowly when its stream bears such a mass of misery. The wisest laws that the ablest of Statesmen could frame would not touch the present hour and its needs: we must relieve the pressure of the instant, and, under cover of that respite from immediate danger, try and make the demand on charity less necessary. It is a frightful prospect when millions—when manners equal to that of whole nations—are thrown upon public

THE WEATHER.

The weather has changed considerably since our last notice. The frost has disappeared, and dull, gloomy weather has succeeded to it. On Thursday, Dec. 31, the day was exceedingly cold. At 7h. in the morning, the reading of the thermometer was 16 deg., a point lower than it had been since the 14th of December The average of the last day of the year was only 27 deg.

January 1 was also a cold day; its average temperature was 30 deg.; some snow fell during the day. On January 2, the average temperature was 29 deg. Sunday, January 3, was a gloomy day; sleet began to fall in the evening, which was succeeded by a fall of snow, and immediately afterwards the temperature increased to nearly 39 deg., and it has continued at about that point, with scarcely any variation, since. On the night of the 6th, by the present time, the sky being nearly wholly covered by cloud, the air fully charged with moisture, with rain occasionally falling, and, altogether, the weather has been very gloomy. The following are the extreme thermometrical readings each day:—

Thursday, Dec. 31, 1846,	the highest reading was 35 deg	the lowest was 16 deg.
Friday, Jan. 1, 1847,	.....	.....	27
Saturday, Jan. 2	.....	.....	25
Sunday, Jan. 3	.....	.....	30
Monday, Jan. 4	.....	.....	35
Tuesday, Jan. 5	.....	.....	34
Wednesday, Jan. 6	.....	.....	40

Blackheath, Thursday, Jan. 7, 1847. J. G.

COURT AND HAUT TON.

DEPARTURE OF THE COURT FROM WINDSOR TO CLAREMONT.—WINDSOR, THURSDAY EVENING.—(From our own Correspondent.)—This afternoon, at a quarter past three o'clock, her Majesty and his Royal Highness Prince Albert, accompanied by the Royal Family, left the Castle, in a close travelling carriage and four, escorted by a detachment of the 1st Life Guards, for Claremont. Their Royal Highnesses the Prince of Wales and the Princess Royal rode in the carriage with the Queen and the Prince Consort. In the second carriage were the Ladies in Waiting upon her Majesty and the Prince. Their Royal Highnesses Prince Alfred, Princess Alice, and the infant Princess Helena, attended by the Dowager Lady Lyttelton, rode in the third carriage. The Lady in Waiting upon the Queen, and the remainder of the Royal suite, followed in three other of the Royal carriages and four. Their Excellencies Monsieur and Madame Van de Weyer, and Sir Robert and Lady Peel, left the Castle this morning, shortly after ten o'clock, for Slough; proceeding thence by the Great Western Railway to town. His Excellency the Russian Ambassador took his departure about the same time, for the metropolis.

THE BARONESS BRUNNOW.—We regret to learn that the Baroness Brunnow is again suffering from unfavourable weather at Ashburnham House

PARLIAMENTARY BANQUET.—The Marquis of Lansdowne (President of the Council), as muniterial leader of the House of Lords, has issued cards for a grand full dress banquet on Monday, the 18th instant, at Lansdowne-house, to the mover and seconder of the Address, and a large party of peers.

COURT APPOINTMENT.—The Hon. Spencer Lyttelton has been appointed to succeed Lieut.-Colonel Cavendish as Master of the Ceremonies to the Queen.

PROPOSED ARISTOCRATIC MARRIAGE.—A marriage is about to take place between Viscount Ebrington, son of Earl Fortescue, and the eldest daughter of Right Hon. Colonel Dawson Damer, M.P., brother of the late and uncle to the present Earl of Portarlington.

LORD JOHN RUSSELL'S PARLIAMENTARY DINNER.—Lord John Russell will give a full-dress dinner to a numerous party of members of the House of Commons, on Monday, the 18th of the present month, at his official residence, in Downing-street.

HOCKEY HALL.—Viscount Melbourne, who is entertaining Lord and Lady Beauvale, the Hon. Mrs. Lamb, and a small party, at Brocket Hall, is expected to arrive in South-street, on the 14th instant.

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES, &c.

CAMBRIDGE. JAN. 7

THE HULSEAN PRIZE.—This prize (£100) has just been awarded to A. M. Hoare, B.A., of St. John's College.

HULSEAN LECTURER.—The Rev. Dr. C Wordsworth, of Trinity College, and canon of Westminster, has been elected lecturer for the ensuing academical year. Term commences on Wednesday, the 13th inst.

CONSECRATION OF NEW CHURCHES.—During the present month of January three new churches will be consecrated in the metropolis, viz., St. Jude's, Whitechapel, St. Andrew's, Oxford-street, and the Mariner's Church, near the north entrance to the London Docks, all of them having been erected within the last twelve months.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

LONDON.

REPEAL OF THE WINDOW DUTIES.—On Wednesday, a numerous meeting of delegates from the various metropolitan parishes was held in the Court-house, Marylebone, for the purpose of devising the best means of forcing upon the attention of Government, in proposing their financial schemes to the ensuing session of Parliament, the necessity of carrying out a total and immediate repeal of the window duties. Mr. John Williams, of the Regent-circus, occupied the chair. Mr. H. C. Wilson said he begged to trespass upon the meeting for the purpose of proposing a resolution. It appeared that, in consequence of the approach of the ensuing session, all classes were at work endeavouring to impress upon the Minister the necessity of a repeal of those taxes which bore heaviest upon themselves; but, whether it was a repeal of the malt-tax, of the duties on tea, or any other tax whatever, they must all sink into the shade, as compared with the necessity of a repeal of the obnoxious window duties—duties less than seven years of which had not been in existence, and had been last year disqualified from being on the register of voters, solely in consequence of the operation of this tax. Mr. Wilson concluded by moving a resolution to the effect, "That it is the opinion of the ensuing session, to which the members for the borough of Marylebone, the City of Westminster, and Lord Duncan, the member for Bath, be invited to consider the propriety of appointing a deputation to the Government, urging the necessity of an immediate and total repeal of the obnoxious window tax." After several speeches, a vote of thanks was given to the Chairman, and the meeting separated.

SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING THE AMENDMENT OF THE LAW.—A meeting of this Society was held on Wednesday, at their Rooms, Regent-street, for the purpose of admitting some new members, and of hearing a communication from Mr. Boyle, of the State of New York (advocate), upon the law of registering deeds and instruments in the United States.—Lord Brougham presided.—Mr. Stewart, Q.C., read the report upon the subject of registration of deeds in the United States. The document, which was of a voluminous character, described the great facility for registering legal instruments in the United States, and the economy with which letters of administration and probates of wills were obtained. The practice referred to was that which prevailed in the State of New York, but the law, with differences of detail, was the same in all the States. In the State of New York there is a registrar of deeds, who takes cognizance of the legal records to which the report referred; but where there is no registrar of deeds, the State is divided into two counties, each county having an officer, bound in sureties, who, by virtue of his office, is the recording officer of that county, and takes charge of all records which may be examined at his office, without fee or reward. The registration of instruments affecting title to real estate is constituted, by the existing law of the State, in the county where the property is situated, and the filing the instrument in the office of the county is considered sufficient notice to the world of the estate created, in the several counties separately in which it may be situated, if there should be several; that being done, the registration is complete for all legal purposes.—Mr. Boyle read a resolution, but which was not completed for all legal purposes.—Mr. Boyle read a resolution, but which was not carried, to the effect that the meeting either as to the approval or disapproval of the whole or any part of the details. The meeting then adjourned to the first Wednesday in February.

FREE READING ROOMS FOR THE LABOURING CLASSES.—A society has been established, having Lord Ashley at the head of the movement, for "the purpose of providing free reading-rooms for the labouring classes of the City of London."

THE ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH.—On Monday, the extension of the Electric Telegraph from the Nine Elms station to the South Western Railway, as far as the south side of Waterloo-bridge, was completed. The instrument is contained in a small case in a wrought-iron safe, fitted as a post close to the curb on the west side of Waterloo Bridge-road; in this they are secured to a brass plate, having short projecting pins, upon which they are fastened with a key. The entrance is extremely complex. Should the present weather continue, the whole of the contemplated extension will be completed in a very short time

ANOTHER RISE IN THE PRICE OF BREAD.—On Thursday morning the bakers at the Weigh-of the metropolis made a further rise in the price of the four pound loaf. The best wheaten bread is now selling at 10½d., and "Household" at 9½d. the quartern. In Somerstown and the vicinity of St. John's and Bloomsbury, the best wheaten bread has advanced from 8½d. to 9d., and seconds, from 7½d. to 8½d. The price of the best flour is 10d. per quartern, but an inferior article can be purchased as low as 9½d.

MORTALITY OF LONDON.—The number of deaths in the metropolis during the week ending last Saturday, as made up by the Registrar-General, amounted to the extraordinary number of 1,510; viz. males 781, females 729. This is the largest number registered in any one week for the last seven years, exceeding the average of the last five winters by 442. The principal increase is on those deaths arising from diseases of the organs of respiration and of the lungs, which are 204 above the quarterly average. The best wheaten bread has advanced from 8½d. to 9d., and seconds, from 7½d. to 8½d. The price of the best flour is 10d. per quartern, but an inferior article can be purchased as low as 9½d.

MORTALITY OF LONDON.—The number of deaths in the metropolis during the week ending last Saturday, as made up by the Registrar-General, amounted to the extraordinary number of 1,510; viz. males 781, females 729. This is the largest number registered in any one week for the last seven years, exceeding the average of the last five winters by 442. The principal increase is on those deaths arising from diseases of the organs of respiration and of the lungs, which are 204 above the quarterly average. The number of births registered in the week ending Saturday, Jan. 2, likewise shows a great and sudden increase, being 1650; viz. males 861, females 789; this is an increase of about 300 over the average of the last thirteen weeks.

ADVANCE IN THE PRICE OF COAL.—A numerous meeting of the representatives of collieries on the Tyne, Wear, and Tees, was held at the Assembly Rooms, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, on Monday last, when a proposition for raising the price of coal 3s. per chaldron of 53 cwt was adopted.

MEDICAL USE OF THE TELEGRAPH.—A message from Norwich to London was sent by telegraph at six o'clock on Monday morning, for a physician to attend immediately a highly-respected gentleman in the neighbourhood of Norwich. At a quarter before ten, A.M., he arrived by a special train, the whole time occupied in conveying the message and bringing the required aid being but three hours and three quarters, the special engine performing the distance from Shoreditch to Norwich in three hours and a quarter.

POSTSCRIPT.

THE INAUGURATION OF THE NEW LORD MAYOR OF DUBLIN.

Michael Staunton, Esq., the new Lord Mayor of Dublin, gave his inauguration dinner at the Mansion House, on Tuesday evening. The Lord Lieutenant, the Chief Secretary, the Commander of the Forces, and the Lord-Chancellor honored his Lordship with their presence. The speeches were very short, very good-humoured, and tributes quite free from political asperity. O'Connell made no way a word about "the Repeal," and he shook hands most cordially with the Right Hon. T. B. C. Smith, his successful prosecutor on a late occasion now Master of the Rolls.

The Lord-Lieutenant, in responding, when his health had been toasted by the company, said, "The Lord Mayor has been kind enough to speak of me in very flattering terms. He has told you that my anxiety had been directed to assuming the government of Ireland; and I can only assure you, as an Irish proprietor, that all I can do conducive to the interests of the country I will do. No exertions on my part shall be wanting to make all the benefits of my possession and station in the position in which I am placed to benefit Ireland. (Cheers.) His Lordship has also told you that I accepted the government of this country, which her Majesty has been pleased graciously with respect to the high private character and distinguished public character of the Chief Magistrate of the second city in the British Empire. The Lord Mayor has truly said that we are met here on neutral ground; and I can assure you that the pleasure I feel upon this occasion is not at all lessened by that circumstance. I think there ought to be occasions when persons of all creeds and politics should meet together, forgetful of past differences for the promotion of common objects, and I don't know what would be a more suitable period for such a meeting than an occasion like this, when we meet together to do honour to the Chief Magistrate of this country. (Applause.) In the station which I have the honour to hold, as the Minister of the Crown who is most immediately connected with the affairs of Ireland, I have endeavoured so to shape my conduct as to secure the approval of all classes in this country. (Loud applause). We have fallen upon times of no ordinary difficulty and danger. It is not for me to say in what manner we have been enabled to meet the extreme difficulties—the many responsibilities that have been thrown upon us; but it may not perhaps be improper for me, as an individual, to state on the present occasion, that my anxiety and toils of office have been very much lightened by the great kindness and co-operation which I have received, without any distinction of party, in the intercourse of private society, and in the discharge of my public duty, from all classes in Ireland. (Applause.) The Lord Mayor has reminded you that my official connexion with Ireland has been very short. It is true, indeed, that it has been very limited; but it has lasted long enough to leave on my mind a warm appreciation of Irish kindness, and to create in my heart a sincere devotion to Irish interests. I can therefore, I assure you, that nothing would have induced me to come to this country in the situation of Chief Secretary of Ireland, knowing so little as I do of the country, if I had not known that I should have been acting under an Irish Lord-Lieutenant, co-operating with Irish gentlemen intimately acquainted with the feelings, habits, and character of the people, and the nature of Irish local institutions." (Cheers.)

Mr. O'Connell, in returning thanks, when the health had been proposed, expressed the gratification he felt at standing upon neutral ground, and said he hardly knew how to act in such a position

Mr Staunton, the new Lord Mayor of Dublin, is the proprietor of the Dublin Weekly Register.

THE ADDRESS.—The Right Hon. Lord Carew, Lord-Lieutenant of Wexford, has been unanimously chosen by the Cabinet to second the Address, in reply to her Majesty's Speech, in the House of Lords, on the 19th instant; and, in the House of Commons, it will be moved by Mr. Charles Howard, and seconded by Mr Ricardo.

CABINET COUNCIL.—A Cabinet council was held yesterday. All the Ministers were present, except the Chancellor of the Exchequer, who has not returned to town since the death of his father, and the Marquis of Clanricarde, who is in Ireland. The Lord Chancellor came to town from Brighton, to attend the Council.

DEATH OF COMMODORE BING.—Commodore Daniel Pring, of the West India, Halifax, and North American station, died on board the receiving-ship Imaum, 72, at Kingston, Jamaica, on the 29th of November last DISTRESS IN IRELAND.—The Dublin correspondent of the Herald, in his letter of Tuesday, says—"The contents of the provincial journals received in town this day are, if possible, more gloomy and alarming than any we have had for some weeks. The deaths by starvation in the north and the south-west of Ireland, are averaged for the past week twenty-five a day."

DESTRUCTION OF THE DEE MILLS AT CHESTER.—A fire, involving the loss of a serious amount of property, broke out on Wednesday morning, in the centre of a lofty range of building, known by the name of the Dee Mills, at Chester. These premises, which are situate on, and attached to, the west side of the old Deebridge, are used as corn mills, and are in the occupation of messrs. Jones, Gamon, Palin, and Moss. The mills were originally of great antiquity, having been in existence as early as the year 1119, when they belonged to the Crown, who granted them to Sir Richard Grosvenor, in whose family they still remain. Every room was filled with grain to the very roof, and scarcely a single bag has been rescued uninjured from that portion of the pile which was the scene of the conflagration. The whole of the upper floors must be completely fallen a prey to the flames is insured in the County Fire Office, and the stock is also partially insured; the other two warehouses at present unhurt are likewise protected by the same fire-mark from the same office. Fortunately there were no victims of a like calamity within the last 57 years, having been totally destroyed by fire on the 26th of September, 1789, and again in March, 1819. The loss sustained by the present fire is supposed to be about £8000

ACCIDENTS AND OFFENCES.

SUDDEN DEATH.—On Sunday morning, an old man, named Fisher, suddenly fell down in Kensington Church, during the performance of early service. He was conveyed to the vestry-room, where it was ascertained immediately that life was extinct.—An awful instance of sudden death occurred in one of the cells of Vine-street police-station, about eight o'clock on Sunday morning. The deceased, whose name is Thomas Disten, was taken to the station about seven o'clock on the previous evening, in a state of intoxication. He was grabbed up in one of the cells, and visited by the gaoler every half hour during the night. On Sunday morning, when the gaoler visited him for the last time, he found him dancing and singing, and told him to be quiet. The deceased made use of an improper expression, and turning round towards the gaoler, fell to the ground with violence. The gaoler picked him up, and placing him on one of the seats, was alarmed to find that the man was dead. A surgeon was soon in attendance, who pronounced that death had taken place during a fit of apoplexy The Jury at the inquest returned a verdict of "Natural death from ossification of the valves of the heart, accelerated by drink

SUICIDE BY PRUSSIC ACID.—An inquest was held on Monday, by Mr. Carter, at the Surrey Canal Tavern, as to the death of Mr. Charles Young, aged 33, the collector of the paving and lighter rate of the Deptford Pier Company, as reported by the evidence that about eight on Wednesday evening the deceased went to the above house, and ordered a rump steak and some wine, and whilst it was getting ready, he appeared in a very excited state. He said he had been out collecting, and he was very tired. He had his dinner, and drank several glasses of wine, when a friend who was in the room observed that he had something in his hand, which he took to be the wine glass. Soon after he fell back in his chair, and died. He was called to, but made no answer; and upon Mr. South, the landlord, coming in, the smell of prussic acid was very strong, and a bottle was found on the table which bore a partially outlined label. Stalker was then sent for, but before his arrival, Mr. Young was dead. It transpired that the deceased had had some summonses to deliver for non-payment of the rates, which he had failed to do, and fearing he would lose his situation thereby, he had been in a very desponding state lately. Verdict, "Temporary insanity

MURDER IN CUMBERLAND.—Last week, a man, named William Stalker, murdered his wife, at the village of Caldbeck, Cumberland. Stalker has been for many years a respectable farmer at Wille Riddings, where he brought up a large family, and was about to quit the farm, and keep a grocer's shop in Caldbeck. On Tuesday evening he and his wife went to the farm to milk the cows and, not returning at the usual time, about two hours afterwards, one of their sons repaired to the farm, to look after his father and mother, and, on entering the house, fell over something lying on the floor, when he hunted, on recovering, he returned to Caldbeck, and other persons went back to the farm-house, who found poor Mrs. Stalker lying murdered on the floor. From the black marks which were discovered on both sides of her neck, it was presumed that she had been strangled. Search was made for the murderer, who was found the next morning sitting under a hedge in one of his own fields, and confessed that he had murdered his wife by strangulation. Stalker had been in a state of mental debility for some time past. The family is one of the most respectable in the locality. An inquest was held, and a verdict of "Wilful Murder" returned. Stalker was then committed for trial.

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT ON THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.—Soon after one o'clock on Tuesday morning a coal train from the Claycross and Staveley collieries drew up alongside the platform at the Derby's Langley station, for the purpose of detaching some waggons of coal at that place. The morning was very foggy, and the driver not being certain as to the exact position of the "points," stopped the train before arriving at the signal post, and called to the policeman on duty, said he should be glad to know whereabouts the "points" were. The policeman then turned on the red signal and ran to the "points," with the intention of "shunting" the waggons. He observed the coal train in meantime detach the break waggon and putting it some few yards back on the main line. Soon afterwards a heavy luggage train, propelled by two engines, was running at a fearful speed directly into the coal train. The driver and stoker of the first engine attached to the luggage train fortunately observed the policeman's hand signal, and threw themselves off the engine without sustaining injury; but the two on the second engine were instantaneously killed. The two engines with their tenders were crushed together. Three or four coal waggons were knocked to pieces, and about the same number of luggage trucks entirely destroyed. On the arrival of a party of men from Watford immediate means were adopted to extricate the bodies of the unfortunate men, a work which was accomplished with no small difficulty. Within a short time of the accident two luggage trains from the north arrived at Langley, and both the York and Lancaster up-mails came within less than two hours. As both lines of rail were blocked up, all traffic was necessarily stopped. The mail trains returned to the Boxmoor station, where they remained, and subsequently came on to Langley, but it was after seven o'clock before the line was clear at that station to allow any trains to pass. An inquiry into the circumstances attending the accident was commenced on Wednesday, before Francis Goldsmith, Esq., Coroner for Hertfordshire, at the Bell Inn, Primrose Hill. All the above particulars were borne out by the evidence given before the Coroner. The engineer of the first of the

"BRUCE," BARROILHET. "MARIE," STOLTZ. "ARTHUR," BETTINI.

SCENE FROM ROSSINI'S NEW OPERA OF "ROBERT BRUCE."—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

CONVENTUAL CHARITY. Painted by GERARD VAN HARP.

THIS is one of the fourteen pictures lately bequeathed to the National Gallery, by Richard Sutton, Esq. [illegible] to the pictures, placed in the same part of the Gallery, and though not of superior excellence, nevertheless, in some instances, as being the works of masters, of whose style the Institution did not previously possess specimens.

The "Conventual Charity" is an attractive picture, on wood, 2 ft. 7½ inches high, and 1 ft. 9 inches wide. The scene represents the Prior of a Convent and his followers distributing bread to needy and hungry wayfarers. There is a great deal of life in the composition: the recipients of the holy man's bounty are of all ages, and variously pleased at relief in old suffering; the blind man, led by the youth, is an interesting pictorial group; and the three children—one looking gratitude to the prior, a second eagerly devouring the welcome gift, and the third receiving it from the holy man's hands—are all in good keeping with the "charity" of the scene. The drawing is vivid; and the picture, as well from its pleasing subject, as from its treatment by the painter, is popular with the visitors to the Gallery. It can scarcely fail to kindle welcome

THE NATIONAL GALLERY.—"CONVENTUAL CHARITY."—PAINTED BY LA HARPE.

[illegible] Virtue, through all time
[illegible]cally sublime—
Hallow'd by every clime and creed—
My foes that in the battle bleed—
By humblest cot, by princely dome—
[illegible]
[illegible]
Its benizon—bless'd Charity!

Thou art Religion's test and [illegible];
Thou whose all spotless [illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
To feed and clothe the helpless poor.

'Twas good, 'twas good, at the Baron's gate,
Who laid aside his haughty state;
And with his own brave hands bestowed
The loaves upon the wrinkled crowd—
The "Feast-Divine"—the Lord was he;
[illegible]
And nobly still enacts its part.

'Twas good, 'twas good, at the Church's door,
When Charity succour'd the shivering poor;
[illegible]
The soul will pour its genial stream.

THE CHRISTMAS PIE. Painted by HUNT.

[illegible] piece of boyish ecstasy:—

LET them talk as they list of their pies and their patties—
Their hoe-cake and oat-cake, galettes and gateaux—
The Mince Pie of all cakes the aristocrat is,
The best of the lot, as each epicure knows.

'Tis lined with prime beef, with good fruit for relief—
Nutmeg and currants, and spices enow;
Well-seasoned—the Season will do it, fair reason—
E'en Majesty honours the Mince Pie, I trow.

'Tis the fit food at Christmas—both savoury and stable,
Unwordly to place 'neath confectioner's yoke
Most warmly 'tis welcomed to every table
Which hails Merrie Christmas with good cheer and joke.

[illegible]
Could very well all other dainties decry.

Ay! the twelfth cake so proud, the admired of the crowd
Need crow not so loud o'er the pie that we laud—
Though its sugar-crust sheen, with Lords Commons and Queen
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
And stoutly must strive to the last "crack of doom"—
Though Famine's foul ear o'er one Island hath driven,
And flings on the other forebodings of gloom,
Yet, still let us hope that from Heaven's high cope,
Fair Plenty may come on the pinions of Spring—
That Ceres shall nourish—and Commerce shall flourish—
And England her heart-hymns of jubilee sing.

MUSIC.

FIRST PERFORMANCE OF "ROBERT BRUCE."

[illegible] MM. Cogniard
VARÉ and ALPHONSE ROYER. Scenery and Decorations by MM. Thierry
Séchan, Diéterle, Desplechin, Philastre, and Cambon.

The scene witnessed at the Académie Royale de Musique in Paris on Wednesday night (Dec. 30) on the first representation of Donizetti's long promised on the play bills, at the hour for opening the doors. The amateurs were very angry at the disappointment, the caprice of Madame Stoltz, the prima donna, being openly stated to be the cause of the last défaut. It may be presumed that there was no very kindly feeling on the part of Wednesday's auditory, here is taken, note by note, from the tenor introduction of "Zelmira," but was transposed for Barrolhet; the adagio was well received, but the cabaletta produced little effect. After the Humding Chorus from the "Donna del Lago," came a little of Niedermeyer's strains to introduce Arthur (Bettini), the faithful adherent of King Edward. Arthur sings of his love for Marie (Mdme. Stoltz), the daughter of Douglas. Then Marie has her delicious air known as the "O Mattutini," which Sontag used to sing so divinely. Here the transposition for

[illegible]

THE CHRISTMAS PIE.—PAINTED BY HUNT

[illegible] have forgiven the

[illegible]

[illegible] Chorus, and a Quatuor from Bianca, changed into a Sextuor, the strella of which,

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

reception-room, and took their seats; when immediately the performance commenced. We regret that circumstances will not admit of our entering, at length, in those critical details which Dr Mendelssohn's admirable work ought to elicit from us, and to be obliged, for the present, to content ourselves with stating that the vast plans of this composition—its dramatic, and at the same time its sacred character—the grandeur of its choral parts—the beauty and sentiment of its solo and concerted pieces—its massive and also delicate orchestration, render it quite worthy of the pen of its author

To the three principal singers engaged for the occasion—Miss Kirkham, Miss Morgan, and Miss Davis—did justice to the high importance parts allotted to them, and sang most effectively, amongst many concerted pieces, the trio, with the words, "Dun cœur qui t'aime." The chorists and the orchestra were not less perfect; and Mr. Baker Chesterton, who had the honour of presiding at the Organ, gave to his organ a power and degree of solemnity which were quite sublime, and excited general admiration.

We want words to portray the beauty, the pathos, the dignified tone, and classical recitation of M Brassour. We say recitation, because the great singer, although Leading the tragedy in his hands, very seldom had recourse to its contents to deliver the melodious poésie of Racine; and his standing up, instead of being seated, enabled him to add, by his action, a great degree of dramatic effect to his delivery, which, we have reason to believe, from the compliments paid him verbally by her Majesty and Prince Albert, at the conclusion of the performance, seemed to have been highly approved of by these illustrious personages

We cannot conclude this hurried notice without alluding to the exertions which we know Mr. Andersen, the Director of her Majesty's private band, made to render himself worthy of the confidence placed in him. Nothing could be better than all the material arrangements made previously by that gentleman; and the greatest praise is also due to him for the very careful and able manner in which he conducted the music.

After the performance the performers found an excellent supper prepared for them; and concluded this festive evening by drinking the loyalty that was shown them; and having the gratification, in cordial and exulting toasts, to wish Happiness and long life to their gracious Queen and the Royal Family.

MUSICAL CHIT CHAT

There have been divers Concerts during the week. The Ethiopian Serenaders have been a source of attraction at the St James's Theatre, and at Crosby Hall. On Tuesday night, the third of the Sacred Concerts, under Miss Mounsey's direction, was given at Crosby Hall, with Misses Rainforth and Bassano, Messrs Lockey, Francis, and J. L. Nowell, as the principal vocalists. On the same evening, Mr. J. L. Downe, first flautist of the Italian Opera at New Orleans, [illegible] at Bingrove's Rooms, in Mortimer-street, with Mrs. A. Gibbs, Mrs. J. Roe, Messrs. Allen and Collins, Mr. Weiss, and Signor Fumagalli, for singers. The instrumental soloists were Signor Casolani (contrabasso), Messrs. Hancock, W. J. Reed, and Guest (violoncelli), Mr. Dean (clarinet), Mr. Nicholson (oboe), and Mr. Downe (flute). Mr. C Blagrove was the accompanyist. On Thursday, Mr. J. L. Hatton, the pianist, vocalist, and composer, gave his entertainment at the Marylebone Literary and Scientific Institution, with the aid of Mr. J. W. Roe.

On Friday evening a Concert was given in aid of the funds of that excellent Institution, the Western Ophthalmic, at the Hanover-square Rooms, under Mr. Brinley Richards's direction, nearly all our leading native vocalists and instrumentalists living their gratuitous services. The Society's Concerts, given at Exeter Hall, for the last time this season, on Friday night, with Madame Caradori Allen, Miss Hawes, Mr. Manvers, and Mr. Phillips, as the principal vocalists. This evening is the meeting of the Western Madrigal Society. On Monday will be the ninth Concert of the Society of British Musicians. At the annual Choral Concert, at Manchester, Beethoven's "Mount of Olives" and Spohr's "Last Judgment" were performed, conducted by Sir George Smart. The vocalists were Miss Birch, Miss E. Birch, Mr. Lockey, and Mr. H. Phillips; Mr. C. Seymour led the band, and Mr Barlow was the organist. Letters from Rome state that Mr Ourry, the violinist, and Madame Ourry, the pianist, had been giving concerts, under the patronage of the Duke of Devonshire, with great success. A new ballet, by M. Fenzl, the music by Lindpaintner, called "Le Fils des Esprits," had been successfully produced at Stuttgard. The Lady Elizabeth of M. Taxer, in Berlin, was brilliantly attended. The oratorio of "David," by Klein, was well received on the 17th ult., at Berlin. The danseuse, Lola Montez, is about to retire from the stage, and settle at Munich

The Carnival season began at the Scala, in Milan, on the 27th of December, with Verdi's "Attila." Marini, the great basso, sustaining the principal part. He was supported by Madame Frezzolini, the tenor, Gardoni, and Miss Kemble, the star of the Scala in the late season, as she was of the Carlo, at Naples, was Madlle Stephanoni, a vocalist of some beauty, and one who bids fair to be at the head of the profession. She will be heard in London this season, at the Benefit at Covent Garden Theatre. The rehearsals of the chorus singers at the Royal Italian Opera have commenced. The renovation of the theatre is going on with the greatest activity, and the workmen are employed night and day. The prevailing colours will be white and gold, with crimson draperies. Grieve and Telbin are painting the new scenery, and M.M. Ferri and Versini, of Paris, the drop curtains. Mr. Holland is the Leader, and Mr. Alberti has the entire direction of the plans. Mr. Wilson is giving his Entertainments in Dublin. Balfe's "Bondman" has attracted crowded houses to Drury-Lane Theatre throughout the week. Mr. King sustained Shylock's part of Antonio with great ability. Both in the singing and acting. Mr. Loder's "Night Dancers," and Mrs Rodwell's "Seven Maids of Munich," are the attraction at the Princess' Theatre

THE THEATRES.

The Theatres are running on very smoothly with their Christmas Entertainments. Fortunately, a holiday audience is not a very discriminating one: they go to the playhouse almost as a point of superstition, and make up their minds to be amused; so that, just at present, whether the pieces are good, bad, or indifferent, the houses are all comfortably filled. We fulfil our last week's promise of noticing the Transpontine pantomimes.

The old Arabian Nights story of "Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves" has been taken for the groundwork of the Pantomime at ASTLEY'S, and a very excellent Christmas Entertainment has been made from it. The action of the old drama, upon which the success of the piece was originally founded, has been pruned, and made good fun of. We are not sure, however, whether our feelings of respect for the "Arabian Nights' Entertainments" are not somewhat upset, by finding its legends turned into Harlequinades. For we are sorry to say that the fullest extent, and almost regarded the volume with awe, as we pondered o'er the doings of its Genii, and Ghouls, and African Magicians, in whom we placed a [illegible] faith that we quite avoided Mr. Lane's unenforceable, although, no doubt, correct nomenclature, which entirely altered all our old friends—the Calenders and Vizirs especially. At the same time, we should be sorry for our prejudices on this point to have deprived the Transpontine audience of a charming Pantomime There is evidence of some care and outlay in the manner in which it has been produced—the fairy scenes being especially brilliant; and all the topics of the day are hit at—those concerning Free Trade and Cheap Bread being especially applauded by the denizens of the New Cut. The company of pantomimists [illegible] is an excellent one. Its members are active, graceful, and well up, in their [illegible]

A very good piece by Mr. Edward Stirling, of the true minor theatre melo-dramatic school, has been brought out at the SURREY, called "The Hand of Cards Game Life: Stakes Death;" out of which is engendered a show that it is of [illegible] thrilling interest" to successful dramas of its class—combining romantic incident with the occurrences of every-day life—of which "The Wreck Ashore" stands at the head. The instance, amongst the Surrey successes is called "The King of the Castle; or, Harlequin in the Land of Dreams" and is one of the good old-fashioned sort, full of fairies and grotesque monarchs, and comical heads; and such fun, such rumbustious fun, ensues, that the most noble personages of the characters, that the elder of the audience, at last, almost seem from sympathy and laughing. The Dublin family sustain the principal parts; and they are very good performers. In addition that they are according to their names in the bill, all of one family, a contemplative mind may be lost in bewilderment as to the scene of flip-flaps and tumbling they must present when at home. In addition to the feats of pantomimic agility "the only competent person," Punch, is introduced. It seems a sine qua non with the Surrey audience that their Pantomime should be a good long one; and, in this respect, they must be fully gratified.

The VICTORIA has brought forward a translation of the French drama, "Le Docteur Noir," which enjoyed such a long life at the Porte St. Martin theatre The piece, however, is notin itself by any means a good one. It owed its great success in Paris to the fine acting of Frederick Lemaitre and Mademoiselle Clarisse: and the splendid mise en scène which accompanied its production. The Pantomime, as we said last week, looked well, judging from the programme; and everything [illegible] carried out, its title, "The Birth of the Steam Engine," promising [illegible] allusions to the topics of these "go-a head" times, in which the different railway speculations only could be worked. Each piece must have attached to it something a little above the common run of Pantomimes. The House, at its present low price of admission, has been densely crowded

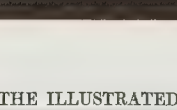
M. Perier's engagement at the FRENCH PLAYS is drawing to a close. His performance, coupled with that of "la reine des soubrettes," Mademoiselle Brohan, has proved most attractive. And on the off-nights, or on the occasions the off-mornings too, the Ethiopian Serenaders cause long lines of carriages to be in waiting in King-street, while the audience within are laughing at the "Buffalo Gals," admiring the energy of "Bones," or silently listening to poor "Lucy Neal."

PITIES OF DISTRESS IN IRELAND AND SCOTLAND.—A most praiseworthy [illegible] has been made for raising a bountiful fund, out of which real distress may be alleviated in the more distant parts of Ireland and Scotland, and upon a scale commensurate with the unfortunate occurrence of the occasion. The list of subscriptions is headed by her Majesty, for £3000; Prince Albert subscribed £500, the Duchess of Gloucester, £200; the Duke of Devonshire, £1000, the heads of the firm of "the Barings," £1000; Jones Loyd and Co., £1000; Baring Brothers and Co., £1000; Overend and Gurney, £1000; Messrs Smith, Payne, and Smith, £1000; Truman, Hanbury, and Co., £1000; and [illegible] other parties comparatively large amounts. In addition, penny subscriptions are actively carried on by tradesmen in the metropolis, the sums thus raised being also weekly forwarded to the distressed districts

THE PROPOSED NEW CITY HOUSE OF CORRECTION.—The inconveniences arising from the want of space in Giltspur-street Compter, which has long been found wholly inadequate to carry out a proper system of classification, will speedily be remedied, the goal committee having an intention to erect a building within five miles of the Royal Exchange, for the new house of correction for the City of London.

EVERYBODY'S COLUMN.

BY ALBERT SMITH.



ANY have been the answers addressed to us respecting the Charade relating to Sir Hyde's behaviour at Agincourt. Some of our Correspondents deserve great credit for the evident distance they must have travelled in the realms of invention to fetch their answers: but none of them are satisfactory We must again state our belief that it is perfectly unanswerable: albeit it is the best imitation of the real thing that could well be conceived. By the way, we hear that it is generally said to have been written by the late Mr. Praed, and not by Sir Walter Scott, as we stated cuts ask for another puzzle. Here is one for them—

WHY IS THIS THE CHEAPEST PLACE TO GO TO, TO BUY POULTRY?

One or two of our fair Correspond-

THE DOMESTIC DAGUERREOTYPE.

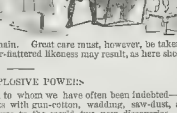
In an age like the present, which appears a most rampant one, with respect to portraits, if we may judge from the advertisements of conflicting photographers; and artists of shilling profiles, who have always got their rooms for "only two days longer!" but, like the Chinese Collection, never come to a close: the following plain directions for making "every man somebody else's artist," may be acceptable

Place your subject between a candle and the wall. Then draw the outline of his shadow with charcoal, and a bold profile will remain. Great care must, however, be taken to place the candle properly, or an over-flattered likeness may result, as here shown.

NEW EXPLOSIVE POWERS.

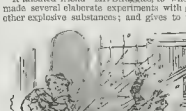
A talented friend—Mr. Straggles, to whom we have often been indebted—has made several elaborate experiments with gun-cotton, wadding, saw-dust, and other explosive substances; and gives to the world two new discoveries. He finds that the common domestic chesnut is a most dangerous and powerful engine; and, in fact, that Captain Warner's scheme has failed, inasmuch as to defend the passes of Temple-bar against any force, if government will only secure him the baked apple and chesnut stall on the Strand ruins. The following cut, taken by permission from his forthcoming pamphlet, shows the manner in which he made the discovery, by being himself driven back by a species of infernal machine under the direction of a female Fieschi.

The Gun-water, or Eau de Carrare, he describes as equally powerful; in fact, it is now manufactured under the pressure of several atmospheres, strong enough to be used to settle disputes at the West End: a blow with the cork being considered sufficient to satisfy all the requisites of honour. Lamentable accidents have, however, taken place by charging the water with too much gas, when the bottles have gone off spontaneously at dinner, from the heat of the room, and produced the terrible results pictured. In fact, as we before feared, modern chemists are proving the world to be one great detonating ball, only waiting until it is fragmized some other planet "to burst up," as the American poet finely observes, "and smash all creation teetotally."



DANCING LONDON.

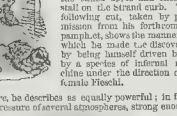
The lively Terpsicho...an saint, St. Vitus, of whose remarkable activity in the Middle Ages we hear such wondrous legends, appears to have re-visited London; and not only come himself, but turned a host of Tarantula spiders loose upon town to infect the public: for nothing is now heard of all over London but dancing. Castles, Rosinis, Frascatis, and other marvellous names are rising up everywhere; and it is said, that, when Mr Grattan Cooke finishes his season at the Holborn Baths, M. Juillien will take them for his new Egyptian Quadrilles, in the last figure of which—"The Rising of the Nile" a grand effect will be produced by turning all the water on at once. It will be not rid of as at the next dance by what the "Gent's Fashionable Slicomakers" call



POLKA LUMPS.

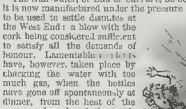
M. Juillien has, with HERR Koenig, passed several nights lately in the British Museum, to see if the head of Memnon vocalised at all at daybreak, as the ancients reported it to have done. He has not as yet heard it; but, as soon as he does, he will enter into an arrangement with the trustees, to add it to his orchestra

Our Artist, who is always at one or the other of these popular resorts, is bringing out a work, called "The Book of the People," as a companion to The Heads of the same intelligent class. From his graphic portfolio, we select



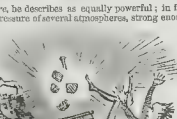
THE POLKA AS IT OUGHT TO BE DANCED.

He next pourtrays the indecent attitude of the painful savages who still give way to the toe-and-heel atrocities of



THE POLKA AS IT OUGHT NOT TO BE DANCED.

And lastly, with especial reference to the public dancing-rooms,



THE POLKA AS IT IS DANCED.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

The "first flower of the Turf" for 1847 has just made its appearance in the shape of the first number of the Racing Calendar for the present year. It is a goodly massive. The nominations for the stakes which closed on New Year's Day, show, in almost every instance, the progress of the popularity of our great National Sport. The Chester Cup has 177 subscribers—a prodigious multitude named for a race on a course where more than half a dozen can run with convenience. In like manner, the plates are full to overflowing—thirty for Lord Westminster's prize of that ilk; forty nine for the Cheshire Stakes; and so forth. And these are none of your rebâte either. Most of the best horses in England are engaged for the meeting Lord by the pleasant waters of the river Dee. Speculation, too, has set in assert its issues, the mighty Cup being already established as a marketable commodity. Now, suppose we gossip a little about the prices at which its bargains are offered. There were four animals in the betting among the very wide awake division in the provinces, early in the week, namely, Fitzallen, Newcourt, Antler, and Corn Cob. The odds were 50 to 1 against each. Now the first was not out at all last year—neither was the latter—whence you may argue (if you please) that they are this year the fresher for their holiday, or (if it like you better) that eclipses in '46 are not the most profitable runs on the turf for '47. It is the fact, as we opine, that Newcourt has gone to Northleach, there to be got ready for operations. We should not be surprised if Isaac Day did not back him, and got him well home. He will, very probably, be thought cheap at half his present price. Antler will, perhaps, be in on flattering terms; but what's the use of that? His temper is too fugitive—we can't trust him.

But the reader is anxious to learn how and when a little money is to be honestly got out of the Chester Cup. The easiest thing in nature—with nerve and patience. We'll tell an absolute secret, and is under the "rose" in almost every instance, not to mention the chance of some second Eclipse being hacked at your own figure—and then lay against him, and win, of course: such a game as Red Deer won't be played again this century. Leaving, however, these theories for the present, and the general status of the Turf, with a general expression of congratulation, we will deal with the most important fact of the Calendar—the weighting for the Newmarket Handicap

With comparatively a small entry, we find its top weight, Alarm, sentenced to carry 9st. 4lbs., probably to let him have another "shy" at the burden -9st. 4lbs. having beaten him in the autumn for the Cambridgeshire. The result will be, however, the same, to all sober calculation We don't mean, nevertheless, this exception, to set down all we think won't win or can't win not always synonymous with terms when applied to the issue of a handicap—(or indeed of any other race) but just to touch on those nominations which have least the appearance of forlorn hopes. Foremost, then, of the likely lot is Sting, with 8st. 6lbs. on him, on a pound less than he was once expected to win the Derby with. Still, despite his Epsom performance, and his playing a walking gentleman at Doncaster, his achievement at Newmarket for the St. Leger was a good one He shall be a winner for us. So shall Wood Pigeon, at 7st. 11lbs.; ditto Refraction, carrying a pound less. On our creditor side, also, shall stand Collingwood, Brevissima, and so should Projectile, only he won't start, we imagine. Some stupid reader may growl, "Why d'ye allow him 6lbs. than all these?" The folks with brains in their heads will appreciate our delicate way of giving a hint. The "tag-rag-and-bob-tail" is uncommon bad that's the fact but it ought not to be quite unpeopled, "experto crede," by any means. Suppose we say in the lot under 8st. with the few elegant extracts quoted above. It won't be a bad bet to take long odds against your side; without being vulgar, we—"wish you may get it."

TATTERSALL'S.

MONDAY.—The nominations for the Chester Cup have exceeded all precedent as well as expectation, but have not, as yet, added materially to the labours of the book-makers. The Derby speculations were ruled entirely by last week's prices, but were generally in small sums. The horses most in request were the three favourites, Lunedale and War Eagle. The Oaks was touched upon, and the Farmer's Daughter backed freely at 12 to 1.

CHESTER CUP.

50 to 1 agst Newcourt (t)	66 to 1 agst Parch (t)	66 to 1 agst Crown Prince (t)
50 to 1 — Uncle Ben (t)	66 to 1 — Bye (t)	66 to 1 — Rose ckburn (t)
50 to 1 — Duke of Rich-	66 to 1 — Red Rover (t)	100 to 1 — Master Downes
mond (t)	66 to 1 — Rebellion (t)	(t)
	66 to 1 — Lamb (t)

DERBY.

15 to 2 agst Van Tromp (t)	35 to 1 agst Melbourne an	50 to 1 agst The Liberator
15 to 1 — Epsom Lively	40 to 1 — Red Deer	50 to 1 — Projectile
17 to 1 — Planet (t)	45 to 1 — Wood Pigeon (t)	66 to 1 — The Reverend
25 to 1 — Sting (t)	45 to 1 — Lucifer Matches	66 to 1 — Antler
25 to 1 — Collingwood	45 to 1 — Refraction (t)	66 to 1 — War Eagle (t)
35 to 1 — Lunedale (t)	45 to 1 — Marpessa colt	Freyer
	100 to 1 agst Whetstone (t)

OAKS.

15 to 1 agst Slander	12 to 1 agst The Farmer's Daughter (t)
15 to 1 — Amazonina (t)	16 to 1 — Miami (t)

THURSDAY Laziness was on too small a scale to call for a word of observation

TWO THOUSAND GUINEAS STAKES

4 to 1 agst Planet (t) | 5 to 1 agst Gratitude (t)

NEWMARKET HANDICAP.

Mr. B Green's horses, The Lamb and Comet, were declared to be struck out on the publication of the Handicap this afternoon.

CHESTER CUP.

The only bets to our knowledge were 66 to 1 agst The Flash, and 100 to 1 agst Red Rover to £5 each.

DERBY.

15 to 2 agst Epsom (t)	35 to 1 agst Lunedale	50 to 1 agst The Liberator (t)
25 to 1 — Sheriff (t)	50 to 1 — Christopher (t)	66 to 1 — War Eagle (t)
	100 to 1 agst Lunatone (t)

OAKS.

16 to 1 agst Miami (t)

SCOTLAND.

INCREASE OF DISTRESS. The accounts from the Highlands and Islands of Scotland are very distressing. The labouring population of Sutherlandshire, Ross-shire, Inverness-shire, Argyleshire, the Western Islands, and the Zetland Islands, are at this moment threatened with starvation in consequence of the total failure of the potato crop. Already have many of these poor people perished from cold and famine, and more horrible are the sufferings of the destitute Irish, we believe they are quite equalled by those of the poor inhabitants of the Highlands and Islands of Scotland; but, as there are no Coroner's inquests in Scotland, and but few local newspapers, deaths from starvation take place, and the public are uninformed of the occurrence. Under these circumstances, the Edinburgh Committee for the Relief of Destitution in the Highlands, have determined to appoint a deputation to proceed to London for the purpose of holding a public meeting and laying the claims of the suffering population of the Highlands before the people of England

HORRIBLE MURDER WITH RELEASE IN SCOTLAND.—The Scotch papers, particularly those of Edinburgh and Glasgow, continue to record numerous robberies, committed with great violence and audacity, within their respective localities. We give a specimen from the Glasgow Herald:—On Wednesday evening, about six o'clock, while a respectable man, just arrived from Dunkeld, was going up a stair in 35, Charlotte-street, he was seized by the throat by one villain, knocked down by another, and his vest, guard-chain, and under coat torn open by a third, for the purpose of rifling his pockets. Fortunately his watch was securely placed in his fob, and the cries of "Murder! Police!" in the interim, seemed to have scared the robbers, who ran off, leaving the first kicked man to the mercy of those on the side of the street. In the struggle the poor man's teeth were driven through his lips.

IMPROVEMENT OF THE WORKING CLASSES.—Another instance of the beneficial results attending the popular exhibition of works of science and art, and of the perfect safety with which the public may be admitted to inspect them, has just occurred in Glasgow, under the auspices of the Philosophical Society of that city. The machines, manufactures, paintings, and antiquities, were exhibited in the City Hall. "The exhibition," says the Scottish Guardian, "was thrown open gratuitously on Monday to the working classes on Friday the 2nd, and Monday the 4th of January. On Friday, 16,206 people were admitted; on Saturday, 18,600; and on Monday, the number amounted to above 19,200. The number in the hall was usually between 1000 and 1500 at a time; and it would have been impossible for persons in any station of society to have shown more anxiety for the safety of the objects confided to them."

IRELAND.

POOR RELIEF MEETING AT ANDOVER.—On Tuesday morning, a highly respectable meeting was held in the Town-hall, Andover, to take into consideration the present condition of the poor residing in and around Andover, and to devise means for their relief. Thomas Philips, Esq., Mayor, was voted to the chair. Letters were read from Ralph Etwall, Esq., M.P. for the borough, and H. B. Cokes, Esq., of Long Parish, regretting their inability to attend, through indisposition, each inclosing a cheque for £20; and a letter from the Rev. Mr. Dyson, of Tidworth, was announced. Various resolutions were proposed and agreed to. The borough was divided into four districts, and four gentlemen were appointed to go round to the dwellings of those who can afford to subscribe, and solicit all to contribute to this much required charity

THE PENINSULAR MEDALS.—A commission has been appointed to decide upon the medals which are to be presented to the officers and men who served in the Peninsula, under Wellington, and other commanders. Sir Charles Dalbiac is appointed President of this body, and his colleagues are two other field-officers of distinction. The medal will be struck as soon as informed, nineteen medals, commemorative of battles, sieges, &c., and it is estimated that some millions of these will have to be provided

THE SCARCITY OF FOOD IN FRANCE. A letter has been received at Manchester from Mr. Cobden, M.P., dated Marseilles, Dec. 29, 1846, from which we give the following interesting extract:—"I find an immense movement in corn here. The port is crowded with ships. Upwards of 1,200,000 quarters of wheat have been imported, and nearly all of it is gone into the interior, chiefly in the direction of Lyons, by cars. The roads are so cut up by the traffic that they resemble rivers in mud. The French Government has suspended the navigation laws, and corn is brought in free of duty, by ships of all nations, from any ports. A large portion of it is imported here from the Black Sea, in Greek ships. I hear there is still a vast supply in Southern Russia—that the Russian harvest is most abundant."

SUSPENSION OF TRANSPORTATION.—Circulars have been sent to various parts of the country from the Secretary of State for the Home Department, stating that in consequence of the suspension of the transportation of the convicts to Van Diemen's Land, it would be necessary to provide increased accommodation in the gaols—requesting to know the greatest number of prisoners confined in the gaol in one year, and promising to pay the cost of maintenance of convicted prisoners.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

ANOTHER RAILWAY CASE.

In the SHERIFF'S COURT on Thursday, an action was tried, Pelhill, to recover the sum of £19 19s. for services rendered by the plaintiff as clerk to the Cambridge and Colchester Railway Company. The defendant, who was sued as a provisional committeeman, pleaded that he was not indebted.

Mr. Lush said, that although recently there had been several contesting elections as to the liabilities of provisional committeemen, yet in this case he could not conceive what the defence could be, as the defendant's name appeared in the Prospectuses as one of the provisional committeemen and directors, and he attended most of the meetings. The plaintiff only entered one minute a week, which could not be deemed unreasonable. The plaintiff had brought an action against another gentleman for a part of his salary, but for that p. t the defendant was not liable

Mr. W. H. Alkin was called, and proved that he saw the plaintiff at the offices of the company, in the Old Jewry Chambers. The defendant joined the company on the 26th October; attended a meeting on the 1st of November, 1845, and moved a resolution for an adjournment of the meeting: and he handed that adjourned meeting on the 8th, when an amalgamation with another line was proposed, but it was not carried out. He could not say that he had seen him at any meeting before the 24th of October, and the 8th November; and it was probable that he only joined for the purpose of an amalgamation to render it a substantial company.

A document was put in, in which defendant and others entered into an agreement with plaintiff and another person, as promoters and trustees of the company, to take up shares, and act as provisional committeemen and directors.

Mr Udall objected to its admission as evidence, on the ground that it was not stamped.

The Under-Sheriff took a note of the objection

Mr Udall, for the defendant, submitted that there was no evidence to go to the Jury. It had been shown that the plaintiff was employed in August, and as there was no proof of the terms, it must be taken as a general hiring for a year. He quoted "Fossett and Cash, 5 Ad., and Ellis," in support of that argument

The Under-Sheriff said the question had not been raised before, but he thought that, even in the absence of the agreement, the case raised the question the jury whether defendant had adopted the agreement, and availed himself of the services of plaintiff

Mr Udall contended that, at all events, the defendant could only be liable from the 24th of October to the 8th of November; and urged that plaintiff might be deemed a trustee, and did the work in that capacity.

The Under-Sheriff said the question was, did the defendant hold himself out as liable, and did the plaintiff rely on him. Every case depended on the peculiar circumstances.—Verdict for defendant.

CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT.

CHARGE OF ATTEMPTED MURDER.

On Wednesday, George Wilmott, 55, labourer, was indicted for cutting and wounding Susannah Haynes, with intent to murder her In other counts the intention of the prisoner was laid to be to do the grievous bodily harm to her.

It appeared from the evidence that Mrs. Haynes lived with her husband in a cottage [illegible] Mr. Haynes was employed [illegible] The prisoner lived in the same neighbourhood, and appeared to have been on friendly terms with the prosecutrix and her husband up to the time of the [illegible] action in question, which took place in the evening of the 14th of November. At that time it appeared that the prisoner went to the cottage, where Mrs. Haynes was alone at the time, awaiting her husband's return to supper, and after some ordinary conversation, while the prosecutrix was in the act of turning towards the fire, she received a tremendous blow upon the head from the prisoner. She seized him, and a struggle took place between them, during which she received other injuries, but at length her cries brought assistance, and the prisoner made his escape. The prosecutrix was found in a fainting state, and almost covered with blood; and it appeared from the testimony of the surgeon that the injuries she received were of a very serious character, and that at one time he apprehended a fatal result. When the prisoner was apprehended he admitted he had assaulted the prosecutrix, and said he had done it for satisfaction and revenge.

The prisoner in his defence denied that he had ever said anything about satisfaction and revenge, but said that on the night in question he went to the prosecutrix's cottage, and they had a little dispute, and she [illegible] of the collar, and threatened to give him in charge for deserting his wife. This irritated him, and he took up the candlestick and struck her on the head in order to make her loose her hold, but she kept pushing him along, and when she got him outside, she left hold of him, and he walked away; and this, he said, was "the long and short of it."

The Jury found the prisoner "Guilty" upon that count in the indictment charging his intent to be to do grievous bodily harm, as I

Mr. Justice ERLE sentenced the prisoner to transportation for life.

THE CASE OF SWINDLING IN CHURCH

Robert Warmington Crosther, 34, described as a labourer, was indicted for felon.ously forging and uttering an order for £30, with intent to defraud Messrs. Dixon, the bankers, Cannery-lane

It appeared that the prisoner had been employed as clerk to an attorney named Shearman, who kept an account at Messrs. Dixon's, and it was proved that the forged cheque was in the handwriting of the prisoner, and one of the notes that had been paid for it was afterwards found in him

The prisoner received a good character from his brother, who is a clergyman of the Church of England, and several other respectable persons.

The Jury found him "Guilty," but recommended him to mercy, and Mr. Justice Maule sentenced him to be transported for ten years.

There were other charges of a similar character against the prisoner, and the clerk at the new church at Chelsea applied to the Court to order the restitution of some money that was found upon the prisoner, and which had been obtained from him by a forged cheque, that had been given to him by the prisoner in payment of the church fees upon the occasion of his marriage. It appeared, it appeared, given the clerk an order for £5 upon Messrs. Dixon, and received the difference

Mr. Justice Maule said, he should not make any order, but he did not think the policeman ought to object to give up the money under the circumstances.

ALLEGED MANSLAUGHTER

On Thursday, Mathew Ford, aged 21, described as a coachman, was tried for feloniously killing and slaying William Lee Riddy

Mr Ballantine stated the case to the Jury. The prisoner and the deceased were the drivers of rival omnibuses, running from the City to Brixton It appeared that the deceased and the prisoner were driving towards Brixton between four and five o'clock on the 14th of December last, and that they commenced to run against each other. After running nearly equal for some time, the omnibus driven by the prisoner got slightly a-head of that which the deceased was driving, as they passed the George Canning public-house, near Acre-lane. The prisoner's omnibus was at this time in the middle of the road. The deceased whipped his horses on and attempted to pass when the prisoner pulled right across the deceased's horses—the two vehicles came in contact—the omnibus of the deceased, having been pulled to the right, was knocked against a lamp-post, and the deceased was thrown off, and, falling under the horses, he received serious injuries, of which he died in a few days

Several witnesses were called, who proved the facts of the case; and from whose evidence it appeared that both parties were equally guilty; and that it was the uniform practice of some of the Brixton omnibuses to pursue a system of furious driving, to the imminent danger of the public

Mr. Clarkson having addressed the Jury

Several very respectable witnesses were called as to character, who spoke of the prisoner as a sober, careful, and well-conducted young man.

Mr. Justice Maule summed up.

The Jury returned a verdict of "Not guilty."

POLICE.

ROBBERY FROM THE UNIVERSITY CLUB HOUSE

A clerk, named Francis William Schultze, who was apprehended at Leeds, has been examined at MARLBOROUGH-STREET, on a charge of having stolen upwards of £700 in notes and gold from the University Club, in Suffolk-street, Pall-mall. The circumstances which led to the apprehension of the prisoner at Leeds were these:—He made his appearance at Leeds about a week ago, and took up his [illegible] Hotel. The style in which the prisoner lived, the quantity of [illegible] which he made, and the large sum of money apparently at his command, soon to his youthful appearance, excited so much suspicion that a communication was made to Read, the high constable, as information had been received of a large robbery of notes and gold from the University Club House, and as the description of the offender's person exactly tallied with that of the visitor at the Royal Hotel, the constable concluded that the parties were one and the same person, and accordingly the prisoner was taken into custody. The prisoner was soon afterwards identified as the individual who stood charged with the robbery in question

Mr. Charles Willich, secretary to the University Club, said the prisoner was his private clerk, and lived in the house in Suffolk-street. On Thursday week, witness placed in a box about £700 in notes and money, and this box was locked up in the safe in the office. The money placed in the cash-box consisted of £50, £10, and £5 Bank of England notes. On Christmas-day, witness found that the cash-box had been taken out of the safe. The box was afterwards found in a [illegible] at the top of the house, occupied by the prisoner, broken open, and robbed of its contents.

Edward Read, high constable of Leeds, said that on Monday last, in consequence of information he received, he went to the Royal Hotel, Leeds, and had an interview with the prisoner. Witness had also an account of a robbery in London, with a description of the offender's person, and, on seeing the prisoner, he told him that he was not the individual described in the circular, at the same time asking him he need not answer the question unless he pleased. The prisoner would make no confession, but as witness felt confident the prisoner was the party respecting whom the communication had been made to the police, he took him into custody. Witness found on the dressing-table upwards of £12 in silver. In a bag he found 320 sovereigns. In the prisoner's pockets he found £220 in five pound notes, a ten pound note, and a fifty pound note. Witness also found on the prisoner a gold watch, gold guard, and breast-pin, all of which he produced

George Spencer, clerk to the Club, said he received a cheque on Drummond's for £836 10s. 1d. from Mr. Willich to get cashed on the 24th of December. He obtained from the bankers three £50, thirty £10, and sixty-four £5 notes, besides the balance in cash. The money was placed in the cash-box, and this box was deposited in the safe. Witness placed the key of the safe in a drawer under the counter, which drawer witness locked up

Charles Spratt, clerk at Drummond's, said he paid a cheque in notes and gold to the last witness. He could not, however, say what the numbers of the notes were which the witness received

Mr Long said it was necessary to have evidence on this point, and, therefore, he should order the prisoner to be remanded for that purpose.

ANOTHER LADY SWINDLER.

On Saturday last, at GUILDHALL, Elizabeth Baker, a respectable-looking female, about forty years of age, was charged with defrauding the National Linen Company, at the corner of Farringdon-street and Fleet-street, of goods to the amount of nearly £30

Mr Lewis stated the case. About the 7th of December the prisoner called at the warehouse, with a person she represented to be her husband, to look at some Brussels carpeting she had selected a day or two before, when she said she was going to furnish a house. The husband approved of the choice made by the lady, and the carpet planner was sent to take measure. He was shown the two parlours of the house, No. 51, Herbert-street, New North-road. She also ordered some curtains. The goods were sent home on the 16th, and were [illegible] for on delivery. The party was entirely a stranger, and did not ask for credit; and if he had supposed the goods were not to be paid for directly, the prisoner would not have sent them. Instead of paying for them when the invoice was presented, she wanted more goods, and when these were taken she still wanted more. She was going to have a party on Christmas Day. The last goods were sent on the 23rd of December, and then she evaded payment by saying that she had been to Fleet-street, and arranged to pay on Saturday, when a cheque would be given for the amount upon the production of the receipt. The [illegible] that what the lady said was true, and that his employers were content to be paid at that time. On the very next day, however, she removed from the house, and the application on the 26th was fruitless. She was, however, traced to have taken a house in Bartlett's-buildings, Holborn. Mr. Williams, the manager at the Company's warehouse, went, accompanied by an officer, and entered the house by stratagem. Two blankets, and some articles of trifling value, the property of the prosecutors, were all that remained; but a dozen hats, some caps, and other articles supposed to have been obtained by fraud from other tradesmen, were seized. Mrs. Baker accounted for the absence of the carpets, &c., by saying that they had been taken under an execution. The officer had great difficulty in forcing from her a pocket-book containing a number of duplicates

Mr. Williams, and other persons belonging to the National Linen Company, proved that the goods were sold for payment on delivery. It appeared that the house in Bartlett's-buildings was taken by a short gentleman, a civil engineer, who gave the name of Robert Sparkes, who referred to Mr. Baker, of 51, Herbert-street, and Mr. Meymott, of Charles-street, Northampton-square. Mr. Baker was not at home, but Mrs. Baker, the prisoner, gave him an excellent character, and said he had been for four years the tenant of one of their houses

Mr. Head, for the prisoner, put questions as to who gave the character, how the house was entered without a warrant, &c., as he was sure his client must be discharged, as he would bring actions at law.

One of the witnesses admitted that, though he took the bill, and was to be paid on delivery, he did not ask for the money.

Mr. Alderman Johnson said he should give the complainant a further opportunity of finding the property, and Mr. Sparkes, and he remanded the prisoner.

THE ROBBERY OF THE WARWICK AND LEAMINGTON BANK

It will be recollected that in July, 1845, a clerk in the Warwick and Leamington Bank, named Wm. Thos. Haynes, was stated to have stolen a parcel, containing one hundred £10 notes, with which he had been intrusted by the firm to deposit in the post-office at Warwick; and that Daniel Forrester, accompanied by superintendent Roby, of the London police, apprehended the accused at Calais, but was prevented from taking him away by the defective condition of the international law between the two countries.

Haynes, last Saturday, suddenly gave himself up to John Forrester, at the MANSION HOUSE, stating that it was his determination to meet the charge before the Lord Mayor, and, if necessary, before the Central Criminal Court. He appeared to be very much dejected, and was accordingly committed.

George Blaynay, the brother of the prisoner, was taken for the robbery soon after the commission of it, he having, it was believed, received the parcel from his brother, and a man named Jennings was apprehended on the charge of having been receiver, and both were at the ensuing assizes convicted, and sentenced to a limited term of transportation, while the prisoner, who has thus given himself into custody, escaped to France

John Forrester having stated to the Lord Mayor the fact that the prisoner had called upon him to give himself up for trial, the prisoner, in answer to the question of the Lord Mayor, said he was ready to meet the charge

The prisoner was remanded, and directions were immediately forwarded to the Warwick and Leamington Bank to send witnesses to town

On Tuesday, he was again brought up

Mr. Mullins, from the firm of Bush and Mullins, solicitors to the Committee of Bankers for protection against forgeries and frauds, attended for the prosecution

Mr Sommerville, one of the persons connected with the Banking Company, stated that the prisoner was the person named in the warrant in the possession of Daniel Forrester, the officer

The prisoner said he had no observation to make, and was delivered up to Daniel Forrester, for the purpose of being conveyed to Warwick for examination.

THE FLORES EXPEDITION FOR SOUTH AMERICA

Much interest was excited at the THAMES Police-office, on Tuesday. Colonel Richard Wright, Consul-general for the state of Equador, and alleged to be the head of an expedition which was about to be fitting out from this country for South America, was charged, at the instance of Inspector Forrester, of the Thames police, with a violation of the 2nd section of the Foreign Enlistment Act, 59th of George III., cap. 69.

Lieut. W. Sleigh, R.N., was held to bail on a similar charge on the 27th ult., it being understood that he was about to take the command of the naval armament intended to join the expedition. The Grand Jury at the Central Criminal Court have returned a true bill for Misdemeanour against Capt. Sleigh, but the case has been removed by certiorari into the Queen's Bench

The chief witness in support of the information was Captain Harvey Tuckett, who had accepted an appointment of Lieutenant-Colonel in the expedition. When the Captain's evidence was concluded, he was cross-examined by Mr Ballantine

Mr. Ballantine: I presume I may take it, Captain Tuckett, that you are the informer in this case?—EXPLAIN.

Mr. Ballantine: And became so because you could not get [illegible] No: I claimed it on my own behalf, and not at the other office.

Mr. Ballantine: Come, answer my question plainly, yes or no?—No.

Mr. Ballantine: Then what other motive had you?—Colonel Wright has not duly behaved himself towards me and the officers under me, but has made my victuals my word of honour to the half-starved recruits, who were without food or clothes.

Mr Ballantine: You say you were a Captain in the 11th Dragoons?—Witness: Yes, about eleven years since. If you choose, I can give you the date of my commission

Mr Ballantine: No, I do not desire to know more about you than my position absolutely requires. Pray was that the last profession you followed?—Witness: No; I was a merchant in the City

Mr. Ballantine: What merchant?—An East India merchant

Mr. Ballantine: In what commodities did you deal?—In everything that you could name. (Loud laughter)

Mr. Ballantine: Then you were what is called a general dealer?—No; I was an East India agent, and furnished the messes with wine, plate, and other commodities

Mr. Ballantine: Oh! that is what you call an East India merchant. I believe you failed in that capacity?—I did.

Mr. Ballantine: Well, what did you try next? I think you turned actor. Yes, and played at the Queen's, the Lyceum, and other theatres.

Mr. Ballantine: Who recommended you to Colonel Wright?—Mr. Henderson, secretary to the Spanish bondholders

Mr Ballantine: Did you, on the day prior to Colonel Wright's, you were perfectly destitute?—I did not. I had £25 with me, and no person could call himself destitute with that sum.

Mr Ballantine: What expenses were you put to that would warrant a demand of £[illegible] The expenses of my outfit.

After the production of some documentary evidence, Mr. Yardley said he considered that it was a case which could be met by bail; whereupon Mr. Portbury said he was instructed by the Customs to require higher bail than was put in for Captain Sleigh, who held a subordinate position in the expedition.

Mr. Yardley considered that the defendants were held to bail, himself in £400 and two sureties in £200 each, it would be quite sufficient security

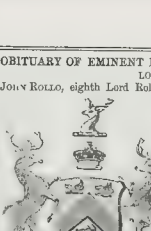
The securities were immediately entered into, and the case was remanded for a week. The defendant is a man of high distinction, and has frequently been at the Royal table.

SUICIDE AT ETON.—An act of self-destruction was committed on Sunday morning by a man named Samuel Chapman, aged 56, who, for the last twenty years, had been in the employ of Mr. Rogerson, manufacturer of soap, of Eton. He was discovered upon his knees on the floor of his sleeping room, at his lodgings, in Brocas-lane, surrounded by blood. He had inflicted a wound in his throat two inches deep, severing his windpipe, and several times he had struck [illegible] with the blade of a large pocket-knife, without a handle. Mr. Hammond, surgeon, who was immediately sent for, sewed up the wound; the man begging that his life, if possible, might be saved. He expired from exhaustion, in consequence of the loss of blood, in less than four hours afterwards

FEARFUL DEATH OF A BRIDE.—On Saturday week as Mr and Mrs. Jacques, of Jarrow, who had been married only five days, were proceeding along a railway near to Newcastle-upon-Tyne, they came to an inclined plane, up which Mr. Jacques proposed they should ride upon the waggons. His wife assented, and on attempting to get into the waggons she fell, and seven of them passed over her. She was immediately taken up and conveyed to Newcastle Infirmary, where she died shortly after. Mr. Jacques had conducted a school in Jarrow, and he and his wife were on the eve of going to a more extensive field of labour when this fearful accident happened.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED.

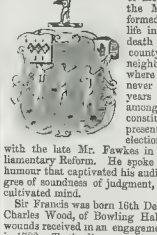
LORD ROLLO



JOHN ROLLO, eighth Lord Rollo, of Duncrub, county Perth, died last week. His Lordship succeeded to the title sixty-two years ago, at the decease, in 1782, of his father, James, seventh Baronet, and sat in Parliament as a Representative Peer for Scotland. He was born 22d April, 1773, and married, 12th June, 1806, Agnes, daughter of William Greig, Esq., of Gaj field Place, by whom he has left issue three sons and two daughters.

Early in life Lord Rollo served in the Scots Fusilier Guards, and carried the colours of that regiment at the battle of Lincelles, in Flanders.

SIR FRANCIS LINDLEY WOOD, BART.



THIS venerable and much respected Baronet died on the 31st ult. His illness was short; and his son, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, only arrived from London this Monday previously. Sir Francis performed the duties of a country gentleman's life in the most exemplary manner, and his death has cast a deep gloom throughout the county of York, and more especially in the neighbourhood of Hickleton, near Doncaster, where he constantly resided. Sir Francis never went into Parliament, but for forty years he took an active and leading part among the Whigs of Yorkshire, in support of constitutional principles. He proposed the present Earl Fitzwilliam at his several elections for that county, and co-operated with the late Mr. Fawkes in the meetings held to promote Parliamentary Reform. He spoke in public with a heartiness and good humour that captivated his audience, and, at the same time, with a degree of soundness of judgment, clearness, and ability, that bespoke a cultivated mind.

Sir Francis was born 16th December, 1771, the elder son of Captain Charles Wood, of Bowling Hall, a gallant naval officer, who died of wounds received in an engagement with Sufferin, the French Admiral, in 1782. To the Baronetcy he succeeded at the decease of his uncle, the late Sir Francis Wood, who obtained the creation, with a special limitation to his nephews.

By Mary Anne, his wife, daughter and co-heir of Samuel Buck, Esq., of New Grainges, Recorder of Leeds, Sir Francis Wood leaves, besides the present Baronet, Sir Charles Wood, Chancellor of the Exchequer, who is married to Lady Mary Grey, daughter of the late Earl Grey, another son, Samuel Francis, and one daughter, Anne, wife of John Walbanke Childers, Esq., of Cantley, Co. York.

PEREGRINE EDWARD TOWNELEY, ESQ., OF TOWNELEY, COUNTY LANCASTER.

AMONG the great landed proprietors still to be found in the ranks of the untitled aristocracy, the Towneleys, of Towneley, whether regarded for wealth or ancestral distinction, may be classed in the foremost position. The family pedigree can be authentically deduced from the time of Alfred the Great; and scarcely a generation has passed away, from the remote period when the designation of Towneley was first assumed, in which the name cannot be honourably traced. In 1481, Sir Richard Towneley received Knighthood from Lord Stanley at Hutton Field, in Scotland, for his gallantry on that occasion; and his son, Sir John Towneley, was also a memorable person of the time. He enjoyed the estate nearly sixty years, and augmented it by numerous purchases, enclosed the Park at Hapton, and built the tower; founded the Chauntry of St. Mary, at Burnsley; erected the Chapel at Towneley; lived to see the marriage of his grandson, Sir Richard Towneley, with the richly-portioned heiress of Wymbish of Nocton; avoided the Pilgrimage of Grace, that ruined so many of his neighbours, and at last died, full of years and honours, about 1540.

At the outbreak of the great Civil War, the Towneleys ranged themselves under the Royal banner; and their chief, Charles Towneley, Esq., of Towneley, fell at Marston Moor. In the sequel, they suffered severely by sequestration; so severely, that their fine demesne of Nocton (rendered familiar to the public during the past year in connexion with Lord Ripon) was obliged to be sold by Richard Towneley, eminent as a philosopher and mathematician, in order to repair the breaches thus caused. Despite, however, of these losses—which affected in an especial degree the old Catholic families—the landed estate that descended to the respected gentleman whose decease we record, was of great value—estimated at full £50,000 per annum.

Mr. Towneley died at Towneley, on the 31st ult., in the 85th year of his age. He was only son of the late John Towneley, Esq., and first cousin of Charles Towneley, Esq., the accomplished collector of the Towneley Marbles. By Charlotte Theresa, his wife, daughter of Robert Drummond, Esq., of Cadlands, Hants, he leaves a daughter, Frances, Lady Camoys, and two sons, of whom the elder, the present Charles Towneley, Esq., of Towneley, is married to Lady Caroline Harriet Molyneux, daughter of the late Earl of Sefton.

In this brief summary of the Towneley family, we had nearly forgotten to allude to one of its most distinguished members—John Towneley, the learned tutor of the Chevalier de St. George; a man of high literary attainments, who made a translation of "Hudibras" into French, displaying a most extraordinary knowledge of the stranger tongue, by adapting to its idiom the peculiar phraseology of that singular poem.

WILLIAM RALPH CARTWRIGHT, ESQ., M.P.

THIS gentleman, the descendant of an old and influential house, members of which represented Northamptonshire for centuries, sat in Parliament for that county uninterruptedly, with the single exception of the session of 1831, from 1708 to 1836. At the death of Mr. Pitt Mr. Cartwright was the mover of the Address to the King, praying that the debts of the deceased nobleman be paid out of the public purse.

The family from which he sprang derives from a common ancestor with that of the late well-known Major Cartwright, and enjoys extensive estates in Northamptonshire. During the Civil Wars the then head of the family espoused the cause of the Parliament, and suffered severely. His mansion-house of Aynho was burnt to the ground, and his property fined to the extent of £800.

The late Mr. Cartwright, whose death took place on the 4th instant, was born 30th March, 1771, and married twice. By his first wife, the Hon. Emma Maude, younger daughter of Cornwallis, first Viscount Hawarden, he had a large family, the eldest of which is Sir Thomas Cartwright, the distinguished diplomatist; and, by his second, Julia Frances, daughter of the late Colonel Richard Aubrey, he also leaves several children.

DAVID BOOTH.

THIS gentleman was a native of Yorkshire, and was entirely self-educated. In the early part of his life he followed commercial pursuits, but, the love of letters becoming with him an absorbing passion, he settled in London as a literary man, and, during a subsequent course of more than fifty years, he devoted himself ably and industriously to the composition and editorship of literary works. Among his productions the following occur:—"The Tradesman's Assistant," "The Art of Wine Making," "The Art of Brewing," "The Principles of English Composition," together with a grammar and various treatises, reviews, and poems. Mr. Booth died recently, at Balgarve Mills, Yorkshire, at the advanced age of 81.

STRANGE SUICIDE.—On Wednesday an inquest was held before [illegible] at the Princess Charlotte, Albany-road, Camberwell, on the body of Mrs. Grace, aged 60. Mrs. Burgess stated that the deceased resided at 1, Albany-place. She was the sister of Mrs. Smithe, of St. John's-wood, who left a fortune for the education of her children, and the witness was executrix. Witness stated how deceased had taken poison. Coroner: Did want possibly cause this?—Mrs. Burgess: Oh, no! she had a private fortune, but even would also lived in private lodgings, she denied herself the common necessaries of life. The witness had no doubt her mind was not in a proper state. The deceased was under the impression that everything they had for dinner was too expensive. She would say in common dinner, "why, can we afford this, Martha?" when, in fact, she was trustee for children of great property, and possessing good property herself. Verdict, "Temporary insanity."

DECORATIVE ARTS.—THE EARL OF SHREWSBURY'S CHURCH, AT CHEADLE.*

EXTERIOR, FROM THE SOUTH.

THE Church at St. Giles is situated in the town of Cheadle, a small town, near the moorlands of Staffordshire, having a weekly market on Fridays, which is well attended. The town is a somewhat old-fashioned-looking place, perched on the declivity of a hill, but yet it possesses no very old houses, nor any half-timbered, venerable mansions, as relics of by-gone days. Its church, on the higher portion of the hill, is as plain and ugly a structure as can well be imagined, and the numerous local stones about the places where the "rude forefathers of the hamlet sleep." Formerly, a great trade was carried on in the manufacture of brass; but, of late years, that trade has, in a great measure, ceased. The town can boast of having gas works. The country round Cheadle yields abundance of coal, of good quality, and the tall chimneys of the shafts of the coal mines peep up by the road, and amid the trees which clothe the neighbouring hill-sides; and children and old people may be seen on the road, driving before them asses, laden with huge lumps of coal, just from the pit's mouth.

The country round Cheadle is extremely picturesque. [illegible] from Stafford or Lane End, in many parts, very beautiful, being exceedingly diversified now winding up hill, and now in a valley and therefore offering every variety of landscape, both far and near.

On approaching Cheadle, the downward windings of the road display the town, the houses rising up the hill-side, and high over all towers the lofty spire of St. Giles's.

This truly magnificent structure, erected at the sole charge of the Earl of Shrewsbury, does infinite honour to its architect, A. Welby Pugin, Esq. The style of architecture is the "decorated" Gothic, and, certainly, neither labour nor expense has been spared to produce so perfect a specimen of the revival of mediæval art as St. Giles's presents.

The Church consists of a western tower, of (including the cross) nearly 200 feet in height above the church-yard; a nave, having north and south aisles, with corresponding porches, a chancel, with sacristies, and an organ-loft on its northern side; a Chapel of the Blessed Sacrament attached to the south aisle, and a Lady Chapel.

The Church has a most imposing appearance, viewed from the west. Its lofty tower and tapering spire are thence seen in all their majesty; and the niches, pinnacles, and windows of the spire produce a most picturesque display of light and shade.

Entering the garth, or churchyard, by the western lich gate, the chief entrance, or west door, arrests the eye by its peculiar appearance. The doors are of English oak, strongly braced, their surfaces painted red, and bordered with engrailing of iron, gilt; and within this bordering appear rampant lions, also gilded, nearly covering the whole door, and, in fact, being the iron-work of the hinges, and forming the heraldic achievements of the Talbots. The doorway is deeply moulded with a square label, and is decorated in the mouldings with Lons' heads and oak branches, well sculptured, and in the spandrils of the arch are Talbot shields and foliage. In the tower buttresses, on either side of the door, are niches, having canopies, and in them are placed stone statues of St. Peter and St. Paul—the nimbus over the heads of the figures being of metal, gilded. Over the door is a window of three lights, the jambs and arch being enriched with foliage, and in the story above this are the small windows of the ringing chamber, and then rise the gracefully-formed windows of the belfry, which, eight in number, are divided by a mullion into two lights, having quatrefoils in the heads of the arches; perforated lead-work fills up the spaces between the mullions.

The bells, six in number, are borne by a strong, braced oak framing, which springs from stone projections in the wall in the ringing chamber. They were cast by Messrs. Mears, of Whitechapel.

The spire is octagonal; and springing from eight pillets at its base, are crocketted ribs, which gradually diminish in size and projection, till, at several feet from the apex, they terminate in gablets with bosses. Resting on the stone weatherings, and at the angles of the spire, are four gablets, and above these are as many niches, having beautifully wrought canopies and pinnacles. Within the niches are stone images of the Latin Doctors, the size of life, sitting on thrones. There are four windows, having crocketted gables, at the base of the spire, and similar, though smaller, ones at the angles just above the pinnacles; and four, very small, near the top of the spire. A cross, of iron and copper, partially gilded, having a cock at its summit, is securely fastened to, and terminates, the spire.

In the buttresses at the south-west angle of the tower, two niches are made, having floriated mouldings and sculptured corbels. In the southern niche stands an image of St. Giles, and in the western is a kneeling figure of the Earl of Shrewsbury holding a model of the Church, as founder of it, which he is supposed to be offering to St. Giles; St. John the Baptist, the patron Saint of the Earl, is represented standing beside him.† On the corbel under St. Giles, a hind is sculptured, and on that under the figure of the Earl, the arms of the Talbot family with the proper supporters. The south porch is of most exquisite design. The angle buttresses are very solid and massive in appearance. The label of the arch is crocketted, and is finished by a corbel bearing an image of Our Blessed Lady, with our Lord, under a canopy of beautiful workmanship; and in quatrefoils, on either side, are angels with thuribles. The interior of the porch is groined with intersecting ribs rising from six engaged pillars, and adorned with foliage and bosses. On either side of the inner doorway are stoups for holy water. The pavement of the porch is of encaustic tiles having rich devices, and the following scripture in lines of tiles, "We will go into the house of the Lord with gladness." The external roof of the porch is of stone, the vertical joints being covered by ribs, terminated by gables above the string course. At the east end of the south aisle the Chapel of the Blessed Sacrament commences. Its buttresses are more massive than those of the aisle, and in a niche in the one at the junction of the aisle and Chapel is placed an image of the Resurrection of Our Lord. The roof of this Chapel is ridged with a beautiful cresting, having crosses, gilded, at intervals.

The east end of the nave, which rises several feet above the chancel, is terminated by a small belfry, having pinnacled buttresses at its angles supporting a small spire, with intermediate gablets, &c. The sanctus bell is hung in this belfry, and round it these words are cast: "Sanctus, Sanctus, Sanctus." This bell is rung at the beginning of the canon.

The eastern end of the chancel has two large angle buttresses, having at their angles of junction floriated niches containing images of St. John the Baptist and St. John the Evangelist, and immediately over the great window, in a niche, is a figure of Our Lady with Our Lord, and under the sill of the window, within three quatrefoils, Angels are sculptured bearing holy emblems. A richly floriated cross of stone terminates the gable, and a similar one is on the gable of the Chapel of the Blessed Sacrament.

The view of the exterior of the Church, which we give, shows the principal portion of the parts described. It is taken from the S. E., and is the point of view from whence the Church has the most picturesque appearance. Its lofty spire towering in rich and beautiful outline above the nave, aisles, and chancel; the details of the eastern end, and Chapel of the Sacrament; the high pitched roofs, surmounted by elegant cresting, with gilded crosses at intervals, the sanctus belfry, the south porch, and the stone cross in the churchyard near it, produce a charming composition of graceful forms and varied ornaments.

On the north side of the chancel are the sacristies and organ loft, which last is approcheable by a newel staircase, in a turret, weathered with stone, and surmounted by a lion.

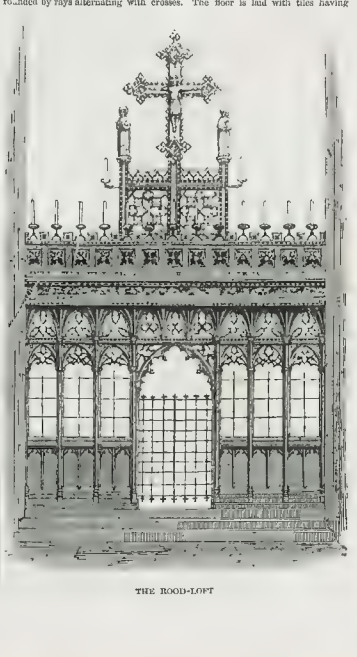
The north porch is of much plainer design than the south, though in size it is similar. Like that, the roof, externally and internally, is of stone, but is merely ribbed on the interior. The floor is laid with encaustic tiles, and this scripture, "I was glad when they said unto me we will go into the house of the Lord." In the niche over the external arch is an image of Our Lord in the act of benediction.

The interior of the Church is in the highest degree magnificent and impressive; for the pillars, walls, and roof, are enriched and fretted in every part with colour and gilding; to the gorgeous effect of which the "storied windows, richly dight," add their many-coloured charms, and, by diminishing the brilliancy of the day light in the Church, destroy that tendency to glare which so much decoration would otherwise produce, and render the whole exquisitely picturesque and beautiful. Probably, so perfect a Church was never erected in England before, as none is a completeness in its building which defies words to express, or representations to give an idea of. In the architectural portion of the building, the proportions and arrangement are most exact and skilful; whilst the decorative portion is equally to be admired, each symbol and enrichment having its peculiar reference to the portion of the Church for which it was designed.

The nave is divided from the aisles by eight pillars, four on each side, supporting, with four engaged pillars, ten arches. The capitals of the pillars are exquisitely foliaged, all differing in design, and richly gilded. The pillars are octagonal, and each painted in different patterns, the ground colours being red and blue, but so richly diapered with small patterns and ornaments, that but little of the ground colouring is visible. The mouldings of the arches, also, are most elaborately painted; and the walls above the arches are coloured blue, and enriched with minute ornaments. Above every arch are two circles of copper, on which are [illegible] from ancient Italian [illegible] The roofs are [illegible] framed, of [illegible] oak, and all the beams, rafters, &c., are [illegible] and diapered with colours and rich patterns, each principal [illegible] a shield, [illegible] presenting alternately [illegible] a musical [illegible] and the ceiling is painted to represent azure, with gilt stars. The floor is laid with encaustic tiles of rich patterns, arranged in [illegible] and stone alleys, with borderings of inscription tiles containing sentences from the office for the consecration of a Church. The seats are open, but quite plain, without poppy heads or any other decoration, being simply paneled. They are made of elm, and the warm tint of the wood is extremely pleasing in its general effect, harmonising with the colours of the walls most admirably. The tower, which is open to the nave to the height of the floor of the ringing chamber by a large arch of several feet in depth, profusely ornamented in its moulding, is separated from it by a wrought iron screen of good design, having large gates. A poor-box is placed on each side of the great arch. The floor of the tower is laid with tiles having the armorial bearings of the Talbot and Comyn families thereon, intersected by borders. Four sexfoil-shaped coronæ of iron and brass, painted and partly gilded, are suspended from the roof by chains and counter-weights. Six tapers are ordinarily put into each corona; but, on festival days, branches having four tapers each are substituted for the six single lights. The following scripture is painted round each corona:—"† Domine da nobis lucem."

The walls of the south aisle are painted red, and ornamented with crosses, surrounded by floriated circles of elegant design; the ceiling is blue, and starred, to correspond to that of the nave, the rafters, beams, &c., having a rich continuous pattern painted along them. The western end, or bay, of this aisle is partitioned off by oak screens, supported by brass shafts, and thus is formed into the baptistery. The font, which is octagonal in plan, is made of alabaster, and is fixed upon a step in the centre of the baptistery. The sides of the bowl have quatrefoils, in deeply-recessed panels, surrounded by a floral moulding, containing emblems of the Evangelists, and angels bearing crowns. From under the pedestal, at the corners, four monsters are represented as escaping, emblematic of original sin being washed away by baptism. The font cover is of oak, and consists of a canopy, supported by eight flying buttresses, with pinnacles, quatrefoils, &c., terminating in a finial, to which are affixed the chain and weight for raising and lowering it. The wood work is all richly painted and gilded, and most of the ornamental work in the alabaster is gilded likewise. The annexed Engraving of the font shows its general form and ornamentation. The stained glass window of the baptistery is divided by mullions into three lights; the centre one having a representation of St. John the Baptist holding the Lamb; above, the Holy Spirit is descending, surrounded by rays and seven stars. Three praying stools are placed in this aisle, and on the one opposite the Chapel of the Sacrament this inscription is carved—"† Adoremus in æternum sanctissimum sacramentum."

The Chapel of the Blessed Sacrament is divided from the south aisle by a stone arch and a screen of brass, and on the wall, over the arch, is painted an extremely rich and beautiful cross, surrounded by angels as in adoration, and this inscription, "† Adoremus in æternum sanctissimum sacramentum." On the pavement in front of the arch are these words, "Domine non sum dignus," and on the risers of the steps to the Chapel, "† Panem Angelorum manducavit homo;" and "† Panem de cœlo dedit eis." The open screen of wrought brass is one of the most sumptuous pieces of workmanship it is possible to imagine. It consists of four arches springing from shafts, and the openings filled with smaller shafts supporting crosses, terminated with fleurs-de-lis, enshrouded in an arched formed framework, rising from the shaft below, and joining it again above the cross. The top of the screen is an open cresting, exquisitely wrought into fleurs-de-lis and crosses, and over the principal shafts are crowns for tapers. The lower panels are filled with perforated circles, having quatrefoils within them also of open work, enclosing chalices with the Blessed Sacrament and the Lamb alternately. This screen was nearly two years in hand, and is most wonderfully wrought, the workmanship being so elaborately and highly finished. The interior of the Chapel is most splendidly decorated and gilded. The groining of the roof, which is of stone, is diapered with elegant enrichments, the spandrils being filled with passion flowers and foliage, and circles containing lambs, bordered with a flowing pattern; the bosses represent vine leaves and grapes. A pattern of vine leaves decorates the lower portion of the walls, whilst the upper part is adorned with crowns surrounded by rays alternating with crosses. The floor is laid with tiles having



THE ROOD-LOFT

* We give the annexed Series of Illustrations as specimens of the progress of the Decorative Arts in this country; as well as of the taste with which the architect, Mr. Pugin, has carried out the munificence of the noble founder. For the purpose of insuring originality, we commissioned one of our Artists, Mr. J. L. Williams, who minutely inspected the superb edifice; and we, accordingly, present to our readers the results of his visit, in the full confidence of their artistical accuracy.

† This niche forms the subject of the initial letter at the commencement of this article.

appropriate symbols upon them, as the Lamb and Cross, and the word "Sanctus" within a border.

The altar is of alabaster, and winged cherubim fill the compartments into which it is divided: the sculptured work and cherubim are relieved with gilding. The reredos, or back of the altar, is of tiles, made of the finest porcelain, exquisitely enriched with gold, and the tabernacle in its centre, made of metal, is enamelled in fine taste. The east window is divided into three lights by two mullions, and is filled with stained glass, the centre light having an image of Our Lord under a lofty canopy, terminated by a cross: under the feet of our Lord is this scripture, "† Amen, amen, dico vobis, ego sum panis vivus qui de coelo descendi." Figures of the Evangelists occupy the other portions of the window. The stained glass in the side windows represents cherubim holding labels with texts in honour of the Blessed Eucharist, surrounded by a pattern of vine leaves. A lamp hangs from a coronal depending from a boss in the centre of the Chapel, and is continually burning. The coronal is divided into six parts, and is inscribed, "† Virtus, † honor, † sapientia, † charitas, † benedicta, † fortitudo," symbolic of the attributes of God. The candlesticks and other furniture of the altar are of the richest description, and ornamented with appropriate symbols.

A lofty and wide arch divides the chancel from the nave, in its mouldings and thickness covered with painted ornaments; and, above the arch, filling the wall to the roof, is a noble painting, executed by Hauser, at Rome, of the Doom or Last Judgment. It is crowded with figures, and, in its effect, admirably adapted to the place it fills. Extending across the chancel arch is a beautiful rood loft, made of oak, and profusely decorated with colour and gilding. It consists of a centre doorway, a richly decorated arch, the spandrils filled with tracery, with three arched compartments on each side, separated by shafts, whence rises beautiful graining, which overhangs, as in some old examples, still remaining. The spandrils of the graining are painted blue, and sparkled with stars, whilst the headings of the arches and arches of the graining are ornamented with elaborate tracery. The lower portions of the compartments are paneled with trefoil-headed arches. The bressumer is most exquisitely carved, having foliage, grapes, &c., and this scripture, "† Christus factus est obediens usque ad mortem; mortem autem crucis: propter quod et Deus exaltavit illum, et donavit illum nomen quod est super omne nomen." Thirteen pierced quatrefoils protect the sides of the loft, and above them are as many candlesticks for holding wax-lights, and between these latter are pierced battlements. The great rood or crucifix rises from the centre of the loft; the cross is crocketted at the sides, and at its extremities are the emblems of the Evangelists in floriated quatrefoils. Images of the Virgin and St. John are placed on pedestals, which are joined by exceedingly rich tracery to the foot of the crucifix, and at the sides of the pedestals are sconces and wax-lights. The gates of the rood loft are of iron, painted blue. The annexed Engraving of the loft shows the general form and character of this beautiful work of art more clearly than words, and to that we refer our readers.

The chancel, nearly as wide as the nave, but not so lofty, is more elaborately and splendidly decorated than any other portion of the Church, its walls being wholly gilded, and its roof, arched and divided into panels by moulded ribs, is profusely adorned with gilding also; angels holding scrolls, with scriptures from the Te Deum, Benedicus, &c., encircled with garlands, are painted, at intervals, on the walls, connected by quatrefoils and foliage; and in the panels of the roof are monograms of the Holy Name, having radiating borders; gilded stars, likewise, add their richness to the roof. Immediately under the ceiling, a stone string-course runs on each side of the chancel, having angels sculptured on it, and gilded and painted. In the south wall is a large arch, having gates, which opens into the Chapel of the Blessed Sacrament, and, nearer the altar, are the sedilia, on the three steps leading to the platform of the altar. These are surmounted by beautiful canopies and pinnacles, and on the backs of the seats are carved emblems of priest, deacon, and sub deacon. In the north wall, opposite the sedilia, is a deeply-moulded and recessed arch, most exquisitely ornamented; under which is the sepulchre for the Easter [illegible] of the Entombment adds to its decorations. [illegible] into the sacristies.

The High Altar is made of alabaster, its front adorned with rich tabernacle work, under which are sculptured angels, seated on thrones, playing on musical instruments, the whole being enriched with colour and gilding. The reredos of the altar is most elaborate, its centre compartment having a sculptured representation of the Coronation of Our Blessed Lady, whilst in three niches on either side are angels with tapers and thuribles. Above these is a string-course with angels, crowned with a pierced bratticing level with the sill of the east window; metal brackets at the ends of the string-course, projecting from the wall, sustain curtains of tapestry, having ciphers worked on them.

The east window, the tracery of which is of excellent design, is filled with stained glass, representing the genealogy of Our Lord. In canopied niches on each side of the window, are images of St. Giles, the patron saint of the Church, and St. Chad, the patron saint of the diocese. An ancient corona of wrought iron, most exquisite in design and execution, hangs in the centre of the chancel. This corona was brought from Flanders.

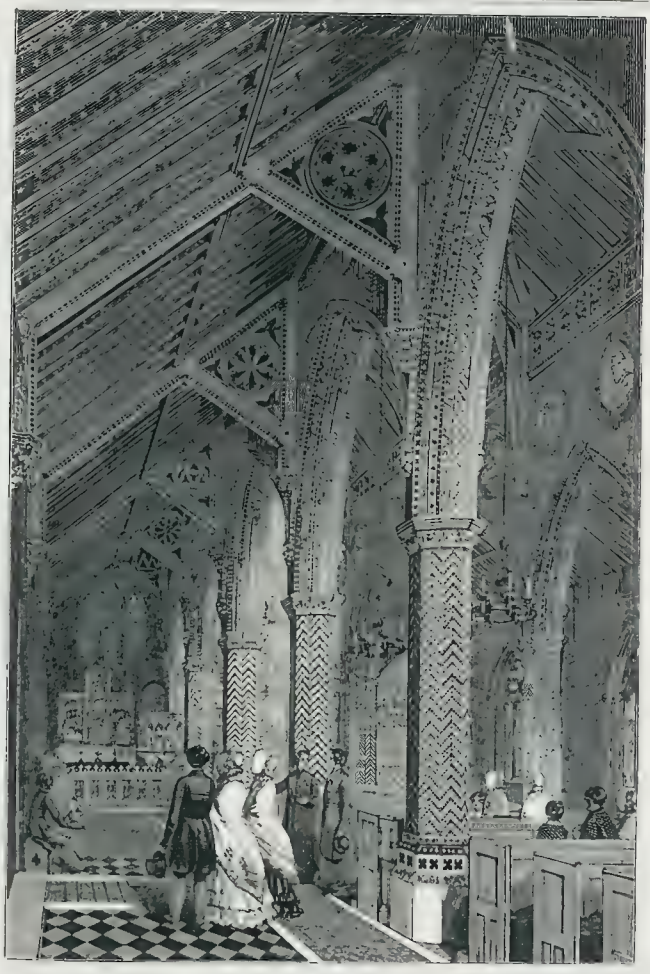
The walls of the north aisle are painted blue, with the letter M, enriched by a floriated border, diapered upon it. The floor is, like the nave and south aisle, laid with encaustic tiles, and along the side and end walls of both aisles, a stone seat is built; and to the height of about four feet five inches the walls are lined with glazed tiles of a deep blue colour, ornamented with patterns in yellow.

The Lady Chapel is in the eastern bay of the north aisle, and is divided from it and the nave by a low screen of oak, paneled, with quatrefoils painted in them, and crested with iron wrought into fleurs-de-lis and gilded. The floor of this chapel is laid with encaustic tiles, having roses and lilies on them, emblematic of Our Lady. The altar, of alabaster, is divided into five niches, three in front and two at the angles, each enshrining an angel carrying an emblem, and the whole is richly painted and gilded. Over the altar is fixed the centre of an ancient triptych, carved in oak, of most elaborate and skilful workmanship. It is a Flemish work of art of the fifteenth century. The subject represented in it is the Passion of Our Lord. Immediately above the triptych are three arches of the organ-loft; and, at its side, is the doorway into the pulpit, whence a staircase communicates with the sacristies. The pulpit, which is affixed to the east wall, and adjoining both the nave and Lady Chapel, is octagonal, and is of stone richly sculptured and gilded. In five of the niches which adorn it, the subject of St. John the Baptist Preaching in the Wilderness is represented; St. John occupying one niche, and the listeners the others. In the niches towards the Lady Chapel are images of Saints Francis, Dominic, and Bernardin, the three great Friar preachers. In the south aisle are three praying-stools, to correspond to those in the north; on the one next the Lady Chapel is this inscription—"† Vigilate et orate." The side window of the Chapel represents, in the centre light, Our Lady holding Our Lord; and in the side-lights, the Annunciation, on glass richly diapered with fleurs-de-[illegible].

In the representation we give of the interior of St. Giles's, all the details of the Lady Chapel and north aisle are embraced; and, in the spaces between the pillars, the rood-loft and coronæ of the nave may be seen, as also a part of the gorgeous screen of the Chapel of the Sacrament. The general effect of the rich diapering on the pillars and arches is indicated, as well as the ornamental details of other parts of the Church. The praying-stools have been omitted, to show more clearly the screen of the Lady Chapel.

The organ-loft, which is over the sacristy, and opens into the chancel by three arches, and also, as we mentioned above, into the Lady Chapel by three arches, contains a fine toned organ by Parsons, of London, skilfully played by Mr. Wainwright. The effect of the music and singing is almost magical; as not only is the organ screened from observation, but the choristers, being stationed in the loft, are concealed also, so that the rich harmony floats on the air with thrilling effect.

The stained glass windows of the aisles represent the Virtues—such as Humility, Charity, Mercy, &c.; personified by females overcoming contrary vices, pour-[illegible]. [illegible] Church is lighted up for evening service, the effect is gorgeous in the extreme: the gilded [illegible] and walls of the chancel glowing in the flood of yellow light of the tapers [illegible]; the glistening [illegible] ded ceiling, forming a rich background to the lofty [illegible]od, with its pierced and [illegible]oborately [illegible]een; the corona in the nave [illegible]ting up the painted and gilded pillars, their soft light fad[illegible] the deep blue roof, whence the gilded stars sparkle with exquisite richness [illegible] in a picture, once seen, not easily [illegible].



NORTH AISLE, SHOWING THE LADY CHAPEL, &C.

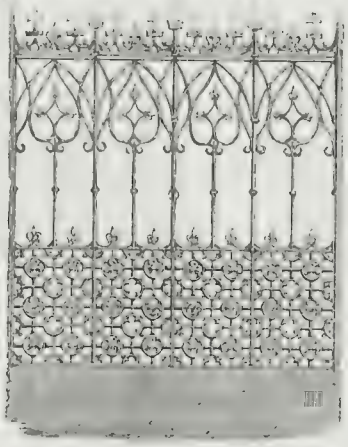
In the spacious churchyard, near the south porch, is a beautiful Stone Cross, of which we give a representation. It consists of a flight of steps, on which the base is raised, which [illegible] and at the angles having emblems of the Evangelists. At the sides are [illegible]haaces, whence, from niches, blood is flowing into them, symbolical of Our Lord shedding his blood for the four quarters of the world. A tall fleur-de-lis shaft supports a crucifix, under a canopy; and, on either side, are images of St. Mary and St. John, on branches which spring from the shaft.

East of the Church, are Schools for boys and girls, with a schoolmaster's residence attached.

A Rectory-house is being built, and a conventual establishment will be erected on some ground on the south side of the Church.

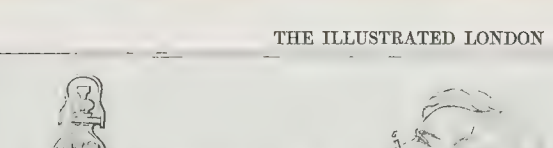
The Church, cross, lich gates, and churchyard walls, are built of a red sand-

FONT IN THE BAPTISTERY.



BRASS SCREEN TO THE CHAPEL OF THE SACRAMENT.

STONE CROSS, EXTERIOR.



THE APPARATUS FOR RENDERING SURGICAL OPERATIONS PAINLESS.

stone, quarried on the East's estates near Cheadle; and the wood used in its construction was, also, we believe, from his estates

All the excaustic tiles were made, from Mr. Pugin's designs, at Messrs. Minton's works at Stoke, and do infinite credit to the artisans employed by them.

In closing this notice of St. Giles's, Cheadle, we must not omit paying a tribute to the skill of all the persons employed in carrying out Mr. Pugin's designs; and to Mr. Denny, the master of the works at Alton Towers, great praise is due, for he has admirably has displayed in the realisation of the architect's magnificent conceptions

THE NEW MEANS FOR RENDERING SURGICAL OPERATIONS PAINLESS.

LAST week, the first experiment was made in this country of employing the inhalation of the vapour of sulphur ether as a means of rendering surgical operations painless. The application is of American origin, and was first introduced, a few months since, by Dr. Morton, a dentist, of Boston, U.S., by whom it was communicated to Dr. Boott, of Gower-street. By this gentleman the discovery was described, on the 17th of last month, to Mr. Robinson, the surgeon-dentist, also of Gower-street; who, on the following day, operated upon a young lady thrown into sleep by the inhalation, during which a molar tooth was extracted from her lower jaw

The inhalation occupied a minute and a half, and the patient's recovery from sleep another minute. Dr Robinson, assisted by another gentleman, then examined her mouth, and expressed her great surprise at finding that it was removed. She said she was sure she had felt was merely a sensation of cold around the tooth, a sensation which was caused, perhaps, by the coldness of the external instrument

The apparatus employed consists of the lower part of North's apparatus, with a flexible tube, to which are attached a ball and socket valve and mouthpiece, similar to those commonly used for inhalation. The apparatus has been constructed by Mr. Hooper, of 7, Pall Mall East, according to Dr. Boott and Mr. Robinson's instructions: it is very elegant in appearance

The apparatus has since been successfully used in operations at King's College Hospital, by Mr. Fergusson; and, on Thursday last, by Mr. Aston Key, at Guy's Hospital: among other cases was the removal of an abscess from the great toe of a female: in this case the patient was not entirely unconscious, for she declared, at the moment of the first incision of the instrument, but, on recovering from the effects of the inhalation, was totally unconscious of the operation having been performed

The annexed Engraving will best explain its details:—

1 Pad for mouth, to be held by the operator.
2 Horizontal valve for the escape of expired air
3 Vertical flap valve.
4 Stop-cock
5 Nasal spring
6 Flexible tube.
7 Glass vessel, with a smaller one having pieces of sponge saturated with ether, and having a small perforated stopper, to be opened when the apparatus is in use

A sectional view of the pad, showing the mouth-piece

The full effect of the vapour is produced in from one to two or three minutes generally, and, as soon as it is perceived, the operation is performed. If the stop-cock shuts off the vapour, and the inhaler is removed, the patient breathes air, the nasal spring must be taken off. In prolonged operations this may be found desirable; and the inhalation of the ether may be renewed at the will of the operator, the nasal spring, of course, then being passed on the nose

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE (Friday).—The arrivals of English wheat for our market since Monday having been on a very moderate scale, the show of samples of that article here to-day was rather better, owing to which and the mildness of the weather, the trade was of a very active, at a further improvement in the quotations of fully 1s per quarter, and at which a good clearance was effected. Fine delivery kinds of foreign wheat were in excellent request, and sold at extreme currencies. Barley was again higher, scarcely any but malting sorts on offer. Those in want were compelled to give 1s to 2s per quarter more money for making and distilling parcels being held at full prices. The whole of the supply of malt was rather closely cleared off, at an improvement of quite 1s per quarter. In oats a fair business was done, and the rates may be considered 6d higher. Beans, peas and flour, were looking upward, with a good demand.

ARRIVALS.—English, Wheat, 4360 barley, 2370 malt, 2250 oats, 180 Irish Wheat, — barley, — malt, — oats, 640 Foreign Wheat, 4320 barley, 1990 malt, — oats, 1360 Flour, 1953 sacks, 13,000 barrels

English. Wheat, Essex and Kent, old, 46s to 52s; ditto white 47s to 53s; Norfolk and Suffolk, old, 47s to 52s; ditto white 52s to 57s, 62s to 65s; grinding barley, 40s to 44s; distilling 30s to 32s; malting ditto, 52s to 56s; Grimsby and Norfolk malt 72s to 76s; brown ditto, 70s to 72s; Runcorn and Ware, 76s to 80s, Chevalier, 82s to 85s; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire feed oats, 27s to 29s; potato ditto, 29s to 30s; Youghal and Cork, black, 27s to 30s; ditto white, 3s to 3d; tick beans, new, 42s to 46s; ditto old, —s to —s; grey peas, 47s to 49s; maple, —s to —s; white, —s to —s; Suffolk and Norfolk mealing ditto, —s to —s; Essex and Kent hog-made flour, 40s to 42s; Suffolk, —s to —s; Dantzig, rod, 75s to 78s per quarter, in Bond, —s to —s; ditto, white, —s to —s; Marianopoli, —s to —s; ditto, feed, —s to —s, and peas —s to —s

Foreign Market. Limited as well as cold, but in good request, at extreme currencies, in all other articles very little business doing.

Liverpool. English, prime, 50s to 53s; fine, 48s; ordinary, 44s 6d to 45s; Mediterranean and Odessa, 42s to 46s. Hungarian, 32s to 38s per quarter. Coriander, 10s to 13s per cwt. Brown Mustard, —s to —s; white ditto, 8s to 10s. Tares, 7s 6d to 8s 6d per bushel. English Flour, 42s to 42s per sack of two quarters. Linseed cakes, English, £13 10s to £13 15s; Foreign, £9 10s to £10 7s per 1000. Rapeseed cake, £7 5s to £7 7s per ton. Canary, 55s to —s. English Clover-seed, red, 4s to —s; white, —s to —s. Foreign, red, —s to —s; white, —s to —s per cwt.

Bread.—The prices of wheaten bread in the metropolis are from 9½d to 10d, of household ditto, 6d to 6½d per 4lb loaf

Imperial Weekly Average.—Wheat, 51s 6d; barley, 41s 3d, oats, 27s 3d; rye, —s; beans, 42s 10d; peas, 42s 8d

The Six Weeks' Average —Wheat, 50s 9d; barley, 42s 2d; oats, 26s 6d; rye, 43s 10d; beans, 42s 4d; peas, 42s 8d.

Duties on Foreign Corn.—Wheat, 4s 6d; barley, 2s 6d; oats, 1s 6d; rye, 3s 0d; beans, 3s 6d; peas, 3s 6d.

Tea.—The market remains in a very inactive state, and previous currencies are with difficulty supported

Sugar.—All kinds of raw sugar—the supplies of which on offer are small—move off readily, at a further advance in the quotations, finally in favour. Refined goods are firm, at an improvement of from 6d to 1s per cwt. Grocery, 45s to 45s 6d; standard lumps, 45s

Coffee.—Ceylon coffee has advanced from 6d to 1s per cwt. In other kinds, a good business is

Rice.—This market is very firm, at rather higher rates. Some parcels of fine Bengal have realized 22s per cwt

Provisions.—The demand for Irish butter this week has been in a very inactive state, yet without any material alteration in prices. Carlow, Sligo, and Mid Cleonel, 82s to —s; and Cork, 82s to 85s per cwt. On board, or for forward delivery, nothing doing. In foreign butter is heavy, and is per cwt lower. The few qualities are selling at from 100s to 110s. In inferior and middling sorts 70s to 80s per cwt. English butter moves off slowly, at former terms. Fine Dorset, 108s to 116s; middling, 96s to 98s per cwt; and fresh 10d to 13s per dozen lbs. Bacon is offering on lower terms, yet the sales are quite unimportant: Waterford, landed, may be quoted at 50s per cwt. Cork is to be nearer, and the description of Waterford, blackened, producing 52s to 56s. per cwt. All other kinds of provisions are very dull.

Hay and Straw. Meadow hay, £3 5s to £3 15s; clover ditto, £3 5s to £4 15s; and straw £1 8s to £1 12s per load.

Wool.—Privately very little is doing in any kind of wool. In prices we have no change to report

Potatoes.—There is a very limited inquiry for potatoes, yet the prices obtained vary from 120s to 220s per ton

Hops [illegible] show of hops here to-day was somewhat larger than for some time past, but the demand was in a very inactive state; yet the quotations were nearly supported. [illegible] Kent pockets, 4l to 5l 5s; Sussex pockets, 3l 5s to 4l 5s. Weald of Kent [illegible] Mid and East Kent ditto, 4l 5s to 5l 5s per cwt.

Just Published, Price Sixpence, No. I. of

THE MAN IN THE MOON.

A Monthly Review and Bulletin of New Measures, New Men, New Books, New Plots, New Jokes, and New Nonsense; being an ACT for the AMALGAMATION OF THE SEVERAL GADDS OF FANCY with the NARROW GAUGE OF FACT, into the GRAND GENERAL AMUSEMENT JUNCTION.

EDITED BY ALBERT SMITH, AND ANGUS B REACH,

Assisted by PUZ, MEADOWS, HINE, and THOMAS.

London: CLARK, Warwick-lane, and all Booksellers; and sold at every Railway Station in the Kingdom.

COINS of the ANCIENT ROMAN EMPERORS: History of the Reigns of the Twelve Roman Emperors, with the Prices of their Coins, 40 Portraits, their Dates and Motions, is just published by P. WHELAN, Dealer in Ancient Coins, 46, Strand, London, price 1s.; by post, 1s. 8d. Coins and type for sale. Bought, Catalogued, &c.

DR. MADDOCK on Asthma, Consumption, Chronic Cough, and Affections of the Heart.—"The affected will probably derive from this able and interesting work some well grounded hope of recovery."—Herald. Third Edition. Free for 8d., with Cases and Facts.—SIMPKIN and MARSHALL, Paternoster-row, and through all Booksellers.

MERRY MUSIC.—The PIANISTA for JANUARY, No. 7 (2nd Edition), contains 19 Comic American Polkas, introducing the popular Airs Lucy Neal, Old Dan Tucker, Buffalo Gals, Mary Blane, Ethiopian Dance, Dandy Jim, Old Long Sang, Sambo's Address, Jumbo Jum, Monkey's Wedding, Railroad Overture, &c., which is edited by the Royal British Army Quadrille Band, and arranged for the Pianoforte, whole for 2s., post-free 26 stamps. Pianista Office, 67, Paternoster-row, and all Booksellers.

Public Library, Conduit-street, Hanover-square.

LODGE'S PEERAGE AND BARONETAGE FOR 1847.

Sixteenth Edition, corrected throughout from the personal communications of the Nobility, under the immediate patronage of Her Majesty and Prince Albert.

In royal 8vo, with Arms, 31s. 6d. bound,

SAUNDERS and OTLEY, Publishers, Conduit-street.

ELEMENTARY WORKS BY W. PINNOCK.

1 PINNOCK'S INTRODUCTION to ANCIENT GEOGRAPHY and HISTORY, 12mo 2s.
2 PINNOCK'S GEOGRAPHY MADE EASY, 18mo., 1s. 6d.
3 PINNOCK'S ASTRONOMY MADE EASY, 18mo. 1s. 6d.
4 PINNOCK'S HISTORY of ENGLAND MADE EASY, 18mo. 2s. 6d.
5 PINNOCK'S SCRIPTURE HISTORY MADE EASY (in preparation)
G F GIBBS, 34, Paternoster-row, London.

A BOOK FOR JUVENILE PARTIES.

HOME AMUSEMENTS; a Choice Collection of Riddles, Charades, Conundrums, Games and Forfeits. By PETER PUZZLEWELL, Esq. Price 2s. 6d. cloth

"A happy little volume."—Spectator.

MRS LULLABY. Illustrated by Leech. 1s. gilt edges.

THE KNOCK at HOME and the BUTTERFLY'S BALL. New Edition, One Shilling.

"Two delightful Nonsenses in a Vein of genuine Humour."—St. Paul's Chronicle.

GRANT and GRIFFITH, Successors to J. Harris, Corner of St. Paul's Churchyard.

ETHIOPIAN QUADRILLES, on Airs performed by the Ethiopian Serenaders.—Loretta Quadrilles, on Airs from Lover's Grand Opera.—Crusaders Quadrilles, on Airs from Sandler's Grand Opera.—Marianna Quadrilles, on Airs from W. V. Wallace's Grand Opera. Don Pasquale Quadrilles, on Airs from Donizetti's Opera Bufo.—The Stadella Polka. All by C. COOTE, pianiste to the Duke of Devonshire. CHAMER, SEALE, and Co., 210, Regent-street, and 67, Cheapside-street, where may be had the new songs by the Ethiopian Serenaders.

"ENOUGH TO MAKE A CAT LAUGH."—FOLLIT'S ILLUSTRATED BLACK LECTURES, AT HOME and ABROAD. (Twenty Black Lectures of genuine Nonsense). With a humorous wrapper, separate. 6d. French's Locomotive Picture Gallery, 539 changes. French in Search of a Lady, 273 changes, 2s. each. Seven fancy changing pictures, 1s each. Six fancy changing pictures, 1s. each. Six Pocket Flow Engravings, handsome 3 framed, suited for Elegant Presents. Monkey, 4s. 6d. Sea Serpent, 4s. All LITTLE and DEAR Manufactory, 89, Fleet-street

SUPERIOR SCHOOL BOOKS

BUTTER'S ETYMOLOGICAL SPELLING-BOOK and PRONOUNCING SPELLING, Pronouncing, and Definition of the English Language. 96th edition, price 1s. 6d. bound

BUTTER'S GRADATIONS in READING and SPELLING, upon an entirely new and exclusive plan, by which dissyllables are rendered as easy as monosyllables; with minor a entertaining and instructive reading lessons, in prose and verse. 30th edition, price 1s. bound.

Sold by Simpkin and Co.; Whittaker and Co., Longman and Co., Hamilton and Co., Lond ; Hodges and Smith, Dublin; Grant and Boyd, Edinburgh; J. M'Glashan, Dublin

NEW VOLUME OF MR. JAMES'S WORKS.

On the 19th inst., in medium 8vo., price 8s. cloth, with finely engraved Frontispiece,

THE KING'S HIGHWAY; being the ELEVENTH VOLUME of the WORKS of G. P. R. JAMES, Esq.

* * The previous volumes (each complete in itself, may be had separately) contain

Vol. I. The Gipsy. | Vol. VI. Henry of Guise
" II. Mary of Burgundy. | " VII. Morley Ernstein.
" III. The Huguenot. | " VIII. The Robber.
" IV. One in a Thousand. | " IX. Darnley, and
" V. Philip Augustus | " X. The Brigand.

London: SMITH, ELDER, and Co., 65, Cornhill

COOTE'S NEW QUADRILLES, Solos, 3s.; Duets, 4s., free by post.—Edward Loder's Grand Opera, the NIGHT DANCERS, which, after forty nights' performance, is still nightly honoured with the presence of the Queen and Prince Albert, and every evening was Coote's Quadrille, from the greatest of all English Operas, Loder's "Night Dancers," is now published, and may be had of all Music-sellers. Coote's Quadrilles are the most Pianist in the household of his Grace the Duke of Devonshire. Three months hence and to know these Quadrilles, and the Music generally of Loder's Opera, will be a necessary qualification to which all who aspire to be performers who affect a taste for Music, and are yet deaf to the divinest influences.—Musical Review, November, 1846. The whole of Loder's Music is published by C. JEFFERYS, 21, Soho-square, London where the Quartets may be had for one or two performers on the Pianoforte, Harp, Concert, &c. &c. The Orchestral Parts may also be had for a large or small Band.

DOUGLAS JERROLD'S WEEKLY NEWSPAPER.—ENLARGEMENT ON THE 3RD SITTING OF PARLIAMENT.—In order to give ample space for all the News of the Week, including the Debates in Parliament, and Miscellaneous Communications, Douglas Jerrold's Weekly Newspaper has been enlarged to Thirty-two Columns. Correspondence—as well as for Original and various New serial Articles—the Proprietor has determined to increase the Paper to the many times allowed by the Stamp Act, and to add to the Contents 24 Columns; making, in the whole, 32 Pages, or 96 Columns; thus rendering it equal to the largest and Largest Paper in the world, and worthy of its Name of the Week, and still retaining the large space heretofore devoted to Original Articles by the Editor and his Distinguished Colleagues. Price (as before), Fivepence STAMPED.—Order of all Newsmen, Town or Country, from whom detailed Prospectuses can be had.

MOST ELEGANT AND APPROPRIATE PRESENT FOR THE NEW YEAR

Just Published, price 21s. in handsome binding, and illustrated, the First Volume (containing Twenty-five Pieces) of the DEUTSCHE LYRA; a Collection of the most Classical and Admired Songs, as sung at the Philharmonic and Ancient Concerts, and by the private entertainments of her Majesty and the Nobility, and at M. Jullien's Concerts, Theatre Royal, Covent Garden, by Herman Ladies resident in London, and PISCHEK—Müller, Broadwood, Williams, Macfarren, &c. &c.; the Poetry rendered into English from the German by J. W. MOULD. M. ALLISS has the honour to announce that the universal favour and success which the above-mentioned series of Songs has met, enables him to produce a sufficient number (25) to form a handsome volume; in which will be found combined with the most profoundly Classical Compositions (including the whole of Beethoven's, Mozart's, Spohr, &c.; the lighter, yet expressive vocal works of Mendelssohn, Speyer, Schubert, Esser, and that sparkling melodist Abt, whose Songs are so justly admired for one or two accompaniments with which no series hitherto published can at all compete. None of the most important works are accompanied with an elegant Introduction, composed by Broadwood, or English Poetry also so wholly follows the German, that not a Note of the Music has been altered in adaptation. M. Jullien has the pleasure to announce the further continuance of the same successful series

214, Regent-street, and 45, King-street; and to be had of all respectable Book and Music Sellers in Town or Country

BOOKS for PRESENTS.—FIELD'S JUVENILE and GENERAL BOOK ESTABLISHMENT, 65, QUADRANT, corner of Air-street. The largest and best-selected Stock of Juvenile and Standard Works, elegantly adapted for Presents or School Prizes. Bibles, Prayer Books, Church Services, Annuals, Albums, and Scrap Books, in every variety of binding. Also, an extensive Collection of Splendidly Illustrated Works, suitable for Presents or the Drawing-room Table, at a great reduction from the published prices.—Catalogues Gratis.—65, Quadrant

NOW READY GRATIS

HINTS for the FORMATION of READING SOCIETIES.—This useful little Work will be found indispensable to those who desire the benefits of a large and popular Library, at the least possible cost. The plan adopted by Messrs. Saunders and Otley is one that is satisfactory supply of the best modern Works, numerous as they now are can be furnished for perusal. The plan is so simple, and the operations so free from risk or confusion that the most distant parts of the kingdom are adopting it, in preference to the more costly, yet inefficient system by which Book Clubs have been hitherto supplied. Send Gratis to any (including two stamps) addressed to Messrs. SAUNDERS and OTLEY, Public Library, Conduit-street, Hanover-square.

19, Hollis-street.

NEW SYSTEM AT BULL'S LIBRARY.—The very general satisfaction that has attended the New System introduced by Mr Bull, Bookseller to the Queen, has induced him to make still further arrangements for the accommodation of his numerous friends and the public. Having now ascertained exactly known the advantages which it secures to Subscribers at this Library (exclusive of the Collection of Books, which is unrivalled), he has much pleasure in announcing that, on payment of a small sum, he will be prepared for perusal, are in the course of the year shared GRATIS among the Subscribers, to ten amount that every year a Subscriber can have Two Guineas' worth of Books for every Guinea he pays to keep. Further particulars may be seen in the Terms which are sent gratis and post-free, on application to Mr. BULL, 19, Holles-street, Cavendish-square, London.

BEARD'S COLOURED PHOTOGRAPHIC PORTRAITS

Are taken at

THE ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION, REGENT-STREET,

64, PALADIUM-STREET, WESTMINSTER and

85, KING WILLIAM-STREET, CITY.

UNDER THE ESPECIAL PATRONAGE OF HER MOST GRACIOUS MAJESTY THE QUEEN.

THE ROYAL NAVAL, MILITARY, EAST INDIA, and GENERAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY, 3 WATERLOO-PLACE, LONDON.

VICE-PRESIDENTS.

[illegible]

DIRECTORS.

[illegible]

Auditors.—Rear-Admiral Sir Edward Kerr Bart. K.C.B.
Actuary.—Charles Ansell, Esq. M.A. F.R.S.
Solicitors.—Messrs. Bell and Brodrick, 4, Gray's-inn-square.
Bankers.—Messrs. Coutts and Co., 59, Strand.
Physician.—Dr. Locock, 50, Berkeley-square.
Surgeon.—Mr. Liston, 1, Hanover-street, Hanover-square.
Secretary.—Major-Gen. Sir John Lardin, K.C.B.
Chief Clerk.—Mr. Thomas Lancaster, R.N.
Cash. Sir George Back, R.N.
Major-Gen. Taylor, C.B., R.I.C.S.
Major-Gen. Edward Wynyard, C.B.
Wm. Wilson, Esq., K.H., K.C.

PECULIARLY FAVOURABLE TERMS are granted upon the Lives of Persons in the Military, Naval, Civil, and Diplomatic Services of the World, and generally upon the Lives of Persons residing in any part of the World, from which Letters can be received in Europe and returned in Six Months.

Persons residing in this Country or changing from one country to another, with the consent of the Directors, may pass to any part of the World, without extra charge.

Assurances to the amount of 10,000 may be effected on the actual value of the Policies of any sum not exceeding 10,000 will be granted on the Lives of Persons in the Military, Naval, Civil, and Diplomatic Services of the World, from which Letters can be received in Europe and returned in Six Months, without extra charge.

Assurances granted upon the Lives of Persons in the Military, Naval, Civil, and Diplomatic Services of the World, from which Letters can be received in Europe and returned in Six Months, without extra charge.

Persons residing in this Country or changing from one country to another, with the consent of the Directors, may pass to any part of the World, without extra charge.

Assurances to the amount of 10,000 may be effected on the actual value of the Policies of any sum not exceeding 10,000 will be granted on

RUINS OF IRONGATE WHARF, AFTER THE LATE FIRE.

THE DESTRUCTION OF IRONGATE WHARF BY FIRE.

IN most of our impression last week, we gave an account of the destruction by fire of Irongate Wharf, near the Tower. We now repeat the additional details which appeared in our latest edition, with such new facts as have since transpired.

Next to the wharf premises is a private dwelling-house, which has been entirely destroyed, as would also the Marquis of Granby public house, but for the immediate and energetic exertions of the men connected with the wharf and docks

Mr. Downing, the landlord of the Marquis of Granby, erected in the course of the last summer, at an expense of about £1000, a strong party-wall between his dwelling and the private house standing betwixt him and the wharfs, and to the thickness of this wall may be attributed the arresting of the progress of the flames. The Marquis of Granby became ignited on the roof, but, from the exertions of the men of the dock and wharf, the progress of the fire was obstructed, and the adjoining premises saved.

The whole of the wharfs have been completely destroyed and reduced to a mere heap of ruins. Nothing whatever has been saved except a bale or two of leather and a few trifling things not worth mentioning. The adjoining private house has also been completely gutted, but the walls in front are still standing. The Hawk, clipper schooner, has been all but destroyed above the cut-water, but the hull is otherwise uninjured The rigging and a part of the gear on and about the dock and bulwarks of the Busy have been destroyed, but the mast is standing, and no injury whatever has been received by the hull.

The premises were formerly three buildings, and were severally termed at that time the Leith and Berwick, the Dublin, and the Aberdeen Wharfs. Mr. Coleman, the present proprietor, came into possession of the property about eighteen months since, and he then had the three wharfs converted into one, and named it Irongate Wharf. There being a communication with the different floors will account, in some measure, for the rapid spread of the flames The lower floor contained an immense number of casks of tallow, puncheons of whiskey, hogsheads and bags of sugar, 1500 barrels of beef and pork, and a deal of coffee. The two upper floors were filled with bales of linen, canvass, and miscellaneous articles, together with a number of firkins of butter. Upon the quay were stored casks of tallow, hogsheads of sugar, bundles of hides, and puncheons of whiskey. The latter articles were rolled out before the flames had penetrated the flooring, and were as soon as possible removed to the Tower for protection. The whole of the immense stock in the warehouses, however, was burned. Among the parties who had goods in the stores were the following :—Messrs. Henry and Co., the sack merchants, of Mark-lane ; Messrs Whitbam and Son, of 38, Gracechurch-street, sail-cloth manufacturers; Messrs Richards, the linen merchants ; and Messrs. Mildred and Co., merchants. Those parties have lost the whole of their goods. They are, so far as can be at present learned, insured in the Imperial and Atlas Fire Offices.

A man named Brown has been missing since the night of the fire, who, it appears, was the innocent cause of the disaster. He had been sent to examine one of the bales of goods, and not being able to see the number or letter on the same with the light of the lantern, he took the candle out, and a spark flew from it and set the mill waste in a blaze.

Mr. Coleman states that when the accident took place he was standing on the wharf at the river-side, talking to the Captain of one of the vessels, when he was suddenly astonished at seeing a bale of goods fall from the loophole in a general blaze. The wife of Brown and his brother are in a dreadful state of mind; the only conclusion that they can come to is that he has perished in the flames. The firemen as yet have not been able to find any trace of a human being in the ruins, and some of Mr. Coleman's workmen state that they had heard of Brown being seen alive as late as Saturday morning. Mr. Coleman, however, is perfectly satisfied that the fire was purely accidental, and should the man be alive, he says that he need not fear any ulterior measures being resorted to. The outer walls of the wharf are in such a dangerous condition (they having bulged out several inches) that they are obliged to be shored up from the bed of the river

Subjoined is a copy of Mr. Superintendent Braidwood's official report of the damage done by this disastrous event:—Dec. 31, 1846, Three, P.M.: A fire broke out in Irongate Wharf, Tower, the property of Mr. C. R. Coleman, wharfinger. The cause of fire unknown. The building belonged to the St. Katherine Dock Company, and the insurances at present are unknown. The premises are burned down.—Lower East Smithfield: Mr. Crocker, part of roof, staircases, and upper floors burned, and rest of house considerably damaged by fire and water

Lower East Smithfield: Joshua Downing, victualler, Marquis of Granby, the building and contents considerably damaged by water and removal. Insured in the Licensed Victuallers' Office.—The water-side along Irongate Stairs: the sloop Busy the vessel and cargo severely damaged by fire—insurance unknown. The schooner Hawk similarly damaged insurance unknown. The following engines attended at the fire in the Dockyard:—The Tower and the parish ones, with the land engines of the Brigade, the two floats, and the West of England.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS

J. B. B.," Taunton.—Your attempted solution is altogether wrong, and we are obliged to confess our inability to comprehend the questions you raise from it. White, in the position under consideration, engages to mate his opponent in a certain number of moves; he must do that against the best possible play of Black, and if the latter can by any legal means delay the mate beyond the stipulated number of moves, why then the Problem is worthless. In your solution, mate is not given at all, as the White K's R's Pawns left unguarded, for the King to take

" W. T. M." and " Merlin." The trifling quarterly subscription of 4s. 4d. will not suffice to enable you to receive the " Chess-Player's Chronicle" by breakfast time every Thursday morning, post free, to all parts of England.

" W. E. M."—In Castling on the King's side, you place your King on his Knight's square, and the Rook on the King's Bishop's square. In Castling on the Queen's side, place the King on Queen's Bishop's square, and the Rook on Queen's square.

" J. J. P."—It would take half a column of our Paper to answer the trifling questions you have submitted as to the Laws and Regulations of the Game. Get Kenny's shilling " Manual of Chess," just published, as which you will find all such matters satisfactorily explained, and much besides which it behoves every young Player to be master of

" G. W. G.," Weymouth. It is the celebrated Indian Problem, which excited so much admiration when it first appeared here two years ago. The solution is—1. B to Q B sq; 2. K to Kt sq; 3. K to Q 2nd; 4. R to Q 4th, mate.

" E. T." The Indian Problem in the December Number of the " Chess-Player's Chronicle" has been to " doctored " for the English market as to be quite spoiled. In the original, mate was to be given in six moves with the Pawn ; without this condition, it may be easily given in five.

" J. H. C."—You cannot take an adverse piece in the act of Castling. " The Laws of Chess" may be got from Lewis's works, the " Chess-Player's Chronicle," the little work mentioned above as " J. J. P.," and several others.

" Juvenis." They shall be examined, but we fear you have not bestowed sufficient time and labour to render them sufficiently accurate. No. 3 is evidently a feature, as mate may be given easily in three instead of five moves. The Captain Evans who played in the consultation game to which you allude is the inventor of the well-known Evans's Gambit.

" Tyro."—We believe the Answers to Correspondents will be reserved for the Wrapper of the Monthly Parts The cases for binding the earlier Volumes can be procured of Hastings, the Publisher, 10, Carey-street, Lincoln's-inn, price about 1s. 3d.

" Early Days."—Join the London Chess Club, in your neighbourhood—you will now have an opportunity of witnessing a Match of unusual interest, Mr. Horwitz playing blindfold against Messrs. Horwitz and Perigal in consultation; the odds giving the odds of a Rook. Apply to the Honorary Secretary, George and Vulture Hotel, Cornhill.

" A Z" —The Anniversary Dinner of the spirited Chess Club in Liverpool will take place shortly—we shall take care to announce the day

" R. P. H.," India.—Received with best thanks, and acknowledged by letter.

" C. N. R."—A Pawn can be taken in passing only by a Pawn. The act consists in removing the captured Pawn from the board, and placing your own Pawn on the square it leaped over. Suppose White King's Pawn to be stationed at his King's 5th sq., and Black to play his Queen's Pawn two steps, White may, if he choose, take off the adverse Pawn just as if it had moved but one square, placing his own on the adverse Queen's third square.

" T. R. S." K R's P is a very good move in the position you give; as, also, is Q Kt to B 3rd, or K Kt to B 3rd. The " Chess-Player's Chronicle" was published on Thursday, the 31st: your bookseller, therefore, was in fault.

" F. W. G." We are glad to see, in Mr. Kenny's " Manual," that he speaks in terms of commendation of Smith's Chess-rooms, " The Shades," in Leicester-square This excellent establishment requires only to be better known to become the most frequented place of the description in London. Try both that and Rue's Grand Divan

" D. T. C." -The weekly Numbers of the " Chess-Player's Chronicle" may always be got of the Newsvendors at the Railway Stations, and form an agreeable companion on a journey by rail or coach.

" I. P." As we have occasion to repeat almost every week, you may have two, three, or more Queens on the board at once.

Solutions by " Sopronita," " Flo," " T. M.," " D. C.," " S. E. K.," " B. S," " J. I. K.," " E. H.," and " S. O. H. C." are correct. Those by " Gambit," " Philip," " Rapid," and " T. R." are all wrong.

SOLUTION TO PROBLEM, No. 154.

WHITE.	White to win.	BLACK.
1. Q Kt to Q B 4th		Moves his PAWN
2. Kt to Q 2nd (ch)		K to R 5th
3. P one—mate

WHITE.	Black to win	BLACK.
1. B to K B 5th		P one
2 Q to her 4th		P takes P
3. B to h 4th		P takes Q
4. B to Q 3rd		P takes P
5. B to K 4th

and Black is compelled to take the PAWN and give checkmate.

GAME JUST PLAYED AT THE LONDON CHESS CLUB, BETWEEN MR HARRWITZ AND MR. W. P.——G.

WHITE (Mr. W. P.)	BLACK (Mr. H.)	WHITE (Mr. W. P.)	BLACK (Mr. H.)
1. K P two	K P two	13. K Kt P two	P takes K P
2. K Kt to B 3rd	Q Kt to B 3rd	14. P takes P	Q to her 3rd
3. K B to Q B 4th	K B to Q B 4th	15. Q Kt to Q 2nd	B takes B
4. Q B P one	K Kt to B 3rd	16. Q takes B (f)	Q Kt to K B 5th
5. Q to K 2nd (a)	Castles	17. Castles (Q side)	Q B takes Q R P
6. Q P one	Q P one	18. Q Kt to Q B 4th	Q to Q R 3rd
7. K R P one	Q B to K 3rd	19. K Kt takes K P	B takes Kt
8. K B to Q Kt 5th (b)	Q Kt to K 2nd	20. Kt takes B	K Kt P two
9. K B to Q R 4th	Q Kt to K Kt 3rd (c)	21. Kt to K 5th (g)	K R to K sq
10. Q B to K Kt 5th (d)	K R P one	22. Kt to K B 3rd	Q to her R 8th (ch
11. Q B to K 3rd	K B to Q Kt 3rd	23. B to Q Kt sq	R takes K P
12. K B to Q B 2nd	Q P one (e)	24. Q to her 2nd	R to K 7th
			Black wins.

(a) This appears to us a lost move.
(b) Here again White loses time, and affords his antagonist an opportunity of bringing his pieces into better play.
(c) This is an excellent position for the Queen's Knight. (d) Another useless move
(e) The timely advance of this Pawn is one of the most important features in the defence of the " Giuoco Piano " opening
(f) Fearing to double a Pawn, White allows the adverse Knight to gain possession of one of the most commanding stations he can occupy.
(g) Better to Q R 3rd

This brilliant little affair came off the other day between Mr. W. P —g and Mr. E. Wilbams

WHITE (Mr. W.)	BLACK (Mr. P.)	WHITE (Mr. W.)	BLACK (Mr P.)
1. K P two	K P two	12. K to R sq	Castles.
2. K Kt to B 3rd	Q Kt to B 3rd	13. K B P two	Q to K R 4th
3. Q P two	P takes P	14. K P one (b)	Q P one
4. B to Q B 4th	B to Q B 4th	15. P takes Q P	Kt to K B 4th
5. Q B P one	P to Q 6th	16. P takes Q B P	K R to K sq
6. Q Kt P two	B to Q Kt 3rd	17. Q Kt to Q B 3rd	Q B to K 3rd
7. Q P P two	Q B P two	18. B takes B	R takes B
8. Q Kt P one	Q to K 2nd	19. Kt to Q B 4th	Q to K 7th
9. Castles	Q Kt to K 4th		Winning the Queen
10. Kt takes Kt	Q takes Kt		at least (c)
11 Q takes P (a)	K Kt to K 2nd

(a) There is neither time nor necessity for this capture. Q to her Kt 3rd, or K to R sq would have been far better.
(b) Most Ingenious. It should have been his especial endeavour to keep the Kt from taking possesion of the K R's 4th square.
(c) A beautiful move. The young player will observe that, if White take the Queen, he is mated in three moves.

PROBLEM No. 155.

By MR. PERUSS—(From the Berlin Schachzeitung.)

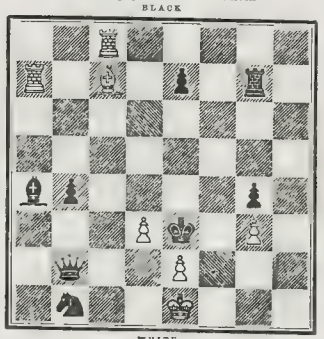
White to play and mate in four moves.



BLACK

WHITE

CHESS ENIGMAS.

No. 100.—This position occurred in play to Mr. Goltz, of the Berlin Chess Club

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
K at Q R 3rd	K at his 3d sq	Ps at K Kt 4th, Q	Ps at K Kt 2nd, Q
Q at Q B 5th	Q at K 7th	at K B 5th, Q	4th, Q Kt 2nd, and
R at K R 8th	R at K 4th	B 2nd, and Q	Q R 4th
B at K R 6th	B at K B 6th	Kt 3rd

White, having to move, gave mate in three moves.

No. 101.—By Mr. M'G ——r

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK
K at his Kt sq	K at his B 4th	Kt at Q Kt 5th	B at Q 4th
Q at Q 2nd	Q at K R 6th	Ps at K R 5th,	Kt at Q B 3rd
R at K sq	R at K R sq	K Kt 3rd, and	Ps at K 2nd and
B at Q sq	R at K B 6th	Q 4th	5th, Q Kt 6th, and
Kt at K 6th	B at K R 3rd		Q R 4th

White to play and mate in three moves

No. 102.—By Mr. R. A. B.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
K at Q R sq	K at Q Kt sq	B at K B 3rd	Kt at Q B sq
Q at her 5th	Q at K Kt 2nd	B at Q R 8th	Ps at K B 3rd, Q B
R at K 4th	R at K Kt sq	P at Q Kt 5th	4th, and Q R 2nd

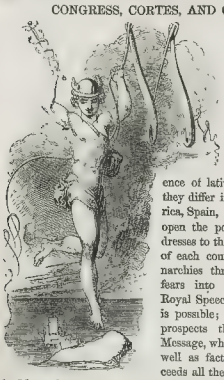
White to play and mate in three moves.

London: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLER, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, JANUARY 9, 1847.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No, 246.—Vol. X.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, JANUARY 16, 1847. [Sixpence.

CONGRESS, CORTES, AND COMMONS.



ANIFOLD practice seems to have created a regular legislative season, which visits all countries blessed with Constitutions about the same period, with less variation than might be expected from difference of latitude. However much they differ in other respects, America, Spain, France, and England open the political year with addresses to the "collective wisdom" of each country. The three Monarchies throw their hopes and fears into a cautiously-worded Royal Speech, saying the least that is possible; the Republic hears its prospects through a President's Message, which gives arguments as well as facts, and in quantity exceeds all the Royal Speeches of all the Monarchs of Europe for a century put together. But, according to Sir Francis Head, immensity is the characteristic of nature in America: everything is on the largest scale, and even the mighty flood of words annually poured out before the assembled Congress is quite in proportion to Niagara and the Mississippi. Only when spread out before the eyes of the little men and amid the little things of Europe does it appear excessive. This is not unusual in cases of displacement; all things are seen best in their place—in situ, as the geologists say. The Pyramids themselves are no such great things as they stand in the Desert, but they would make a terrible sensation if dropped down in Cornhill.

Not dissimilar is the effect of the President's Message placed beside the Speech of an European Royalty; the latter is dwarfed down into something very insignificant. As the Transatlantic production arrived at nearly the same time with the Speech of the Queen of Spain, on the Opening of the Cortes, the comparison is, as it were, forced upon us. It is, besides, the Legislative Season: the French Chambers this week have commenced their sitting, and our own House of Commons begins its labours with the opening of the next; we have, therefore, an opportunity of examining and comparing a whole cluster of these anticipatory Addresses; they differ much from each other, and yet they are not without a certain resemblance—the differences spring from national character and institutions; the resemblance arises from feelings common to almost all mankind. Thus, whether we read Speech or Message, we shall find a disposition to touch lightly on difficulties and disasters; a wish to rate, at least at their full value, all advantages, financial or military; in short, to paint the national prospects in that artistic spirit that makes the best of everything, and works rather in the sunshine of a Claude than the gloom of a Salvator Rosa. The materials differ, but the treatment, the handling, to adopt the technicalities of the Atelier, are much the same. Shadows cannot be left out entirely, but black need not be made so very black; they may also be compensated by the judicious throwing in of lights beside them; and it is a general rule to make the perspective as golden as possible.

The principle holds good, whether we examine the mere sketches and outlines given in Royal Speeches, or the finished picture of the President's Message. How ably, for instance, Mr. Polk, in his this year's exhibition, has brought out all the incidents of the Mexican quarrel! The background of the piece is crowded with wrongs, and outrages committed on the Star-spangled Banner; but they are clearly defined, and lead the eye gradually to the bold and massive grouping of an American army occupying the Mexican territory. And here, what an opportunity for brilliant colouring! Nor is it thrown away; the foreground is full of the finest effects that can be produced by the political pencil. Aggrandisement, acquisition of territory, victory, injuries avenged, and outrages atoned for—all these are matters of congratulation to the Sovereign people, as we examine it, only one regret arises; it is a pity, it is a cause even of mournful reflections, that the "free and enlightened citizens" of the Great Republic, can exhibit as great a love of conquest, and what is called glory, as any despot of the old history of Europe; war is evidently the game of people, as well as Kings, and, with this example before our eyes, it is evident that much good indignation against the selfish ambition of Monarchs has been thrown away. If Louis the Fourteenth had had to meet a Parliament, or Chamber, he might have used language not dissimilar to that of the President's Message; such is the continual tendency of extremes to meet, and show the greatest opposites together. A King, too, would touch lightly on such disagreeable topics as debt and increased taxation, as the consequence of all this glory; and, with the same instinct, writes President Polk; the price to be paid for the laurels occupies but slight consideration, compared with the elaborate description of how they were sown and how well they have been reaped. Millions of dollars melting down, or passing away in the smoke of gunpowder, is not a pleasant sight to place before the eyes of any nation; so, on the broad canvass occupied by the tableau of American affairs, it is cast discreetly into the shade.

Turn we now to the Royal Speech of Spain, which has all the defects of such manifestoes highly exaggerated. A Ministry without a policy, speak, through a Queen without power, to a Chamber without independence; yet what a flourish of phrases, that examined, mean nothing! They are worse than merely negative—they are calculated to mislead and deceive. A State may wish to conceal its poverty; but to pretend to riches while it is on the verge of insolvency, is something criminal. While the Spanish Ministry boast of improved financial prospects, they are shutting off payment of their foreign creditors by every possible device! They talk of order and security, and they fire volleys of musketry on liberal candidates at elections, and arrest and imprison a representative of the people when on his way to take his seat in the Cortes. They speak gravely of augmenting the navy: no one could gather from their words that a Spanish navy does not exist; that the whole fleet of the Power that once held two worlds in its grasp, might lie in one basin of a Liverpool dock. The Spanish Speech is eminently national in all this: words, promises, rhetorical flourishes abound among the people who live on the recollections of a mighty past; they seem to think—perhaps do actually believe—that they are still in the days of Philipsc and Charlesc, and are still the possessors of invincible Armadas and inexhaustible gold mines. As the Spanish begger throws his threadbare cloak over his tattered rags with a picturesque grace and dignity unattainable by those who, in other lands, wear "robes and furred gowns," so Spanish statesmen adopt the language that might befit the most palmy state of wealth and power, and use it with such an air of earnestness and self belief, that we involuntarily give their assertions a certain degree of credit, even against the evidence of our own senses. The decayed gentleman in Elia's exquisite essay, who, by his magnificent manner of dealing with the evidences of poverty, impressed his guests with a certain undefined feeling of the presence of wealth, as if they were still, at least, under its shadow, and that the family plate and liveries must be somewhere in the next room, is the type of the Spanish nation; and the Ministerial Address is drawn up with a perfect knowledge of the national character.

PROCESSION OF KING LOUIS PHILIPPE TO OPEN THE CHAMBER OF DEPUTIES.—DRAWN AND ENGRAVED IN PARIS.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

Our own Royal Speech, and that of the French King to the Chambers, come close together: affairs in both countries are in many respects in a parallel position; the entente cordiale between Windsor and the Tuileries has been somewhat chilled, though the "friendly assurances" it is customary for all nations to receive from each other, even when actually preparing for mutual throat-cutting on the most extensive scale, will hardly be withheld. The domestic difficulties that press upon both countries will lessen the inclination to pursue the cause of quarrel—a very petty one as it stands—to all the bitterness of which it is capable. England has to provide for an evil day in Ireland, and France has to deal with an unusual mass of suffering in her provinces, which leaves her no cause for exultation over her neighbour. And as both France and England are, and must continue to be, the champions of civilisation and Constitutional Government in Europe, they will be forced to act together in the conflict that seems to threaten us from the East; the Cossack has advanced another stage from his steppes and plains; may he not remember the banks of the Loire and Seine, and try again whether his lance cannot open him a path to them? Austria and Prussia have so long been employed in crushing all national spirit among their people, that they have had no eyes for anything else. They have thought Liberty their greatest enemy, and now they have the Colossus of Absolutism darkening their threshold: to drive him back, they must evoke the very spirit of nationality they have so carefully destroyed. It is impossible for England and France to stand apart and estranged from each other while all these elements of discord are uniting. Far more dangerous to the peace of Europe is the progress of Russia westward than any marriages or alliances of the Bourbon race. Next to their domestic difficulties, the questions arising from the internal relations of Europe will form an important part of the approaching debates of the French and English Legislatures, whether they are given a prominent place in the two Royal Speeches or not.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

PARISIANA.

(From our own Correspondent.)

PARIS, Wednesday.

Political anxiety at home and abroad, famine in the country, and monetary crisis at the Bourse, are combined with a still more insidious and more general evil, which makes its way into every house, in spite of doors and windows, and set porters more watchful and surly than Cerberus, and whether the master be rolling in riches or very pinched by their last railway speculation. The irresistible enemy is—Influenza! All Paris has colds—all Paris coughs,—from Rothschild, St. Antoine to Barrière de l'Etoile: and there are certain hour- of the day, at which the temperature suddenly falls, that if you lend an attentive ear, sounds will reach you like the groanings of the earth before an earthquake—it is the 950,000 inhabitants of Paris coughing. Sermons, as well as plays and operas, are rendered inaudible by the sneezing choruses of the audiences.

In spite, however, of evils moral and evils physical, we keep up to our old standard of gaiety. In the public halls, the masked assemblies, the bals costumés, joy is rife and pleasures fierce. Political squabbles have not quite marred more private réunions. We had a ball at the Duke de Nemours' on Saturday, where none but the élite were admitted. Above all the beauties present towered in love liness the illustrious lady who gave the party, and, next to her, the Princess, her sisters-in-law. Prince de Ligne, the Belgian Ambassador, has given likewise a magnificent ball: whilst, at Lady Normanby's, there has been but a limited assembly, owing to the isolation of the British Embassy at this moment; but the festivities were brilliant beyond measure, and, most of all, those of the most triumphant beauties of the party, the Duchesse d'Istria and Lady Normanby's lovely niece. Lady Jane Peel and Lady Dorothea Campbell have likewise had what we French, in imitation of you, call Raouts, and the Italians Conversazioone.

Mr. Tudor is preparing to give parties, on a scale of magnificence surpassing all that has been before known in Paris: never indeed has he had his whole house, for the occasion, decorated with devices, cyphers, and armorial bearings of that family best known in the other Royal branch of Ap Tudor. The first assembly is to come off next week, very sponge to the soirées dansantes of the haut monde. Viscomte Delaunay has announced his "Resurrection" given as a prologue, and all Paris is awaiting; his first mise en scène of the perpetual comedy of Parisian society.

The tide of pleasure in private society will not, however, completely set in before we have one of the Bals de la Lune Cloute, one of the crowded official balls at Court, which, visited by all classes that possess a fashionable rivalry, ends in [illegible] in eclipsing each other. But the King and the elder members of the family are plunged in gloom, owing to the distress of France and Europe, having quarrelled violently with all the great powers; with Austria, with Prussia, Russia, and Austria, about Cracow [illegible] since, which, after borrowing three millions from the [illegible], must have five millions more, or stop the payment, is another source of Royal gloom. The King and Queen and Duchess of Orleans found duties more in accordance with their souls' sadness, in celebrating the anniversary of the death of poor Princess Marie, who would have been a spectator of the wonderful exposé now made, officially and publicly, in close documents, whose personality and virulence have [illegible] distance all international courtesy, and all the most respected habits of diplomacy.

FRANCE. THE OPENING OF THE FRENCH CHAMBERS.

The Chambers were opened on Monday by the King in person, with all the accustomed ceremonial. The whole of the distance from the Tuileries to the Palais Bourbon was lined on both sides with National Guards and troops of the Line; whilst, on the Place de la Concorde strong detachments of Municipal Guards kept back the crowds assembled outside.

The doors were thrown open at the Chamber of Deputies at ten o'clock, for such persons as had been favoured with tickets; but, before that hour arrived, a number of sight-seers had assembled outside, anxious to secure the best places. By eleven o'clock nearly all the seats reserved for the public were occupied, ladies occupying the front of all the galleries and the pourtour which runs round the Chamber below.

[illegible] scene in the interior of the Chamber was similar to those of [illegible]. The Royal seat was placed on a wide estrade, raised over the spot where the President of the Chamber usually sits. At each side of it were arranged tabourets of crimson velvet, edged with gold lace, for the four Princes. High above the platform rose a rich canopy, also of crimson velvet and gold, surmounted on the centre and sides with fasces, x of tri-coloured flags. Below the platform were disposed benches for the Ministers, the grand dignitaries of the two Chambers, general officers, members of the Council of State, and other dignitaries.

About twelve a few Peers and Deputies began to arrive. Amongst the earliest were the Marquis de Boissy, Count de Murat, Count de Montalembert, M. Leserjeant de Monnecove, M. C. Lefitte, M. O. Barrot, &c. M. Thiers entered rather late, and was warmly greeted by his friends.

A little before one, the Diplomatic Corps took their seats in the tribune reserved for them, close to that of the ladies of the Royal Family; they were all in grand uniform, with stars and many orders, and presented a very brilliant appearance. The Marquis of Normanby, who was seated next to the Turkish Ambassador, attracted very general attention.

Shortly after the Ministers entered the Chamber in full official costume, headed by Marshal Soult, the President of the Council, and took their places below the platform. On the right were placed Marshal Soult, M. Guizot, Baron de Mackau, General de St. Yon de Bellevue, and M. de Salvandy; and, on the left, M. Lacave-Laplagne, M. Cunin-Gridaine, M. Duchâtel, and M. Martin (du Nord).

The Ministers had barely time to take their places, when the Queen's tribune was thrown open, and Her Majesty entered, followed by Madame Adelaïde, the Duchesses of Orleans, and other Princesses. Loud cries of "Vive la Reine!" greeted her arrival. The young Duchess de Montpensier was the grand object of attraction. She was simply dressed, in a dark-coloured dress and yellow bonnet, lined inside with pink, and looked exceedingly interesting. Amongst so many Princesses remarkable for their personal attractions, it was universally admitted that she was worthy to take her place in such a circle.

A little after one the cannon of the Invalides gave notice that the King had left the Tuileries, and in about ten minutes after, a flourish of trumpets and drums outside the Chamber announced His Majesty's arrival. Soon after the Grand Deputations, which had received the King, entered the Chamber—Duke Pasquier at the head of the Peers, and M. Sauzet at the head of the other Chamber, and took their seats in front of the Throne. After them came the General Officers, Aides-de-Camp, the Equerries, the Colonels of the National and Municipal Guards, and the other officers who had composed the Royal Cortège. They ascended the steps leading to the platform, and ranged themselves in close rank behind the King's seat, presenting a most brilliant display of crosses, embroidery, and glittering uniforms. The spectators had, however, scarcely time to admire the coup d'œil, when an Usher announced "The King," and simultaneously the whole assembly rose to receive him.

His Majesty had scarcely commenced ascending the steps when a cry of "Vive le Roi!" arose from all sides. His Majesty stopped a second to acknowledge the warm reception given him, and, when he reached the platform, had again to salute the Peers and Deputies several times, the acclamations being over and over again repeated. At last silence was restored, and his Majesty took his seat, being supported on the right by the Duke de Nemours and the Prince de Joinville, in the uniform of general officers, and on the left by the Duke d'Aumale and the Duke de Montpensier. His Majesty wore the uniform of a Colonel of the National Guard, and appeared to rejoice to say, in excellent health.

The following is the Royal Speech, which was read by his Majesty very distinctly:

"MESSIEURS PEERS AND DEPUTIES.

"In summoning you to resume the labours of the session, my first wish is that we should afford my Government your best co-operation to relieve the sufferings that this year weighs on a portion of our population. I have hastened to order measures best calculated to attain that object. I trust that by the firm maintenance of order, by the liberty and security of commercial transactions, by a judicious application of the public resources, efficiently seconding the zeal of private charity, we shall mitigate those trials with which Providence sometimes visits the most prosperous States.

"My relations with all the Foreign Powers give me the firm confidence that the peace of the world continues secure

"The marriage of my beloved son, the Duc de Montpensier, with my beloved niece, the Infanta of Spain, Louisa Fernanda, has completed the satisfaction and consolation which Providence has vouchsafed me and my family. This union will be a fresh pledge of those good and intimate relations which have so long subsisted between France and Spain, and the maintenance of which is as desirable for the prosperity as for the reciprocal security of the two States.

"I have reason to hope that the affairs of the River Plate will, before long, be settled conformably with the views adopted by my Government, in concert with that of the Queen of Great Britain, for the establishment of the security of our commercial relations in those countries.

"I have concluded, with the Emperor of Russia, a treaty of navigation, which guarantees to us, by a just reciprocity in our maritime relations with that empire, advantages which it was important for us to secure.

"An unexpected event has impaired the state of things founded in Europe by the last treaty of Vienna. The republic of Cracow, an independent and neutral state, has been incorporated with the Empire of Austria. I have protested against that infraction of the treaty.

"At home the constant progress of the public revenue, despite the cases which might have checked it, proves that the activity and resources of the country continue to increase. The financial laws which will be submitted to you in important improvements in the legislation and administration of the kingdom, will be submitted to your deliberation. The great public works which we have undertaken shall be continued with the same activity with the increased means the country command, and with the prudence indispensable to the maintenance of public credit.

"You will also have to direct your attention to measures calculated to second in our African (Algerian) possessions the progress of colonisation and of its internal prosperity. Tranquility, so happily restored to Algeria by the valour and benevolence of our army, enables us to announce measures of that important question, respecting which a special vote will be presented to you.

"MESSIEURS,

"A common feeling animates us. You are all, like me and mine, devoted to the happiness and grandeur of our country; and already long experience has enlightened us as to the policy best suited to her moral and material interests, and which must secure prosperity, liberty, and the full development and enjoyment of her future destinies. I await with confidence, from your patriotism and wisdom, the co-operation necessary to the accomplishment of this great task. Let us assist each other in supporting the burthen, and France will reap the fruit of our efforts."

The Paris journalists are of course entirely occupied in commenting upon the Speech. It is praised very much by the Press and the other Ministerial papers, but the Opposition journals condemn it very bitterly

The unfavourable aspect of affairs in France has induced the Government to decide upon not giving its sanction to any new lines of railway during the present session.

Both Chambers met on Tuesday. The sitting in the Peers was unimportant; but in the Chamber of Deputies the Minister of Finance brought forward the Budget.

The sum of the ordinary budget of 1848 presents the following results:—

Revenue	1,487,243,737 francs
Expenses	1,368,227,137 "
Surplus	3,316,6330 francs"

M. Guizot, in the course of the day, laid on the table a number of papers relative to the affairs of Spain and Cracow

There are in all nine documents relative to Cracow, and 25 on the Spanish marriages, forming a long and laboured defence of the course adopted by the French Government upon the latter question

We regret to say that distress in Provence is on the increase. The rise in the price of corn has led to severe serious riots. The Auxiliaire Breton of the 9th inst., says:—"On Tuesday evening there was an assemblage of about two hundred persons at Brest, who went to the house of M. Caillet, miller and corn dealer, menacing serious outrages. They were dispersed by the gendarmes, but re-assembled afterwards with an addition to their number, and carried off the bolting of two corn waggons which were in the street. On the following day five of the mob were arrested and taken to prison. On the 7th, and even yesterday, it was found necessary to have troops on the road between Vitré and La Gravelle to protect the waggons laden with corn, which was being carried to Laval. At Livré, on the 6th, a load of corn was stopped by a mob of 200 persons, and on the following day it was sold to the people at the price fixed by the owner and the mayor, viz. 36fr. 50c. the hectolitre; but the mob said that the next time they got hold of any corn they would take it without paying for it. As to the reports of disturbances at Fougères, Châteaubourg, and Angers, they are without foundation." The Réforme publishes the following letter, dated St. Aignan, 2nd instant:—"Disorders of every kind are being committed on our roads: inundations, dearness of provisions, and riots; simple peasants, ordinarily most peaceable, have had the great temerity to complain too loudly of their sufferings. The members of the authorities, and the gendarmerie, were insulted and pelted, which were found to be deficient in capacity. Our small town presents the most afflicting spectacle. At Tours the prisons are filled to excess. All the towns in the neighbourhood are in a state of siege. Several persons have been killed, and are treated with equal severity. The Réforme publishes also the following letter from Yvetot, in Normandy:—"The misery existing in this country is frightful. We reckon 300 indigent families out of a population of 10,000." The Journal des Débats states that serious disturbances had taken place in the department of the Vienne, in consequence of the high price of corn. Several National Guards who attempted to prevent the pillage of a corn-boat were severely wounded, and even a body of Gendarmes were obliged to retreat before the victorious mob, and to intrench themselves in their barracks. These occurrences took place at the market of Lauloûtre, near Montmorillon.

SWITZERLAND.—INSURRECTION IN THE CANTON OF FRIBURG.

The Journal des Débats contains news from Switzerland, from which it appears that the dissentient, for some time prevailing in the canton of Friburg, had led to results of an alarming character. A conciliatory measure, it was known to be, for some days that attempts at agitation had been made on different points of the canton of Friburg. The head-quarters of the movement were in the district of Morat, a small Protestant county, bordering on the canton of Berne, and on the Vaudois canton. The insurrection actually took place on the 6th inst., when two columns of insurgents are said to have marched upon Friburg, the one from Morat, and the other from Bulle. The Government of Friburg had already adopted defensive measures, and was prepared to repel their attack. The day before it had marched a battalion into the town; and, on being informed that parties of insurgents had appeared in the neighbourhood, it had caused the tocsin to be rung in the villages, in order to call to its assistance all the able-bodied men of the German portion of the canton between Friburg and Berne. The population of that district is entirely devoted to the existing order of things. The Government had, moreover, convoked an extraordinary meeting of the Grand Council for the 9th. The authorities of Berne, the present vorort, sent to the frontier, on the 7th, two companies of infantry, and two companies of carabineers, and placed under arms the first battalion of militia."

A letter from Bâle of the 8th says:—"The insurrection is spreading, and has reached Murten, and the districts of Boile, Gruyeres, and Stofes. On the evening of the 6th, the Castle of Murten was carried by assault, by the insurgents, who made the Governor prisoner, and soon afterwards marched on towards Friburg. The Regency of that Canton has taken up arms, but the Government of Lausanne has refused a passage to the troops, composed of a battalion of infantry and a company of carabineers."

We find by the latest accounts in the French papers, that the insurrection has been completely put down. The column from Morat of 600 men, but without [illegible], halted on the morning of the 7th, at the village of Courtepin, a league from Friburg, having encountered there a body composed partly of the regular militia and partly of peasants, and a skirmish ensued, in which some men were wounded on both sides. Reports, meanwhile, reached the insurgents of the arrival of troops in support of the Government, and, on the other hand, they were left in complete uncertainty as to the fate of the other two columns, which were expected to co-operate with them. In this situation, they decided on regaining their own districts, in retreating to which they were pursued, and six taken prisoners. The column from Estavayer, which was supplied with no other arms than clubs, being informed of the ill success of the other detachments, dispersed, and returned home unmolested. These movements took place on the day of the 7th, while the militia, composed of the German population of the Canton, assembled in support of the Government, which, feeling itself thus strengthened, seized and imprisoned the most notable among the Radicals, amongst others, some members of the Grand Council. Rigorous domiciliary visits were made to the suspected citizens. On the night between the 7th and the 8th, Government resolved to take military possession of the insurgent districts, commencing with that of Morat, against which a battalion of infantry and [illegible] of artillery were detached.

THE UNITED STATES AND MEXICO.

The Cambria arrived at Liverpool on Wednesday, with New York papers to the 31st December. They do not, however, furnish anything of importance, either from the United States or Mexico. The proceedings in Congress do not present any feature of interest. Nothing important had occurred nor had any material change in the interval between the sailing of the last arrival and the present. The export of grain, flour, and provisions to this country continued to be very large. No further decisive engagement had taken place in Mexico. Saltillo has been quietly occupied by General Worth—Tampico by detachments from Point Isabel and from New Orleans—while General Wool is approaching from the command that of General Taylor at Monterey. Of General Kearney's there are no late tidings. A rumour, founded on some vague accounts carried by a French sloop-of-war to Mazatlan, and thence brought over-land, [illegible] that the Mexican Minister at Madrid had withdrawn his previous offer of mediation. Santa Anna had collected, at San Luis Potosi, between 20,000 and 30,000 men; 8000 of whom had recently been added, under General Valencia, from the mining districts of Guanaxuato and Mexico; but were represented as inferior, hardy men. One third of his available force consisted of cavalry, well mounted and well appointed He was also said to have 55 pieces of artillery

The British Consul at Matamoras, Tunbridge Wells, is the son of Mr. John M'Leuren, and poaching having been carried on in the preserves to a great extent lately, two gamekeepers, assisted by five lookouts, were, on Saturday night last, in readiness to watch the woods, about half a mile from Plaistley. About half-past one o'clock on Sunday morning, the keepers heard a gun shot, whereupon, Forward, the head keeper, and two of the men, proceeded in the direction of the sound, and speedily met the poachers coming down the hill. Some exclaimed, "Here's somebody!" and another cried, "Shoot him," using a foul expression. The poacher so addressed lifted his gun, and shot Forward, who received the charge in his breast, which caused immediate death. Tunbridge Wells, as the poachers were about to make off, and struck the prostrate keeper with the butt-end of his gun with such violence that the stock snapped in two, and Forward was rendered insensible. A desperate struggle ensued between the three poachers and the two lookers, but the other keepers arriving shortly afterwards, two of the poachers made off, when the third (the man who had first at Forward) was secured. He has since been examined before the Thetford Magistrates, by whom he has been remanded. The other case occurred at plantations at Barcombe and Newick, where, in consequence of repeated loss of game, Captain Richardson and Mr. Slater employed a party of fourteen keepers and assistants to watch the preserves. During the night they came in collision with a gang of poachers, ten in number. The encounter was desperate, and victory declared in favour of the marauders. A man is in custody on a charge of being one of the poachers. Four of the keepers came off with broken heads, and the prisoner has been remanded.

SUDDEN DEATH OF SIR EDWARD HYDE EAST, BART.

We regret to announce the sudden decease of the Right Hon. Sir Edward Hyde East, Bart., at his residence, Sherwood Lodge, Battersea. The deceased, who was in his 83rd year, was one of the Judges of the Court of Common Council, and Indian Assessor. Sir Edward came to town on Thursday (last week), and returned apparently in his usual health. He retired to rest after partaking of supper. It had been customary for the servants to answer the bell when the chamber-door was sworn morning, that the fire might be lighted. At eight o'clock on Friday morning, the door was not open as usual; and the domestics, after knocking for some time, and receiving no answer, forced open the door, when they discovered Sir Edward lying in bed, dead and cold. He appeared to have expired without a struggle. An inquest was held at the Nag's Head, Battersea, on Monday, and the Jury returned a verdict of "Death from natural causes."

DESPERATE AFFRAYS IN SUSSEX.—Two dreadful conflicts have just taken place in Sussex, between gangs of poachers and gamekeepers. Both took place on Saturday night. In one instance Plaistley Frusk was the scene of the affray. The head-quarters of the gamekeepers were at the seat of Mr. John

SUDDEN DEATH OF SIR EDWARD HYDE EAST, BART.—We regret to announce the sudden decease of the Right Hon. Sir Edward Hyde East, Bart., at his residence, Sherwood Lodge, Battersea. The deceased, who was in his 83rd year, was one of the Judges of the Court of Common Council, and Indian Assessor. Sir Edward came to town on Thursday (last week), and returned apparently in his usual health. He retired to rest after partaking of supper. It had been customary for the servants to answer the bell when the chamber-door was sworn morning, that the fire might be lighted. At eight o'clock on Friday morning, the door was not open as usual; and the domestics, after knocking for some time, and receiving no answer, forced open the door, when they discovered Sir Edward lying in bed, dead and cold. He appeared to have expired without a struggle. An inquest was held at the Nag's Head, Battersea, on Monday, and the Jury returned a verdict of "Death from natural causes."

COUNTRY NEWS.

LORD LINCOLN AT MANCHESTER.

Lord Lincoln met his Manchester supporters at the Corn Exchange on Tuesday evening, and addressed them for an hour and a half upon the chief topics of the day. About 2000 persons were present. The noble Lord began by saying that he had been accused of great immodesty in coming forward to present himself before the constituency of Manchester, and he should have acquiesced in that condemnation, if he could have dreamed of voluntarily aspiring to such an honour; but he begged it to be distinctly understood he had come forward at the request of a large—at least, he was bound to say that evening, and if eventually he should accept the requisition, he should then be a candidate on the demand of a large—body of the constituency. Two most opposite objections had been urged against him as a candidate. They had been told that he was opposed to all reform, but how did they reconcile with that the opposite objection urged by the press in London, that he was one who had evinced such destructive tendencies, that there was no candidate, of whatever Radical opinions, that would not be preferable? He would answer with the first objection by pointing to the course pursued the whole time he held office in Sir Robert Peel's Government. He had not that Government from the first commence that great economical reform which terminated in the Repeal of the Corn Law? Why, within the year 1849 and the moment at which he was speaking, upon 500 and upwards of articles had the duty been entirely wiped off. In 1842, when this reform commenced, the revenue was deficient nearly £4,000,000. At the end of four years afterwards there was a surplus of nearly that amount, making a change of £8,000,000. He acknowledged that the means to effect this object had been the Income Tax, amounting to £5,000,000 a-year; but, on the other hand, the taxes weighing on the industrious classes, which had been removed, were very nearly £7,000,000 If he were asked if this policy had been fully carried out, he would reply, the great and heavy part of the work had been already carried out; but he believed something yet remained to be done, and he could not doubt that the present Government would follow out the same policy. If he had been made a sudden convert, motives had been imputed, which, independently of any other consideration, were of so ridiculous a nature as not to be worth while alluding to; but if the imputations were true, still the question of time was almost all that stood between himself and almost every other person in the House of Commons. Had not almost every statesman's mind (the late Mr. Huskisson's and Lord John Russell's) undergone an alteration on the question of the Corn Law? To show that his own conversion had not been so sudden, he referred to his speech at Nottingham, in February last. There were great and important changes in the present Government, strongly advocated at the present moment. He believed that those changes had already attracted considerable attention here. He alluded to the reduction of the Ten Duties.

"I am sure," (said the noble Lord,) "you will all forgive me, having due regard to the public revenue, which I conceive every Member of Parliament ought to consider, if I do not now committing myself upon this question by any promise to you. I shall be most anxious to hear what the Chancellor of the Exchequer himself is prepared to do upon this point; and I shall greatly rejoice if he finds it within the compass of his duty to confer this great boon upon the labouring population of the country. In the next place, gentlemen, that China itself has a great claim upon us."

Another important question was that of National Education, and he anticipated that some measure on this point would be brought forward by the present Government. They would recollect that the late Government brought forward a measure. It raised a great opposition amongst a large class of the community. It had, however, one beneficial result. It gave a great impetus to Dissenting exertions. The Church of England raised a vast sum of money, upwards of £100,000, within a very short time, for the purpose of extending education in the manufacturing and mining districts of England and Wales. (Hear.) The dissenting body, not to be outdone by these benevolent exertions of the Church of England, immediately proceeded in the same course. "Believe me," (said the noble Lord, "if it were in my power to extend to the poor of Ireland, who profess the Roman Catholic religion, the blessings of the Protestant faith, believe me, I should rejoice in such an opportunity; but I know that it is impossible, and that we cannot instruct them in that faith, and I would wish to see them placed in a different position, by removing from them those temptations which we all know human nature must fall under."

His Lordship then expressed his disapprobation of the Factory Bill, and after briefly to his Drainage Bill, and saying he admitted that large towns should have powers locally constituted to work such a measure if passed, then adverted to the present state of Ireland. "Gentlemen, I am convinced that a crisis has arrived in the affairs of that country, which requires more wisdom and boldness than perhaps ever was required by any Ministry before, in any state of the country. I believe that upon the exercise of that wisdom and boldness in the ensuing session, will depend much of the welfare and happiness of that sister country. I have contracted an anxiety for, and regard for the welfare of, that country, which is not likely to be changed by any circumstance that may occur to myself; and this I am prepared to say, that I shall be ever found an advocate for a liberal policy towards that country; that I shall be found to be an advocate for granting to Ireland an equality with this country in all civil rights. (Hear, hear.) I mean such an equality as the peculiar and mixed circumstances of the two countries may enable us to grant. Gentlemen, I would not here, certainly, although addressing you, presume to understand me if I should, quote LATIN; but I prefer making the quotation in the English tongue. Therefore let me recall to your minds the sentiment of the Roman orator, that it is the duty of a statesman to consider the welfare of one part of a country, and neglect the other, bring upon the state that most perilous of evils, discord and sedition." (Cheers, and cries of "Bravo!") Discord and sedition, unfortunately, have been too common in that part of the sister country (Ireland). But let it be ours to deprive them, at any rate, of any excuse for such conduct. Looking at the condition of the people of Ireland—having taken a great deal of pains to inform myself on a subject—having conversed with anxious inquiries during a tour in that island—having thought and reflected on the subject for many years past, I have come to the conclusion that it would be politic, wise, and just, if means could be found to pay the Roman Catholic clergy." (Cheers.)

When the noble Lord had concluded his speech he was catechised on the subject of the immediate repeal of the Corn Laws, the ballot, the extension of the franchise, the ballot, and other political reforms, to all of which he declared his assent.

Two resolutions were passed, one thanking his Lordship for this exposition of his sentiments, and the other that the canvass be prosecuted with all possible activity. The meeting lasted three hours.

NORTH LINCOLNSHIRE ELECTION.—The election of a Knight to serve in Parliament for the parts of Lindsey, in this county, in the room of Lord Worsley, took place on Tuesday, in the County Hall, at Lincoln. There was no opposition to the Whig candidate, Sir M. J. Cholmeley, a Protectionist, and, consequently, the proceedings passed off tamely. Weston Cracroft, Esq., proposed Sir Montague Cholmeley. James Whiting Yorke, Esq., of Walmsgate, Louth, seconded the nomination. No other candidate having been named, the Sheriff declared Sir Montague Cholmeley duly elected.

ELECTION FOR EAST WORCESTER.—On Monday, the election of a knight of the shire for the eastern division of the county of Worcester took place, the death of the late John Rushout, Esq., having caused a vacancy in the representation. Mr. Barneby was a Conservative, and one of the Protectionist minority; and his successor, Captain Rushout, nephew and heir of Lord Northwick, professes similar principles. Captain Rushout was unopposed, and consequently, on Tuesday, the date having withdrawn from the field. The election being an unopposed one, there was very little excitement in the borough. Sir J. S. Pakington, M.P., proposed Captain Rushout, and the nomination was seconded by Thomas Lea, Esq. There being no other candidate, Captain Rushout was declared duly elected.

OPENING OF THE EXT AND PETERBOROUGH RAILWAY FOR PASSENGERS. —An important extension of the Eastern Counties Railway was opened on Thursday, for passenger trains. It was intended to have been opened as far back as last September, but serious slips taking place in the embankments in the vicinity of the Wash, it was necessarily deferred until the works were restored, and the foundation properly consolidated.

A SWINDLER AT ANDOVER.—A swindler, at Andover, named Frederick Selby, has been apprehended by the police of Wrexham, in Denbighshire, and been committed, but they got scent of their game, and have run it down. Letters were written to various quarters, and traps set, which Robert Macoure himself would have fallen into, and the result is that the case of conviction is complete, and that which he could not pay for, is now securely resting in gaol till the day of his committal for trial. An examination took place at Andover, on Monday, when several letters, received from persons in that neighbourhood, have been sent to the country, were read. One of the letters was from Mr. Thomas Roberts, of Rupert-street, stating that a Frederick Selby, whom he suspected to be the prisoner, absconded from his employ about four months ago, and left a debt of £20 behind him

THE CONDE DE MONTEMOLIN, SON OF DON CARLOS, AND HIS CLAIM TO THE SPANISH THRONE.

THE abdication of Don Carlos, and the address of his son to the Spanish people, renders the position of the latter Prince of general interest. An account of his claim to the Crown of Spain, which we have derived from a peculiar source, may, therefore, prove acceptable to our readers. A word or two, however, first, about the Prince himself.

Carlos Louis Maria Ferdinand de Bourbon, Conde de Montemolin, is the eldest son of Don Carlos, or, as his supporters term him, Charles V., by his first wife, the Infanta Maria, daughter of John VI., King of Portugal. Carlos Louis, who, were his father's pretensions allowed, would be Prince of the Asturias, was born on the 31st January, 1818, and is now, consequently, in his twenty-eighth year.

The claim of Don Carlos, and now, in consequence of his abdication, of his son, to the throne of Spain, is supported on the following grounds. According to the ancient law of Spain, as laid down by Mariana, in his celebrated work, "De Regis et Regis Institutione," no female could inherit the Crown, at least while a single male relative survived: and this seems borne out by the early history of the country. In 1388, John I., King of Arragon, left two daughters, but was, nevertheless, succeeded by his brother Martin: so as to the throne of Leon in 1230, which Ferdinand then ascended, though the preceding Monarch left two daughters: so again in Castille, in 1361, when Peter the Cruel's sceptre was successfully wrested from the hand of his daughter, John of Gaunt's consort, by her uncle, Henry of Transtamara. The case of Isabella, so well known as reigning with her husband, under the names of Ferdinand and Isabella, the Carlists do not allow to be any confutation of the rule, for they maintain that she was a mere usurper, possessing the Royal authority in despite of both male and female claims better than her own.

This being the ancient law, it is confirmed and no wise altered by Philip V., who, coming from France to rule over Spain, is generally, but incorrectly, supposed to have introduced the French Salic Law, which excluded females altogether. He did no such thing, but merely declared that "he entailed the crown on the males of his issue, according to the order of their birth, and excluded all females while a single male, however distant, remained." This declaratory act was first submitted to, and sanctioned by the General Council of Castille, consisting of deputies, nobles, and prelates; was embodied in a Royal decree, and received the ratification of the Cortes, thus becoming a law of the kingdom, strictly correct in all its forms and bearings.

Now, the Carlista further assert that the famous alteration of this ancient and modern law by Ferdinand VII., which gave the succession to his daughter, was without similar requisites, and was not legally done—a fact scarcely denied by their opponents. Consequently, his decree is null and void; and consequently, also, if the rest of the Carlist proposition be correct, Don Carlos and his issue, as the nearest male relatives of the preceding Monarch, are clearly entitled to be Kings of Spain.

In confirmation of these Carlist arguments, it certainly does seem curious that, despite of the utter defeat, and the apparently hopeless exile of Don Carlos and his family, every successive Government in Spain exhibits an anxiety to compromise the contest. The conciliatory offers of the Prince of the Asturias, (or, as he is called under his incognito title, Count de Montemolin), have evidently made a deep sensation; and who would not wish them accepted, could they be the means of restoring certain peace to the unhappy country which has been the victim, for so long a period, of this miserable dispute—at best, a mere question of law between the members of the Spanish House of Bourbon.

On Monday the Conde de Montemolin visited the Bank of England and the Royal Exchange. He was received at the Bank by the Governor (J. B. Heath, Esq.), and by A. L. Gower, Esq., one of the Directors. By these gentlemen the Count, attended by his Excellency the Marquis of Villafranca and Colonel Merry, was conducted over the various departments of the establishment. The Count expressed great admiration of the arrangements by which the vast and complicated business of the Bank is carried on. The Count was requested to print and sign a thousand pound note, which is preserved in a book kept for that purpose. He signed simply by the words, "El Conde de Montemolin."

After this, the party were invited into the Governor's room, where they partook of a sumptuous repast; and thence proceeding to the Royal Exchange, they were conducted over that establishment and Lloyd's, by A. L. Gower, Esq., and Richard King, Esq., where the latter gentleman explained minutely the usages and objects of the different departments. The Count left, after expressing his thanks to the gentlemen, to whose kindness he was indebted for much gratification.

The Morning Post of Wednesday states that the Count visited the office of that paper on the previous evening, and "was pleased to express much admiration of the union of mental labour and skill exhibited in the daily production of so much matter, original and translated, in the shape of a printed work. The varieties of information—the essays, political, moral, and literary, the foreign and domestic news—then given diurnally to the world, through the manual toil of the compositor, and the exact operations of the printing machine, to the improvement of which science has recently contributed so much, were remarked upon by the Count as a combination to be found only in a London daily newspaper."

The Times of Thursday says:—"The Count de Montemolin did us the honour yesterday to visit the Times printing establishment. The Prince was received, on the part of the proprietors, by Mr. J. J. Lawson, printer, and by that gentleman conducted over the several apartments in which the composition and presswork of this journal are carried on. The attention of his Royal Highness was naturally directed to the extraordinary expedition with which copies of the Times are produced; and, regarding attentively the seconds-hand of a watch, he counted, for his own satisfaction, the number worked off in one minute, which amounted to no less than 100—a rate of printing which can be sustained for an indefinite number of hours, and by means of which 6000 per hour can with ease be issued. His Royal Highness minutely inspected the machinery, the paper warehouse, the compositors' rooms, &c. The Prince expressed his great admiration of the whole establishment, but especially of the speed with which the machinery effects its labour. The Prince, with much condescension and kindness, pronounced a warm eulogium upon the mechanical science evinced in the construction of the machinery, as well as the practical skill, dexterity, and promptitude displayed by the workmen who are engaged in the execution of such vast and complicated mechanical power. His Royal Highness was attended by the Marquis de Villa Franca, General Don Juan Montenegro, and Colonel Merry."

THE CONDE DE MONTEMOLIN.
(From a recent Miniature, by E. D. South, Esq.)

On Thursday evening, his Royal Highness and suite visited the Haymarket Theatre. The performances were, "She Stoops to Conquer," "The Woman-Hater," and "The Invisible Prince;" and the house was crowded in every part.

PORTUGAL.

We have letters from Lisbon to the 6th instant. They confirm the account given last week of an action at Braga, between the Miguelite General M'Donnell and the Queen's troops under Baron Casal, in which the former were defeated, after a loss of a couple of hundred men.

Several attempts had been made to effect a coalition between the Septembristas and the Miguelites, upon some common principle of public policy, but hitherto they had succeeded only to the extent of uniting both against the Queen—the settlement of their own differences being deferred until they had disposed of "the common enemy."

The Queen's General, Baron Casal, in his official report, which is extremely laconic, states that the Miguelites fought desperately for four hours. Their loss, he says, was 240 killed, and one prisoner (!), which speaks volumes as to the furious hatred with which the contending parties fought. He reports his own casualties at 36, which, considering that the Miguelites, according to his own admission, fought desperately, and that the battle lasted four hours, must certainly be much below the real extent of his loss. What became of M'Donnell and the remainder of his force, he does not say, but it appears from private letters that M'Donnell, with upwards of 1200 men, succeeded in getting away, and made his retreat in good order to Guimaraes, whence he afterwards marched to Amarante, where he was at the date of the last accounts. The Queen's troops committed the greatest atrocities at Braga, plundering the houses, and even robbing the women of their ear-rings; and, amongst the 240 of the other party reported as slain, are to be counted many of the unoffending inhabitants, who were butchered in cold blood, after the fight was over, in revenge for the display they had previously made of their attachment to Don Miguel.

A Lisbon letter of the 6th says: "Schwalbach has 800 men under his command. He has reached Alcacer, which place the guerillas abandoned at his approach, and is now on his way to attack Evora, where, if the insurgents should offer an stout a resistance as they did when he made his last attempt, he is not likely to get in."

Saldanha entered Coimbra on the 4th, and after giving his troops a day's rest, was to continue his march on Oporto, where the great and final struggle which is to decide the fate of Portugal, will soon take place.

DEATH OF MR. CRIPPS, LATE M.P. FOR CIRENCESTER.—We have to record the demise of another veteran legislator, Joseph Cripps, Esq., late M.P. for Cirencester, who died on the 8th inst., at Ashcroft, near that town, aged 81. He was a banker in the borough, an East India proprietor, and a governor of the Van Diemen's Land Company.

SPAIN.—THE ARREST OF M. OLOZAGA.

The only topic which appears to excite any interest at Madrid, is the arrest of M. Olozaga. We stated in our latest Edition, last week, that considerable excitement had been created in Madrid, by the news of the arrest. This arrest took place in the most arbitrary manner. M. Olozaga had a proper passport, signed by the Consul at Bayonne, and it may be remarked that it is contrary to the Spanish Constitution to arrest a Deputy while proceeding to execute his duty. The arrest is the act of the Ministry, who do not prefer any specific charge against M. Olozaga, but it will be recollected that he was stated to have behaved in a violent manner towards the Queen. The Clamor Publico gives, as follows, some details of the arrest, on the authority of an eye-witness:—"M. Olozaga was in a diligence. In ascending a hill, soon after leaving Buytrago, a carriage came up containing two officers and two soldiers of the civic guard. They desired the conductor of the diligence to alight and exhibit his way-bill, and having examined it they ordered M. Olozaga to leave the diligence and get into the carriage with them. M. Olozaga, having expressed his astonishment at this arrest, as he was the bearer of a passport signed by the proper authority, and of the official minutes of his return to the Chamber of Deputies in two provinces, received for reply that his arrest was ordered by the Government, and he must make haste to alight and be received by them as their prisoner. The greatest indignation was manifested by the persons who were with him in the diligence at this proceeding. M. Olozaga was permitted to write only two lines on the way-bill of the conductor, to apprise his family of what had happened, and was then carried off to Pampeluna."

The Constitutionnel says—"The Ministry, which, from the opening of the session, has so imprudently given way to violence and arbitrary acts, begins to be ashamed of the fault it has committed in ordering the arrest of M. Olozaga, and knows not how to repair it. A melancholy incident has given a still more odious character to that illegal act: the father of M. Olozaga, who was in a dying state, when he heard of the arrest of his son, immediately expired. While M. Olozaga was being conducted to Pampeluna between four gendarmes, the inhabitants of Madrid were following the funeral procession of his father."

When our last advices left Madrid, the Ministry appeared to be alarmed; and it was said that, not daring to retain M. Olozaga as a prisoner, had given orders for his being taken back to the French frontier. This measure, although perhaps less severe than the first, is not less illegal. His banishment can no more be allowed than his imprisonment. Nothing could deprive him, according to the terms of the Spanish law, of the character and inviolability of a deputy; but no prosecution, either regular or irregular, exists against him. Nothing, therefore, can prevent M. Olozaga from taking his seat in the Cortes, and the Ministry that would oppose it by force would not less violate the law in substituting banishment for imprisonment.

The opposition journals, both in Madrid and Paris, do not admit that such a proceeding will exonerate the Cabinet of Madrid from a grave responsibility for their proceedings against this deputy. The law which renders the person of an elected representative inviolable is definite and clear. Against M. Olozaga no process had been undertaken, or even commenced, and it was Congress alone that could have decided against his right to sit. Sending him back to France, therefore, though less harsh than detaining him at Pampeluna, is regarded as not less at variance with the spirit of the law.

M. Olozaga has given his brother, Don José, in conjunction with M. Tejada, full power to represent him, both before the Queen and the tribunals, in every matter connected with his late most illegal arrest. Another deputy, Gomez de la Scona, elected for Orense, has been refused his passports. He it was who, in his capacity of Minister of Justice, countersigned the protestation of Esparlero in 1843, issued on board the ship Reina. The refusal to allow him to take his seat is a purely arbitrary act of the Isturitz Ministry.

The Expectador publishes the following documents respecting Senor Olozaga:—

COPY OF THE PASSPORT GIVEN HIM AT BAYONNE.

"No. 173. In name of her Majesty Dona Isabel II. de Borbon, whom God preserve, Queen of Spain—Don José Lopez de Bustamente, of the council of her Majesty, &c., &c., consul of Spain in commission in this port of Bayonne and its dependencies, concedes free and safe passport to his Excellency Don Salustiano Olozaga, deputy elect to the Cortes, in order that he may pass from Irun to Madrid, to exercise the charge of deputy; and I entreat all the authorities, both civil and military, French and Spanish, that they put no impediment in his journey, and assist him in all that he may need.

"Given at Bayonne the 24th December, 1846.

(Signed) "JOSE LOPEZ DE BUSTAMENTE."

Visèd by the authorities of Bayonne on the 24th, and those of Behobia and Irun on the 26th of December.

Copy of the Order of his Arrest.

"MINISTRY OF THE HOME DEPARTMENT. (Confidential.)

"Her Majesty the Queen (whom God preserve) having had notice that Don Salustiano Olozaga has introduced himself into Spain, has been pleased to order in accord with her Council of Ministers, that, wherever he may be found, he be arrested and conducted to the citadel of Pampeluna, where he is to remain in order to be judged, according to the laws, by the competent tribunal; and, as Captain Don N——, of the civil guard, the bearer of this order, is one of those charged with this commission, it is the will of her Majesty that the political chiefs and authorities, before whom he may present himself, facilitate him all the assistance he may require, &c. (Signed) "PIDAL.

"Madrid, 28th December, 1846.

"To the political chiefs and authorities to whom it may be presented."

Pampeluna is the capital and frontier-key of Navarre, being the first city of the plains. At the distance of four leagues is seen the Relate chain of the Pyrenees. The town lies on the left of the Arga, which here forms a horse-shoe bend. The position is well adapted for a fortress, as it commands the level plain, while its overlapping eminence is not commanded itself. The hills and spurs of the Pyrenees rise charmingly in the distance, especially when seen from the citadel.

The town has a small Gothic cathedral, and some picturesque bridges; but, the boast of this class, is the fine aqueduct. The citadel, the prison-house of Olozaga, is separated from the town by a glacis, or esplanade; it is pentagonal and has two bastions, fronting the river. "To hear what the Navarrese officials say, one would imagine that all the contents of Woolwich was here stowed away —(Ford's Hand-book of Spain.)

NEW ZEALAND.

M. BREES'S COTTAGE, KA-RORI-ROAD, WELLINGTON.

SINCE our last publication, intelligence, of an important and interesting character, has been received from this hitherto ill-fated Colony. The details will be found elsewhere; and as the information will, doubtless, have the effect of drawing public attention to the progress of the Settlement, we are persuaded that the annexed Views, representing scenes from the active colonisation of the Islands, will be acceptable to our readers.

These three Views are from the pencil of Mr. S. C. Brees, (now of Lincoln's Inn Fields), who was the Principal Surveyor and Civil Engineer to the New Zealand Company, from the year 1841 to 1845. It was his duty to lay out the land purchased of the Company, to find the best roads and communications through the country; and to construct them, also, the bridges, and other engineering works.

Those who have not considered the subject, can form no conception of the preliminary operations necessary before a new country can be occupied. The rivers and ranges of hills, harbours, &c., are obliged to be surveyed and laid down upon a map, in order to show their positions in reference to cost, and this before the country can be sub-divided. The Wellington Staff of Surveyors amounted to between twenty and thirty; and some hundred of field-men were generally employed.

In the course of Mr. Brees's professional explorations, he had great opportunities of seeing and making observations of the country, and which he has not neglected: he has collected a large number of Sketches, which are preparing for publication. The Views comprise every variety of scene, and are, we have been assured, particularly faithful.

PANORAMA OF WANGA NUI ATERA, OR PORT NICHOLSON, TAKEN FROM THE LAWN IN FRONT OF DR. EVANS'S HOUSE, ON THORNDON FLAT.

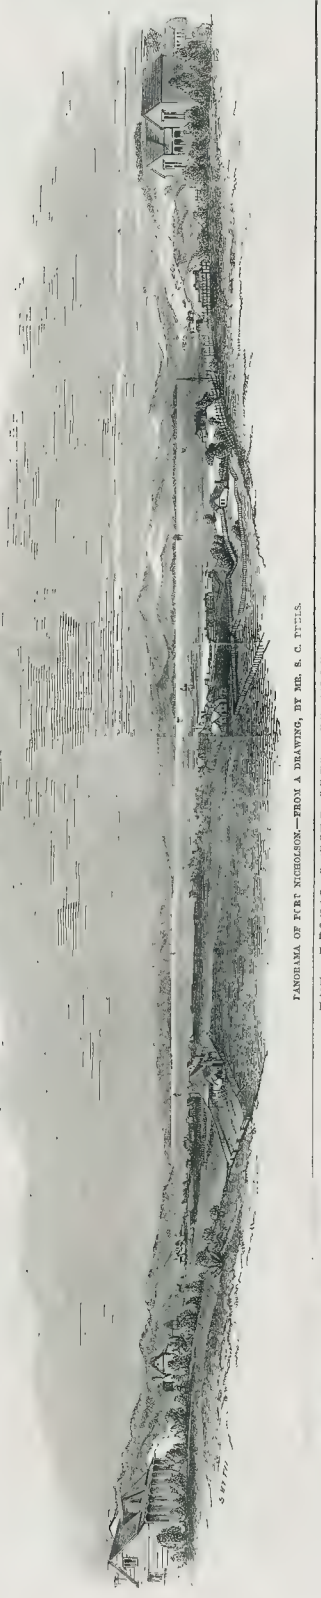
Port Nicholson is situated in about the centre of the islands of New Zealand. This view gives a perfect idea of the country surrounding the port, and shows the several points and bays with great accuracy. The Valley of the Hutt lies to the left of the picture, with the Tararua range of snowy mountains bounding the field of sight. Somes Island, and the west side of the harbour, appear in about the centre; while the settlers' residences at Wellington are shown in the foreground, including Dr. Evans's, the Cottage of Edward Cheetham, Esq., Mr. Fox's, Colonel Wakefield's, Mr. Mocatta's, &c. Lambton Harbour is shown upon the left; and Mounts Victoria and Albert lie in the same direction. The houses along the beach may be observed; and Te-Aro Flat, at the head of the bay, on the left of the picture.

The inhabitants of Wellington are chiefly concentrated at Thorndon Flat and Te-Aro, which comprises the principal part of the level lands. The mercantile community is concentrated at Te-Aro, where the Bank, Custom House, Exchange, Bonded Stores, &c., are situated; the shipping in port also lies at this part of the harbour. Thorndon may be called the Court end of the town; and the Government Buildings, New Zealand Companies Offices, Courts of Justice, Police Courts, Church, Independent Chapel, &c., are placed there. The Scotch Kirk is upon the beach, the Catholic and Wesleyan Chapels are at Te-Aro and the Gaol is on the hills at the back of it.

KA-RORI ROAD, WELLINGTON.

Ka-rori is one of the suburban districts of Port Nicholson; and the cottage, originally occupied by Mr. Brees, lies on the road to it. It is trying work for the settler, until he has cleared sufficient ground for, house and offices, and put them up. The large tree standing in the view is all that is now left of the once proud forest that covered all this district. The view affords people in England a notion of a home in New Zealand: with goats, pigs, turkeys, fowls, ducks, and stock, the settlers may make themselves very comfortable. The climate is so fine that the surveyors bivouac for months together—in fact, at all seasons of the year—in the open air; and live stock of all kinds flourish exceedingly.

THE HUTT ROAD AT THE GORGE.



PANORAMA OF PORT NICHOLSON—FROM A DRAWING, BY MR. S. C. BREES.

VIEW, LOOKING TOWARDS WELLINGTON, FROM THE HUTT ROAD, AT THE GORGE SEPARATING THE LOWER FROM THE UPPER DISTRICT

The valley of the Hutt, after running inland some distance, suddenly contracts, and continues almost a gorge for a short distance, when it re-opens. The land in the Upper District is not, however, uniformly as good as that of the Lower, the elevation above the level of the sea being so much greater. Much of the timber is valuable, both for ornamental and useful purposes. Mr. Brees informs me that he has measured a rata-tree in this valley sixty feet in circumference, and perfectly truncated and tall, like a mast: much of the bark is also used for dyeing and tanning.

(See the Intelligence just received, page 33).

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, Jan. 17 —Second Sunday after Epiphany.
MONDAY, 18.—St. Prisca martyred, A.D. 47.
TUESDAY, 19.—Mercury rises 7h. 42m. a.m.
WEDNESDAY, 20. Uranus sets 11h. 6m. p.m.
THURSDAY, 21.—Mars rises 5h. 0m. a.m.
FRIDAY, 22.—Lord Byron born, 1788.
SATURDAY, 23. -First died, 1806

HIGH WATER at London-bridge, for the Week ending January 23.

Monday.		Tuesday.		Wednesday.		Thursday.		Friday.		Saturday.
M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.
h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.
3 49	4 2	4 33	4 51	5 13	5 31	5 53	6 11	6 33	6 51	7 13	7 31

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"A Poor Clerk" should buy the cheap pamphlet on Cottage Gardening, to be had at the "Gardener's Chronicle" Office, Charles-street, Covent-garden.
"A Regular Subscriber," Paisley, will find the Progress of Railways well indicated in the double maps published monthly in "Bradshaw's Guide."
"A Person who has been a Constant Purchaser" is thanked for his good wishes; though it may doubtless be said of a false impression to read again the note at page 28 of our last Number.
"T. S.," Wakefield. The next publication will be duly announced.
"A." Cambridge, is thanked, but we have not room.
"Catharine," Liverpool.—Address, Lieutenant-Colonel Bowles, ——, according to the location of the Court
"Grammazer Spitzebube" It is confidently stated that Paschek is engaged at Her Majesty's Theatre The report in question is unfounded
"A Constant Reader."—The population of London is, in round numbers, 2,000,000, of Paris, including suburbs, 1,200,000.
"Diana"—The transit will be allowed. We regret that we have not room for the graceful Charade.
"A Constant Reader" must pay the compensation, unless an agreement to the contrary has been made.
"Alexander."—"The Siege of Troy" is not "Great" enough.
"R. B.," Stratford, is thanked, but the Charades must be left to the Author of "Everybody's Column."
"An Old Subscriber," Shap.—Boretti's Italian Dictionary. (Longmans.)
"The Pictorial History of England" is a capital work; or, if a smaller History be wanted, see Keightley's.
"Anselma." We do not remember to have seen the Advertisement.
16,129.—We have not room.
"R. H." —The superb Engraving of Mulready's Picture of "Choosing the Wedding Gown" appeared in No. 232 of our Journal.
"J. L."—Apply to Mr. Van Voorst, Paternoster-row.
"Y. J." would, probably, find it difficult to obtain the situation in question; the salary, too, would be trifling.
"A Subscriber."—"Hochelaga" is by Mr. E. B. G. Warburton, author of "The Crescent and the Cross"
"A Constant Reader"—The lowest commissions purchasable are those of Cornet and Ensign.
"E. Z."—The marriage of a Protestant Lady with a Catholic Gentleman solemnized at a Protestant Church only is strictly legal.
"C. C.," Jersey. We have not space to insert the Meteorological Diary.
"Ocean," Londonderry.—The Match has not yet taken place
"A Subscriber," East Stonehouse.—The hint shall be attended to.
"L. B."—We cannot account for the Fog-tree causing Meat or Poultry to become to hot in a shorter space of time than any other tree
"J. S.," Exeter Exeter. An Engraving of Ilfley Church has already appeared in our Journal
"J. H." Isleworth, is thanked for the Lines: they possess merit, and are unexceptionable in sentiment; but we have not room to insert them.
"A Subscriber." The Fashions, as illustrated in our Journal, are from first-rate Parisian houses. We cannot make our Journal a "cutting-out" book.
"Victor" complains of the practice of "numbers of persons, even those under the guidance of religious principles, who inconsiderately skip half-crowns and shillings into the hands of Railway porters, notwithstanding the prohibition." The practice is a bad one in this respect, that it tempts the men from their duty; besides, it is unjust to persons who cannot afford such gratuities. In reply to the second section —we do not know of any China Collector's Vade-mecum, although an amateur in the art
"R. K. J.," near Manchester.—See the reply to "R. B.," Stratford.
"T. S. R."—Thanks; the hints are acted upon.
"W. B.," Shirley, should write to the Publisher of the Paper in question
"Geraldine" appears to be a rigid economist: any bookseller will give the "half-price" information.
"W. B. B.," Horsledown. Yes.
"P. B. C." Declined. Thanks.
"B."—The Lines on Cleveland are too late.
"T. M.," Walsall. -The suggestion is an odd one, and altogether impracticable.
"W. E." The Nelson Column, in Trafalgar-square, was commenced in 1839.
"Ring Dove." Yes
"J. U." Dublin.—Are the remarks "curious" in connexion with the discovery of deer-heads, &c.?
"S. S.," Shap. Milman's Edition of Gibbon, published by Murray.
"A Lover of the Arts."—See the Advertisement
"G. M." The lines, we fear, are too numerous.
"A Subscriber from Jersey."—The Fox de Quarre was danced at Her Majesty's Theatre in 1845, by Mdlles Taglioni, C. Grisi, L. Grahn, and Carlo. (See the fine Engraving in No. 165 of our Journal)
"A Subscriber." Abel Dower, after whom the ship is called, was an eminent Merchant of the City of London
"A Weekly Reader." There are some professional genealogists, to whom our Correspondent should apply. A pedigree drawn out by one of these would be of equal weight in a Court of Law as one compiled at the Heralds' Offices.
"Alice Mere." Jenny Lind is a native of Sweden She has been engaged for Her Majesty's Theatre, but her coming will depend on Mr. Bunn giving up her contract with him
"G. S. V.," Liverpool. Taglioni is older than Madame Vestris. We cannot state how many years' difference exists, as neither of the ladies has obliged us with the registers of their birth.
"An Admirer of Belloni." Bellini is no more. He is buried in Père la Chaise, in Paris
"Imperial." Taglioni danced in Liverpool at the time mentioned, but we do not know whether it was at the theatre in question
"A Subscriber from the Beginning."—Messrs. Swripps and Son, 13, South Molton-street, announced, on Jan. 8, sending our Journal in the large envelope, as forwarded from our Office
"R. H. F." should order covers for the year's two volumes of our Journal, of any Bookseller, who will bind the same; charge, 5s. each vol.
"A Subscriber," St. Andrews, Fife, is thanked, but we have not room.
"L. M. S." The Monody scarcely reaches our standard of merit.
"E. A." Kensington.—Declined.
"A Constant Reader" is thanked, but we can scarcely return to the illustration of the subject
"A Not so Young Lover."—We cannot spare the space
"J. B. L." A Refracting Telescope, 40 inches in length, will enable you to see Saturn's Ring distinctly. 2. There are twenty stars of the first magnitude
"Sapona." We do not find the work in the recently-published London Catalogue.
"A Clerk."—The prices of the editions of Jones's "Bookkeeping" are £4 4s and 12s
"Domino," Jersey, to reach Swansea, by steamer, from Bristol, strictly speaking, would not pass along the Bristol Severn, but its estuary
"Cheap" Three accounts have been published of the magnificent Eglinton Tournament the cheapest is that by Ackman, quarto, 15s.
"Mrs. H." We have not room for the Enigma.
"The Cornet," Birkenhead.—Cousin is the son or daughter of an uncle or aunt the children of brothers and sisters are usually denominated cousins, or cousins germans
"Vicar." Does the question as to the Will Office refer to London?
"T. D." Knaresborough. You may be sure you'll hear of Lucca immediately
"A Subscriber since No. 1."—The expense of a Marriage License is two guineas and a half
"P. Q." Miles. "S. T." Bath; "Beta," Darling; "Charlotte," Brighton; "E. G." Cambridge. "W. W." Swansea; and "J. M.," Isle of Wight, may receive our Paper enclosed in the large envelope, to prevent creasing, by ordering the same of Messrs. Smith and Son, 192, Strand; Messrs. Scripps and Son, 13, South Molton-street; and Mr. Brooks, 12, Warwick-square, Newgate-street.
"B. B. W." Messrs. R. Stevenson and G. P. Bidder, have Offices at 24, Great George-street, Westminster
"J. S." Nantwich.—James Richmond, Telford Bridge, Salford, Manchester, is the Inventor of the "Vertical Dash Churn."
"A Constant Reader." The original shares do not pay any dividend: an afterissue, in the form of annuities, pays about 5 per cent., at the last prices quoted.
"J. T.," Queen-street, Cheapside. The late Mr. Cole, (created Earl of Leicester in 1837), was in his 65th year on his second marriage
"A Reader." Swindon, states, upon evidence given before the Gauge Commissioners, in 1845, that the cost of the Great Western Railway Company's First-class Carriages is £715 each, that of the Second-class, £481. Hence, the reply given in our last No. of Jan 2 is incorrect.
"A. B. C." may learn the prices of a Pentagraph and Theodolite, by addressing a note to Messrs Watkins and Hill, Charing-Cross.
"York Castle." We believe the Lord Mayor of York to be styled, like his confrère of London, Right Hon.
"Pastor." Congleton.—We have not room to quote the names of the Committee. We cannot decipher the name of the author in question.
"P. B. J." The lines, "He was a man, take him for all and all," are from Hamlet's Reflections on Yorick.
"A Subscriber."—A man may legally make his own will, if of be properly witnessed.
"J. D.," Leeds.—There were about 1700 guests at the Eastern Counties Railway Dinner
"J. S."—Capt. Osborne's Book is now in its second edition; so that extracts would not be a novelty.
"A Housewife," Beccles.—German Silver may be cleaned with sweet oil and pure pared chalk.
"W. G.," Chatham The office of the East Indian Railway Company is No. 8, Broad-street Buildings
"A Lady"—Declined; with thanks.
"C. B. G. E." should obtain the interest of a Member of Parliament.
"A Constant Reader" should address Mr. D——, Berwick-place, New Road.
"Amusement."—Generally speaking, all Parishioners are liable to serve the office of Churchwarden for one year.
"Charadas." —We regret that we cannot reply separately to the many letters on this subject

BOOKS, &c., RECEIVED DURING THE WEEK.

Buchanan's Technological Dictionary.—Tschudi's Travels in Peru.—The Cannibals and the Empire. By M. Thiers. Vol. V.—The People's Press. No. 1.—The Home News. No. 1.—The Fine Arts Journal. No. 10.—Simple Arithmetic.—Florist's Journal. No. 1.—Willan's Country Scenes.—Taylor's Village Tales.—An Appeal for the Irish Peasantry. By Jasper W. Rogers. ——The King's Highway. By G. P R James.—China By R. M. Martin. Part II.—St. Sylvester's Day

MUSIC.—Her Eyes the Glow-worm Lend Thee. Song. Leoni Lee and Co.—Samuda's Coral for the New Year. Blanove.

 We beg to inform our numerous Country Subscribers, that the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS may be received free from carriage, if they will only request their Agent, who supplies the Paper, to send it in the same manner as it is sent direct from our Office. The beautiful and expensive Fine Art Engravings would then be received as perfect as they come from the Press; and the collection of Numbers at the end of each half-year would be in a perfect state for binding. The extra expense incurred, by increasing the size of the envelope for the Paper, would not amount to more than three halfpence a year for each annual Subscriber.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, JANUARY 16, 1847.

THE advocacy of so holy a cause as that of "feeding the hungry, and clothing the naked," is a delightful task, and one of the very few sacred pleasures that fall to the lot of the journalist in his toilsome routine of professional occupation. It is, therefore, with the purest satisfaction that we direct attention to the glorious progress which the good work of subscription, in aid of the starving and famishing poor of Ireland, is making; in the hope that the truly Christian example which has been already set by the benevolent and charitable, in the very highest as well as the middle ranks of society, may, when pointed out for imitation, be speedily and extensively followed, and produce the good fruit which is to be expected in a land so proverbial for promptly affording succour to the wretched in distress as England justly is. "Charity," says the sacred text, "charity covereth a multitude of sins;" and from the Divine lips of Christ, we have it, that even a drop of water given in His name shall not go without its reward. Assuredly, then, a people to whom Gospel truths are so familiar as they are to the people of England, will not turn a deaf ear to the appeals addressed to them, from pulpit and platform, in behalf of their suffering brethren of unhappy Ireland.

The call should be responded to with the more alacrity on our part, as, we fear, much of the misery and suffering which now decimates the land ill-starred land is to be traced in its more remote, but not less certain, origin, to the long neglect and apathy with which we, the people of the governing island, have regarded that population and its affairs, and have thus allowed insolent misrule and oppressive exaction of seignorial rights to usurp the place of just government, and that kindly, considerate state of relations between proprietor and occupier, which is at once the noblest feature, and the firmest bond of union, in the social compact of England.

It is needless to close our eyes to the fact; we have not done our duty by Ireland. We have undertaken to manage its affairs, and see the result. How different from that which our exertions have produced in our own happy England?

Ireland is in such an abject state of perpetual impoverishment, that the failure for a single season of the crop of one inferior description of esculent, the total loss of which scarcely creates the most temporary inconvenience in England, prostrates and paralyses wretched Ireland, and dooms her most hapless people to all the unspeakable horrors of famine and pestilence; and that, too, despite her natural resources and fertility of soil being confessedly of the very highest order.

It is a truth, then—a sad and humiliating truth—that, for much of poor Ireland's calamitous visitation at the present time, England—great, wealthy, powerful England—"whose merchants are princes," and whose children are called "the honourable of the earth," is to a great extent accountable.

But, while faithful to our mission, we do not hesitate to proclaim in the ears of our countrymen this truth, all bitter and unpleasant though it be, in the firm belief that the opportunity of amelioration will not be thrown away. We are, at the same time, convinced that the magnanimity which enables them to hear with calmness a just reproach will inspire them with a generous spirit of ardour in the cause of charity, which shall not be the less efficacious from its being sustained by a sentiment of duty.

As a period of fiscal reform like the present, it would be just matter of surprise if a tax so oppressive and unequal in its operation as the Window Tax is, were not made the subject of agitation, with a view either to its modification or total repeal by the Legislature during the approaching session of Parliament. There are few taxes which press with such injurious effect upon, not merely the comfort, but the health and morals of the humbler classes, who, to avoid its burden, are compelled to deprive themselves, to a very great extent, of the greatest natural blessings—light and air—which an all-bountiful Providence has conferred upon all in a like abundant degree. To the wealthy, the impost is comparatively light, though, even in the better class of buildings, its injurious effect on architectural design is visibly experienced.

But in the case of the poor, the evil is enormous. A very large proportion of the dis...ses which, in their slow, but certain progress, daily consign to the hospital and the graveyard thousands of the wretched inmates of the crowded, ill-ventilated dwellings of the poor in our large towns, have their origin solely in the operation of this noxious tax. No matter how wholesome be the homely food which the toil of the labourer procures for his family, the fatal consequences upon the health of a damp field atmosphere within doors, counteract all the benefit otherwise derivable from it, and lay the foundation, with the certainty of cause and effect, of general constitutional derangement and debility, which no power of medicine can stay, no professional skill baffle. In any legislative measure having for its object the "health of towns," as the phrase is, the perfect ventilation of dwellings should be a principal feature; without it, drainage, however complete—supply of water, however pure—will be of no avail; and now that the matter is taken up pretty earnestly, as we perceive from the report of a meeting lately held in that grand locale of useful agitation, the metropolitan parish of Marylebone, we trust it will be brought to a successful termination.

COURT AND HAUT TON.

RETURN OF THE COURT TO WINDSOR.—WINDSOR, THURSDAY EVENING. (From our own Correspondent.)—The Queen arrived this afternoon, at a quarter past four o'clock, her Majesty and Prince Albert, accompanied by the Royal Family, arrived at the Castle, from Claremont, escorted by a detachment of the 1st Life Guards, commanded by Lieut. Lowther. Their Royal Highnesses the Prince of Wales and the Princess Royal rode in the carriage with the Queen and the Prince Consort. In the second carriage were Lord Alfred Paget (Equerry in Waiting to her Majesty), and Lieut.-Col. Seymour (Equerry to his Royal Highness Prince Albert). Their Royal Highnesses Prince Alfred and the Princess Alice, who were attended by the Dowager Lady Lyttelton, rode in the third carriage; followed by the infant Princess Helena, who was accompanied by the Marchioness of Douro (Lady in Waiting to her Majesty), in another of the Royal carriages and four. The remainder of the Royal suite included Lord Waterpark, Maj.-Gen. Bowles, and the Hon. Colonel Phipps. The Duchess of Kent had the honour of joining the Royal dinner circle this evening at the Castle. The Baroness de Speth, and Lady Fanny Howard were in attendance upon her Royal Highness.

PRIVY COUNCIL.—The Queen will hold a Privy Council at Buckingham Palace on Monday next, at two o'clock; at which, the Royal speech at the Opening of Parliament, on the ensuing day, will be arranged.

THE DUKES DOWAGER.—The Queen Dowager has been somewhat indisposed during the last few days, but we are happy to state that her Majesty is now somewhat better.

PRINCE GEORGE OF CAMBRIDGE. His Royal Highness Prince George of Cambridge, attended by the Hon. Captain Macdonald, aide-de-camp, left Horton Hall, where his Royal Highness had been on a visit to Sir W. Massey Stanley, Bart., on Monday, for Dublin.

LORD BROUGHAM.—Lord Brougham, accompanied by Lady Mallet, left town on Monday, on a visit to the Duke of Rutland, at Belvoir Castle

APPROACHING MARRIAGE.—The marriage of the Hon. Adelaide Lister, sister of Lord Ribblesdale, and step-daughter of Lord John Russell, and Mr. Maurice Drummond, third son of Mr. Charles Drummond, was solemnised on Tuesday morning, at St. Paul's, Knightsbridge.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

THE DISTRESS IN IRELAND AND SCOTLAND.

On Wednesday, a public meeting of clergy, ministers, and others, was held at Exeter Hall, "to consider the most effectual means for the relief of distress and famine existing in all parts of the United Kingdom, but more especially in Ireland and in the Highlands and islands of Scotland, as well as to consider the most desirable course to be pursued to mitigate the immense amount of privation and suffering throughout the country." The following resolutions were unanimously adopted:—

Proposed by the Rev. H. H. Beamish, and seconded by the Rev. A. Maugin—"That, in consequence of the present dearth of food and the high price of all kinds of provisions, and the undisputed fact that deaths from starvation are a daily occurrence throughout the United Kingdom, more especially in Ireland and the Highlands and islands of Scotland, it is the bounden duty of all Christians to make every possible exertion in order to relieve the present frightful sufferings of their fellow-creatures, for which end the clergy of all denominations be urgently requested to preach in favour of a general collection in their respective churches and chapels; and that, after an urgent appeal has also been made to the public by the ministers of the Gospel of Christ, do personally visit the wealthier residents in their own parishes and congregations, in order to urge upon them to contribute to the funds so much needed in behalf of our country-men suffering from famine, sickness, and disease."

The second resolution, which was moved by the Rev. John Blackburn, and seconded by the Hon. and Rev. Baptist Noel, expressed its deep sympathy for the sufferings of the labouring classes throughout the United Kingdom, especially in Ireland and Scotland; its gratitude to those benevolent persons who have already so munificently contributed; and the hope that the Legislature would adopt measures for the final mitigation of distress.

The third resolution recommended the fixing of a particular day to make simultaneous collections, appointing as a committee to carry out the contemplated objects—Rev. G. R. Gleig, Rev. Dr. Burns, Rev. Dr. Leifchild, Rev. Dr. Maugin, Rev. Dr. Hare, Rev. J. Blackburn, Hon. and Rev. B. W. Noel, Rev. J. H. Weeks, Rev. S. G. Osborne, Rev. Dr. Carlile, B. B. Cabbell, Esq., M.P., with power to add to their number.

The different speakers, in the course of their addresses, gave some heart-rending details as to the great extent and deplorable results of famine in Ireland.

CABINET COUNCILS.—A Cabinet Council was held on Wednesday at the Foreign Office. The Ministers present were Lord John Russell, the Marquis of Lansdowne, the Earl of Minto, Sir George Grey, Viscount Palmerston, Earl Grey, Lord Clarendon, Earl of Auckland, Sir John Hobhouse, Lord Campbell, the Earl of Clarendon, Viscount Morpeth, the Right Hon. T. B. Macaulay, the Marquis of Clanricarde, and the Right Hon. H. Labouchere. The Lord Chancellor arrived soon afterwards, and joined his colleagues. The Council sat three hours Another Council was held on Thursday.

REPRESENTATION OF WESTMINSTER.—On Wednesday night a very crowded meeting of the electors of Westminster was held at the Peacock Tavern, Houghton-street, Clare-market, specially convened, for the purpose of affording Mr. Charles Cochrane an opportunity of expressing his political principles, and soliciting the support and assistance of the electors of the city of Westminster. The chair was occupied by Mr. Byard, who, having explained the object of the meeting in a brief speech, Mr. Charles Cochrane then came forward and addressed the meeting. Mr. Smith then moved a resolution, to the effect—"That Mr. Charles Cochrane is a fit and proper person to be returned for the city of Westminster." The motion was seconded and carried; and, after several other speeches and resolutions expressive of the above, thanks were voted to the Chairman, and the meeting separated.

REPEAL OF THE WINDOW TAX.—On Tuesday evening, a numerously-attended meeting of delegates from the various metropolitan parishes was held at the Court House, Marylebone, for the purpose of taking measures to ensure the repeal of the window duties in the ensuing session of Parliament. Mr. George Dunnell presided on the occasion, and was supported by Lord Duncan, M.P. for Bath, and Sir Charles Napier, M.P. After speeches from the Chairman, from Lord Duncan, Sir Charles Napier, and others, on the oppressive nature of the tax, a resolution was passed, to the effect—"That a deputation from the delegates of the metropolitan parishes be appointed, for the purpose of waiting upon the Premier, with the least possible delay, to show his Lordship the justice and necessity of repealing the obnoxious window tax." Lord Duncan, and the Members of all the metropolitan boroughs, were requested to head the deputation.

MEETING OF LICENSED VICTUALLERS. A public meeting of the licensed victuallers of London generally, was held at the Crown and Anchor Tavern on Thursday, for the purpose of considering the propriety of petitioning Parliament against the proposed increase on spirits made by the distillers. The meeting was numerously attended. Shortly after twelve o'clock the chair was taken by Mr. Smith, of Shad Thames and Bermondsey-street, who said, since September last the price of gin had been advanced by the distillers 1s. 8d per gallon, and therefore the licensed victuallers should make a proportionate advance. With regard to rum, that had been also advanced 1s. per gallon, but not so rapidly as gin. He wished the public to understand that the licensed victuallers were taking the present step solely in consequence of the advance made by the distillers. Mr. Hutchinson, on behalf of the Report of the Committee of the House of Commons, and to which he was surprised the Government could have been induced to lend a sanction, without consulting the commissioners of that public building, which produced a greater amount of traffic than any similar building in the world excepting London-bridge. (Hear, hear.) If any such project should be brought before Parliament, he should give it his most decided opposition. Resolutions were carried to the effect that the proposed scheme, Westminster-bridge, and the application of money, intended by Parliament for its maintenance, to the erection of another bridge near Charing-cross

ADVANCE IN THE PRICE OF BREAD. A general and very extensive advance was on Wednesday made in the price of bread of all descriptions. On the Surrey side of the river the additional demand amounted to one penny in some instances on the 4-pound loaf, and one halfpenny in others. The best bread per quartern is now 11½d., and the seconds 9½d. In some districts the price charged for the four pound loaf of the best quality amounted to no less than one shilling, the bakers very considerately announcing that the price was down to "even money."

DISTRESS IN THE METROPOLIS.—On Tuesday evening, a meeting of the parishioners of St. George's, Southwark, and Christ Church, Surrey, was held at the Queen's Head Tavern, Charlotte-street, Blackfriars-road, for the purpose of raising a general fund for the relief of the indigent of those distressed districts. At the conclusion of the meeting, the sum of £500 was subscribed.

MORTALITY OF LONDON.—The total number of deaths in the metropolis during the week ending last Saturday, as made up by the Registrar-General, was 1,308, being 330 above the weekly average of the last five winters, which is 1,008. The number of births during the week was 1,347 666 males, and 681 females

POSTSCRIPT.

STATE OF IRELAND.

The letters from Dublin of Wednesday give melancholy accounts from Mayo. Night additional deaths from starvation had occurred since that day week.

There has been an important meeting of the nobility and gentry of Ireland, at which the following resolutions were agreed to:—

"That, at this awful period of national calamity, it becomes the first duty of every Irishman to devote his undivided efforts to the interests of Ireland; and that neither politics, nor personal prejudices, should influence his mind in the discharge of such a duty.

"That, as we feel deeply convinced that our own divisions have been the leading causes of our own misfortunes, and, by weakening our influence in the councils of the empire, have deprived us of our share in the general prosperity, so we are no less firmly persuaded that it is by union alone we can repair the evils that dissension has created.

"That, if the necessity of joint and united action be urgent and important to Ireland under ordinary circumstances, it at this moment becomes imperative and vital, as not only the future fortunes, but the present lives, of millions may depend on our exertions; and that dissension, at such an hour, is not only a reproach, but a crime.

"That, to make such a union binding and effective, it will be necessary, not only to feel, but to testify, to client, by some steps to ensure a mutual support, or united opposition, to such measures as may be produced, with regard to Ireland, during the ensuing session of Parliament.

"That, for this purpose, we venture to suggest to the Irish members of the Legislature to meet together at such time as may be considered most proper and convenient, for the purpose of forming an Irish party, for the protection of Irish interests; and we earnestly intreat that every member of that body should resolve, as far as possible, to consider and modify his own opinions so as to meet the united feelings of the general body, and should banish from his mind all considerations of party or prejudice, at a time when the lives and interests of his countrymen are so deeply perilled.

"That we feel confident that a union, thus formed and carried on, for the protection of all classes, will receive the support and co-operating of all the aid of the rich and the confidence of the poor. We pray Divine Providence to bless our efforts in the cause of our afflicted country, and to promote amongst us that feeling of united exertion and self-reliance which can alone raise us to our proper place in the great empire to which we belong."

These resolutions were prepared by the Marquis of Sligo and Mr. Moore, as the basis for the union of "an Irish party."

The list of signatures (says the Freeman's Journal) comprises the noblest and purest in the land. No party spirit is permitted to intrude: they call themselves THE PARLIAMENT. Ouldhouse and Farnham, and Waterford and O'Neil and Caledon, move in glorious harness with Sligo and Arran, Shannon, Headfort, and Cremorne. O'Connell and his sons are there, side by side with Sir A Brooke, Sir Alexander Hamilton, and Colonel Acton. Since Dungannon, of "blessed memory," there has not been such a union.

The signatures include those of no less than FORTY-SIX PEERS.

GRAND ENTERTAINMENT TO LORD JOHN RUSSELL BY THE WEAVERS' COMPANY.

This most ancient of the Livery Companies of the City of London, under the presidency of Alderman Wilson, for the second time, gave a splendid banquet to the Premier on Wednesday last.

Amongst the guests were the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor, Sir George Larpent, Bart.; Mr. Masterman, M.P.; Mr. Ormsby Gore, M.P.; Alderman Hughes Hughes, Dr. Quin, Mr. Baxendale, Mr. George Taylor, and many other gentlemen.

After the accustomed loyal and patriotic toasts were disposed of,

The Upper Bailiff rose amidst cheers to give "The Health of Lord John Russell and her Majesty's Ministers."

Lord John Russell rose amidst great cheering, and responded to the toast in a manner the most happy and appropriate, taking for the text of his speech the motto inscribed on the Company's banner—"Weave truth with truth" (showing that the experience of the nations, both of the Old and New World, bore testimony to the great truth, that in proportion to its fidelity to its engagements, in proportion as it did weave truth with truth, were the distinction and eminence to which any nation or community attained.

The Upper Bailiff then proposed "The Health of Mr Masterman and the Representatives of the City of London."

Mr Masterman expressed his high gratification at the compliment.

The company separated between ten and eleven o'clock, delighted with the entertainment of the evening.

COLLEGE OF PRECEPTORS.—A meeting of the members and friends of this Institution was held, on Thursday morning, at the Freemasons' Tavern, Lord Ravensworth in the chair, when resolutions in favour of the establishment of such a college were unanimously adopted. The chief object of the society appears to be to invite assistant-masters to submit themselves to the test of a voluntary examination by the college, by which they are furnished with certificates of competency, as they are found qualified for their employments. It is intended also to attempt an organization of decayed members of the profession as much as their funds will permit.

CHEAP IMPORTATION OF ARTICLES OF FOOD. The Chronicle of yesterday intimates, that, an air of authority, that the Government will meet Parliament with a proposal to suspend instantly all duties upon the importation of articles of food.

BAKING AND DISTILLATION FROM GRAIN. In obedience to orders received from Government by the Commissioners of Excise, a variety of experiments have, during the past and present week, taken place in the private laboratory of that department, for the purpose of ascertaining how far it may be possible to supersede the use of malt for purposes other than food to which it is at present applied. The first process was an experiment as to the necessity of the use of malt in the production of ale and porter, and the substitution of sugar or molasses appears to be very superior were 36 lbs. of sugar obtained from the above articles, which, when flavoured with hops, produced a very excellent beverage, the result being deemed satisfactory. The subsequent experiments were the distillation of sugar by fermentation, to supersede the use of malt in the manufacture of whiskey, and it is believed that a pure spirit, superior in strength, may be had from sugar to what is now obtained in the ordinary way from grain

LUNACY LAW REFORM.—In the Rolls Court, on Thursday, in the case of Richards v. Lord Maidstone, Mr. Henderson obtained a rule, calling upon the plaintiff to show cause why this action should not be tried by a special jury.—Mr. Martin (Q.C., yesterday moved to discharge the rule against the rule, and submitted, that on these grounds the application ought to be refused first, that there was nothing in the case which required investigation by a special jury; and, secondly, if there was, the application came too late, as the action was set down for trial during the present term.—Mr. Justice Erle: What is the nature of the action?—Mr. Martin: It is brought to recover the amount of a cheque given to the plaintiff by Lord Maidstone, and the case cannot last many minutes.—Mr. Henderson: Yes; it will most likely last the whole day, and, besides, it ought not to be tried during term. Mr. Martin was aware that the defence would be, that the cheque was given by Lord Maidstone for counters used at unlawful games; in fact, for gambling. But the action itself was brought on the cheque, and nothing could arise to make it necessary to have a special jury. Moreover, the defendant stated that he was advised that he had a good defence upon the merits. Mr. Justice Erle said, you may get a special jury if you can do so between now and next Wednesday; if not, I shall try it on that day as a common jury cause

LATEST FOREIGN NEWS

CRACOW

Letters from the frontiers of Poland state that General Rudiger, a Russian, had occupied the frontier of Cracow with 10,000 troops. An Austrian corps of observation had been ordered to the spot

FRANCE

The Débats of Thursday publishes the official despatches relative to the Spanish marriages and to Cracow. Our Paris Correspondent tells us that these documents create considerable sensation. The Constitutionnel of Wednesday publishes M. Guizot has just received another note from Lord Palmerston, in which he persists in the view of the marriage question; and also the answer of Prince Metternich to the protest sent in by the Ambassador of France. This answer amounts to a mere acknowledgment of the receipt of the protest. Rumour in Paris states that it goes further, and denies the right of France to interfere.

SWITZERLAND

We learn from Switzerland, that the town of Morat was occupied on the 8th by the troops of the Government of Fribourg. The principal inhabitants of Morat, to the number of several hundreds, and among them MM Chatonney and Wessaz, have taken refuge either in the canton of Berne or in that of Vaud. The town of Bulle holds out still, and the insurgents have intrenched themselves in the castle. Those of Gruyere are not yet laid down their arms. The Government of Fribourg has at length entered into communication with the Vorort. The Vorort has recommended Fribourg to act with clemency, and even to make some concessions to the people. A great number of persons have been arrested. M. Weibel, the architect, has already been arrested. He is accused of having devised and organised the conspiracy, and it is feared that he will be condemned to death. The Grand Council was convoked for the 10th

SUICIDE OF MR. YOUATT, THE VETERINARY SURGEON.—On Saturday Mr. Youatt, the celebrated veterinary surgeon, committed suicide under the following melancholy circumstances. It appears that the deceased gentleman, so well known in the sporting world, was in the seventieth year of his age, and resided with his family at No. 1, Caradoc-place, New-road. He was not, however, involved in pecuniary losses from unfortunate speculations, become somewhat embarrassed, which at length resulted in a morbid depression of spirits, which at times was so perceptible that his friends apprehended that his unsound mind. He was a man of great learning, and in fact, never exhibited the slightest symptoms of ill health until Saturday last, on which morning, between eleven and twelve o'clock, he went out complaining of a pain in his head, and rather dispirited. He returned at twelve, and then retired to his room, where he remained undisturbed until two, when the usual servant proceeded to his apartment, to announce the dinner, but receiving no answer, and the door being partially open, she stepped in and saw him sitting on a couch. Thinking he was asleep, she advanced, and discovered that he was dead. There was a small bottle, as well as a cup, by his side on the table, which had evidently contained poison. It was stated that on the morning of the lamentable event the deceased had received a bill for a large sum of money, which he was unable to meet, and it was considered that he had gone out in the hope of procuring the amount, and that his inability to succeed led him to the commission of suicide. The inquest was held on Thursday, and the Jury returned a verdict "That the deceased destroyed himself, being, at the time, in an unsound state of mind."

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

CONTEST BETWEEN A JUDGE AND A COUNSEL.

In a case, Goldicutt v. Beagle, for breach of promise of marriage, which was tried before the Lord Chief Baron at Guildhall, a verdict had been returned for £400 damages. Mr. Cockburn, who appeared for the defence, having retired before the cause was recalled on, alleging as his reason for so doing that the Lord Chief Baron had, before the trial, in the hearing of the Jury who were to try the action, made use of observations so calculated to prejudice their minds, that to proceed with the trial was impossible

Mr Cockburn, on Thursday, moved for a new trial, on the ground of miscarriage of justice, arising from the expressions made use of by the Learned Judge. Common sense would tell any person that when a Judge, applicated as in the present case, to try the cause, said, in the hearing of the Jury, "I have read your affidavits upon which you obtained your new trial, and I am clearly of opinion that it would be downright insanity to attempt to call evidence," the effect would be most prejudicial. Besides those affidavits, the defendant was prepared to call fresh witnesses, which his firmly believed, had he been allowed fairly to have done, would have been sufficient to have obtained a verdict for his client

Mr Baron Alderson: Why not have stated that?

Mr. Cockburn: Under the circumstances of the case, I could not, in justice to the interests of my client, have proceeded with the trial. There were but two courses open for me, either to proceed with my case, or to withdraw at once.

Mr. Baron Parke: There was a third course open for you—to call upon his Lordship to determine whether what he said referred to the merits of the case or to the mode of conducting it

The Lord Chief Baron: I beg most distinctly to state that there was no necessity for the learned counsel to have adopted that course, for I stated distinctly that what I said had not the slightest reference to the merits of the case.

Mr. Cockburn: With great submission, my Lord, the question is not what were the intentions of your Lordship, but what were the effects it would be likely to produce in the minds of the Jury who were to try the case.

Lord Chief Baron: I stated that for the purpose of setting myself right with the Court.

Mr. Cockburn: I am sure it would not for a moment enter into the minds of any member of the bar, that your Lordship wished to do anything but what would promote the furtherance of the ends of justice.

Lord Chief Baron: Nobody knows better than yourself, Mr. Cockburn, that the words I made use of had no reference to the merits of the cause; they referred only to the inconvenience of calling witnesses in such cases as the present

Mr. Cockburn: Still, my Lord, I must look to the natural effects of your Lordship's observations.

Lord Chief Baron: What I said, although it might be an act of indiscretion, which I admit it was, was said only to the counsel, and could only be understood by a member of the bar, and could not have the least effect upon the minds of the jury

Mr. Baron Parke: I should have been most happy if, when I was at the bar, the Learned Judge had given me his opinion before proceeding with the case.

Mr. Cockburn: But then, my Lord, everybody is not possessed of the same high mental courage and endurance, combined with a sense of duty, which your Lordship's movements, supported by such an universal opinion of your Lordship's talents, and successful application of abilities, as your Lordship is. We, the members of the bar, may be the humble imitators of your Lordship, but at an immeasurable distance from you

Mr. Baron Alderson: Do you intend that for irony?

Mr. Cockburn: I speak the genuine feelings of my heart, and of the bar, when I humbly attempt to give expression to the general opinion as to the uniform success of his Lordship while at the bar.

Mr. Baron Parke: Is there any precedent for such a course as you are now adopting?

Mr. Cockburn: None that I know of, my Lord.

Mr. Baron Parke: I think it would be highly inconvenient to establish such a precedent, or take away from the Judge the discretion of giving expression to his feelings while the case is being proceeded with

Mr. Cockburn: On the other hand, my Lord, it would be a matter of very grave importance to allow the Judge to prejudice any case that may be brought before him

Mr. Baron Parke: Do your affidavits state that you had witnesses in Court ready to be called?

Mr. Cockburn: They do, my Lord.

The Lord Chief Baron: Then, with my entire and cordial approbation, you may take a rule for a new trial, upon terms, with respect to the costs, to be referred to the Court.—Rule granted.

THE BANKRUPTCY OF MESSRS. CHAMBERS.

Wednesday was appointed by the COURT OF BANKRUPTCY for an audit in this long-pending bankruptcy, the principals of which, it will be recollected, were bankers in Regent-street. The darkest object of the Italian Opera-house

Mr Espin, of New Boswell-court, solicitor to the assignees, informed the Court that, on the 19th inst., there would be a dividend meeting, and many creditors had not yet proved their debts. The bankruptcy took place 20 years ago, and, after the lapse of time, many creditors had probably forgotten that they had any claims to prove. The dividend on the 19th would not be a final one, as the hoped in three or four months to declare another dividend, as there were still considerable assets to be collected, depending greatly on the result of the Chancery suit, in which the Master had made his report.

Mr. Commissioner Holroyd asked if the meeting had been advertised in the London Gazette?

Mr. Espin replied that it had, but it was not everybody who read the Gazette. The debts proved amounted to £230,000, when the total amount owing was £240,000; so that about £20,000 were not yet proved. The dividend at the next meeting would be 4s. in the pound; making, with the former dividend, a sum of 12s. in the pound, which would, in all probability, be increased, at the final meeting, by at least 3s. more

The audit, a mere formal matter, was then proceeded with.

IMPORTANT POINT CONNECTED WITH RAILWAY LEGISLATION.—HENRY TORR commenced on Monday. In the Court of EXCHEQUER, the case of Vollams v. Hatcher, which involves the question whether letters of allotment should or should not be stamped, was again mooted. It was, as will be recollected, an action by an allottee against a director of an abortive railway company, to recover back the deposit paid on ten shares in order to substantiate his claim, it became necessary for the plaintiff to tender the letter of allotment in evidence. It was not stamped. Thereupon it was objected, that it was not admissible unless stamped; and the Lord Chief Baron, admitting the objection, nonsuited the Plaintiff. Mr. Martin now moved, for a rule nisi to enter a verdict for the plaintiff, or for a new trial, on the ground that the letter was receivable without a stamp.—A rule nisi was granted.

IRELAND.

AN IRISH CONFEDERATION.

On Wednesday there was a large meeting of the "Young Ireland" party at the Rotunda, Dublin. Mr. Smith O'Brien, after an exciting speech, moved the following resolution

That domestic legislation is now, as it has been for forty seven years, the urgent and urgent want, as well as the inalienable right, of the Irish nation; and that the helpless and dependent condition of Ireland under the calamity of this present season has made that necessity more apparent and more imperative.

That circumstances having rendered it impossible for us to co-operate as members with the existing Association instituted to seek this great national object, it becomes our duty to make for ourselves a separate sphere of activity, in which we may humbly strive for our country's independence in the way that seems to us best suited to attain it. That a Society be now formed, under the title of "The Irish Confederation," for the purpose of protecting our national interests and of securing the legislative independence of Ireland, by the force of opinion, by the combination of all classes of Irishmen, and by the exercise of all the political, social, and moral influences within our reach."

The resolution was unanimously agreed to. The "Council" of the Confederation were then nominated.

Mr. Mitchell made a speech favorable to the doctrine of physical force; and was followed by Mr Meagher, who spoke in his usual energetic style. He remarked that "Bushe said that a day of reckoning would come. The day had come. (Prolonged cheers.) Ireland could bear her sufferings no longer, and the combination of arms depended on their own exertions. The motto of Grattan was—'Union with England for no purpose—(cheers); union with England at no price; union with England on no terms.' (Cheers.) Let them vote their millions for the starvation wife which they charged them, but the Union must be repealed." (Continued cheers.)

FOOD RIOTING AT DUBLIN

There was some rather serious rioting at Dublin, yesterday week. About nine o'clock in the morning, a body of men, apparently railway labourers, tolerably well clad, assembled at the foot of Summer Hill, and carried off all the bread in Hill-street, Dublin, and they were not long there when two bread-carts approached A portion of the party, armed with large sticks, drew out towards the carts, addressed threatening terms to the one in the rear, while the rest of the mob deliberately rifled all the contents of the carts. Some three or four policemen were attracted to the spot by the commotion, but, from the attitude assumed by the fighting section of the plunderers, they did not consider it was warranted in attempting the arrest of any of the party; all, in consequence, escaped.

About two hours afterwards, a party, supposed to be the same gang, attacked the shop of Mr. Campbell, at Marlborough-street, and carried off all the bread in his shop. They proceeded down Marlborough-street to Eden-quay, and stopped before the door of Mr. Coyne, the bread and biscuit baker residing there. They repeated their demands for bread; but, on seeing the police marching up, they retired, and passed over Carlisle Bridge in the direction of Westmoreland-street.

A mob surrounded the shop of Mr Jeffers, baker, of Church-street; but, the police being in the vicinity, they were called on, and succeeded in dispersing the mob.

Several bread-carts were stopped in the outlets of the city, and their contents taken

The rioters continued their depredations up to ten o'clock at night, and, owing either to the inequality of numbers, or want of energy in the police, succeeded in plundering a great number of bakeries in the neighbourhood of the Liberty, as well as in the northern ends of the city

On Saturday morning, at an early hour, the work of plunder commenced afresh, and several bakers' shops and carts were emptied of their contents, with little or no resistance on the part of the owners

There were more or less bread riots on Tuesday morning. At daybreak a body of about 300 men collected at the Broadstone, and, having arranged their plans, rushed down Dominick-street into Dorset-street, where they attacked a bread-cart, and in an instant seized its contents. Shortly afterwards they attacked a second cart, when five or six mounted policemen, and about the same number of foot police, came upon them. A scuffle ensued, and the police succeeded in arresting eight of the plunderers. These persons were brought before the Head Office of police, for attacking a bread-cart of Sir David Roche's, in Bridge foot-street, and were committed for trial.

In Thomas-street, and Lower Bago street, bread was seized by mobs on Tuesday morning.

CURIOUS ROBBERY IN DUBLIN.—On Sunday a robbery of a very extraordinary nature took place at No. 10, Hardwick-place, Temple-street, Dublin, in the house of Mrs. Irvine. On Sunday Mrs. Irvine and her family went out to church, leaving a servant man named Patrick Donnelly in the house. Some time after two o'clock the family returned and knocked at the door several times, but received no answer. At last a man was called who got into the area, and so to the kitchen, where he found Donnelly with his legs tied to the table, and his hands fastened by a cord to another portion of the table also. There was a rope round his chest, which was attached round the table, and in this position he was found. He was at once liberated, and on being questioned he said shortly after twelve o'clock a well-dressed, respectable-looking man knocked at the door, and, on his opening it, the man walked into the hall, and was at once followed by two other persons. The "respectable" man, he said, pulled out a pistol, levelled it at his breast, and swore if he uttered a word he would blow his brains out. The three persons then took him to the kitchen, where they tied him in the position he was found, and menaced him with death if he called out. They then went up stairs, he said, and rifled all the house. The police were called in, and the story seeming incredible, Donnelly was taken into custody on suspicion of being concerned in the robbery. On examining the house it was found that desks, drawers, presses, &c., had been broken open by a hammer, which belonged to the house, and which was found on the premises, and the marks fitted exactly. Bank notes to a large amount and a quantity of plate and jewellery were stolen. Besides the prisoner, his sister, Mary Bryan, and her husband, John Boylan, a gardener, were apprehended, and a woman, who passed as Donnelly's wife. It is remarkable that the house of Mrs Irvine is situated quite near to St. George's Church, and the policeman on duty did not observe any person enter the house during the time.

ANOTHER MURDER.—A shocking murder has been perpetrated in the south riding of Tipperary, the particulars of which are thus given in the Free Press:—We have just heard that a dreadful murder was perpetrated at Kilcrea, near Cahir, on the night of Tuesday, the 5th instant. It appears that a man named Thomas Mulcahy, who had the reputation of an usurer in the country, was on his way from the sessions of Cashel, where he had obtained several decrees against parties indebted to him, when he was waylaid and barbarously murdered his throat being cut, his head dreadfully fractured, and a large stone pressed on his breast. Mr. W. Ryan, a Justice of the Peace, held an inquest on the body, when a verdict of "Wilful murder against some person or persons unknown" was returned. The scene of the murder was within two hundred yards of the police-barracks.

ATTEMPT AT MURDER IN TIPPERARY.—As Mr Jeoffrey Donohoe was proceeding from Nenagh to Ballinaclogh, where he lived, within two miles distance of Nenagh, and when within 100 yards of his own house, two men passed him. One of them said "God save you," as they passed. Donohoe turned round, and one of them had a pistol presented at his back, and, before he had time to utter a word, lodged the contents (two slugs) in his left side, and then decamped. Poor Donohoe still lingers in great pain, but every moment he is expected to be relieved by death. He has eight children to bemoan his untimely fate.

NEW ZEALAND.

News has been received from New Zealand to the 20th of September The settlement is in a most flourishing condition. The governor [illegible] gives entire satisfaction. Emigrants from Sydney and [illegible] daily arriving. A manuied police, composed partly of natives, has been [illegible] some time established, and its beneficial effects are felt daily. The church and college for the natives are in full operation. The Government are erecting barracks upon a most extensive scale for the settlement, the neighbouring tribe, that of the Waikata, the most populous on the island, is well disposed towards the settlers, for whom they willingly labour for hire. Their chief, Te Heuheu, who is called the King of New Zealand, has offered to Captain Grey help to suppress disturbances created by another chief. The proffered assistance the Governor most prudently declined to accept, being willing to put down the tumult with his own forces, thereby preventing the two tribes from becoming embroiled through British interests, and, at the same time, exhibiting undeniable proof of the power of the Colonial Government to quell the outbreak themselves.

Hostilities in the north of the island, said to be first caused by the interference of the Americans, are now entirely arrested. The war was between the natives and the Government, and not between the natives and the settlers, the two latter are now on good terms, and the native chief, Heki, regrets ever having taken any hostile steps.

The papers announce the arrival at Auckland of H.M.S Castor, having the Lieutenant-Governor; and contain official accounts from Wellington of the military operations there to the 16th Sept. We learn from these official accounts that the action in which Mr. Blackburn fell took place on the 6th of August, and the investment of Ranghiwata's pa on the 8th.

What has been called "a small pah," constructed by Ranghiwata in the valley of the Hutt river, turns out to have been a strongly erected one, having a precipitous spur of a hill some nine or ten miles from the mouth of the valley. It was formed of logs placed horizontally one over another with loop-holes to fire through. The operations on the 8th, consisted of an attempt to dislodge this position. Several shells were thrown in and much harassed the enemy. As they were known to be short of provisions, it was obvious that they only waited to pour in a few destructive volleys on the British forces as soon as they should quit the cover of the woods, and then evacuate their temporary stronghold. To avoid unnecessary loss of life, Major Last complied with the request of the friendly Maori to allow them to invest the place after their fashion. This is, by securing the surrounding pahs, and erecting a palisade round the stockade. Leaving the native allies to effect this operation, Major Last retired to Pa-wai-tangi-nui.

On the morning of the 10th, the insurgents began to fire upon the investing camp. Pnahs immediately rushed out to meet them. They retired, and he, with his followers, advancing to the stockade, they quitted it at one side as he entered at the other. It subsequently appeared that their women had been sent to the rear some days before. Pnahs in turn sent his women to the rear, and commenced his pursuit on the 14th. Information that Ranghiwata had decamped on the 13th reasonable reasonable to Captain Durie, inspector of police, with instructions to warn the Wahanae chiefs, who had occupied a position at Part purr, to be on the alert. They were so, and Wiremu Kingi (Anglice, William King), one of our native allies, captured eight of Ranghiwata's party on the hills above it; and Wiremu kingi sent word that he would make an attack on the enemy to-morrow

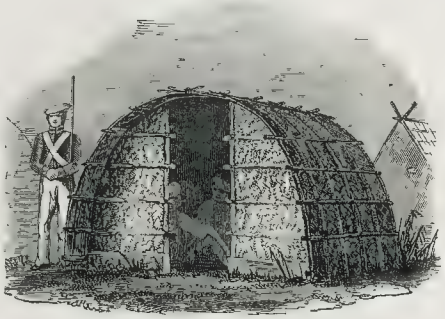
It is obvious from these statements that Ranghiwata's band were enclosed between two hostile bodies—one advancing up the Hutt river valley, the other from the sea at Puri-puri. It is also clear that as he was retreating towards the coast all power of escape to the interior was, if ordinary diligence were observed, cut off. The forces employed allies at liberty, the followers of Nopara and Maketu, were detained at Grawhenua by the natives attached to the British.

The papers do not contain any further intelligence from the Cook's Strait settlements. Confirmation in the New Zealander, of 12th of September, that the Legislative Council was to be summoned in the course of the ensuing week, explains the object of the Governor in returning to Auckland at that time. "As yet," says the journal we have named, "we are kept in total ignorance upon the interesting questions of who the gentlemen may be to be sent to represent us in the Council." Equal ignorance is professed of the measures lately to be submitted to it; but, conjectures are hazarded that the Governor may present a bill for "regulating the purchase of land from the native," a settle slaughter ordinance, a mutual forgive bill, and a dog nuisance ordinance.

The New Zealander of 19th September contains the abstracts of revenue and expenditure for the northern (or Auckland) division of New Zealand, for the quarters ending respectively 31st March and 30th June, 1846. The revenue for the quarter ending 31st March (including arrears of previous years) was £3272 [illegible]-£2944 was derived from customs duties levied at Auckland, and £1 from customs duties levied at Russell. The revenue for the quarter ending 30th June was £4393, of which £2846 was from Auckland customs, and £83 from customs at Russell. The expenditure for the quarter ending 31st March was £4180 for current expenses, £6671 for arrears The expenditure for the quarter ending 30th June was £3874 [illegible] for current expenses, £1141 for arrears. The [illegible] of the [illegible]

SKETCHES OF THE LATE WAR IN NEW ZEALAND.—BY A CORRESPONDENT.

WAIMTAI CHURCH, AND BURIAL PLACE OF BRITISH OFFICERS.



COMMANDING OFFICER'S WAU, RUA PEKAPEKA.

First is Waimati Church, a structure of no pretension to beauty; and, in that respect, resembling a majority of the churches of our settlements, in the early stages of their colonisation. The memorials in the churchyard are, as yet, few; those in the centre inclosure are to the memory of three British officers, two of whom were killed, and the third mortally wounded, in conflicts with the natives. The second Engraving shows a Commanding Officer's Wau, a sort of aborigina guard-house, in which our troops are somewhat rudely lodged: however, the climate is beautiful for a bivouac.

WAR DANCE OF NEW ZEALANDERS.

The third Scene shows a War Dance of New Zealanders, got up for the amusement of the British, who are enjoying the grotesque exhibition. Around are seated some natives in the customary cloak; and a monster mortar, belonging to the British, is shown on the right.

The pair of small Illustrations show a practice common in New Zealand warfare, of descending into caverns dug for the purpose, to shoot at the enemy in greater security. The tactics have, at least, cunning to recommend them.

The lower Engraving shows a group of Maories, armed with the native spear and hatchet, and the rifle which civilisation has lent them to war against its spread. These figures are tattooed and one wears large ear-rings: the cost ume of one is a sort of long waist-cloth; and of another, a red mantle, bordered with black. In this picture, also, are shown specimens of the native huts and inclosures, as well as of the vegetation of the country.

EXTERNAL CAVERN.

INTERNAL CAVERN AND CONNECTING PASSAGE.

GROUP OF MAORIES.

CONSECRATION OF A BISHOP, AT WHITEHALL CHAPEL.

THE interesting ceremony of the Consecration of the newly-appointed Bishop of Sodor and Man, Dr. Shirley, attracted a great number of persons on Sunday morning last to the Chapel Royal, Whitehall. Before the doors were opened, very many visitors had congregated at the entrance of the Chapel; and, on admission, ladies and gentlemen eagerly pressed towards the altar, to obtain favourable situations for viewing the expected ceremony; so that, before eleven o'clock, the Chapel was quite filled. The venerable parents of the new Bishop were in a pew near the altar.

At eleven o'clock precisely, the Bishops of Carlisle, Lichfield, and St. Asaph, in full episcopal attire, walked down the Chapel, preceding Dr. Shirley, in his black gown and scarf—the former taking their seats within the altar-rails, and the latter in a pew to the right of the altar. The customary morning service and the prayers specially appointed for the occasion were read by the Rev. W. H. Howlett, M.A.; and the sermon was preached by the Rev. Thomas Hill, B.D., Archdeacon of Derby, Vicar of Chesterfield, and Chaplain to the Bishop of Sodor and Man.

Archdeacon Hill selected for his text the second chapter of the Revelation of St. John the Divine, verses 1, 2, and 3:—"Unto the angel of the Church of Ephesus write, These things saith he that holdeth the seven stars in his right hand, who walketh in the midst of the seven golden candlesticks. I know thy works, and thy labour, and thy patience, and how thou canst not bear them that are evil, and thou hast tried them which say they are Apostles, and are not, and hast found them liars; and hast borne, and hast patience, and for my name's sake hast laboured, and hast not fainted." The Archdeacon dwelt at some length on episcopal and ministerial responsibilities, and entered into an elaborate argument with reference to the interpretations put by various commentators on the passage selected for his text.

The Bishops of Carlisle, Lichfield, and St. Asaph then read the communion service.

At the conclusion, the ceremony of the Consecration commenced, the newly-appointed Bishop leaving his pew, and the Bishops of Lichfield and St. Asaph the communion table, and all three retiring to the vestry, whence, in two or three minutes, they returned to the steps of the altar, Dr. Shirley wearing a white surplice, without sleeves. The Bishops, standing on each side of the Doctor, presented him to the Bishop of Carlisle, who commanded the Queen's letters patent to be read.

After the Queen's letters, the instrument appointing the Bishops to officiate in the room of the Archbishop of York was read, as was also the letter from the Archbishop of Canterbury, permitting the Consecration to take place in Whitehall Chapel; the Bishopric of Sodor and Man being within the province of York, and therefore requiring special permission from the Archbishop of Canterbury to allow the Consecration to take place within his province.

The oaths of allegiance to the Queen, and of submission to the Archbishop of York, &c., were then administered; and, after the Bishop of Carlisle had questioned the newly-appointed Bishop on several points, the latter again withdrew, and returned to the altar-rails in his episcopal dress. The Litany was then read, the congregation joining in the responses, suitable prayers being added for the occasion. Towards the conclusion of the Litany, the three officiating Bishops advanced to the altar-rails, outside of which the new Bishop was kneeling; and the Bishop of Carlisle read the blessing and prayer, at the same time laying his hands on the head of the kneeling Bishop; the Bishops of Lichfield and St. Asaph imposing theirs likewise. After this ceremony, the "Veni Creator" was read, the benediction pronounced by the Bishop of Carlisle; and the congregation dispersed; the Bishop of Sodor and Man taking his seat within the altar-rails. The singing was in good taste, and performed by the Choir of the Chapel, Mr. Massey presiding at the organ.

The oaths were administered by J. Burder, Esq.; and her Majesty's patent was read by F. H. Dyte, Esq., of the Ecclesiastical Court.

The service of gold plate on the altar-table is most magnificent, the centre dish having the Last Supper chased upon it in very high relief. The interior of the Chapel has an appearance of truly regal comfort: its nicely carpeted floor and crimson fittings, added to the massiveness of the plate displayed on the altar, and the richly gilded and exquisitely painted ceiling—one of Rubens's best works—above all, constitute a charming picture, and one which irresistibly pleases the eye; yet, critical taste may, perhaps, carp at the festoons of crimson curtains under the galleries and at the bust of Charles the First over the door—a singularly misplaced ornament in a house of God. The ceiling, too, though most beautiful of itself has no claim to appropriateness; and it is to be lamented that another church has not been raised, and Whitehall employed for some other purpose more in unison with its architectural and artistic adornment than a chapel; for the apotheosis of James the First is not the subject to gaze upon when lifting up the eyes in prayer.

Would it not be a matter worthy of the consideration of Government to endeavour to procure the four magnificent candlesticks, of copper gilded, each nearly eight feet in height, which were made by order of Charles the First for his Chapel in Whitehall, and which now adorn the Cathedral of St. Bavon, in Ghent?

CONSECRATION OF THE BISHOP OF SODOR AND MAN.

The new Bishop of Sodor and Man was born at Westford, county of Mayo, Ireland, May 30, 1797. After being under the tuition of the late Rev. Leigh Richmond, he was removed to Winchester College in 1809, from whence he was elected to New College Oxford, in 1815. He took his degree of B.A. in 1819 As he claimed his degree as a fellow of New College, he did not go out in honours; but in 1821 he gained the Bichelor's English Essay, "On the Study of Moral Evidence." He was ordained on his fellowship in 1820, and took priest's orders the following year. His first ministerial charge was as curate to his father, the Rev. Walter Shirley, rector of Woodford, Northamptonshire. He was subsequently appointed Lecturer of Ashbourn, Derbyshire, in 1821. In 1826 he held the office of Master of the Schools, at Oxford. On September 4, 1827, he married Maria, only daughter of W. Waddington, Esq. In 1826 he succeeded his father as vicar of Shirley, where he has resided ever since, except during the years 1838 and 1839, when he held the rectory of Whiston, Yorkshire, on the presentation of the late Earl of Effingham, to whom he was also appointed chaplain. In 1839 he was presented, on his own petition, to the family living of Bradsford, which is contiguous to his other living of Shirley. In December, 1840, he was appointed by the late Bishop Bowstead, of Lichfield, Deacon of Derby, and Honorary Prebendary of Lichfield. On December 17, 1846, he received his D.D. degree, by diploma, from the University of Oxford. He is also Bampton Lecturer for this year, which office he means to fulfil.

By the appointment of Dr. Shirley to the Bishopric of Sodor and Man, the following appointments become vacant

The Rectory of Bradsford, with the Perpetual Curacy of Osmaston, near Ashbourne, Derbyshire, value £673 per annum, in the gift of his Lordship.

The Vicarage of Shirley, with the Curacy of Tawsley, near Derby, value £179 per annum, in the gift of Earl Ferrers.

A Prebendal Stall in Lichfield Cathedral, in the gift of the Lord Bishop of the diocese.

The Archdeaconry of Derby, which was held by Dr. Shirley, has been conferred on the Rev. Thomas Hill, B.D., Vicar of Chesterfield

The value of the Bishopric of Sodor and Man is about £2000 per annum; and, from the limited extent of the diocese, the patronage is but small. The following appointments are in the gift of the Bishop:—The Vicarage of Braddon, recently rendered vacant; the Vicarage of German, the Vicarage of Jurby, and the Vicarage of St. Patrick, all in the Isle of Man.

ELECTRICITY OF GUN-COTTON.

(To the Editor.)

I believe that it has not been as yet noticed that the new material, Gun-Cotton, possesses, in a peculiarly eminent degree, the capacity for electric excitement by friction; indeed, far more than silk, fur, or other substances usually so considered.

Having prepared several pieces of Gun-Cotton, which I had kept in the form of a thin sheet, or web, during the whole manipulation (as that ensures a superior quality), I was fraying out the more matted parts of a piece, about six inches square, previous to completely drying it, when I found it cling to the fingers so tenaciously as to hinder the operation; while it crackled, and emitted light in the dark.

After drying this before the fire for some minutes, on taking it up, I found its electric condition had rather increased; so much so, that on attempting to lay it flat upon another prepared web on the table, it rose up spontaneously, disengaging its tangled fibres from it, and actually floated, at a height of three clear inches above it, as long as it was prevented from floating off sideways; it remained in this state for many minutes; and on being occasionally pressed upon the piece below, the electric discharges were so audible as to cause apprehensions lest the whole of it should explode.

By way of determining whether this might not arise from other circumstances than the cotton itself, such as from the dryness of the room, the state of my own fingers (rendered harsh by the acid), &c., I treated a similar piece of unprepared cotton in precisely the same manner, but could observe no such manifestations of electric excitation.

It is excited to an extraordinary degree by friction with glass or shell-lac; but more so, apparently, by the skin of the hand. This quality may, possibly, be turned to account. It may arise either from the chemica constitution of the substance, or from the mechanical harshness and roughness of its fibre; probably from both causes

Thinking this remarkable fact may be deemed worthy of a place in your columns,

I am, &c.,

12th Jan., 1847. WILLIAM PETRIE.

[a] Our Correspondent is not aware that a paper, identifying the Electricity of Gun-Cotton appeared in the "Philosophical Magazine" of last month.—ED.

THE LATE EARL OF YARBOROUGH. The late Earl of Yarborough, by his will, executed in June, 1843, bequeathed to his younger son, the Hon. Dudley Pelham, his nautical books, charts, chronometers, telescopes, and all nautical instruments, for his own use, and a pecuniary bequest, having conveyed to him all his vested right under settlement; he also left pecuniary legacies to his daughter, daughters-in-law, and his three sisters, and liberal annuities and legacies to his servants. By deed, executed in 1842, his Lordship conveyed to his eldest son, Lord Worsley, now the Earl of Yarborough, all his diamonds, plate, pictures, books, prints, drawings, statues, and all other personal property on his estates at Brocklesbury Hall, Appuldroombe Park, and in Arlington-street, as heir-looms with the settled estates, and has bequeathed to his Lordship all the newly-purchased estates, and all estates not in settlement, and those in the counties of Lincoln and Kent, and in the Isle of Wight, and that he may dispose of the Romney Marsh estate, and has appointed his Lordship residuary legatee and sole executor. The funded and personal estate was estimated for duty at £800,000.

BRICK MACHINE.—A newly invented brick machine has been patented by a Cincinatti mechanic, which presses bricks by a cylinder, like a printing machine, and it can turn out, with the aid of five men, 40,000 smooth surface bricks of first quality per day.

THE WINDOW DUTY. By a Parliamentary paper, printed in the session of 1845, it appears that the total amount of Window Duty in the year ending the 5th of April, 1840, was £1,486,023. In the year following it was £1,775,358, in 1842, £1,775,151; in 1843, £1,776,789 and in 1844, it was 1,786,514

THE CHRISTMAS TREE (says a Correspondent) is regularly carried from house to house, on Christmas Eve, at Alveston, a quiet village in Gloucestershire; but the emblems of the Trinity are substituted for presents; as the Crown of Thorns formed of a potato stuck with thorns, and hollowed out; the three nails, &c.

TESTIMONIAL TO THE DUKE OF RICHMOND.—On Tuesday, a very numerously-attended meeting of agriculturists and tenant-farmers, deputed from various counties throughout the kingdom, assembled at the Freemasons' Tavern, to consider the best means for rendering the proposed testimonial to his Grace the Duke of Richmond as effective as possible. The Duke of Richmond was present. Mr. John Ellman, of Sussex, was called to the chair. On the motion of the Chairman, a committee was named, with the Duke of Richmond as its president to apply the sums subscribed for the Richmond testimonial to the formation of an institution for the benefit of decayed tenant-farmers. In the course of some observations by the Duke of Richmond, he said, "I have long felt with emotions of no ordinary nature, that I have never passed a farm-house in this country, without feeling assured that, if I knocked at the door, and sought admittance, I would find a friend within to welcome me." After suggesting a plan of operations for collecting further subscriptions by means of the various agricultural societies throughout the country, the meeting separated.

THE FUNERAL OF MR. GURNEY.—The funeral of J. J. Gurney, Esq., took place on Tuesday, at the Friends' Meeting House, Norwich. Since his demise, the principal tradesmen of Norwich had their shops partially closed, as an expression of grief for his loss; and, in accordance with a previous arrangement, nearly every building throughout the city was shut during the hours fixed for the funeral. The trains from London and other parts on the line brought down a large number of the more opulent members of the Society of Friends, who took part in the ceremony. The cortège left Earlham Hall shortly after eleven o'clock, and by one o'clock the body of this esteemed man was consigned to its final resting place. Nothing could exceed the mark of respect that was manifested in every part of the city during the day.

OUR DOMESTIC COLUMN.

TWELFTH NIGHT.

The cake, the wine, the drawing for the King,
(First cut for in the slice that held the bean)
So Twelfth Night ends our Christmas gambolling,
Sit, ere to bed, unreverend, this evening's Queen,
And trace our revel thro' an earlier scene!
Fer centuries back, sought Argoses the east,
(Ere clutch'd the needle at the pole unseen Adventurous sail points to merchant bird or beast,) [illegible] wealth stores to crown this feast.

These costly spices, from the Indies sought,
Where danger ceas'd to dog the caravan,
At Ormus, or what salt right richly bought,
Came from the base for Earl or Alderman.
Knight well-enfeoff'd, Abbot, or Chief of clan:
So raisins were they to enrich the cake,
Such blameless offerings, are our faith began
Were rare, or such might * Sabine farmer make,
But this requires high cost for our blest Saviour's sake.

Myrrh, frankincense, and gold are symbol'd here,
The Magi's offering to the heav'nly child.
Some readers on the holy volume peer
As letter'd students, warm'd while thus beguil'd
Of earnest grave: some call thoughts rank'd and filed
To watch and witness the great argument.
Here finding star-way as where Truth hath smiled
Mid something cloudlike rendering less content.
Why quarrel we? Gaze on a picture aptly blent.

The far, the mystic, trackless, gorgeous East
Had watchers of the stars, had prophet-cycle
In trust from years ere earliest empires ceas'd:
So Christian witnesses there sow'd good seed,
There teath the Xand e'en now "Resurrections" bleed,
And farthest Ind knel to the recent cross.†
What matters if the East sent men and I
To hail their God with offer'd myrrh and dress,
Or gave to sacred story splendid gloss?

Who hath o'erstepp'd the threshold of high heav'n?
Or who may count the steps thence leading down
To where on earth child-like their God is given?
Enough, a life began led duly on,
And that the Cross, how graced, stands not alone.
The mystic tale, so old, yet so full,
By word and deed brings God's heart near our own:
To feel its meaning render none too dull,
And few so high of aim its topmost fruit to cull. G. H.

BROTHER JONATHAN.

The origin of this term, as applied to the United States, is given in a recent number of the Norwich Courier. The Editor says it was communicated by one of the most intelligent gentlemen and sterling Whigs in Connecticut, now upwards of eighty years of age, who was an active participator in the scenes of the Revolution. The story is as follows: "When General Washington, after being appointed commander of the army of the Revolutionary war, came to Massachusetts to organise it, and make preparations for the defence of the country, he found a great destruction of ammunition and other means necessary to meet the powerful foe he had to contend with, and great difficulty to obtain them. If attacked in such condition, the cause at once might be hopeless. On one occasion at that anxious period, a consultation of the officers and others was had, when it seemed no way could be devised to make such preparation as was necessary. His Excellency Jonathan Trumbull the Elder was then Governor of the State of Connecticut, on whose judgment and aid the General placed the greatest reliance, and remarked, 'We must consult Brother Jonathan on this subject.' The General did so, and the Governor was successful in supplying many of the wants of the army. When difficulties afterward arose, and the army was spread over the country, it became a by-word, 'We must consult Brother Jonathan.'"

INDIAN MEAL

(From a Correspondent.)

The ordinary preparation of Indian meal for household use, is simply to mix the meal with water, stir it to a thick paste, form it into a cake with the hands, and cook it on a thick iron pan or griddle, over a slow fire. This "pan" of bread is always eaten hot; cold it is unpalatable: the making occupies about three minutes, the baking about twenty. It is broken, and not cut. During a residence of three years, when this was brought thrice a day to table, I never knew any successful attempts at lightening it with yeast, or any leaver. The other daily use of Indian meal is a boiled porridge of the meal and milk. In using meal, that of the recent or last crop should be got. Stale Indian meal is disagreeable in flavour; stale meal, or meal long ground, is also a deteriorated article. The average scale of value for "meal" is half that of wheat flour; its nutritious quality is also in the same or a less proportion to the latter ounce. A negro labourer will consume in a day even half a peck of meal—at least, I was informed by a neighbour that his meal had usually disappeared at that rate.

TO ROMANCE.

As the Rainbow in the sky,
When the storm is passing by;
As the sunshine to the flower,
Or the first refreshing shower;
Like the moonlight on the stream,
Like an Angel in a dream;
So, Romance! art thou to me,
Ever hast been, and will be!

As the stars in darkest night,
As the spirit in its might;
As the high majestic mount,
Or the sweetly gushing fount;
As the dew lies on the lawn,
In the light of early dawn,
So thou liest on my heart
Pure and holy as thou art!

R. E. S.

CASHMERE.

Oh! who has not heard of the Vale of Cashmere!
For [illegible] Thomas Moore in one of his beautiful effusions. This kingdom, or [illegible]dom has recently fallen under the sceptre of England, and we all we know [illegible] of its [illegible]ce and modern warfare—is, that the ladies hold in the highest esteem shawls manufactured from the wool of the Cashmerian goat. The subject is worthy of a small niche in our Column.

Cashmere is the Switzerland of the East, mountains, lakes, chamois, chalets, castles perched on high, like an eagle's nest, &c. But the City of Cashmere is an Orient? Venice. Floating islands, floating gardens, mosques and minarets. The river Vedusta connects the two lakes upon which the town is built; and from the rubbish that is poured down from the mountains in the rainy season, the lakes increase, shallower, and, consequently, more extensive. So the city ground becoming every day more scare and dear, the inhabitants mat together the reeds, &c., of the lakes, and contrive to construct floating beds, where are grown the best melons in Asia, with a variety of other good things. The view of the City at sunrise, from the surrounding hills, is truly beautiful:

Sweet City! the sun o'er thy mountains is peeping,
And pierces the vapour that on thy lakes,
They daughters of beauty on cashmeres are sleeping,
While here, on the banks, the wanderer slakes
His thirst, which has ever been that of a syphon;
And more so where Nature's bright glories appear.
Could Leila smile on me, I'd spend my whole life on
The banks of thy waters, beloved Cashmere.

The Inhabitants still cherish traditions of a certain Iskander, who conquered all India—nay, all the world (doubtless Alexander the Great)? The country lies on the north-west confines of Hindostan; its area is about 180 miles by 70; the climate is healthy, and the natives are reputed to be hardy and brave, with an amiable talent for emptying the pockets of other people, and keeping their own tight closed as the lockjaw.

DISTORTION—A WORD TO MOTHERS.

The most common cause of a high shoulder is to be found in the abominable practice of undressing girls' necks as low as the hanging of their clothes will permit. Instead of the shoulders of the dress being, as they should be, fairly above the root of the acromial processes [that is, on the centre of the shoulder], they often indeed most commonly either only skirt the extreme end of those processes, and rest on the upper part of the deltoid muscles [resting nearly on the extreme edge of the shoulder], or are actually far down on the arms; in consequence of which, the dress having little or no suspension on the shoulders, is constantly dropping; and the girl, to save her clothes dropping down, or at least to keep them in place, is continually hitching up the shoulder, from which the shoulder-strap most usually slips, and thus the elevating muscles, becoming stronger on that side, pull the shoulder permanently up, and produce a very ugly appearance. But the mischief does not stop here! For though there really be no disease of the spine, yet this constant hitching up of the shoulder causes the head and neck to be turned to the other side, whilst the chest is thrown out to the same side; and thus a lateral curvature of the spine is produced, and a girl's figure is spoiled, for the simple purpose of uncovering her neck and shoulders as far as possible, which, as well for decency as for the preservation of the child's health, ought to be covered. Many parents have been led into the real cause of their daughter's distortion, if not of more serious consequences; and therefore, as parents, girls, who have the least disposition to slip their shoulder out of their dress, must be especial care should be taken to prevent the possibility of keeping up this habit by having the dress made so high that it cannot slip down, and then, the sensation of its slipping being lost, the child no longer continues to hitch up her shoulder and, by a little attention to her proper [illegible], the mischief, if not of long standing, may be got rid of. Chambers's Sybilline Stories.

* "Parce pusillæ nivi."—Hor

With pious grist and sparkling salt.

† Bishop Heber ("Narrative of Journey," cap. 28.) favours the native tradition on an apostolic mission connected with St. Thomas's Mount, near Madras.

MUSIC.

MISS BASSANO'S FIRST APPEARANCE AT THE PRINCESS' THEATRE, IN DONIZETTI'S "ANNA BOLENA."

The English version of "Anna Bolena," by Mr. Charles Jefferys, was very well received on Tuesday night. It is but, on the whole, an unpleasant task to reflect performance can be given in our artistes as the Italian Opera, but, on the whole, it was a very creditable representation—such a one as will satisfy the exigences of the audiences of the Princess', till it wanted, at any rate, one contrast. It was too violent the reproaches addressed to the King particularly—at the end of the first act.

Miss Bassano has moderated her [illegible] stures with the head, and is not quite so free in the use of her hands—the pulling off the sleeve of the Monarch, for instance, was quite a mistake—she will thus be destroying her maternity. Indeed, a question whether, in a larger house, this exuberance of action would have been so perceptible. Her defects are on the right side; clearness is a besetting sin of English artists. Miss Bassano has a power of the [illegible] organ, the [illegible] being somewhat harsh, but the lower ones rich and telling. With her strong organ, she can accomplish any labour in a long opera, and this lasting quality will be of great value. She commenced her studies in the Royal Academy of Music, under Crevelli; and subsequently went to Italy, and appeared at some of the small theatres to acquire stage experience. As a concert-singer, she has earned great distinction; but we think she is destined to shine more as a dramatic vocalist; and her Anna Bolena [illegible] few sights, unless we are much mistaken, will be far more attractive. She was over anxious, on the first appearance, to give effect to particular situations, but to regard the efficiency of the ensemble. Her efforts were warmly applauded; a house crowded in every part, and she was called [illegible] each act. Miss G. Smithson was the Lady Anna Seymour, and sang so well in the last act, as to create for her the highest expectation throughout the previous scenes. If she would not strain her voice so much, she might sing in better tune, as her organ is naturally thin and piercing.

Mr. Edward Loder's tuneful overture to the orchestra was of great service in the accompaniments, but some of the wind instruments played most resolutely out of tune at times.

CONCERTS.

SOCIETY OF BRITISH MUSICIANS. The sixth Concert included Beethoven's Sonata in A, Op. 69, for pianoforte and violoncello, by Mr. W. F. Reed (violoncello); Mozart's [illegible], for pianoforte, per formed by Messrs. W. C. Macfarren and Dorrell; Mr. G. Macfarren's Quintet in G Minor, executed by Mr. L. Sloper (piano), Thirlwall (violin), Weslake (tenor), W. H. Reed (violoncello), and C. Severn (double bass); and a MS. Double Quartet in B Minor, by Mr. W. S. Rockstro, played by Messrs. Thirlwall, Dawson, Weslake, and Reed, and Messrs. A. Streather, T. W. Reed, Rockstro, and Cole, the audience of the double quartet was much applauded. Miss Duval was encored in Mr. W. Macfarren's song, "A farewell," to Tennyson's words; and Mr. Lockey was similarly complimented in a MS. Scena, by Mr. G. Cooper, "Lamont." Miss Lockey sang Spohr's song, "In the silver beams of Luna," and, with her brother, Haydn's fine, "Sister Vocal." Mr. W. Macfarren officiated as accompanyist. On the whole, this series of concerts has been remarkably dull and uninteresting, and if the Society desire to prosper, it must awake from its apathy and system of partiality. We fear the: the epithet formerly applied "The Society of Mutual Applause"—has been a rightly applicable title since.

THE WAKEFIELD ANNUAL MUSICAL ENTERTAINMENT. Mr. May, who combines the [illegible] of a Professor of Music and Dancing, gave an agreeable Concert, at the Horns Room, Kennington, on Tuesday last, which was crowded to excess. Mr. May [illegible] a fair specimen of his powers as a pianist, although his "Infidonia" on that instrument might have been dispensed with. The scheme was much too long, but the pieces displayed taste. The vocalists were the Misses Rainforth, Townsend, Howard, Wheadon, Arnold, Gilbert, Mrs. Fitzgerald, Mr. Beach, Mr. Hill, and Mr. John Parry. Mr. C. Dommell, from America, played a flute solo.

MUSICAL CHIT CHAT.

The Walworth Literary and Scientific Institution gave a Concert, on Tuesday, in aid of the Building Fund. Mr. Cornish was the accompanyist; and Messrs. Sedgwick, Lyon, Hobbs, and [illegible] sang. [illegible] was established in 1845, and has progressed [illegible] now upwards of 600 members. The subscription is very moderate, and the [illegible] is an excellent library, reading-room, and class room, and lectures on all subjects are given. Mr. [illegible]land, on the 2nd February, and April 27, will deliver lectures on Electricity and its wonderful [illegible].

Mr. Henry Smith gave his vocal entertainment at Crosby Hall, on Tuesday evening; and Mr. J. L. Hatton gave his second concert at the Marylebone Institution, on Thursday. Mr. [illegible], Miss Dolby, and Mr. Lockey, sang at the Hall, in Store-street, on Monday evening, and displayed talent, but scarcely of a sufficiently prominent order to warrant such an undertaking simply. There are now too many of these Institutions. It requires no very great share of poverty to interest an audience for a couple of hours, and Mr. Wilson's success seems to have turned the brains of the singers, forgetting that, in his case, there was a marked speciality in the illustrations of a peculiar class of melodies.

On Monday, is the first of a series of Concerts at Exeter Hall, in aid of the Hullah Testimonial Fund. On Tuesday, the Sacred Harmonic Society will perform Haydn's "Creation." On Wednesday, Mr. Robinson gives his Annual Concert, at the National Hall, Holborn. On Thursday, will be the anniversary of the Madrigal Society, at Freemasons' Hall. The popular opera of "The Bondman" will be given every night at Drury Lane Theatre; and Miss Bassano will appear at the Princess' Theatre.

We are happy to record the formation of the "Amateur Musical Society," for the creation of a full orchestra, composed of the gentlemen, assisted by professors, to meet weekly during the months of February, March, and April, at the Music Hall, in Store-street, with Mr. Dalle as Conductor, for the performance of Classical Symphonies. The gentlemen, Messrs. Bland, Fitzgerald, Sir A. R. Macdonal, and E. Jekyll, Esq., are the Committee of Management; and Mr. Alfred Leslie is the Honorary Secretary. Prince Albert, the Duke of Cambridge, the Duke of Leinster, the Earls of Westmoreland, Romney, Liverpool, and Gawdor, Viscount Anson, the Marquis of Kildare, Lords A. Vane, Saltoun, Arundel, &c., General and Colonel Upton, Sir H. Webb, Sir A. Barnard, Sir J. Campbell, Sir C. Wilson, Sir G. Lee, &c., are members. In the list of the orchestra, are the names of the Duke of Leinster, the Marquis of Kildare, Lords A. Vane, Arundel, &c., the Hon. G. Cadogan, the Rev. Mr. Vickery, the Rev. W. Nowell, General Upton, &c.

Mr. Travers, the tenor, who has been singing in Italy with such success, will appear at Drury-Lane Theatre on a new day.

Signor Italia Labladini has most cordially received, on his return from Italy, at the Italian Opera, in Paris, on Thursday week, in "Don Pasquale." Mdlle. Fresco, on her return to the Académie Royale de Musique, after her triumph at Drury-Lane Theatre, created a furore in Betty. This young and gifted danseuse is engaged for three years at the Royal Italian Opera, Covent Garden [illegible] estimate but for the manager ment.

Mr. Mallone's opera is in preparation at Drury-Lane Theatre; the mise en scene is to eclipse, it is report d, all former glories of M. Jullien.

THE THEATRES.

FRENCH PLAYS.

On Monday evening the great French artiste, M. Frederic Lemaitre, made his first appearance this season, on the boards of the St. James's Theatre, in his celebrated character of Don Cæsar de Bazan. The part is one eminently calculated to display all the powers of a performer of the talents of Lemaitre. It draws forth phases of his talents in the comic and serious line to the greatest advantage; and, with the exception of the renowned and inimitable Robert Macaire, is the best character in his repertoire. The piece, the drama is well known to the play-going public from the dozen translations which appeared, almost simultaneously, at the different theatres. In point of similitude in construction, and a well-developed story, it is one of the best of modern French plays. M. Lemaitre was admirably supported by Mdlle. Clarisse, and was most enthusiastically cheered throughout his performance. He repeated the character, with equal effect, on Wednesday, and was announced to appear in the terrible "Dame de St. Tropez" last evening.

We scarcely know if the resources of Mr. Mitchell's theatre would enable him to get up the "Tour de Nesle." He was possible, we believe the drama would make a great hit, with M. Lemaitre in the part of Buridan. We saw the play with the character, some two or three years ago, at the Porte St. Martin Theatre, and have little doubt but that he would cause the excitement here by his masterly delineation of the adventurer as he did in Paris. The piece itself, by Alexander Dumas and M. Gaillardet, stands alone for deep interest, and is, comparatively, unknown to the public. A translation was produced across the water some years ago.

SADLER'S WELLS.

Beaumont and Fletcher's play of "King and No King" was revived at this theatre on Wednesday evening—not having been played, we believe, for nearly half a century. Arbaces, King of Iberia, had taken Tygranes, King of Armenia, prisoner, and offers him his sister Panthea in marriage. Arbaces himself had not seen Panthea since she was nine years old; and he has since become madly desperately in love with her. She gradually entertains a love for him greater than that of a sister for a brother. The struggles of Arbaces between conscience and sensuality are portrayed by the dramatist with a power not less than that of Goëthe, and consequently no relation to Panthea, who is the lawful Queen.

Perpsadoes no notice this play, but it must have been revived before Nell Gwynne left the Theatre Royal. The main interest of the plot may be taken exception to, on the ground of immorality; but the play, on the whole, is a good one. The part of Arbaces was a very good one for Phelps, and he acted it with great power. He was ably seconded by Miss Laura Addison, as Panthea. Rosina, a sort of Belinda, was ably personated by Mr. G. Bennett; and the [illegible] of the entire play was most satisfactory.

The pantomime goes famously, and runs over with comical allusions to passing topics. It is one of the best we have witnessed for some time.

PRINCESS'.

An agreeable farce called "[illegible]" of the "Spoilt Child" genus, was brought out here on Wednesday evening, and gave Miss Marshall a fresh [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] part, in [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"C. H. S."—New York. The communication in question was duly posted, and we entertain hopes that it will still reach you. Nevertheless, another letter shall be forwarded by the next mail.

"A Tyro" Get Tomlinson's "Amusements of Chess."

"Marazion."—Your solution of the Problem No 8, in Mr. Lewis's last Treatise, is the first received of sixty moves, is right. It has since been corrected, and published in two moves.

"Inquisitive."—In the position given, the White King cannot take the Queen, so being equally guarded by the unprotected Knight, as if he were free to move.

"Sopraclitis."—Quite right, and answers enough.

"Dux."—A Pawn reaching the eighth square of the file on which he travels may be come a Queen, even though the first queen be on the board.

"F. G. M."—If Mr. Staunton's "New York" Magazine cannot be obtainable in the place named, we know of no other source. Some copies will, probably, be sent when the second Number appears. In the opening cited, White had better take the Queen's Pawn. 3. Mr. Staunton's "Handbook" is announced to appear early in the spring.

"H. J."—Mr. Kenny's little Chess Manual is published at one shilling. We have never seen the other work mentioned. Had it been sent, it would certainly have been noticed.

"R. S."—Messrs. Williams and Norgate will receive your subscription for the Berlin Chess Journal, and supply it regularly.

"P. P. T."—We believe Mr. Horwitz to be the best blindfold player in Europe. Your other question is unintelligible.

"Juvenis." They shall have prompt attention.

"W. M. G.," "A Rugby Lad," and "Vicar." By sending a Post-Office order for the trifling subscription of 4s. 4d., you may now receive the "Chess-Player's Chronicle" every Thursday in any part of England. The Monthly Parts will be published, we suppose, as usual.

"S. R." Hull. Both letters reached us safely, and their contents shall be duly reported on when they have been examined.

"Subscriber," Totness. 1. B to Q Kt 3d; 2. R to K B 8th; 3. B to K B 7th; 4. B to Q 8th, double check and mat.

"J. R. S." We never look at Problems which come unaccompanied by solutions

"Lancaster."—The Chess Club at Liverpool numbers nearly one hundred and twenty members, the majority of whom will meet at their splendid anniversary dinner on the 3rd of February.

"Etonensis."—All the games in the matches mentioned will be found recorded, with notes, in Vol. VII., just published, of the "Chess Player's Chronicle."

"F. H." Lynn, and others.—The unfaithful little Problem 155 cannot be solved in less than the stipulated number of moves.

"A Subscriber," Castle Island, upon looking more attentively, will find himself and his little boy mistaken.

"Mr. H." must have the goodness to send us the position to which he refers. Lewis's Treatise is a sound and comprehensive work: published by Baily, Cornhill.

"A. L." Wolverhampton.—Apply to Mr. Hurst, the Publisher of the "Chess-Player's Chronicle," Anne Williams-street, Strand.

"Shangrel," Bath. "It never came to hand. Many of the games are very interesting, and all acceptable. We look forward with some impatience to the termination of the struggle.

"N. D. R." In the situation adduced, mate is given with the Queen, and not with the Pawn. The player of the White pieces would, consequently, have lost the game. Thanks for the little end-game.

"S.," Cambridge. —At the termination of the game given last week between Mr. E. W. and Mr. P.—p, had White taken the proffered Queen, Black would have checked with his Knight at King's Knight's 6th; whereupon the adversary was obliged to take, he would then have played Rook to King's Rook's 3rd (ch); the Queen would have interposed, and the third move, Rook takes Queen, would have been mate.—G. E. D.

"Acolenensae"—You cannot be stalemated while you have pieces which can be played. When you have a King only on the board, your adversary should checkmate in fifty moves. We have no means of referring to the back Problem you have solved: you should have written out the position.

"A Learner."—You may obtain instruction in the Chess Opening, &c., upon extremely reasonable terms, of Mr. Kluger, a German Player, accomplished in the game. Apply at Rees's Grand Divan.

"H. J. C. L."—The Problems arrived too late for examination this week, but you may rely upon our attention to them. Many thanks for the promised games.

"Amateur."—You can have no difficulty in seeing the celebrated "Indian Problem." It has been published every month for two years on the wrapper of the "Chess Magazine."

Solutions by "P. R.," "Alpha," "Carlo Fabero," "Fusciolon," "A. Br. L.," "T. L. E.," "A. D. A. D.," "N. D. R.," "B. S.," "Pio," "E. B. C.," "G. C. P.," Stafford, "G. A. H.," "P. H.," "Hemra," "Zyglastarus," "Medicus," "R. G. H.," "E. H.," and "E. C." are correct. Those by "Stub," "S. A. P.," "Filly," "Omega," "G. S.," Lambeth; "J. H. C.," "W. T.," and "Pluto-Claus," are wrong.

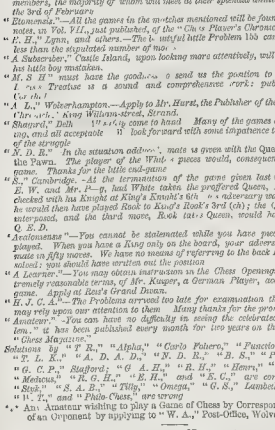
 An Amateur wishing to play a Game of Chess by Correspondence may hear of an Opponent by applying to "W. A.," Post-Office, Wolverhampton

PROBLEM, No. 156.

By R. F. H., An Amateur in India.

White having to play gives mate in six moves.

BLACK.



WHITE.

SMART GAME BETWEEN MR. HARRWITZ AND MR. Z——Y, A SKILFUL POLISH PLAYER

WHITE. (Mr. H.)	BLACK (Mr. Z.)	WHITE. (Mr. H.)	BLACK. (Mr. Z.)
1. Q P two	Q P two	12. K to B sq	K B P takes P
2. Q B P two	P takes P	13. Q B takes P	P takes Q P
3. K P two	K P two	14. Q takes B	Q Kt to Q 2nd
4. Q P one	K B to Q B 4th	15. Castles (on Q side)	Q to her Kt 3rd
5. B takes P	K Kt to B 3rd	16. K R to R 2nd	Q R to Q B sq (a)
6. Q Kt to B 3rd	Castles	17. K to Kt sq	B to Q 5th
7. K Kt to B 3rd	Q B to K Kt 5th	18. Kt to Q Kt 4th	Q to K 5th
8. K P one	B to K R 4th	19. R to Q Kt sq	Q Kt P two
9. Q to her 3rd	B takes Kt	20. K to Kt 2nd (b)	P takes Kt
10. Q takes B	Kt to K 4th	21. R takes P	P takes R
11. K to her sq	Q B P one	22. Q to her 3rd	And Black resigns

(a) From this point a gorgous and determined attack is kept up by both sides to the end.

(b) By so offering the Kt, Mr. Harrwitz gains time to accumulate an irresistible force upon the adverse King.

Dashing skirmish just played at the London Club, betwixt Mr. Horwitz and an Amateur, the former giving the Queen's Rook, which must, therefore, be removed from the board.

WHITE (Mr. H.)	BLACK (Mr. ——)	WHITE (Mr. H.)	BLACK (Mr. ——)
1. K P two	Q B P two	15. P takes K B P	B takes P
2. K B to Q B 4th	K P one	16. K B P one	K P takes P
3. Q Kt to B 3rd	K Kt P one	17. Q B to K R 6th (b)	K R to K sq
4. K B P two	K B to Kt 2nd	18. K B takes B P (c)	R to K 8th (d)
5. K P one	Q B P one	19. Q to her 5th (ch)	K to K 2nd
6. Q Kt to K 4th	Q Kt P two	20. B takes K Kt P (e)	P takes B
7. Q Kt to Q 6th (ch)	K to his 2nd	21. R takes B	R to K 8th (ch)
8. Q takes Q Kt P	Q Kt to his 3rd (a)	22. K B 3rd	R to K 3rd
9. Q to her 5th sq	K B P one	23. R takes R (ch)	P takes R
10. Q Kt to B 3rd	K Kt to B 3rd	24. B to Kt 5th (ch)	K to K sq
11. Q P two	P takes Q P	25. Q takes Kt (ch)	Q to Q 3rd
12. K B to Q 3rd	K Kt to K B 2nd	26. Q takes R	K P one
13. Kt takes Kt	K takes Kt	27. Q to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd (ch)
14. Castles	K R to B sq	28. B to B 4th, and wins

(a) Despite the mixture of pieces among his pawns, Mr. Horwitz has managed to get up a formidable attack by sort of attack upon the opposing forces.

(b) Studying the King out from the retreat to his Kt's square. It is in these moves that the enemy the advantage and gives time to the player himself, that half the attack consists.

(c) This looks daring and hazardous enough, yet we think it was perfectly sound.

(d) He dare not take it. Behold, the consequent attack would have been irresistible.

(e) The audacity and cleverness of these latter moves are admirable.

CHESS IN INDIA.

The following Game is one of the Match still pending at Delhi between a Native Player and a European.

WHITE (EUROPEAN).	BLACK (NATIVE).	WHITE (EUROPEAN).	BLACK (NATIVE)
1. K P two	K P two	17. Q B P one	B to Q 2nd
2. K to her Kt 3rd	Q Kt to B 3rd	18. P takes P	P takes P
3. Q P two	P takes Q P	19. Kt to Q B 3rd	Q B to his 3rd
4. K B to Q B 4th	K B to Q B 4th	20. K R to K sq	Q R to K sq
5. K Kt to K Kt 5th	K Kt to K R 3rd	21. R takes R	R takes R
6. Kt takes K B P	Kt takes Kt	22. R to Q sq	Kt takes K B P
7. B takes Kt (ch)	K takes B	23. K R to Q 5th	B takes R
8. Q to K R 5th (ch)	K Kt P one	24. R takes B	Kt to K 4th
9. Q takes B	Q P one	25. Q Kt P one	Q Kt P one
10. Q to Q Kt 5th (a)	K R to K sq	26. K R P one	Q to K 2nd
11. K B P one (b)	Q to K 8th (ch)	27. B to K Kt 5th	R to K sq
12. K Kt P one	B takes K P (ch)	28. B to K 3 4th	K to his 3rd
13. R to K 3rd	Q to B 3rd	29. R to Q sq	Q P one (d)
14. Q to her 8th (ch) (c)	R to K 3rd	30. B takes Kt	Q B P two (e)
15. Q B to K B 4th	Q to K B 4th	31. B to K B 4th
16. Q takes Q	P takes B	Black resigns.

NOTES BY THE EUROPEAN.

(a) What would be the result of moving Q to K Kt 8th? The question is worthy of a little consideration.

(b) The Q is generally, at this point, played to K 2nd, and these moves follow:—

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
Q to K 2nd	Q P one	K Kt P one	Q takes K P
K B P one	Q P takes P	Castles (giving check)
P takes P	Q to K R 6th (ch)

(c) Had the obvious move of Q B to K Kt 6th been played, the following moves would probably have resulted:—

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
Q B to K Kt 5th	Q to K 4th	Q takes R	Q takes Q
Q to K R 3rd (best)	B to K R 3rd (best)	P takes Q	Kt takes Q B P
Q to Q 3rd best)	Kt to Q Kt 6th	Kt to Q B 3rd

(d) A fatal mistake.

(e) Had he taken the Bishop with King, he would also easily have lost in 7 m.

CHESS ENIGMAS.

No. 103. By R. A. B., of Leeds.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
K at his Kt 4th	K at his Kt sq	Kt at K B 8th	Pawns at K R 3d, K Kt 3d, and 7th and K P 2d
R at Q Kt 8th	B at K R 8th

In this position, the party who plays first can mate in four moves.

No. 104.—By Mr. S. A., of Durham.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
K at Q B 3rd	K at Q B 3rd	P at a B 3rd	Kt at Q sq
Q at her 2nd	Q at Q R 2nd		P at K B 4th, Q 2nd and 4th, and Q Kt 3rd
Kt at Q B 3rd	Kt at Q R sq
B at K 6th	B at Q B 6th
Kt at Q B 4th	B at K 3rd

White to play, and mate in four moves.

No. 105. By the same Author.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
K at his K 2nd	K at K R 2nd	Kt at K 5th	Kt at Q B 2nd
Q at her Kt 8th	B at Q Kt 4th	P at K R 6th	P's at Q 2nd, Q Kt 3rd and 7th
Kt at K Kt 4th	Kt at K 3rd

White to play, and mate in three moves.

POLICE.

ALLEGED FRAUD AND CONSPIRACY.

At the MANSION HOUSE, on Tuesday, Mr. P. Scanlan, Mr. W. Killick, and Mr. H. Flight, were re-examined upon a charge of conspiring to defraud Mr. Marrgerson, of Aldermanbury, of the sum of £100, by depositing .00 shares in the Direct Lincoln. East Retford, and Sheffield Junction Railway Company, and which shares, as alleged, were not, in November last, when the money was obtained, worth more than about 2s. 6d. per share. The money was advanced to the prisoner Scanlan, who was introduced by a person named Fennell, and the entire evidence given to Killick, a large and highly respectable share agent; and his clerk, the prisoner Flight, had, as deposed, given Scanlan a high character for respectability

Mr. Humphreys appeared for the prosecutor, Mr. Hobler for Killick and Flight, and Mr. Philp for Scanlan.

Mr. Humphreys, in opening the case, said there had been applications to compromise, and the sum of £110 had been deposited for that purpose; and it was now left to his Lordship as to whether the case should go on.

Mr. Hobler, for the first clerk, said the question was, as the case had gone so far, whether a bond fide case had not been made out. He, therefore, whether the case ought to be allowed to drop.

The Lord Mayor thought it ought not to be allowed to drop.

Richard Clarke was then called, and stated that he was a mine and share agent in Anstanfriars, and that Killick had bought about 200 of the shares in question, at from 3s. to 3s. 6d. each, on or about the 7th of November last. (The shares were produced.) Witness identified the initials "W. K." on the back of the scrip as the handwriting of the defendant Killick. There had been a bitch about the shares of this company all through, and he had, consequently, been particular in taking the numbers, but it was not his practice to do so in all cases

Thomas Hutchinson, of the firm of Hutchinson and Spiller, of Bread-street, carpet warehousemen, deposed to having received the sum of £110 on Thursday last to compromise this affair.

Samuel Deacon, of 53, Aldermanbury, two doors from Mr. Margetson's, the prosecutor, stated that he knew Scanlan. Saw him about six o'clock in the evening of December 1, the day on which he said he was to leave London by rail at four. He came to Forrall, a clerk to witness. He called and paid Forrall a commission for introducing him to Margetson, and borrowing £100 on railway scrip.

John Bradley Shuttleworth, of 33, Eastcheap, was one of the provisional committee in the Direct Lincoln, &c. There never were any directors. The offices were in the front room of the solicitors, Messrs. Millar and Carr, of 47, Gracechurch. Subsequently, there was an office at 14, Fish-street-hill. Witness and a Captain Ogle were the only members of the committee residing in London. Originally, there was a select committee of twelve, which shrinked down to six, and when Lord Edward Chichester (the chairman) left England, they could not form a quorum. The advertisement stated that the company were about to dissolve, and would return £1 15s. 6d. out of the £3 12s 6d. deposited, and was signed "Edward Chichester, Chairman." Lord Edward Chichester was in Italy at the time. Some of the scrip afloat had hardly any connection with the company. He believed the signature of the secretary was counterfeited. He had been applying to be the committee were not. The witness went on to enumerate the numbers of the scrip which were genuine, and those which were not, and also to ascertain that certain books were missing; that he had in his possession duplicate numbers to those which were produced.—Cross-examined: He first ascertained that there were duplicate shares in April last. Did not then issue any advertisement as a caution to the public. The last meeting of the company, as far as he knew, was held on 23rd June; but there was subsequently a meeting of some of the committee at the office of a solicitor. He believed, at a meeting held at the George and Vulture, that it was stated only 3500 shares were issued to the public.

Mr. Humphreys wished to adjourn the case to a further day

Mr. Hobler said no case for a remand was made out as affecting Mr. Killick. The defendants were remanded for a few days.

THE EXPEDITION OF GENERAL FLORIZ.—At the THAMES Police-office, on Tuesday, Colonel Richard Wright, Consul-General of the State of Ecuador, in South America, and Aide-de-Camp to General Flores, surrendered before Mr. Yardley, with bail, to answer a charge of misdemeanour, in violating the provisions of the Foreign Equipment and Enlistment Act, the 59th of the 3rd, cap. 69. The proceedings lasted a long time, but the evidence was to the same effect as that adduced on previous examinations of parties charged with having taken part in the expedition. The witnesses examined were Captain Harvey Tuckett, Mr. William Leigh Butts, Mr. Gabriel Maturin, and Sir William Ogilvie, Bart. The last-named witness said he was promised the appointment of Aide-de-Camp to General Flores, when the expedition reached the Equador, and that he had been to Limerick to procure recruits. He stated, however, that those he engaged at Limerick were to go out as emigrants, and consisted principally of artisans. One of the witnesses for the prosecution openly avowed that if he had received the £65 compensation money which had been claimed, he would not have appeared as a witness against Colonel Wright. The defendant was ultimately ordered to find bail, however the charge of the Grand Criminal Court. Mr. Shaw put in the names of respectable bail, who were accepted, and Colonel Wright was liberated. An exciting scene immediately afterwards took place outside Court. Captain H. Tuckett, on seeing Captain Harvey Tuckett, Mr. William Leigh Butts, Mr. Gabriel Maturin, and Sir William Ogilvie, Bart. The last-named witness said he was promised the appointment of Aide-de-Camp to General Flores, when the expedition reached the Equador, and that he had been to Limerick to procure recruits. He stated, however, that those he engaged at Limerick were to go out as emigrants, and consisted principally of artisans. One of the witnesses for the prosecution openly avowed that if he had received the £65 compensation money which had been claimed, he would not have appeared as a witness against Colonel Wright. The defendant was ultimately ordered to find bail, however the charge of the Grand Criminal Court. Mr. Shaw put in the names of respectable bail, who were accepted, and Colonel Wright was liberated. An exciting scene immediately afterwards took place outside Court. Captain H. Tuckett, on seeing Captain Harvey Tuckett, was arrested by two Sheriff's officers, who led him away amidst the groans, hisses, and execrations of the people connected with the Equador expedition Some of them offered personal violence, when the police interfered, but no harm was done. Tuckett was scoured with a heavy stick his him on the back. Captain Tuckett was saved from further injury, and was escorted by the police some distance before Lombard-street.

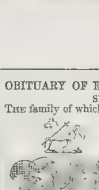
THE ROBBERY FROM THE UNIVERSITY LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY.—Last Saturday, F. W. Sabaltz was brought before Mr. Long, at MARLBOROUGH-STREET, for final examination, charged with having stolen the sum of £65, the property of the University Life Assurance Society, Suffolk street, Pall-mall. The evidence, as brought forward at the previous examination, was complete, with the exception of legal proof that the notes found in the prisoner's possession at Leeds were portions of the notes paid by Messrs. Drummond to one of the clerks at the assurance office, and by him deposited in the cash-box, whence they were stolen. A clerk from the banking-house of Drummond and Co. produced evidence of the numbers of the bank-notes paid to the prisoner of the capture in question. These numbers were found to agree with the numbers of the notes found in the prisoner's possession. Mr. Clarkson and Mr. Humphreys, who attended for the prosecution, declined to make any answer to the charge, and the prisoner was fully committed

THE LATE GEORGE BYNG, ESQ. The mortal remains of this much-lamented gentleman will be interred in the family vault at Wrotham, on Monday next.

ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH, MARYLEBONE.—The Bishop of London has fixed the 28th instant for the consecration of this Church, which is situate in Wells-street, near Middlesex Hospital. The Rev. T. Mount Fallow, formerly curate of All Soul's, Langham place, has been appointed the incumbent

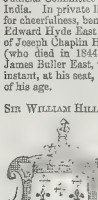
OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED

SIR EDWARD HYDE EAST, BART.



THE family of which this distinguished lawyer was the representative, emigrated from Kent in the reign of James I., and was amongst the earliest settlers in the county of Armagh. One of its descendants, a Captain in the army, joined the adventurers under Penn and Venables, for the conquest of Jamaica, and obtained, soon after the Restoration, a grant of a considerable estate in that island, where it steadily descended to the deceased Baronet. Sir Edward Hyde East, Bart., F.R.S., M.R.A.S., was born on the 9th September, 1764, and was called to the Bar by the Hon. Society of the Inner Temple. He practised with success for many years, and was author of the works so well known to, and so well appreciated by, the profession, under the title of "The Term Reports" (Durnford and East's), and "East's Reports," and also the celebrated treatise called "East's Pleas of the Crown." He sat in Parliament for the borough of Great Bedwin, and was a stanch supporter of Mr. Pitt. In 1813, he was appointed Chief Justice of Bengal, and knighted. His mode of discharging his judicial duties in India, and his active and successful endeavours in spreading education there among the people, won for him general approbation. In acknowledgment, when he quitted the Presidency, his statue, in marble, by Chantrey, was erected in the Grand Jury Room of the Supreme Court at Calcutta. On Sir Edward's return to England, he was created a Baronet, and soon afterwards he re-entered Parliament, as member for Winchester, for which he continued to sit till 1830, and which has ever since been represented by his son. On the accession of William IV., Sir Edward was made a Privy Councillor, and attended regularly at the Judicial Committee since its formation, on the hearing of appeals from India. In private life, this eminent lawyer and Judge was distinguished for cheerfulness, benevolence, and for unbounded charity to the poor. Sir Edward Hyde East married, in December, 1786, Jane Isabella, daughter of Joseph Chapin Hankey, Esq., of East Bergholt, in Suffolk, by whom (who died in 1844) he has left one daughter and one son, now Sir James Buller East, the second Baronet. Sir Edward died on the 8th instant, at his seat, Sherwood Lodge, Battersea, in the eighty-third year of his age.

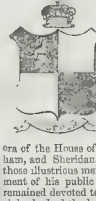
SIR WILLIAM HILLARY, BART.



SIR WILLIAM HILLARY, a great philanthropist, who passed his whole life in endeavouring to promote the honour and welfare of his country, was born in 1769. During the war with France, Sir William raised and commanded a regiment of yeomanry, and devoted £20,000 towards the defence of England. In consequence of this he was created a Baronet by George III., in 1805. Sir William was Equerry to the late Duke of Sussex, but the great feature in his admirable career was his foundation and support of "The Royal National Institution for the Preservation of Life from Shipwreck," and his having actually aided personally, at different periods, in saving the lives of 509 individuals, being the crews of twenty-nine vessels, for which he had awarded to him five gold and fourteen silver medals. Sir William was also eminent as an elegant and perspicuous writer, of which his late pamphlet on "The Naval Ascendancy of Great Britain," is an example. In the Isle of Man, his residence, Sir William's usefulness was invaluable: he it was who caused to be constructed at Douglas a central harbour of refuge for the Irish seas, and secured for the island important improvements in its civil and fiscal laws. The beautiful Tower of Refuge, on St. Mary's Rock, in the harbour of Douglas, was erected at his expense.

Sir William married twice; first, Frances Elizabeth, eldest daughter and coheir of the late L. Dansey Pyche, Esq., of Rantham Hall, and secondly Emma, youngest daughter of the late F. Tobin, Esq., one of the Deemsters of the Isle of Man. By the first wife he has left an only son, his successor, now Sir Augustus Hillary, late of the 6th Dragoon Guards. Sir William Hillary died on the 6th inst., at his seat, Woodville, Isle of Man, aged seventy-eight years.

GEORGE BYNG, ESQ., M.P.



THIS venerable and much respected country gentleman, for full fifty-six years Knight of the Shire for Middlesex, and at the period of his decease Father of the House of Commons, was son and heir of George Byng, Esq., also M.P. for the metropolitan county, by Anne his wife, daughter of the Right Hon. William Conolly, of Castletown, in Ireland, and inherited, both paternally and maternally, very considerable landed estates. His descent he derived from a common source with the ennobled house of Torrington, and was grandnephew of the ill-fated Admiral Byng, who was executed in 1757, at a period when "bravery and loyalty were insufficient securities for the life and honour of a naval officer."

Mr. Byng's first election for Middlesex took place in 1790, and his parliamentary services extended over the most eventful and brilliant era of the House of Commons—the era of Pitt and Fox, Burke, Wyndham, and Sheridan. His early days were spent in communion with those illustrious men, and with them he advocated, from the first moment of his public career, the great principles of freedom to which he remained devoted to the last hour of his existence. Most of those principles he had the happiness to see carried into practice, and he lived to witness the triumph of religious toleration, and of Parliamentary reform, the suppression of slavery, and the abolition of the Corn-laws.

Mr. Byng was born 17th May, 1764, and had, consequently, completed his 82nd year. He married Harriett, eighth daughter of the late Sir William Montgomery, Bart., but became a widower without issue, about a year since. His brother and heir is John, Lord Strafford, the distinguished General of the Peninsular War.

The honourable gentleman's decease occurred rather suddenly on Sunday afternoon, the 10th instant, at his seat, Wrotham Park, near Barnet.

LORD BERNARD THOMAS HOWARD.

THIS youthful nobleman, third son of the present Duke of Norfolk, by his Duchess, the Lady Charlotte Leveson Gower, eldest daughter of the late Duke of Sutherland, died suddenly of congestion on the brain, at Cairo, in Egypt, on the 21st ult. He arrived at Alexandria on the 18th, and on the following day proceeded to Cairo, which he reached in the enjoyment of health and spirits. On the 21st he was busy making arrangements for a trip to Thebes, and at three o'clock that afternoon, returning from a visit to the French Consul, he fell down dead at the door of his hotel. Lord Bernard had just entered on his 22d year, and was unmarried.

MRS MARTYN, LATE MISS INVERARITI

MISS INVERARITY, for some years a distinguished singer at Covent Garden Theatre, was born at Edinburgh, in March, 1813. She was the niece of the poet Ferguson, whom Burns called "that deathless cheil." Miss Inverarity early displayed great talents for singing, and became rapidly a proficient in musical knowledge. Her last master was Sir George Smart. In December, 1830, she appeared at Covent Garden Theatre, with great success, as Cherubino, and, in 1831, her performance in "Azor and Zelmira" raised and established her in public favour. In 1836 she was married to Mr. Martyn, a very reputable bass singer, and, at the expiration of their London engagement, she and her husband made a tour of the principal cities of America, with much profit and fame. The general advantages of Mrs. Martyn also added to her attraction here and in America. After a stay of two years abroad Mr. and Mrs. Martyn returned to England, and finally established themselves as teachers of music in Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Mrs. Martyn's premature demise, caused by consumption, occurred there on the 27th ultimo. She was in her 34th year.

MR. HAWKINS

MR. HAWKINS had, for many years past, occupied a distinguished position in the musical profession. He was member of the Choirs of Westminster Abbey and the Chapel Royal, and has, for a long time, been considered the first alto singer in the metropolis. His death, which occurred on the 9th inst., from internal inflammation, was quite unexpected, he having been in excellent health but shortly before, and was to have sung at the Glee Club on the same evening.

THE LATE J. J. GURNEY, ESQ.

JOSEPH JOHN GURNEY, ESQ.

THE name of Gurney is associated with the purest philanthropy, and the most unbounded benevolence. Every member of the family is devoted to the cause of humanity, and, in proof of our assertion, we need only mention the excellent chief of the house, Hudson Gurney, Esq., of Keswick, and his cousin, Samuel Gurney, of Lombard-street. Of the latter gentleman, Mr. Gurney, whose death it is our painful duty to record, was the next brother, being third son of John Gurney, Esq., of Earlham, near Norwich, who was second son of John Gurney, Esq., of Keswick, by Elizabeth Kett, his wife, a descendant of the family of the Norfolk Rebel. Although the great wealth of the Gurneys has been acquired by commercial pursuits, their descent is highly honourable, and can be traced to a very remote period.

The founder of the house, Hugh de Gournay, Lord of Gournay and the adjacent territory of Le Brai, was one of the Norman Barons, who commanded at the Battle of Mortimer, against the French in 1054, and who accompanied Duke William to the conquest of England, in 1066. The heiress of the chief line, Julia de Gournay, married William Lord Bardolph of Wirmgay, and thus the senior branch became extinct. Two offshoots, however, continued to exist, and of one of these was Sir Thomas de Gournay, the murderer of Edward II. The Norfolk Gurneys spring from the marriage of Edmund Gurney, Recorder of Norwich, temp. Richard II., with the heiress of De Wauncys of West Barsham.

Mr. Joseph John Gurney married three times. 1st. Jane, daughter of John Birkbeck, Esq., of Lynn; secondly, Mary, daughter of Robert Fowler, Esq.; and, thirdly, Miss Kirkbride; and by the second he has left two children. Few could die more deeply lamented, and few in whom the poor will experience a greater loss.

FAMINE AND STARVATION IN THE COUNTY OF CORK.

Very lamentable accounts are given from various parts of the county of Cork. From Bantry, Skibbereen, Crookhaven, Castletown, and Tracton, the reports present the same gloomy features. The intelligence from these scenes of misery is summed up by the Cork Examiner as follows:—

"SKIBBEREEN.—In the parish of Kilmoe, fourteen died on Sunday; three of these were buried in coffins, eleven were buried without other covering than the rags they were when alive. And one gentleman, a good and charitable man, speaking of this case, says 'The distress is so appalling, that we must throw away all feelings of delicacy;' and another says—'I would rather give in to a starving man than 4s. 6d. for a coffin.' One hundred and forty have died in the Skibbereen Workhouse in one month; eight have died in one day! And Mr. M'Carthy Downing states that 'they came into the house merely and solely for the purpose of getting a coffin.' The Rev. Mr. Clancy visits a farm, and there, in one house, 'he administered the last rites of religion to six persons.' On a subsequent occasion, he 'prepared for death a father and a daughter lying in the same bed.' Dr. Donovan solemnly assures a public meeting that the people are 'dropping in dozens about them.' Mr. Marmion says that work on the public road is even more destructive than fever; for the unfed wretches have not energy enough to keep their blood in circulation, and they drop down from the united effects of cold and hunger never to rise again.

"In Tracton, deaths, it appears, are occurring too. Mr. Corkoran, P.P., in a letter to Mr. Redington, says: 'Over sixteen deaths occurred in my parishes for the last ten days. I am morally certain that each and every one of them was occasioned and accelerated by want of food and fire. Buckley, of Ballycrane, and Sullivan, of Oysterhaven, died suddenly. Buckley dropped dead on the works, after a journey of three miles before day. His wife will make affidavit, that he had not sufficient food the night before he died, and that she and the rest of her family lived thirty-six hours on wild weeds to spare a bit of the cake for him. (In this case, a Coroner's verdict was given without sight of the body.) This horrifying economy is practised by scores of families in this district. Similar effects must be expected from similar causes. I fear we must bury the dead coffinless in future. My God! what a revolting idea! Without food when alive, without a coffin when dead.'"

The Rev. Robert Traill, Chairman of the Schuls Relief Committee, county Cork, states that 15,000 persons in that wide district are destitute; of this 5000 are entirely dependent on casual charity; fifty deaths have resulted from famine and "hundreds" are so reduced that not food or medicine can restore them! The deaths, he adds, now average 25 daily!!

Ten additional deaths by starvation have occurred in the barony of Bantry. The Jury at the inquests at Bantry handed in the following remonstrance, by their foreman, Mr. E. O'Sullivan:—"That we feel it our duty to state, under the correction of the Court, that it is our opinion that, if the Government of the country shall persevere in its determination of refusing to use the means available to it for the purpose of lowering the price of food, so as to place it within the reach of the labouring poor, the result will be a sacrifice of human life from starvation to a frightful extent, and endangerment of property and of the public peace.

PROGRESS OF THE FAMINE.

There were nearly 20 deaths by starvation reported from the southern and western counties on Monday morning. In a list of seven specified in the Galway Mercury, there is an account of the death of a man named Walker, who a few years ago was the proprietor of a veterinary establishment in Marlborough-street, Dublin. It appears that on Thursday (last week) he fell down suddenly in the town of Loughrea, and after a few minutes expired. An inquest was held on the body, and the jury returned a verdict of "Died of starvation." Several additional inquests on persons who died of starvation, were reported on Tuesday from the counties of Cork, Clare, Limerick, and Waterford.

TIPPERARY.—A letter from Tipperary states that the distress there has reached to such a height that the measures of relief expected from Parliament will come too late! It is sometimes impossible to get bread for money in that and other country towns. The food reserved hitherto is fast disappearing. The supply on the merchants' hand scanty, and the price continually advancing. The funds of the different Relief Committees, through which only starvation or plunder have been averted, are being exhausted; and unless measures adequate to the emergency, and worthy of the greatest nation in the world, be at once adopted and executed with vigour, the most calamitous events must ensue.

The Illustration shows a benevolent attempt to mitigate the suffering in the city of Cork, viz., the Society of Friends' Soup House. There are many similar establishments in operation through the county; but, we prefer the annexed, because the idea originated with the Society of Friends. The funds for its support are chiefly raised among this charitable class; and we are happy to state that the establishment is now in a position to supply 1300 gallons of Soup daily, at a loss, or rather cost, of from £120 to £130 per month to the supporters of the design. The present calls are for from 150 to 180 gallons daily, requiring 120 pounds of good beef, 27 pounds of rice, 27 pounds of oatmeal, 27 pounds of split peas, and 14 ounces of spices, with a quantity of vegetables. Tickets, at one penny each, are unsparingly distributed, on presenting one of which, each poor person receives one quart of soup, with half a small loaf of bread; and both are of good quality.

In the making of the Soup, the greatest possible cleanliness is observed; attention is paid to the poor, who throng the place daily, for their cheap supply of food; as well as to the visitors, who go to see the soup made, and who are requested to test its quality, and suggest any improvement. The vats, which are shown in the Sketch, are worked by a steam-engine, in an adjoining house; and, to ensure cleanliness, as well as sweetness, they are used alternately. Too much credit cannot be given to this establishment, and to the exertions of the Society of Friends in general; for, not content with originating these Soup Establishments, they have also raised a sum of money for distribution in the west, so as the more effectually to relieve the poor in distant districts.

THE CORK SOCIETY OF FRIENDS' SOUP HOUSE.

TESTIMONIAL TO SIR HERCULES PAKENHAM.

IN consequence of the promotion by brevet to the rank of Lieutenant-General of Major-General Sir Hercules Pakenham, K.C.B., the Lieutenant-Governorship of the Garrison of Portsmouth and the command of the South-Western District became vacant; and the inhabitants of Portsmouth, to mark the sense of respect they entertained for the character of the gallant chief (who is brother-in-law to the Duke of Wellington), determined to present him with a substantial proof of their sincerity in the shape of a piece of plate. The presentation took place on the 5th inst., at the official residence, the Government House, Portsmouth, by the Mayor of the borough, Benjamin Bramble, Esq., attended by the gentlemen who formed the Committee for carrying the wishes of the inhabitants into effect.

CANDELABRA PRESENTED TO SIR HERCULES PAKENHAM, THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR OF PORTSMOUTH.

The Testimonial consists of a magnificent candelabrum, 3 feet 2 inches high, weighing upwards of 400 oz.; the base of a triangular form, representing a rock, with water flowing, measuring 43 inches in circumference; on the sides, in basso-relievo, are the armorial bearings of the gallant General and his estimable lady, the arms of the borough of Portsmouth, and the following inscription:—

"Presented to Lieutenant-General the Hon. Sir Hercules Pakenham, K.C.B. by the inhabitants of the borough of Portsmouth, in grateful acknowledgment of his zealous regard to their wishes and interests, and of his constant anxiety to promote the order and well-being of the Municipality as Lieutenant-Governor of the Garrison, and in testimony of the high esteem entertained by all classes towards Sir Hercules and the Hon. Lady Pakenham, for their uniform courtesy and extensive benevolence during a residence of eight years. January 5, 1847."

The design represents an old oak tree, the branches sustaining six sconces for lights, and, on the top, a splendid epergne, with silver fruit basket; the whole relieved by oak leaves and acorns. Surrounding the base are the figures of a Colonel, with military emblems at his feet; a sailor, on whose hat-band is the word "Invincible," being the name of the ship the General's brother, the gallant Sir Thomas Pakenham, commanded during the last war: the right-hand pointing to cannon, shot, anchors, and other naval emblems, all beautifully modelled; and the figure of Commerce, with the caduceus in her hand, at her feet the globe, and the various emblems of commerce. Those figures are intended to convey the representation of the united feelings of the donors—the civil, naval, and military—on the various faces of the plinth are emblazoned the names of the following battles, in which Sir Hercules has been engaged:—Obidos, Roleia, Vimiera, Redinha, Busaco, Pombal, Fox d'Aronce, Sabugal, Fuentes d'Onor, Ciudad Rodrigo, Elbodon, Badajos, and Copenhagen.

The elegant design and exquisite workmanship of the Testimonial is highly creditable to the designers and manufacturers, the Messrs. E. and E. Emanuel, silversmiths to the Queen, Portsmouth.

HEADS OF THE MONTHS.—DRAWN BY KENNY MEADOWS.

JANUARY.

Sire of the Year! First actor on the stage
Whereon Time plays his year-long pantomime,
Thy beard is worthy of most brilliant rime,
Thy "frosty pow" is glorious in its age;
For thou, bluff Jannary, hast been sage
In thy libations, when the old town's chime
Announced thee to the world—stanch war to wage—
Peace against Feud, and Charity 'gainst Crime!
Welcome, brave month, with icicles on beard,
No icicles, I trow, cling to thy heart:
Therefrom the voice of Christian love is heard;
Therefrom the tears of Christian love will start.
Welcome, hoar father of the nascent year,
And joyous be thy brief sojourning here!

Yet to thy blazon one sad stain will cling,
Thy latest day beheld a harrowing scene,
When this fair land, with Brutus-like demean
Lock'd on the scaffold dress'd for her lost King
Oh! Mercy, hide the memory with thy wing,
Teach us to be like thee—the bless'd, serene;
Tha "doubly blessed:" and may the Future bring
Blessings to crown the Country and the Queen!
Forward! bluff January! The ball's begun,
With the fantastic and the mistetoe;
Saint Stephen's chapel soon will see rare fun,
Alas! Commingled with far greater woe.
Joy to thee! Merry month! Time's hoary pinion
Will waft thee speedily from his dominion.

L.

THE WEATHER.

The same dull, gloomy weather which prevailed at the end of last week continued during Thursday and Friday of this week. The average temperature of the former day was 40¼ degrees, it being remarkable for the little change in the reading of the thermometer, which amounted only to three degrees, and the air was quite saturated with moisture all the day. On Friday, the average temperature was 35 degrees, with less moisture in the air; on Saturday the average was 32 degrees, and before midnight, the temperature had declined to 30 degrees; and after midnight frost again set in, and the reading declined to 24½ degrees early in the morning of Sunday, which was a fine and cold day, with a clouded sky, its average temperature was 31 degrees; Monday was a very fine day, with a clear sky; its average temperature was 27½ degrees; Tuesday was a very fine, bright day, its average temperature was a little below 29 degrees; Wednesday was a dull day, some frozen rain fell in the morning, its average temperature was 33½ degrees.

The following are the extreme thermometrical readings taken each day:—

Thursday, Jan. 7, the highest reading was	42 deg.	the lowest was	29 deg.
Friday, Jan. 8	37½		33
Saturday, Jan. 9	34½		30
Sunday, Jan. 10	33		30½
Monday, Jan. 11	34½		33
Tuesday, Jan. 12	32		24½
Wednesday, Jan. 13	40		27

Blackheath, Thursday, Jan. 14, 1847. J. G.

.S. The reading of the thermometer this morning at eight o'clock was 24½ deg.

A BLACK HARE.

THIS extraordinary animal has been lately shot by the gamekeeper of Lieutenant-General Sir Edward Kerrison, Bart., of Oakley Park, Suffolk. It was started from a wood, while a party of gentlemen were shooting, and was first seen by Edward Clarence Kerrison, Esq. Next day, the animal was shot in the parish of Denham, three miles from the place where it was first seen. It is now stuffed, and is in the possession of E. C. Kerrison, Esq., of Brome Hall, Suffolk. It is a full-grown hare. Every portion of the fur is of the finest glossy black, and, saving the eye, there is not a spot of colour to be seen. We have heard of white hares, and grey hares; tawny, red, blue, and fawn-colour; but never before heard of the existence of a black hare. Our acknowledgments are due to the Rev. Richard Cobbold, who has obligingly favoured us with the sketch, taken from the rare specimen at Brome Hall.

BLACK HARE SHOT IN SUFFOLK.

LITERATURE.

ORIGIN, OBJECTS, AND TRANSACTIONS OF THE COLLEGE OF PRECEPTORS.
Rolfe and Fletcher.

The scholastic profession has, for some time past, presented no very promising aspect. What with the proprietary system, already extensively established (although, we believe, attended with somewhat doubtful success), and the Government scheme of a national system in prospect, the position of the private schoolmaster has been rendered more precarious than ever. Hence, it is satisfactory to find that an attempt is now made to raise the respectability of the profession.

The establishment of the College of Preceptors marks a new era in the scholastic world. It promises to ensure the efficient qualification of schoolmasters, without the necessity of a Government normal school. The cultivation of the mind, like the care of the health of the body, ought to be a respectable profession; and there ought, at least, to be the power of procuring—if they are not rendered legally necessary—testimonials of competency, such as would be valued by the public, and would operate as a check to ignorant pretenders. It is the great object of this Institution, in future, to supply such testimonials. Henceforth, therefore, the Preceptor will not be the irresponsible Mr. Anybody, whose sole qualification is that he has been found fit for nothing else; henceforth, the educator of the middle classes must give some account of himself—must give proof of fitness for the duties of his high calling.

In the pamphlet before us it is very justly observed, that "the proprietors of private schools, unlike the medical man or the solicitor, have to encounter no test; the public here cannot generally detect the charlatan; patient study and cultivated talent are here too frequently robbed of their just reward; we cannot say that vested rights are here encroached upon; for the scholastic profession has, unfortunately, no vested rights. In fact, the state of education in this country presents an anomaly of the most extraordinary kind. The bulk of the nation is educated in private schools. These schools are scattered over the face of the country to the amount of many thousands. We perceive a body of men exercising the most important functions; performing the highest, the most essential, the most deeply enduring duties; laying the seeds of science and art; of honesty, morality, and religion, in the youth of the whole country; more especially in that numerous, and, in reality, most important portion of society—the middle class; we see engaged in these pursuits, a body of men, or, perhaps, we should say, a number of men without body, without union, with no common tie, no guarantee against pretenders, against quacks; we behold a nominal profession—a profession not inferior in numbers and importance to any other profession—without any common rule, recognition, regulation, or concentration of power."

To remedy this state of things, a provisional committee, consisting o eleven gentlemen eminent in the scholastic profession, was formed in the month of February last. In June, this Committee convened a general meeting in London, at which the said College was founded, a Council elected, and other necessary measures adopted. Of the six resolutions passed at this meeting, the first is as follows:—"That for the protection of the interests both of the scholastic profession and the public, some proof of qualification both as to the amount of knowledge, and the art of conveying it to others, should be required, from and after a certain time, to be hereafter specified, of all persons who may be desirous of entering the profession," &c.

Another public meeting was held on July 16th, to receive the Report of the Council on the Constitution and Government of the Society, and on the means proposed for carrying their plans into effect. It was then agreed that the persons eligible as members, should be the principals of schools, assistant masters, and private teachers. The Council are to appoint a certain number of members of the College, or others, to form a Board of Examiners, who shall commence at Christmas, 1846, to examine applicants, and grant certificates of qualification, the examination tests o which are to be of three kinds, viz commercial, classical, and mathema tical. There are to be two examinations in the year, viz., at Midsummer and at Christmas, and diplomas granted accordingly.

It may be as well to observe that all the regulations adopted are purely prospective, they are not to operate retrospectively. This principle, in fact, as in the case of the great Medical Reform, which took place thirty-five years since, must be adhered to, otherwise property, in numerous instances, would be affected injuriously. In short, in the words of the pamphlet, "the leading features of the plan are—To form a Royal Incorporated College of Schoolmasters; to give the profession the authority of a legally recognized profession; to render it illegal, from and after a certain time, for any one to open a school without a license from the said College; to require candidates (those who have taken a class degree at the Universities excepted) to undergo examination in the various degrees of professional knowledge."

We perceive that the inaugural address, on the admission of those gentlemen who had presented themselves at the first examination held by this institution, was delivered on the 8th inst., by the Rev. Dr. Wilson, Senior Moderator. After an accurate detail of the progress of civilisation, from the earliest times to the era of the Ptolemies, with a discussion upon the great intellectual powers displayed by the Grecian authors, and the use of geometrical studies for the culture of the reasoning powers. Dr Wilson adverted to the improvements in modern education, while he reprobated the false systems for forcing prematurely forward the youthful mind. He afterwards adverted to the qualifications of the gentlemen who had passed the examination, and expressed the high gratification it had afforded himself and his colleagues of the examining board to witness the great attainments of those who stood highest in the respective lists—specially distinguishing the Rev. G. Pringle, Messrs. Playfair, Bidlake, Morris, Allen, Marshall, and Banister.

NOOKS AND CORNERS OF OLD ENGLAND.

THE PHŒNIX TOWER, CHESTER.

EVERY one who has enjoyed a walk round the Walls of Chester—perhaps, the most perfect specimen of ancient fortification left for our admiration must remember the Phœnix Tower, a lofty structure at the angle adjoining the Abbey Green. Hard by is a meadow called the Justing Croft, where tilts and tournaments were once held; and, in company with the ancient relic we have engraved, stands another tower—that of Walker's Shot Manufactory. Looking "upon this picture and on this" we may, indeed, say "the age of chivalry is gone."

The Phœnix Tower was formerly used by some of the companies of the city, as a chamber for business. Their arms were placed upon it; but, of these, the Phœnix, the crest of the Painters' and Stationers' Company, which was put up in 1613, now only remains.

PHŒNIX TOWER, CHESTER.

The more popular antiquity of the tower is, however, from Charles I. having witnessed from its summit his army, under Sir Marmaduke Langdale, routed by General Pointz, at the battle of Rowton Moor, on September 27, 1645. From its elevation and command of view over the township of Newton, it was formerly called Newton's Tower. It was repaired not many years since, to the credit of the archæological taste of Chester, and the inscription which appears on its front was then placed there.

DEATH OF THE OLDEST LIEUTENANT IN THE NAVY.—At Lancaster, on the 29th of December, 1846, died Lieutenant John Denis De Vitré, R.N., in the 90th year of his age, for many years the oldest lieutenant in her Majesty's service.

DEATH OF COLONEL MALCOLM MACGREGOR. This distinguished officer died a few days since, after a long and eventful life, almost entirely spent in the service of his country.

SURGICAL OPERATIONS WITHOUT PAIN.

In our Journal of last week, we engraved the new Ap[illegible] Rendering Surgical Operations Painless. (See page 30, vol. xxvi.), by the way, [illegible] printed for subpœna ether.) The subject continues to excite the greatest interest both in and out of the profession; and some striking cases have been reported.

On Saturday, the new process was practised at King's College Hospital, at St. Thomas's Hospital, and at the Westminster Hospital, in the presence of numerous medical men. Three patients were operated on successfully at King's College Hospital; at St. Thomas's, also, the finger of a boy was taken off without pain; but at Westminster Hospital, the process was not successful.

On Tuesday, Guy's Hospital was crowded by members of the profession from all parts of the metropolis, and from the country, to witness two operations. The first case was that of a boy, twelve or fourteen years of age, for lithotomy (or stone). When brought into the theatre and bound as usual, Mr. Robinson, of Gower-street, the inventor of the apparatus, offered the pipe for inhalation to the patient. At first he refused to be operated on, on account of the many persons present. By some tact the pipe was introduced, the nose closed, and in two minutes Mr. Robinson said the patient was ready. The operation then commenced, and in one minute more the stone was removed by Mr. Morgan, the operator. The boy was removed to his bed, and visited by the surgeons, and on being shown the stone, "Ah," said he, "you never took that from me, I knows, as I never felt it."

The next case was still more extraordinary:—The patient was a man about [illegible] years of age, suffering from congenital hernia, the operation for which is, perhaps, the most severe and painful of any, twelve or fourteen inches being usually brought into the operating theatre, he readily took the "vapour." From four to five minutes the word was given to Mr. Key, the operator in this instance, by Mr. Robinson, to commence the operation. From the commencement to the completion of the operation, the patient was under the knife from fifteen to twenty minutes. On his recovering, he was asked by those around him if he had felt pain. "I suppose" "Not in the least: he had been looking at those gentlemen outside, up there." He alluded to numbers who could not gain admittance and had availed themselves of the skylight of the theatre. Messrs. Morgan and Key pronounced the result to be most perfect and astounding.

At the Royal Infirmary, at Edinburgh, Dr. Duncan has amputated the limb at the middle of the thigh, after the patient had inhaled the vapour of ether for about two minutes; he then became insensible to pain, and the operation was proceeded with, the anodyne influence being maintained during its progress by the continued administration of the ether. The proceedings did not occupy above ten minutes, and were almost unnoticed by the patient, who, when the insensibility to pain was complete. What formed a very remarkable trait in the operation, was the consciousness on the part of the patient of all that was going on. His eyes continued open, and he constantly observed the instruments put to him, describing, with great calmness, that he felt no pain of any kind.

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE (Friday). Since Monday the fresh arrivals of English wheat have been trifling, but this morning we had several samples of that day's sample; qualities rather fine. Holders were firm, and in most instances demanded higher terms, whilst the millers refused to give, while the demand may be considered steady, at fully previous quotations. The malting and inferior parcels of foreign wheat, in cond. [illegible] per quarter more money, the value of other descriptions being well supported. Free foreign wheat was in good request, at extreme currencies. Barley somewhat neglected by the trade, hence the dull and upward tendency. The supply of malt was readily cleared off, on full as good terms as last advised. Oats were in fair request, at a rise of 6d per quarter. Several parcels of beans changed ownership, at 6d to 1s per quarter. Peas and flour without alteration. Floating cargoes of Egyptian beans sold, at 44s to 45s, freight and insurance. Indian corn was in request, at from 35s to 36s for Galatz, and from 34s to 35s for Odessa, cost, freight and insurance.

ARRIVALS.—English Wheat, 2643; barley, 1011; malt, 3450; oats, 430. Irish: Wheat —; barley, —; malt, —; oats, —. Foreign: Wheat, 1; barley, 10,730; malt, —; oats, 1960. Flour, 2170 sacks; 2490 barrels.

English.—Wheat, Essex and Kent, red, 60s to 67s; ditto white, 74s to 84s; Norfolk and Suffolk, red, 58s to 64s; white, 74s to 80s; rye, 42s to 44s; grinding barley, 19s to 23s; malting, 28s to 30s, malting date, 27s to 29s; Lincoln and Norfolk malt, 72s to 76s; brown oats, 20s to 22s, Kingston and Ware, 22s to 23s; Chevalier, 23s to 25s; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire feed oats, 17s to 18s; potato ditto, 19s to 20s; Youghal and Cork, 20s to 21s; ditto black, 19s to 20s; tick beans, 34s to 36s; tick beans, new, 44s to 45s; ditto old, 42s to —s; grey peas, 40s to 42s; maple, 42s to 43s; white, 42s to 44s; boilers, 46s to 48s; new, 42s to 44s per quarter.

Foreign.—Free to 48s; Galatz, 43s to 45s; Taganrog, 42s to 43s; Marianopoli, 42s to 43s; Egyptian, 43s to 45s per quarter. English Country Flour, American, 30s to 32s, Baltic, —s to —s per barrel.

The Seed Market.—A few parcels of clover and Trefoil seed changed hands on speculation, at full prices. Linseed is unaltered. Canary and all other kinds [illegible] and rape cake in moderate request, but all other kinds [illegible] and rape cake in request and steady, at extreme prices.

Linseed, English, sowing, 50s to 52s; Baltic, crushing, 44s 6d to 45; Mediterranean and Odessa, 43s to 43s. Hempseed, 30s to 34s per quarter. Coriander, 15s per cwt. Rapeseed, £30 to £32 per last. Mustard-seed, 5s to 10s; white ditto, 8s to 10s. Tares, 5s 6d to 6s 6d per bushel. English Rapeseed, new, £24 to £25 per last of 1ea quarters. Linseed cakes, £10 10s to £11 10s; ditto, foreign, £9 10s to £10 10s per 1000. Rapeseed cakes, £7 6s to £7 7s per ton. Canary, 55s to 62s per quarter. English Clover-seed, 70s to 74s per cwt., red, —s to —s; white, —s to —s; new, —s to —s. Foreign, red, —s to —s; extra, —s; white —s to —s; extra, —s per cwt.

Bread.—The prices of wheaten bread in the metropolis are from 9½d to 10½d; of household ditto, 8d to 9d per 4lb loaf.

Imperial Weekly Average.—Wheat, 60s 10d; barley, 40s 5d; oats, 27s 10d; rye, 46s 6d; beans, 47s 9d; peas, 47s 2d.

The Six Weeks Average.—Wheat, 58s 1d; barley, 42s 2d; oats, 26s 10d; rye, 44s 2d; beans, 45s 7d; peas, 45s 4d.

Duties on Foreign Corn.—Wheat, 4s 0d; barley, 2s 0d; oats, 1s 8d; rye, 7s 0d; beans, 3s 0d; peas, 3s 0d.

Flour.—Further advanced rates have been paid for this article. Low white Ranges, 29s 0d to 34s; and fine 32s to 35s per cwt.

Hops. This article has advanced 20 per cwt.

Provisions.—The best qualities of this market are in steady request, at full prices; but all other kinds have declined 5s per cwt. Carlow, landed, 94s to 98s; Carrick, 94s to 97s; Cork, 92s to 94s; Waterford, 85s to 88s; and Limerick, 87s to 89s per cwt. Foreign butter is in dull sale, and is 2s per cwt. lower. The best Dorset, in the factor's hands, is firmly supported at 112s to 76s per cwt. English butter is to 8s cheaper. Fine Dorset, 104s to 104s; middling, 96s to 98s per cwt. Fine Friesland, 92s to 92s per cwt. In bacon, only a moderate business has been done, at late rates. Prime small, singed sides, 60s to 62s; and heavy, 56s to 60s per cwt. On board, for extreme forward delivery, the demand is dong, at from 50s to 52s; but little is passing; but lard is firm, at 72s to 76s for blacksood, and 64s to 68s per cwt. for kegs. Hershel beef and pork, full higher.

Hay and Straw.—Monday hay, £3 3s to £3 15s; clover ditto, £3 5s to £4 10s; and straw, £1 5s to £1 12s per load.

Tallow.—This market is firm, at a further rise in value of 3d per cwt. P.Y.C., on the spot, 41s 6d to 42s 0d. Town tallow, 38s net cash.

Hops. Friday.—We had a fair average supply of all kinds of hops on sale here to-day. [illegible] Mid. and [illegible] steady, at fully Monday's quotations. We [illegible] sales were moderate. Sussex, Wild, 11 [illegible] 3d; 259 do., 12 [illegible] 5s; Farnham, Wild, 11 [illegible] 5s; Holy- [illegible] sheep we were scantily supplied; owing to which, the sale for that description of stock was [illegible] to-day's quotations. We [illegible] 52 2d [illegible] 4s. About 4 [illegible] clearance was effected. The wet trade was [illegible] from all [illegible] value of 2s per [illegible]

For 8lb. to stale the offal:—Coarse and inferior beasts, 3s 2d to 3s 6d.; second quality ditto, 3s 8d to 3s 10d.; prime ditto, 3s 10d to 4s; large oxen, 4s 2d to 4s 4d; prime Scots, 4s 4d; Inferior sheep, 2s 8d to 3s 10d; second quality ditto, 4s 0d to 4s 2d; prime coarse-woolled ditto, 4s 4d to 4s 6d; prime South Down ditto, 4s 8d to 4s 10d; large lambs, 5s 0d to 5s 4d; prime small ditto, 4s 10d to 5s 2d; large hogs, 3s 8d to 4s 0d; neat small porkers, 4s 8d to 4s 10d. Suckling calves, 3s 8d to 4s 4d; quarter old store pigs, 1l 1s to 1l 5s.

Beasts, 622, sheep, 20; shoep, 2490, calves, 120; pigs, 800.

Newgate and Leadenhall (Friday). We had a steady trade here to-day, at full prices.

For 8lb. by the carcase.—Inferior beef, 2s 8d to 2s 10d; in doing ditto 3s 0d to 3s 2d; prime large ditto, 3s 2d to 3s 4d; prime small ditto, 3s 6d to 3s 8d; large pork, 3s 6d to 4s 0d; inferior mutton, 3s 4d to 3s 8d; middling ditto, 3s 10d to 4s 2d; prime ditto, 4s 4d to 4s 6d; veal, 3s 10d to 4s 10d; small pork, 4s 6d to 4s 10d. ROBT. HERBERT.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From Our City Correspondent.)

In the financial article of last week, "attention was directed to the embarrassed state of the Continental Money Markets," and the commencement of its operation upon our own currency was instanced in the necessity which impelled the Bank of France to apply here, as a last resource, for a supply of specie, to enlarge the basis upon which increased issues might be made. Although the Directors of the Bank of England gratified the application, a grave doubt was excited that the wants of the Continent, operating in the manner detailed in last week's impression, might produce an inconvenient contraction of our own currency. To check, therefore, whatever tendency to the relief of the Continent, the privileged talents here which the low rate of interest rendered highly probable, and which must have been transmitted in specie, the Directors of the Bank of England, on Thursday, issued a notice that the minimum rate of discount would be raised to 3½ per cent. It is highly probable that the Bank of France will follow the example, and thus limit their issues. Such a result would have the effect of paralysing all speculative operations, as well as the trade in stock and shares. This, at a period when so much distress prevails, is peculiarly unfortunate, but, as a measure of precaution, cannot be objected to. The advances on the part of the Bank of England to the commercial world require them for depending with increasing confidence on the return of peace. The Bank has, in all probability, will notremain long without the addition of another one-half per cent.

The English Market betrayed weakness on Monday. Consols closing at 93¾, notwithstanding some extensive purchases on behalf of railway companies. Consols underwent a further decline took place on Tuesday; and, on Wednesday, 93¾ to ¾ was the closing quotation. When it became known that the rate of interest had been advanced by the Bank of England, the Funds, as well as railway shares, fell. Consols were done as low as 93⅜, but afterwards slightly rallied. Exchequer Bills, which had improved at the commencement of the week, from a belief that the railway companies would require them for depositing with the Parliamentary Committees, yielded towards the close, quoting about 10 to 6 premium. Bank Stock is rather better, the following list showing the last quotations. Bank Stock, [illegible] Reduced, [illegible] Consols, [illegible] Consols for the account, [illegible] Reduced-quarter per Cent. Annuities, 99; Long Annuities, [illegible]; India Stock, 262½; India Bonds, £1000, 18s; Consols for the opening, Exchequer Bills, £1000, 9s to 6s premium.

The Foreign Market opened heavily, and prices have generally declined. Spanish five per Cents., on Monday quoted 25¾; the Three per Cents., 35¾. Both Stocks receded about a quarter per cent on Tuesday, and have not materially varied since. Mexican has declined; and, as the account has been rather a heavy one, arising from the fluctuations, it was regarded with some interest. However, it was settled on Thursday without any particular difficulty, but prices receded to 23¾. The protest of the Committee of Portuguese Bondholders against the reduction of the deamea, or two-tenths, from the dividend, has only elicited the following curt reply from the Ambassador, to whom it was enclosed.

"Portuguese Legation, Jan 8, 1847

"Sir, —As I do not feel myself justified in taking cognisance of the [illegible] sent me in your letter of this date, I beg leave to return the same enclosed.

"I have the honour to be, Sir, your very obedient servant,

"J. Donnison, Esq., &c. (Signed) MONCORVO."

The bondholders are very indignant at the coolness of this proceeding; but he attempt at any justification of such a measure is quite impossible; perhaps, therefore, the Baron's reply saved a lengthy correspondence ending in nothing. The Bonds have receded to 36, notwithstan ding a rumour that Baring Brothers and Co. have guaranteed the next dividend. Dutch Stock has slightly retrograded, as the Market closes heavily at the following quotations:—Mexican 5 per Cents., [illegible]; Portuguese Bonds, 4 per Cent., 36; Russian Bonds, 111¾; Spanish Bonds, [illegible]; Ditto Active, 19; Ditto Deferred, 17; Ditto 3 per Cent., [illegible]; Belgian 4½ per Cent., 99¾; Dutch 2½ per Cent., 58¾; Ditto 4 per Cent Certificates, 92¾; Ditto Bonds, 92.

The Share Market has been inactive, and towards the close of the week a downward tendency was evident. Prices, it will be seen by the following list of [illegible] last dealt in, are generally a point lower: Aberdeen, 24¾; Birm. and Oxfd. Junc., 11¾; Birm., Wolverton, and Dudley, 5¾ pm.; Birm., Wolverh., and Stour Valley, 3¾ pm.; Bristol and Exeter, 73; Buckinghamshire, ¾ pm.; Caledonian, 28¾; Chester and Holyhead, 25¾; Cornwall, 15; Direct Northern (No. 3, Eastern Counties, 23¾; Ditto New, 21¾; Ditto Deferred, 17; Ditto 3 per Cent., [illegible]; East Lancashire, 17¾; Ditto, New, 9¾; Ditto, ditto, New Scrip, 2¾; Edinburgh and Glasgow, 78; Ditto, Half Shares, 24¾; Ditto, Quarter Shares, 12¾; Great Northern (London and York Rail.), 2¾; Ditto Direct Northern Rail., 4¾; Great Western, 131¾; Ditto, Quarter Shares, 20¾; Ditto, Fifths, 30; Huddersfield and Manchester Extension, 4¾; Lancaster and Carlisle, New, 10; Leeds and Bradford, 78¾; Leeds and Thirsk, 19; Lon., New, 3¾; Ditto, Fifths, 10; per Ct., 8; Liverpool, Manchester, and Newcastle Junction, 2¾; London and Blackwall, New, 5¾; London, Brighton, and South Coast, 57; London and North Western, 184½; Do., Quarters, 46; Do., New, 14¾; Ditto, Fifths, 10; London and South Western Scrip, 5¾; London and York Scrip, 3¾; Lynn and Dereham, 1½; Manchester and Leeds, 111; Ditto Half Shares, 51; Ditto Quarters, 19; Ditto Fifths, 10¾; Midland, 104¾; Ditto New, 87¾; Ditto New, [illegible]; Newcastle and Berwick, 80¾; Norfolk, 19¾; Ditto Half Shares, 11¾; Ditto Extension, 6¾; Northern Counties Union, 14; North British, 33; Ditto Quarters, 8¾; Ditto Extension, 7¾; South Eastern, 19; North Staffordshire, 8¾; Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton, 12¾; Scottish Central, 22¾; Scottish Midland, 14; Shrewsbury and Birmingham, 4¾; Ditto, Class B., 2¾; South Devon, 3¾; South East and Dover, 8¾; Ditto, No. 2, 1¾; Ditto, No. 4, 4¾; South Yorkshire, Doncaster, and Goole, 9¾; Taw Vale Extension, 3¾; West Riding Union, 2 pm.; Windsor Staines, and South Western, 2 pm.; York and Newcastle, 3¾; Ditto, New, 1¾; Midland, 104¾; Ditto New, 87¾; Ditto New, [illegible]; Ditto 4 Shares, 46¾; Ditto Selby, 92; Ditto Extension, 38¾; Ditto, Preference, 13¾; Ditto East and west Riding Extension, 18¾; Boulogne and Amiens, 1¾; Ditto Extension, 7¾; Ditto Tubize, 1¾; North Staffordshire, 8¾; Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton, 12¾; Orleans and Bordeaux, 7¾ xd.; Paris and Lyons, 7¾; Sambre and Meuse, 4¾; West Flanders, [illegible].

SATURDAY MORNING.—There was a slight rally in Consols yesterday, the Market closing at 93¾ ¾ for Money, and 93¾ 93 for Account. Although the news from Portugal was very favourable, the Stock receded in price, closing at 36. It is said that the jobbers are principally sellers. The Share Markets was heavy, with a tendency to decline.

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

TUESDAY, JAN. 12.

WHITEHALL, JAN. 11.

The Queen has been pleased to appoint Sir John Fox Boyce Grant, Bart., to be one of the Board of Supervision for the Relief of the Poor in Scotland in the room of Sir George M'Pherson Grant, Bart., deceased.

The Queen has also been pleased to appoint Charles Samuel Gray, Esq., to the office of one of the Clerks of her Majesty's Signet, in the room of John Gage, Esq., deceased.

MEMBER returned to serve in the present parliament

County of Worcester (Eastern Division).—George Rushout, Esq., Captain in her Majesty's 1st Regiment of Life Guards, in the room of John Barnaby, Esq., deceased.

COMMISSION'S signed by the Lord Lieutenant.

East York Militia.—John Wood, Esq., to be Captain, vice Shore, resigned; Marmaduke Jovard Grimston, Esq., to be Captain, vice Clubley, resigned.

WHITEHALL, DEC 19.

The Lord Chancellor has appointed Robert Vinar, of the City of Bath, Gent., to be a Master Extraordinary in the High Court of Chancery.

BANKRUPTS.

J. PARSONS, Medway-street, Westminster, baker. J. T. HOSKINGS, Vanbrugh House, Blackheath, Kent, wine-merchant. W. SMITH, Bury, Lancashire, draper. J. C. WHITEHEAD, H. B. ELWORTHY, Bridgwater, Somerset, cooper. J. PICKARD, Jun., Exeter, baker. J. GRIMMIT, jun., Liverpool, shipwright. J. WHITE, Bilston, Wednesbury, coal-owner.

SCOTCH SEQUESTRATIONS.

P. SANDEMAN, Edinburgh upholsterer. A. ABERCROMBY, Aberdeen, insurance broker. D. FRASER, Edinburgh, glass-merchant.

WHITEHALL, DEC 19

FRIDAY, JAN. 15.

LORD GREAT CHAMBERLAIN'S OFFICE, HOUSE OF LORDS, JAN. 14.

All Processes, on summoning their intention of being present on the occasion of the opening of Parliament, on Tuesday, the 19th instant, will have places reserved for them in the House of Lords, if the summons be left at this office before five o'clock on Thursday, the 18th inst. No lady can be admitted into the body of the House, except in full dress. No strangers will be admitted [illegible] by a ticket from the Lord [illegible] Chamberlain.

WILLOUGHBY DE BRESSY, G.C.

WHITEHALL, JAN. 15.

The Queen has been pleased to present the Rev. Charles Wordsworth, M.A., to the rectory of Tempsford in the county of Bedford and diocese of Ely, void by the death of the Rev. Edward Daugarny.

WAR OFFICE, JAN 15.

Royal Horse Guards: Cornet and Sub-Lieut. W. Smith, Adjutant, with the rank of Lieutenant, vice Brant.

7th Light Dragoons: Lieut. Sir A. Chichester, Bart., to be Captain, vice Preston; Cornet W. R. C. Cooke to be Lieutenant, vice Chichester; the Hon. C. Harbord to be Cornet, vice Cooke.

1st Foot: Ensign R. J. Aytoun to be Lieut., vice Campbell; W. R. M'K. Kennedy to be Ensign, vice Aytoun. 2nd: Assist. Surg. S. S. Docker to be Assist.-Surg., vice J. pp. 9: Ensign Hon. H. Hamilton to be Lieut., vice Bowyer; Ensign W. Gall to be Ensign, vice Hudson. 16th: To be Ensigns—J. E. Bowdoller, vice Pearson; J. Canavan, vice Irwin; A. Kinmer, vice Maclaverty. 19th: Lieut. J. Bell to be Capt., vice Hall; Lieut. Hon. F. Strutt, vice Pitzgerald; F. Hobbs to be Second Lieut. vice Baddeley. 28th: Capt. T. Deacon to be Capt., vice Tinling; J. Wilson to be Lieut., vice Deacon; Ensign J. C. Hawkins to be Lieut., vice Ensign vice Sharpe. 30th: W. Shiel to be Ensign, vice Shipley. 36th: Capt. W. J. Yonge to be Capt. vice Lowe. 37th: Ensign H. Hay, vice W. J. Hawker. 39th: Capt. E. M. Love to be Captain, vice [illegible] 40th: Serg.-Maj. J. Grime to be Ensign, vice [illegible]

[illegible] Ensign H. J. A. Karslake to be Captain, vice [illegible]

[illegible] Ensign [illegible] Brett to be Lieutenant, vice [illegible]

Ceylon Rifle Regiment—Second Lieut. G. R. Dwyer to be First Lieutenant, vice Deane.

Royal Canadian Rifle Regiment: Ensign R. Jarvis to be Lieutenant, vice Gray; W. J. Britain to be Ensign, vice Jarvis.

BREVET

Captain T. Deacon to be Major in the Army. The name of the following officer was omitted in the list of those promoted by Brevet in the Gazette of 10th November 1846:—Captain H. P. Bourchier to be Major in the Army.

BANKRUPTS.

A. RAINY, Argyll-street, Piccadilly, cabinet-maker. G. M. MABSON, Hackney-road, Middlesex, potato dealer. R. J. TWEEL, Cambridge, victualler. G. PARK, Bury street, Westminster, [illegible]. J. M. and E. WALLIS, Gracechurch-street, [illegible]. T. and J. ROBERTS, Southampton, grocer. J. PLEWS, Stone-street, Bedford-square, timber merchant. [illegible] North [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Pictures. L. JIMMIS, Worcester, Lynn, Staffordshire common brewer. J. HANCOCK, W. [illegible] Stockport, Cheshire, [illegible]. J. HOLDEN, Manchester, silk-dresser. G. MOSS, F.Y. Bakewell, Derbyshire, [illegible].

SCOTCH SEQUESTRATIONS.

J. G. TURNBAR, Cotton [illegible]. W. J. SMITH, Aberdeen, ship-owner.

ERRATUM.—The name of "John Grant," amongst the Scotch Sequestrations last Friday, should have been "Grant, Gray, and Co."

BIRTHS.

At Lasham, Surrey, the Countess of Limerick, of a son.—At Kirkcudbright on the 20th ult., the Hon. Thomas M'Hoy, of a daughter.—At Bath, the wife of Sir Edward Nowell, Bart., of Otho Trevelyan, Esq., of a son.—At Chicksands Priory, the Lady Elizabeth Osborn, of a daughter.

MARRIAGES.

At St. George's Hanover-square, John Hamilton Gray, Esq., M.P., to Maria Henrietta, eldest daughter of Evan Hamilton Baillie, Esq.—At Bath, the Rev. Richard Nicholson Wood, M.A., to Mary Frances, eldest daughter of Admiral Sir John Ommaney.—At the Chapel Royal, St. Peter's, Pimlico, Lieut.-Col. Augustus Frederick Liardet, of the Bengal Engineers, to Frances Emily, only daughter of the late John Addington, Esq.—At Bath, the Rev. Edward Hughes, Rector of Llanfair, Denbighshire, to Matilda, second daughter of J. W. Cox, Esq., of Grafton-street, Fitzroy-square.

DEATHS.

In Burton-street, Eaton-square, Eliza, widow of the late Robert Winter, Esq.—At Ingrosmore, William Bridgeman, Esq., F.R.S., F.A.S., in the 85th year of his age.—At Hampton, Devonshire, Thomas Bamfield, Esq., in his 85th year.—In New Notes-street, Commercial-road, Mrs. Ann Davidson, in the 85th year of her age.—In Sloane-street, Mrs. Hunt, in her 90th year.—In Warwick-lane, Mr. Thomas Bird, aged 93.—At Bath, the Rev. Edward Otho Trevelyan, Esq., of a son.—At Chicksands Priory, the Lady Elizabeth Osborn, of a daughter.

On the 16th inst. William Wood, Esq., in the 82d year of his age, survivine his wife only three months.—At Naples, aged 24, Edward Hall Hughes, Esq., M.D., Physician to the Presidency, natural Priddle East, of Sussex-street, Bermuda-square.—At Banbury, the Rev. John Shrubsall, L.L.D.—Suddenly, aged 72, on the 27th December, at Dublin, Mr. Edward Byrne, Charles, youngest son of the late William Steele Nicholson, Esq., of Ballew, in the county of Down.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA, COVENT GARDEN.—The Nobility, Gentry, and Public are respectfully informed that the NEW THEATRE WILL OPEN the first week in APRIL, for the performance of the LYRICAL DRAMA, on a scale of [illegible] never before engaged in the management of any theatre in London. It will include the names of the most celebrated artists. The prospectus for the arrangements of the season will be issued in due course. Mr Bunn, Director.

ANILLO'S ROYAL AMPHITHE ATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. W. BATTY.—Under the Patronage of her most gracious Majesty the Queen and Royal Family.—Triumphant success of the Christmas Novelties.—Upwards of 20,000 persons have visited this establishment during the present week.—Engagements for magnificence and effects. The house are nightly filled with brilliant assem blage of rank, fashion, and beauty.—On Monday, and during the week, the Grand Equestrian Novelties of Crown, and a host of fascinations. MONDAY, JAN 18, and during the Week, 60th Night of THE DEMON OF THE AIR AND THE TWELVE WISHES. Entire change of SCENERY in THE CIRCLE. 29th Night of the highly-successful Comic Fairy Pantomime of THE FORTY THIEVES.—At Hengler's All Saints and the Regent Cave. Box-office open from Eleven till Five. Early application is recommended for securing places in the Dress Circle.—Acting and Stage Manager, Mr. W. H. Broadfoot. Tuesday, for the Benefit of a Charitable Institution.

ETHIOPIAN SERENADERS.—MECHANICS' INSTITUTION, CHANCERY-LANE.—This Co stituted, ETHIOPIAN SERENADERS.—PELL, JAMESON, & WELLS [illegible] Saturday Evenings, at Eight o'Clock, in the Theatre)—will give a GRAND EVENING ENTERTAINMENT in the Theatre of the above Institution, on MONDAY, the 18th inst., at Eight o'Clock. Doors open at Half-past Seven. Tickets, 1s. 6d.; Reserved Seats, 2s. 6d. To be had at the Library of the Institution.

"WEIPPERT'S SOIREES DANSANTES," PRINCESS'S CONCERT ROOMS. On MONDAY, JANUARY 4th, and Every Monday.—A Subscriber of Two Guineas is entitled to a Double Transferable Ticket for Six Nights, and the Entertainments will commence at any Monday. The Pelican Band consists of the same Artistes that attend her Majesty's State Balls and Concerts, &c. &c. Conductor, Mr. Weippert; leader, Signor Sorbin. cornet-à-pistons, Mr. Handley; sylophone, Mr. Pompee. M. C., Mr. Gorrie. Commence at Ten o'Clock. Tickets, Seven Shillings each, at Weippert's Quadrille Office, 91 Soho-square.

NEW ARRANGEMENTS.—DIVISION OF PRICES.—The GLOSSOLOGUE, ONE SHILLING.

Panorama of London and Museum, 1s.; Conservatories, Swiss Cottage, Mont Blanc, &c. &c., 1s.; Stalactite Caverns at Adelsberg 1s. The Prize Cartoons on view, no extra charge.

EVENING.—Panorama, Swiss Cottage, Conservatories, Stalactite Caverns, Classic Ruins, Swiss Cottage, Mont Blanc, and Torrent, 1s.; Marvellous Performances of Legerdemain by Night, with a Magnificent Display of Fireworks, 1s. extra; Stalactite Caverns, 1s. extra. Music from Two till Dusk, and at Eight till Half-past Ten.

Family tickets for four persons and upwards, to view the whole, 2s. 6d. each person, may be had from ten till Four, at the Conservatories, and at the principal music warehouses and libraries. Children Half-price, Day and Evening. Open from Seven till Half-past Ten.

The whole Exhibition designed by Mr. W. Bradwell.

WALHALLA, LEICESTER-SQUARE (late Miss Linwood's Gallery). Under the patronage of the Nobility, Gentry, and several distinguished Members of the Royal Academy, the GRAND PANORAMIC ENGRAVED TABLEAUX VIVANS. A splendid Series of Novelties will be produced during the week, and continuation of the Grand Mythological Spectacle, the Apotheosis of Napoleon, and Associated Groups of Vestas Queen Christmas in the Olden Time, Four Seasons, and the much admired Tableaux of a Grecian Assembly. Music, &c., have been received with acclamations of delight, by crowded and select Assemblies to the Stalls and Reserved Seats, Half-Price. Each Tableau accompanied with Descriptive Music, by Band of first-rate talent, conducted by Signor Reil. The Arrangements and Instruction by Messrs. Adams, of the Royal Gardens, Vauxhall. Morning Performance at 3; Evening at Half-past 8. Stalls, 3s.; Reserved Seats, 2s.; Promenade, 1s.

BRUNETTI'S BEAUTIFUL and ORIGINAL MODEL of the CITY of JERUSALEM, illustrated by the Clergy, and recommended unto the public, as in the days of Our Redeemer.—The labour of years, from Josephus, the Bible, and every authentic ancient record—the only model of a thousands—Nobility, Clergy, Gentry, Travellers to the Holy Land, Literati, &c. &c.—His Grace the Duke of Leinster, Earl and Countess of Jersey, Lord Brougham, Lord Ingestre, Lord Bexley, Rev. Dr. Hawtrey, Lord Nugent, Rev. W. Cowper, Bishop of Landaff, Rev. W. W. Evans, Rev. T. K. Major, D.D. Rev. W. Hayes and family, Rev. B. J. May and family, Mr. J. S. Buckingham, Mr. Warburton, Author of "The Crescent and the Cross," &c. &c. "Exhibited at 5 East-place, Kennington. "Without exception one of the most ingenious and interesting models ever exhibit"—Morning Herald. "Most beautiful and splendid"—Sacred History.—Athen. "Nothing but enthusiasm, linked to genius, could have produced such a work."—Liverpool Journal. "A model which must recommend itself to the clergy, and ensure to the gifted modeller the praise and pa[illegible] he so richly deserves"—Dublin Warder. "Mr Brunetti deserves appreciation unbounded, and patronage almost unlimited."—Sun. His work is one of the most beautiful, and interesting sights that have ever graced the Metropolis. We counsel all to go and see it."—Observer. Admission of the whole for the week of the Panorama.—Journey to Thy good will, O Lord, deal favourably with Zion, that the walls of Jerusalem may be built up."—Psalm—XLI, Piccadilly, from 10 to 5. Open for Admission, 1s.; Children and Schools, 6d.; Illustrated every hour. Private schools free. Mr. Brunetti's other Model of Ancient Jerusalem is at present being exhibited in Manchester. It is necessary to state this, as no attempts have been made to pirate the work, by which the public may be deceived in the provinces.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION. — Professor BACHHOFFNER'S GUN COTTON, and other Explosive Compounds, with brilliant Experiments, delivered daily by Professor Bachhoffner, including the Patent of Messrs Cook and Wheatstone, in use on the railways, and the more recent Patents of Messrs Newton, Gaudin, and Varrentrapp. Models and Specimens of Dr. Ure's Safety Lamp, and ELECTRO-MAGNETISM, exhibited by the OXY-HYDROGEN MICROSCOPE, with the DESTRUCTIVE INSECTS, magnified by the Solar Microscope. The DISSOLVING VIEWS, including a BEAUTIFUL VIEW OF NEW DISSOLVING VIEWS. The DIVING BELL and DIVER, with EXPERIMENTS. The PHYTOSCOPE. New Arrangements, &c. &c.—Admission, 1s.; Schools Half-price.

Just Published, Price Sixpence, NO. I. OF

THE MAN IN THE MOON;

Principally Review and Bulletin of New Magazines, New Books, New Plays, New Jokes, and New Nonsense, being AN ACT for the AMALGAMATION OF THE BROAD GAGGE OF FANCY with the NARROW GAGGE OF FACT, into the GRAND GENERAL AMUSEMENT JUNCTION RAILWAY.

EDITED BY ALBERT SMITH AND ANGUS B. REACH,

With Cuts by PHIZ, BEARDSLEY, KIRK, and THOMAS.

London: CLARK, Warwick-lane, and all Booksellers; and sold at every Railway station in the Kingdom.

PRONOUNCED BY ALL THE PRESS TO BE THE BEST ALMANACK Now Ready, the Fiftieth Thousand, with Corrections,

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK, FOR 1847

Is a Natural History by Mr. Sandeman. The Astronomical Department under the superintendence of Mr. Henry Sadler, Esq., of Woolwich. Heavenly Bodies splendid Engravings of Natural History Sports Historical Events, and Astronomical Appearances of the Months of the Year very remarkable Days, with Anecdotes of Celebrated Men. Illustrated Magnetic Variations of the Compass; and all that can be desired or expected in an Almanack. Price 6d. plain, 1s. gilt edges.

Published at the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS Office, 198, Strand. Sold by all Booksellers

The Art of Health, Happiness, and Long Life, in Two Volumes, 1s. each; by post, in stamps

WHAT TO EAT, DRINK, and AVOID; (with Diet Tables for all Complaints.) HOW TO BE HAPPY; on Regimen, Expedience as I Found It. By SCOTT. JAY, Esq., M.R.C.S. L.S.A., &c.—Scott's Hydropathic Hotel, Malvern-house, Malvern Wells, Worcestershire, and Author of "Hydropathy, M.D." 6 S. C.S.A., &c.—Scott-wood, 25, Pall-mall-east; and the Author, 19, Argyll-place, Regent-street, and [illegible]

MR. COLES ON DEFORMITIES OF THE SPINE AND THE PRONE SYSTEM.

Just Published, Price 1s. 6d., by SCOTT, JAY, M.R.C.S. L.S.A., &c.—Scott-wood, 25, Pall-mall-east; and the Author, 19, Argyll-place, Regent-street, and [illegible]

MR. COLES ON DEFORMITIES OF THE SPINE AND THE PRONE SYSTEM.

GUIDE TO THE USE OF THE PATENT ORTHOPEDIC SOFA AND IMPROVED PRONE COUCH, whereby the Prone System of Treating Diseases of the Spine, and Paralysis, can be effectively employed without a necessity for the patient leaving home, school, or the superintendence of his family. By JOHN COLES, Esq., M.R.C.S., Senior Surgeon to the Vorna Charity, and Surgeon to the Asylum for Lostorities in London.

Published by SCOTT, JAY, 19, Argyll-place, Regent-street.

COOTE'S NEW QUADRILLES, Nos. 8, 38.; Duets, 4s.; from Edward Loder's Grand Opera, the NIGHT DANCE, 3s. which, after forty nights' performance, still continues its most triumphant career. The most attractive new Ky of the Season, containing a complete selection of all the Gems of Operas, Loder's "Night Dancers," the beauties of the opera are pleasantly blended by the arranger, who is the conductor of the Drury-lane Opera Band. Duets from the Night Dancers, 4s. Wallace's Maritana, 3s. Balfe's Bohemian Girl, 3s. Duets from Loder's

This day is published, in Imperial 8vo., price 10s. 6d., elegantly bound,

ST. SYLVESTER'S DAY, and Other Poems. By EUPHRASIA FANNY HAWORTH. With Illustrative Sketches, by the Author.
London: FEEDHAM BOOTH, 168, Strand.

COINS of the ANCIENT ROMAN EMPERORS: History of the Succession of the Ancient Roman Emperors, with the Prices of their Coins, tariffed for Purchase, their Rarity and Merit — is just published by P. W. JESSE, Dealer in Ancient Coins, 69, Strand, London, price 1s.; 8 post. 1s 2d. Coins sent by post Bought, Catalogues &c.

J[illegible] Dublin, and Derby.

CATHOLIC CHRISTIAN'S GUIDE to the Right Use of CHRISTIAN PSALMODY, and of the PSALTER [illegible] DERBY, small 8vo., dedicated to A. Welby Pugin, Esq. Cloth extra [illegible]

NEW SONG. "LIGHT OF HEART AM I." Cavatina, Miss H[illegible] the Poetry from the "Forget Me Not" for 1847, written by [illegible] N. Esq., the music composed by JOHN BARNETT. Price 2s. [illegible] London: Hime Holborn, and to be had of all music-sellers, or post-free, by sending [illegible] Publisher.

THE WELCOME GUEST OF EVERY HOME.—THE FAMILY HERALD, a [illegible] Journal, which is the most entertaining, the most [illegible] popular, and unquestionably the cheapest periodical ever published for One Penny. A single perusal will [illegible] to treat it with respect and to indulge a goodness, worth being [illegible] Also with every Number will be given, gratuitously, a Sheet of Music, [illegible] Weekly, One Penny; Monthly, Sixpence. And sold [illegible]

THE NEW NOVELS.
Just Ready, in 3 vols., post 8vo.,
TEMPTATION AND ATONEMENT.
By MRS. GORE,
Authors of "Mothers and Daughters," &c.
Also,
STRAWBERRY HILL, an Historical Novel. By the Author of "Shakspeare and his Friends," "Maids of Honour," &c. 3 vols.
"[illegible] Heroes, Patriots, Catilines, Richards of York! Here is a [illegible] of all the Walpole."
Athenæum.
FATHER EUSTACE; a Tale of the Council. By Mrs. TROLLOPE. 3 vols
"This work will awaken eager curiosity in certain circles. It will strike people with dismay; it will confirm the creed of some, and disturb the opinions of others."—Atlas.
HENRY COLBURN, Publisher, 13, Great Marlborough-street.

MINERALOGY.—KING'S COLLEGE, LONDON.—Mr. [illegible] MINERALOGY, and of the [illegible] ECONOMY, by extension, [illegible] Lectures, [illegible] Fee, [illegible]
R. W. JELF, D.D., Principal.

LESSONS in MILLINERY and DRESS MAKING.—MRS. [illegible], 24, Argent-street, two doors from Margaret-street, Sole Inventress of the Measure capable of correct knowledge of Cutting, Fitting, and Executing in the most [illegible] Style, [illegible] Lessons, per One Guinea. The correctness of this method be fully ascertained [illegible] to pupils.—Apprentices and Improvers Wanted.—Mourning Rooms.—Paper Model [illegible]

BALANCE IVORY TABLE KNIVES.—R. and J. SLACK, 336, Strand, opposite Somerset House, call attention to the quality of their Cutlery, for which their house has been celebrated upwards of a quarter of a century. Balance Ivory Table Knives, 10s. per dozen. Also, their matchless Nickel Silver, the only metal that will retain its colour in use. Their Catalogue, containing 200 engravings, and prices, gratis, or sent free to any part.

A AMERICAN SODA BISCUITS.—The only shop in England where they can be had fresh is at WEBBER'S, 81, London-street, [illegible] the Mansion House. Also, his new Valentia at 1s 6d.; Pressanie, 1s 6d; [illegible] Wafer, 1s 6d; and an infinite variety of Wine Biscuits, at 1s per lb. Madeira, Devonshire, and Scotch Cakes, fresh daily. Soups—Mock Turtle, Ox-tail, Gibier, &c., at 8d. a quart.

LEA and PERRINS' highly-esteemed WORCESTERSHIRE SAUCE, for Fish, Roast Meat, Steaks, Chops, Gravies, Game, and Soup, may be obtained universally from the Italian Warehousemen and other dealers in sauces throughout the kingdom. LEA and PERRINS upon the wrapper and [illegible], without which it cannot be genuine.—
[illegible] Proprietors, Lea and Perrins, 5, Wych-street, Oxford-street, London, and 68, Broad-street, Worcester. Messrs. Barclay and Sons, Messrs. Crosse and Blackwell, London; and generally by the Oilmen throughout the World.

PRESERVATIVE TOOTH PASTE.—The effects [illegible] astonishing upon Discoloured Teeth, Diseased Gums, and Offensive Breath. Its superior [illegible] has induced to offer the above to the public at [illegible] present solicitation of many [illegible], who have used it for years. Prepared and Sold by the Proprietors, Mr. HOLLANDS, Surgeon-Dentist, 81, Regent's Quadrant, and by respectable Chemists in Town and Country. A Liberal Allowance to Captains of Vessels.

USED BY ALL OUTFITTERS, MOST HOTELS AND BOARDING-HOUSE KEEPERS, AND RECOMMENDED TO ALL FAMILIES.
BOND'S PERMANENT MARKING INK (the original, and by far the best, requiring no Preparation), for writing, in indelible characters, Name, &c., upon linen, cotton, or any description of fabric, as well as security, for Town & Shops, Tablecloths, and every variety of Household Furniture. Sold by all Booksellers, Chemists, &c. Sold wholesale and retail by the Inventor and Sole Proprietor, [illegible] Manufacturer, 4, Leberd's Alley, Bishopsgate-street. Sold also by respectable Chemists in every Town in the Kingdom.

WINDOW BLINDS.—The Patent Perforated Blinds are now brought to the greatest perfection by the introduction of a fine Gauze Pattern, similar in appearance to the Anti-corrosive nature of the materials of which they are made. Sold at all others, from the anti-corrosive nature of the materials of which they are made. Sold at all [illegible] Transparent Blinds, each, 12s.; per square foot, Venetian Blinds, fine quality, 5d per square [illegible] Patentee, 244, High Holborn, and 9, Bow-street, Covent Garden. Sold by [illegible] Patent Window Blind Manufacturers, 3, Queen-street, three doors from Cheapside.

ELEGANT PICTURE-FRAMES, &c.—JULIETTA'S DAUGHTER [illegible] receive the same to WM. [illegible] Prized sheets of Paper, with Instructions, sent free on receipt of six stamps. Paintings restored by an [illegible] established Economic Carving and Gilding Establishment, 82, Oxford-street.

BEAUTIFUL WOMEN.—The Thorn that veils the Primrose from our view is not more invidious in [illegible] than is the [illegible] Nook, or Arms of Beauty. For its removal HUBERT'S [illegible] POWDER is [illegible] Beware of Counterfeits. The Genuine has been signed [illegible] G. E. HOGARD for the last [illegible] Sold for the Proprietor by HOVENDEN, Chemist, 5, Royal-street, Covent Garden, and by most Perfumers. Price 4s.; or two in one parcel, 7s.

TO LADIES.—Christmas Festivities.—Superfluous Hair.—GRAFFTEY'S DEPILATORY, Price 6s. 6d., is the only [illegible] Messrs Hann on the Face, Neck, or Arms, removing them without risk or injury. The directions are simple and lead to certain success. Sample packets, 2s.—Graffty's Warehouse, 205, Warwick-street, Regent-street. Also in use, GRAFFTEY'S POMPEIAN HAIR DYE, Price 5s.—1 and 2s. 6d., and the cage. BALMA POMPEIANA, for Dressing the Hair, Price [illegible] Order of any Perfumer, but to [illegible] the Address.

ASHLEY'S ANTI-DEPILATORY EXTRACT, the cheapest and most speedily efficacious article offered to the public, warranted to stop the [illegible] from falling off, to thicken the same, and to free the head immediately from scurf [illegible] by Ashley, post-office, Bitterne, near Southampton. Sold by [illegible] Perfumers, and may be had from all respectable Perfumers and Chemists throughout the kingdom. Sold by Ashley, Herbalist, Farringdon-street. Sold also by [illegible] 150, Oxford-street; Prout, Strand, near Temple-bar; Phillips, Perfumer, Hedge-row; [illegible] 79, St. Paul's Churchyard and at Hounsditch, Crown street, Finsbury, in each locality.

GIBBINS' CREAM of ROSES and ROSEMARY.—This renowned and elegant article is most respectfully offered to the Public, by [illegible] Court Hairdresser and Perfumer, Strand, Parish, King-street, St. James's-square, as the most delicate and effectual Preservative of the Hair, and for which he has successfully received [illegible] promotes its growth and curls [illegible] Sold by [illegible] Perfumers, and at [illegible] Strand. Also, his Improved Hair Brush, and immense Stock of genuine unbleached Smyrna Sponges, at METCALFE and CO.'S Old Established, 130, King William street, London-bridge, from Holborn.

DEANE'S TABLE CUTLERY has for more than one hundred years maintained a growing reputation for sharpness and first-rate quality. The assortment of every article is kept up in packets of 50 pieces, or may be had in smaller quantities. Each blade is stamped with their name, and warranted, and may be had in every [illegible] DEANE'S have for more than fifty [illegible] polished agents to Messrs. ROGERS'S SONS, of Sheffield [illegible] who have been exclusively employed by Cutlers to Her Majesty the Queen, the Prince Consort, the Queen Dowager, the Duchess of Kent, and the Royal Family, for the last [illegible] years. Deane's Stock of these Distinguished Manufactures is [illegible] and carriage, at the lowest wholesale prices. GEORGE and JOHN [illegible] Manufacturers, opening to the Monument, 46, King William street, London-bridge.

METROPOLITAN and SUBURBAN CEMETERIES SOCIETY.—(Provisionally Registered according to Act of Parliament.)
[illegible]
The Comm[illegible] have great pleasure in announcing that the several matters which have been some time in preparation are now completed, and they [illegible] that by adopting a new principle of charge (in one payment), the public interest and the profit of the [illegible] will be largely promoted.
The calculations which app[illegible] to the [illegible] establishment at Woodf[illegible] show that upon an [illegible] small proportion of burials at least 12 per cent. per annum will be realised during the [illegible] ears, in which period the ground would be fully occupied, while upon the [illegible] proportion of burials it would exceed 20 per cent. per annum during [illegible] years, even at a reduction of prices.
The particulars and Prospectuses may be had of Messrs. Bo[illegible]ton and Sons, solicitors, [illegible] Great Winchester-street; J. B. Stevens, Esq., architect, 5, Cr[illegible]-street, and of the secretary, at the Offices of the Society, No. 3[illegible], Broad-street-buildings.
By Order
E. HOARE, Secretary.

W. H. SMITH and SON, NEWS AGENTS, 192, STRAND, beg to inform SUBSCRIBERS that the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, from this date, will be supplied in the Large Envelope, to prevent Creasing.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS SUPPLIED FREE FROM CREASE, by W. A. SCRIPPS and SON, News-agents, 13, South Molton-street, London, and delivered in any part of the country as early from the Office. The Sum on hand, form the most valuable and interesting Volume ever published.

H. BROOKS, News-Agent, 12, Warwick-square, London, begs to inform his subscribers in the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, that from the commencement of the New Year, he will send this elegant Journal in the Large Envelope to Prevent Creasing, at exactly as it is sent from the Office.

L. ALING-GREEN ESTABLISHMENT, Ealing, Middlesex. MRS. MOORE begs to inform her Friends and the Public that she has a [illegible] CIES for the ensuing Half-Year.—The duties of the School-Room recommence on Monday [illegible]

TO PAPER MAKERS, WHOLESALE STATIONERS, &c. WANTED TO APPRENTICE a YOUTH in a [illegible] an opportunity of acquiring a thorough know[illegible] Anton-place, Walworth, stating full particulars, pre[illegible]

PURE ST JULIEN CLARET, 38s. per Dozen; Pints, 18s.; imported direct by HEDGES and BUTLER, Wine Merchants, &c., 155, Regent-street, can be confidently recommended. Also, some superior Geneva, Gold's Golden Sherry, 36s. per Dozen. On the receipt of a Post-office order, or reference, will be immediately forwarded.

TONIC ALE.—This splendid description of Bottled Beer is now in perfection. It is strongly recommended by the Faculty as possessing peculiar stomachic qualities, promoting appetite, &c. Sold in quart and pint bottles, corked by Betts's Patent Capsule. JOSEPH STOCKTON, Sole Agent, Stores, No. 1, John's-mews, Hedford-row

SILVER PLATE for the DINNER and TEA TABLE.—A Pamphlet published, containing Drawings and Prices of Silver Spoons and Forks, Tea and Coffee Services, and a[illegible] of other articles requisite to complete one. It may be [illegible]

ROMAN CAMELOT, Rugs, and ROMAN SHAWLS, [illegible] subjects consisting of the Graces—Historical Subjects—Fancy Designs and Flowers. They are mounted in cloth, and upwards [illegible] No. 8, Cornhill; and [illegible] the statue of the Duke of Wellington.

ALL this hubbub, in two or three provincial towns, about the A. Tea Dealer, will most likely end, as usual, in smoke. Even if there be a reduction, it [illegible] cannot be less Than at less than Half-a-Crown a pound! That is the price at which the EAST INDIA TEA COMPANY supply a useful Black at 6s.; Rich ditto, at 7s.; Fine ditto, at 8s. 6d. and 9s. 10d.; Coffee, 9d., 1s., and 1s. 3d.—Offices No. 9, G. at Saint Helen's Church.

A LIGHT, Brightest, Purest, PORTER—Full, Rich, Cream Flavour Brewed purposely for Private Families, and Sold in Quarters, 7d. per bottle, and cannot be excelled. Sold on casks of eighteen and nine gallons each, at is. per gallon. Depôt for the Country, Ware, Mile-end, and Lemonhouse, Tavistock, Islington, Bayswater, Kentish Town; Wednesbury, Pimlico, Knightsbridge, and Kensington, Thornton Heath, Thornton, and Paddington; Bridge, Brixton, Streatham, Norwood, Clapham, Tulse Hill, Sydenham, Dulwich, and Peckham, Brixton [illegible] Hackney, Dalston, Kingsland, Shoreditch, Islington, and Hackney.—Address to the Brewery, PICK, 93, Philpot-lane, City.

EDUCATION.—YOUTH are PREPARED for the UNIVERSITIES, EAST INDIA CANDIDATES, and PROFESSIONAL EXAMINATIONS, at Eleven Miles from London, by a Clergyman of Cambridge, assisted by Masters of Eminence in the different departments, comprising the Classical Languages and Literature, Mathematics, and Junior Classics, Mathematics, and Natural Philosophy. Ready access is granted to a well-selected [illegible]

THE PANKLIBANON IRON WORKS AND GREAT WESTERN EMPORIUM for STOVE GRATES, kitchen ranges, fenders, and fire-irons; also furnishing ironmongery, in tinned copper, iron and block-tin cooking vessels, best [illegible] patent, and table cutlery, japanned paper and tea trays, tea urns, ornamental iron and wirework for verandahs, lawns, &c.; brass and iron bedsteads; patent table lamps for candle or oil. Every article is warranted, and marked at the lowest prices, in plain figures, for cash.—Adjoining the Royal Bazaar, 98, Baker-street, Portman square.

CLARKE'S PATENT MORTAR LAMPS and LAMP MORTARS. These incomparable Night Lamps are now manufactured in beautiful [illegible] ornamental, and painted glass, and paper shades, which, from great improvements that have been made in the Lamp Mortars, render them, without exception, the most elegant and perfect light and ever invented. Sold by all Lamp Dealers, 6d. per box. Mortars, 7d. per box. CLARKE'S PATENT NURSERY LAMP. This lamp burns the Patent Lamp Mortars, and will be found invaluable not only in the Nursery but in the Bachelor's room; it will keep [illegible] warm and clean for [illegible] and may be carried about with perfect safety. May be obtained retail from most [illegible] Manufactory, 39, Alsop-street, Regent's-park.

BRITISH ASSOCIATION for the RELIEF of EXTREME DISTRESS in the REMOTE PARISHES of IRELAND and SCOTLAND.

Right Hon. Lord Mayor [illegible]
James Matthews, Esq., M.P.
Henry Barnewall, Esq.
Charles James Blake, Esq.
[illegible]
[illegible]
P. Cumming, Esq.
Julius Caesar Hare, Esq., M.P.
[illegible] Glenlivery,
[illegible] Berridge,
Thomas Hawkins,
[illegible]
[illegible] Esq.
[illegible]
Jones Loyd, Esq.
W. G. Prescott, Esq.
Stephen Spring Rice
Sir Francis Graham,
David Salomons, Esq.
Abel Smith, Esq., M.P.
G. R. Smith, Esq.

(With power to add to their number.)

Information having been received of the appalling character, and of undoubted correctness, of the rapid progress of famine and utter destitution in many remote parishes of Ireland, for which there are no funds available, and in which thousands are dying, and of whom are, therefore, exposed to urgents and overpowering demands for the [illegible] of the measures of life by the famishing population, the extent of the [illegible] was within their power, it has been determined, in dependence upon God's [illegible] to form a Committee in London for the purpose of aiding the efforts made to relieve [illegible] who are suffering under the present severe visitation.
The Committee propose to apply the subscriptions that may be entrusted to their care, either [illegible] supplies of food, or by the employment of the people in useful works, to the extent [illegible] urgent and faithful administration of the funds, to the relief of the most necessitous [illegible] the most deserving, in strict conformity with the rules which shall be laid down by the [illegible]
The relief thus afforded will be afforded by the distribution of food, clothing, and fuel, but in no case shall money be given to the parties relieved.
The sick and infirm, "the famishing children and widows," who, alas, constitute a very [illegible] serious claim of the sufferers, and who are, in a great degree, beyond the reach of the [illegible] means of relief, will be the objects to which the Committee will [illegible] to be given. Should it be in any case practicable, some return in work [illegible] of agricultural or other generally useful nature, will be required from the individuals [illegible]
[illegible] mention abstain from pressing their application by [illegible] the [illegible] stressing communications on which they have received the most [illegible] nature of the valuation [illegible] which it has pleased God to afflict so large a por[illegible] public notoriety, and [illegible]
[illegible] to Messrs. Hoare, Fleet-street, [illegible] through which it may be applied [illegible] danger of being [illegible]
Persons feeling a peculiar interest in any particular districts in either Ireland or Scotland can direct that their contributions shall be applied to the relief of such districts, which will strictly observed by the Committee.

CONTRIBUTIONS.

	£	s.	d.
Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen	2,000	0	0
Her Majesty the Queen Dowager	1,000	0	0
His Royal Highness the Prince Albert	500	0	0
His Royal Highness the Duke of Kent	300	0	0
His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge	200	0	0
Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Cambridge	100	0	0
Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester	100	0	0
His grace the Archbishop of Canterbury	300	0	0
Amount already advertised	44,146	14	6
An Irish Landlord (for Rishbeeras) £.000	0	0	0
Collected through Mr. Cunningham	0	0	0
St. Margaret's Chapel, [illegible] Brighton, after a Sermon preached by the Rev. Arthur Boscawen, M.A., on Sunday, Jan. 10 (one-half for Ireland and one-half to Scotland)	432	0	0
Proceeds of a Concert at the Assembly Rooms, Cheltenham, for the London Assurance Corporation	315	0	0
The Assurance and Life Assurance [illegible] pany	100	0	0
The Marquis of Westminster, in addition to £200 already sent to Scotland	100	0	0
Messrs. Combe, Delafield and Co.	200	0	0
From the Mayor of Guildford, first half of the proceeds of a public meeting in that town	100	0	0
From the Deputy for Bassishaw, second instalment of the proceeds of a public meeting in that town	100	0	0
Messrs. Hoare and Ellis, by Messrs. Barnett	100	0	0
Messrs. Charles Douglas and Son [illegible] or Isaac Lyon Goldsmid, Bart.	100	0	0
Messrs. Coutts, Ransom, Bouverie, and Co.	100	0	0
Messrs. Morris, Tren, and Co.	100	0	0
Messrs. Reardon and Co.	100	0	0
Messrs. Drummond	100	0	0
Lord Aylesbury	100	0	0
Messrs. Twinend Brownlow	52	10	0
Frances Lawson and Co	52	10	0
Sir T. Dick Lauder, Bart. (for Scotland only)	50	0	0
Hon. Archd. Kinnaird	50	0	0
The Record newspaper	50	0	0
Messrs. Cocks, Biddulph, and Co.	50	0	0
The Misses Noland	30	0	0
Messrs. Barclay, Brothers	30	0	0
Old Change	30	0	0
Thos. Dickenson, Upper Holloway	30	0	0
By Berkeley only	31	10	0
William Miller, Esq.	3	0	0
Messrs. W. H. Smith and Co.	30	0	0
Messrs. Ransomes, Sons, and Co. (to be spent in relation)	30	0	0
Lieut. Bowersmith, R.N.	30	0	0
The Working Classes of the Aberdare Railway, per "Morning Herald"	28	0	0
Messrs. Hume, Silva, and Co.	25	0	0
Messrs. Hanson and Andrews	25	0	0
National Loan Fund Life Assurance society	25	0	0

A powerful iron steamer will immediately be sent out [illegible] and, should any persons be inclined to contribute clothing, flannel, blankets, &c., and will inform the Committee of their kind intention, immediate steps will be taken to forward the same by the above vessel, which vessel will be despatched in the course of this week.
Subscriptions received by [illegible] the Bankers.
Committee-room, South Sea House, January 13, 1847.

BUY YOUR WEDDING RINGS AT 33, LUDGATE-HILL

DOUBLE-ACTION SATINWOOD HARP TO BE SOLD. Erard's Patent, by Robertson, elegantly decorated the above splendid maker, with [illegible] handsomely-mounted log board and flowers. Price Thirty-two Guineas. The property of a lady wishing to part with it immediately. For particulars apply at H. S. WILCOCKS, 61, London-road, Southwark.

PIANOFORTES.—The cheapest house in London to purchase these first-rate instruments is at H. TOLKIEN'S, manufacturer, 4, King William-street, London-bridge. H. T., having completed his extensive alterations, has [illegible] to show his splendid stock of PIANOS, which is not to be equalled by any maker, and at about half the price asked by them. H. T.'s much-admired pianos, each price 25l. Old instruments taken in exchange.—TOLKIEN, 28, King William-street, London-bridge.

DANCING TAUGHT, in the most fashionable style, by Mr. WILLIS, 41, Brewer-street, Golden-square. Private Lessons in the Polka, Cellarius Waltz, and Have a Care Dance, at all hours, for Ladies and Gentlemen of any age wishing quickly and expeditiously. An Evening Class on Monday and Friday. A Juvenile Class on Wednesday afternoon. Terms may be had on application as above.

RICH BLACK SATINS AND POU DE SOIES DAMAS.
Rich Black Damas Pou de Soies, 2 wide, 3s. 6d. per yard
The Richest Black and Fancy Damas, 2 wide, 4s. 9d. per yard.
Rich French Satins, at 3s. 6d., 4s., 4s. 9d., and 5s. per yard.
The Richest French Satins, at 6s. 6d.—the best manufactured.
Patterns sent free. Address KING and HEARLE, 214, Regent-street.

REAL VALENCIENNES LACE.
EXTRAORDINARY CHEAP
Edgings .. from 4d. to 18d. a yard
Narrow Lace .. .. 1s. 9d. .. 2s. 6d. ditto
Wide ditto .. .. 2s. 9d. .. 12s. 6d. ditto
Insertions .. .. 2s. .. 6s. 6d. ditto
Patterns and for its position to any part of the Kingdom.
Address KING and HEARLE, 214, Regent-street, London

IMPORTANT TO LADIES.—THE NORWICH COMPANY'S CELEBRATED 3 and 6 CORD, SEWING, and NETTING COTTON.—The attention of Ladies is particularly requested to the [illegible] article, as being of the most beautiful fabric and uniform texture of any yet produced. It is wound on a square reel, in lengths of 100, 200, and 300 yards. The 6 Cord is more especially adapted for Ladies who are desirous of using accelerating machines for Braiding and [illegible] Stitching." To be had of all the most eminent Drapers, Haberdashers, and Hosiers in the Kingdom, and wholesale of the Proprietors, Messrs. J. C. Mann and Co., Norwich, and of the Sole Agent in London, Mr. W. W. TRIPP, 30, Friday-street, Cheapside. N.B. Merchants and Shippers supplied on the most liberal terms.

TROWSERS! TROWSERS!! TROWSERS!!!—A good fit in this garment can seldom be obtained. R. GRAVES, Fashionable Trowsers Maker and Draper, 313, High Holborn, after many years' experience and study, is enabled to assert, without fear of contradiction, that he can fit gentlemen with this garment as well as any other person in London. The characteristics of his fashion is a gentlemanly style, with perfect ease in sitting, standing, walking, and [illegible] Trowsers. To be had of all the most eminent Drapers, Haberdashers, and Hosiers in the Kingdom, and wholesale of the proprietors, Messrs. J. C. Mann and Co., Norwich, and of the Sole Agent in London, Mr. W. W. TRIPP, 30, Friday-street, Cheapside. N.B. Merchants and Shippers supplied on the most liberal terms.

TROWSERS! TROWSERS!!—A good fit in this garment can seldom be obtained. R GRAVES, Fashionable Trowsers Maker and Draper, 313, High Holborn, after many years' experience and study, is enabled to assert, without fear of contradiction, that he can fit gentlemen with this garment as well as any other person in London. The characteristics of his fashion is a gentlemanly style, with perfect ease in sitting, standing, walking, and [illegible] Trowsers. To be had of all the most eminent Drapers, Haberdashers, and Hosiers in the Kingdom, and wholesale of the proprietors, Messrs. J. C. Mann and Co., Norwich, and of the Sole Agent in London, Mr. W. W. TRIPP, 30, Friday-street, Cheapside. N.B. Merchants and Shippers supplied on the most liberal terms.

CHILDREN'S FROCKS, COATS, and PELISSES; Infants' Cloaks, Hoods, Bands, and Bonnets, Long and Short Robes, French Cambric Caps, Day and Night Gowns, Robe Blankets, Lawns, and Cambric Handkerchiefs, with every other requisite for Baby Linen, at BREAKMAN'S, 5, Finsbury Pavement. Several thousands of Children's Dresses constantly on view from the smallest for Infants at 1s. 11d., medium 5s. 6d. to 15s. 6d., up to the rich embroidered Silk Velvets, &c., with every other article usually require for a Lady's Outfit. Also observe the durable and inexpensive long cloth complained of in spring from shop to shop when juvenile clothing is required. An Illustrated Pamphlet, at. ding additional information, may be had gratis, or sent free by post on application.

BERDOE'S WINTER OVER-COATS, really WATERPROOF. An extensive and superior assortment of first-rate outside garments, adapted for every purpose, and guaranteed to exclude any rain whatever; also of Surcoats new and universally admired "Paletots," may now be inspected both at the City and West-end establishments. The established reputation for efficiency and respectability of W. BERDOE's well-known garments obtained for the past twenty-six years of extensive trial, renders it a [illegible] recommendation now unnecessary. W. BERDOE, Tailor and Over-Coat Maker, 69, Cornhill, (north side), and 96, New Bond-street, near Oxford-street (nearly opposite).

TO PARENTS.—BOYS' CLOTHES.—W. BERDOE, TAILOR, 96 New Bond-street, and 69, Cornhill, respectfully and confidently invites the attention of parents among the Upper Classes to his Economical mode of Charges for Boys' Clothes, viz., for a Boy 8 years old, Tunic Dress, Trowsers, and Jacket, 30s.; for a Boy 12 years old, ditto, 42s. A Trade Suit for a Boy under 8 years, 25s. W. B. trusts that his well-known and long-established reputation for the particular department of his trade will continue to prove a sufficient guarantee that any article supplied by him will be such only as will [illegible] the approval of the most fastidious taste.

MESSRS. NICOLL, Registered PALETOT Makers, 6th and 7th Vic., cap. 65, and TAILORS to their Royal Highnesses Prince Albert, Prince George of Cambridge, his Grace the Duke of Wellington, &c., respectfully beg to announce that the same moderate prices are still maintained, and that the fashionable Winter Over-coats, the Paletot, in Saxon Cloth, of a substance as suitable for the coming season as that which has been so highly patronised for both its useful qualities and gentlemanly appearance during the late summer months. To be had only, in London, at 114, Regent-street, and 22 Cornhill; and of the recognised agents in the country.

SHIRTS.—WILLIAM WHITELOCK, 166, STRAND, (established twenty-two years), solicits the attention of Gentlemen to the Shirts he supplies at 40s. the half-dozen, which are made in the Genuine [illegible] and best [illegible] from Marshall's Patent Long-Cloth, with fine linen fronts, &c., and are [illegible] Shirt unequalled at the price. Also all fine Linen ditto, 3s. 6d., 4s., 4s. 6d., 5s., 6s., 7s., 8s., 9s., 10s., 11s., 12s., 13s., 14s. 6d. Gentlemen would [illegible] a trial by sending for a sample Shirt. Country Patterns, Directions for Self-measurement, and [illegible] Hosiery, Gloves, Cravats, Dressing Gowns, Shawls, Scarfs, &c., of the recognised [illegible] of the Trade.

ST. PAUL'S. CLOSING FOR THREE WEEKS
ALBION HOUSE, 77 and 78, ST. PAULS.—The great and unprecedented [illegible] business transacted by BAILEY and HITCHIE has rendered an enlargement of this already extensive establishment absolutely necessary. Bailey and Hitchie, therefore, respectfully announce to their very numerous customers, and the public generally, that, in order to effect the alterations on a scale commensurate with the [illegible] they will be under the necessity of Closing their Premises, from TUESDAY, JANUARY 26th to MONDAY, FEBRUARY 15th, but will open their [illegible] the same with the most splendid assortment of goods, in Silks, Satins, Velvets, Lyons and Paisley Shawls, Cashmeres, Fancy Dress Materials, Linens, Drapery, Hosiery, Gloves, Cobourg and Orleans Cloths, Laces, Muslin Collars, Ribbons, Gloves, Hosiery, Fancy Handkerchiefs, Trimmings, [illegible] Family Drapery, ever exhibited in the British Metropolis.
Great inducements are to Mantuas and Country Customers, sending orders by post, Bailey and Hitchie will [illegible] the most punctual executive punctuality. Albion House, 77 and 78, St. Paul's, City, to which their entire stock must be removed, during the alterations, and all orders will meet with their usual prompt attention.
BAILEY AND HITCHIE.
Albion House, 77 and 78, St. Paul's.

THE LONDON SEASON.
A WORD TO THE LORDS AND COMMONS.
Our Rhymes (though scattered to the good Ladies')
Are nothing if any politics mature.
This is a matter of Kitchens, which we have written,
A word to the Lords and to Commons as of Ranks.
For all in the State are masters, more or less
With MOSES and SON'S noted Warehouse for dress
The Season in London once more is in motion
May it be a good season for MOSES and SON
May the Lords and the Commons returning to town
Visit MOSES and SON'S Establishment of Fashion
If MOSES and SON would most smartly thank
Their numerous patrons of last season
For their kind favours, and [illegible] assure them
Nobo [illegible] deafer thanking [illegible] speeches
Additional warmth in their over attire,
And all who won't visit their noble Establishment
To avoid any hurt from the chilly East
Which is quite bleak towards any beauty alone
The elegant wrappers of MOSES and SON
Would quickly and [illegible] prevent any harm being done.
Nobo [illegible] deafer thanking [illegible] speeches
Additional warmth in their over attire,
And all who won't visit their noble Establishment
To avoid any hurt from the chilly East
Which is quite bleak towards any beauty alone
The elegant wrappers of MOSES and SON
Would quickly and [illegible] prevent any harm being done.

A NEW WORK, [illegible] Just Published, price 1s., the Small[illegible] List of Prices and full directions for Self Measurement, may be had on application, or forwarded "POST FREE."
LIST OF PRICES.

READY MADE.	£	s.	d.	MADE TO MEASURE	£	s.	d.
Beaver Trowsers	0	8	6	Winter [illegible]	1	1	0
Beaver Chesterfields and Codrington	0	7	6	[illegible]	1	5	6
Paola D'Orsay Chesterfields, Codrington, Polkos, &c., and every description of Winter Coats	1	4	0	Tweed Over Coats	2	10	0
Boys' Winter Coats in every style and variety	0	12	6	[illegible]	1	18	0
Tweed Trowsers, lined	0	5	6	Winter Trousers in all the most approved and fashionable [illegible]	1	1	0
Tweed Trousers, ditto	0	4	6	Best of Dress Trousers	1	5	6
Doeskin	0	10	6	Best of Dress Coats	1	10	0
Dress Coats	0	18	6	Best of Dress Vests	0	15	0
Dress Vests	0	7	6	[illegible]	0	15	0
Doeskin-fronted Waistcoat	0	3	6	Suit Quality Made	3	3	0
Boys' Universal Paletot Suits	0	12	6	Boys' Waistcoats	0	5	6
Boys' Winter Trousers	0	3	6	Satin, Fashion, and Fancy	0	12	6
Boys' Winter Vests	0	1	6	Boys' Summer and Paste suits	0	7	6

[illegible] Boys' Clothing [illegible] Ready-made articles procured, Ready Measure, if not approved of [illegible] Money returned. Observe the Address, H. MOSES and SON, Tailors, Woollen-drapers, Clothiers, Hatters, Hosiers, Furriers, Boot and Shoe Manufacturers, Nos. 154, 155, and 156, Corner of Ladle-street, Nos. 154, 155, and 156, Aldgate, and 5, Minories, and 83, 84, 85, and 86, Aldgate, City, London.
CAUTION.—H. MOSES and SON are most regretfully obliged to guard the public against impositions; but have learned that the unprincipled—like falsehood, or being counterfeited. It will therefore, be their study to avoid [illegible] and for obvious reasons, they have no connection with any other houses in or out of London and those who desire [illegible] must address as above, should call at, or send to, H. Moses and Son, 154, 155, and 156, Aldgate, City, London.
NOTICE.—No business transacted on the Sabbath, and from Easter Friday till Easter Saturday, when business is resumed till Twelve o'clock.

BRITISH COLLEGE of HEALTH, New-road, London.—The Twenty-fifth Session of the HYGEIAN SYSTEM of MEDICINE throughout the country. Read the Reports for 1846, of the Rev. A. Sidwell, of [illegible] Parish, Devon; of Mr. [illegible] Surgeon, Bath; of Mr. [illegible] Surgeon, Bristol; of Mr. [illegible] Tyrrell, Esq., of Heavitree, near Exeter, of the [illegible] effects by MORISON'S HYGEIAN MEDICINES. No Chemists or Druggists are allowed to sell the Vegetable Universal Medicines. The Reports may be had of all the Hygeian Agents throughout the kingdom.

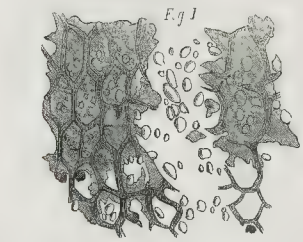
COCKBURN'S OIL and PILLS.—For the Cure of Rheumatism, Gout, Pains Contraction, Paralysis, Acid Affections, and Cancer. Restoration of Health. Many thousands from the infant to the very aged, have received benefit from these extraordinary preparations. As a proof referred from a vast number, [illegible] Cockburn sent his compliments to Mr. Cockburn, and has the pleasure to enclose him a stock for Messrs. Coutts and Co., whom will [illegible] his name. Lord Cochrane has derived infinite benefit in a very severe attack of Rheumatism in his chest, back, and shoulders.—MON. N. Limerick.—The parishioners of this same, and the recommendation from one of the Judges Auditor-Generals, likewise other distinguished officers of [illegible], and other parts to India, may be known as Mr. Cockburn's Dispensary No 1, King's Cross, London, where the Oil may be had in bottles at 2s. 9d. 4s. 6d., 11s., and 22s.; and the pills in boxes, at 1s. 1½d., and 2s. 9d.; also of all respectable Patent Medicine Venders.

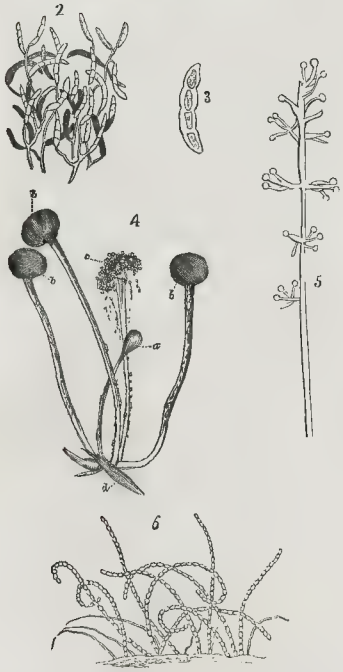
APHIS VASTATOR, THE SUPPOSED CAUSE OF THE POTATO DISEASE.

IN No. 226, of our Journal, we called attention to the leading features of the disease in the Potato Plant, which has produced such extensive political changes in England, and caused the present disastrous scarcity of food in Ireland. On this occasion, we propose to lay before our readers such information as extended experience has afforded, and to exhibit the figures of the insect, which has been stated by Mr. Alfred Smee * to have caused the mischief.

According to Mr. Smee, the disease is no novelty to Europe, as, from the accounts which he has collected of the early, as described by various authors, it appears that the present malady is probably identical with the disease which threatened the Potato crop about forty or fifty years ago, but which eventually passed away, and was nearly lost. Marcius states that the present epidemic existed in Germany since the year 1830, and, in 1842, this author, by order of the Government of Bavaria, wrote one of the most elaborate treatises which has yet appeared upon the subject.

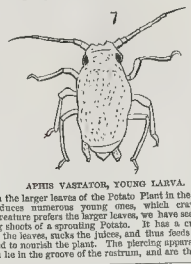
In our former paper, we called attention to Mr. Berkeley's researches, and figured the fungi, which that gentleman so ably described. Berkeley thought that the disease was due to the Botrytis. Martius attributed it to the action of a Fusisporium, of which he has given numerous figures. In our former article, we stated that these fungi were as constant attendants upon the Potato Disease as the ackal upon the lion; and we expressed our disbelief that these fungi actually cause the disease. Mr. Smee has confirmed this view, and, although he has made mention of numerous fungi which he has observed upon the diseased plant, yet he states that they always come after the plant has been damaged, and "eat off, as it were, the soft decaying parts, as fast as they rot."





1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, FUNGI ON DISEASED POTATOES.

Previously, however, to the occurrence of these fungi, which afford beautiful microscopic objects, Mr. Smee states that he had discovered one particular Aphis which comes before any part of the plant exhibits the malady. This Aphis he has named the Vastator or Destroyer, to mark its injurious action upon numerous articles of human food. It has been previously known to entomologists as attacking the turnip, and named, therefrom, the Aphis Rapæ. It is an insect in some degree resembling the green fly of the geranium, or the Aphis which attacks the rose, though it presents specific differences from both these insects.



APHIS VASTATOR, YOUNG LARVA.

It comes upon the larger leaves of the Potato Plant in the winged state, where speedily produces numerous young ones, which crawl over the plant. Although this creature prefers the larger leaves, we have seen it sparingly living upon the young shoots of a sprouting Potato. It has a curious apparatus by which it pierces the leaves, sucks the juices, and thus feeds upon that material which is destined to nourish the plant. The piercing apparatus consists of three fine setæ, which lie in the groove of the rostrum, and are thrust out of its apex

* "The Potato Plant; its Use and Properties; the Cause of the Present Disease: the Extension of that Disease to other Plants; the Question of Famine arising therefrom; and the Real Means of Averting that Calamity." By Alfred Smee, F.R.S. Illustrated with ten Lithographs. Longman and Co when it feeds. We have examined the suctorial apparatus in many species, and find the same structure in all; perhaps that of the Aphis Lanigera, the insect which destroys the apple-trees, exhibits it in the most distinct manner.

8, 9, 10, 11, 12, APHIS VASTATOR, IN ALL ITS STAGES.

The Vastator brings forth its young alive. The young ones begin to feed directly they are born. In the first state they are called Larvæ, and in a few days bring forth other young ones. After a time, the rudiments of wings appear, when the creature is said to be a Pupa; and, lastly, it sheds its skin, and emerges with four large wings. In shedding its skin, it parts with the setæ, and the cast slough affords a very beautiful microscopic object. The winged insects, after a slight pause, take flight, and frequently appear in the form of a great cloud, which passes from one part of the country to another, and settling here and there produce the direful mischief which we have already described. According to Mr. Smee, they not only damage the plant for the time being; but they render the plant so debilitated that all future growths are liable to exhibit the disease.

Mr. Smee has found this insect in the turnip, beet, carrot, spinach, tomato, horseradish, celery, and various other succulent plants; and he has described the changes which take place subsequently in these plants as being similar to those observed in the Potato. The turnip rots in the bulb; the carrot rots in its central part; and we observed in one of the poor districts of London numerous carrots which were apparently affected in the manner figured in Mr. Smee's work.

The Vastator is also said to live upon wheat, and we may ask whether the enormous deficiency of wheat which has this year embarrassed France, may not be attributed to this cause. But little at present is known upon the subject, and though, from our own inspection, we are in a condition to state that it does not at this time of the year exist in the wheat round London; yet, the matter will require careful examination as the spring advances. We have this week found the Vastator in the turnip and shepherd's purse, and thus we know that the frost will certainly not altogether prevent the mischief, though it may lessen it by killing many Vastators.

Aphides are greatly kept in bounds by other insects, such as lady-birds, gauze-wings, and minute hymenopterous insects, which deposit their eggs in the Aphis, which turns to a maggot, and gradually eats up the creature, and finally emerges through a small hole in the skin, as a winged insect.

Mr. Smee has called the attention of the naturalist to the growth of fungi following the attacks of all Aphides. He mentions, in illustration, the large fungous blotches on Sycamore leaves which follow the attacks of a large Aphis. On visiting a greenhouse last week, we observed that a very beautiful microscopic fungus had attacked rose-leaves after they had been punctured by the Aphis Rosæ. In consequence of the interest which now attaches itself to the family of Aphides, their effect upon plants in causing them to perish will be thoroughly investigated next summer. We have done our duty in bringing before our readers an account of the insect which has been stated to cause the Potato Disease, and which possibly threatens further damage, should it attack other crops.

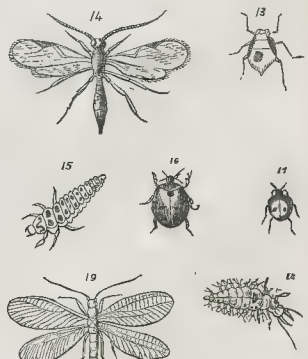
Mr. Smee has lately published the following directions for preventing future mischief:—

1. Cultivate all crops to the usual extent.
2. With regard to Potatoes, use sets from former healthy plants.
3. Select early varieties.
4. Plant early
5. Use but little or no manure.
6. Choose a sandy or peaty soil.
7. Destroy the plants on which the Vastator is now living.

These rules are immediately applicable, but it is manifest that they do not contain recommendations for the treatment of the crops when actually infested by Aphides. Previous to their visitation we hope that some cheap, simple, and effectual means will be discovered for their eradication, and with their destruction the disease in the Potato Plant will cease.

EXPLANATION OF THE FIGURES.

1. Horizontal section of the cells of diseased tuber, in which the cells are partly torn. (Martius.)
2. Fusisporium Solani, a fungus found on diseased tubers. (Martius.)
3. Ditto, more highly magnified. (Martius.)
4, 5, 6. Various fungi from diseased tuber. (Smee.)
7. Aphis Vastator, young larva.
8. Ditto, pupa.
9. Ditto, winged insect.
10. Ditto, larva under surface, showing the rostrum.
11. Ditto, natural size, feeding.
12. Ditto, rostrum, showing the apparatus by which it does the mischief.
13. Ditto, after being injured by an ichneumon, which has escaped through the aperture.



13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, DESTROYERS OF APHIDES.

14. Aphidius Rapæ, which has escaped from the last specimen.
15. Lady-bird larva
16, 17. Ditto, perfect insect.
18, 19. Larva and winged insect of the Aphis Lion.

LITERATURE IN A CONVICT SHIP.—The Thomas Arbuthnot convict ship, Capt. Thomson, sailed from Spithead on Sunday morning, for Port Philip, with a superior class of delinquents, officially called "exiles." These are the first "exiles" sent to the above settlement, which the inhabitants of that respectable place are very wroth at, and have memorialised the Government on the subject. The most ingenious trades and professions are carried on, on board this ship; in fact, all trades in vogue have their representatives on board. The most ingenious affair, however, is a newspaper in manuscript, published every Saturday, having its foreign and domestic correspondence, advertisements, and, indeed, all the necessary accessories to an apparently well-conducted journal. The articles are well written, and the arrangements well made. The name of this paper is the Citadel, and the conductors dub the captain of the ship "the governor." The Citadel, having no competitors, enjoys a large circulation. The editor is a man who has been of considerable note in the legitimate literary world; but all names and circumstances in connection with their present position are strictly preserved as regards to these "exiles," the great majority of whom are juvenile offenders from Millbank, Pentonville, and Parkhurst (Isle of Wight) prisons. Times.

EXPLOSION IN THE STRAND.—On Monday a sudden explosion took place upon the premises in the occupation of Messrs. Pepper and Taylor, printers, of 1, Plckett-street, Strand. A number of men had been engaged during the morning in laying on the gas in the basement. From some cause that could not be correctly ascertained, the lower floor of the premises became filled with gas, and a candle, which had been incautiously taken into the place, was left burning, which caused the gas to explode, at the same time setting the basement in flames, and blowing down the ceiling and partitions on the staircase, and forcing out the skylight in the machine-room. The flames, the instant the windows were blown out, were to be seen rushing out of the openings in the lower part of the building, but they were subdued in the course of an hour and a half. Some idea of the force of the explosion may be formed, when it is stated that a gentleman who was sitting in the building at dinner, was forced out of his chair, and driven against the wall with great violence; at the same time three or four squares of glass were demolished on the premises of Mr. Wilkinson, the chemist, of 248, Strand, and a similar number in the house of Mr. March, ironmonger, of 251. Unfortunately, Messrs. Pepper and Taylor were uninsured.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement, Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, 198, Strand aforesaid.—SATURDAY, JANUARY 16, 1847.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 247.—Vol. X.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, JANUARY 23, 1847. [Sixpence.

OPENING OF PARLIAMENT.

CERTAIN anxious and despondent feeling seemed to shed a gloomy influence over the proceedings of the Opening of Parliament on Tuesday; and, as if Nature had her mysterious moods of sympathy with man, the day itself was dark and dispiriting as any of those that have given its bad reputation to the suicidal month of November. A thick fog had settled down on the metropolis, and the Royal Pageant, with its pomp and splendour, passed along with something of a spectral aspect, "shorn of its beams" by the "misty air" within the Legislature as without it, all was dark and indistinct, as if expressive of the state of the Empire and its affairs, through which neither Peers nor Ministers can just now very clearly see their way. The tapers, lit at noon, lent a necessary, but untimely and insufficient aid, typical of the unusual measures that men must adopt in a general deprivation of ordinary and natural blessings. There were crowns, and diamonds, and plumes, and beauty, and rank, and wealth, and, we trust, also, courage and wisdom, ranged round the Throne of her Majesty; but a shadow seemed resting upon all; a something appeared to weigh upon the spirits of men; that indefinable anxiety—it can scarcely be called terror—which is felt in the presence of some great affliction, even when we are not immediately involved in its suffering. Uneasiness as to our own social state, discontent with some of our allies, disgust at the trickery and freedom-crushing conspiracies of the great European Royalties—all this was felt by the public, whose anticipations of the tenor of the Royal Speech, that key-note of the opening concert of Legislation, were, to use an expressive word, uncomfortable. The materials for congratulation and hope were scant and few: it was difficult to step in any direction without meeting objects that no nation desires to meet upon its path: a people crushed to the earth with hunger and want stretching its millions of hands for relief, on one side; on the other, crowned tricksters breaking their word of promise, and sceptred violators of faith and treaties: these were the chief objects which rose before the mental vision of all men. To touch on any of the questions connected with them was, necessarily, to deplore or condemn; and such, indeed, proved to be the uncongenial task of her Majesty, on meeting the Parliament of 1847.

The very first paragraph of the Royal Speech announces Famine in a third of the Empire—next to War, the direst calamity that could befall it. War would be worse, as its evils are self-inflicted, and the aid men lend each other in it, is a blending of strength and effort to destroy; but, under the visitations of Heaven, some of the evil passions of men are at least suspended, and there is a wish to afford each other mutual help. It is better to fall into the hands of Heaven than those of man. The Psalmist chose the chastisement of pestilence rather than the sword of the enemy; and in our present distress we have at least the consolation of trying to assist each other. Sad as it is, it is better to hear a Sovereign address the people with suggestions for the alleviation of the miseries of Famine, than to be met with an annual laudation of "a just and necessary War;" for one weary quarter of a century did the King and Government of England meet the Parliament with this expression of approval of political carnage and death, or some equivalent. That age is past: we cannot hope to escape national trials; but, in our present one, we have at least the satisfaction of knowing that we have not brought it on ourselves, that all efforts are directed to put an end to it, and that those efforts have the good wishes of all men for success.

The unanimity of the Debate on the Address is a proof of this; suppose the Government was involved in a war, one of those groundless and miserable conflicts, that were common in Europe when the delusion of the Balance of Power was in its infancy, would all parties sink their differences, and say, almost with one voice, we must have but a single object now—to get through our difficulties? No; one party would make the war and its conduct a "political capital," the Opposition would literally turn the guns of the Government against itself; Marlborough triumphed in the field, and was driven from power and place by the spirit of party; the people of England derived no advantage from his victories, got nothing but the foundation of a National Debt, and left the great general to front his political foes unsupported. But no party dares now to turn a national misfortune to a party purpose. By a kind of common consent, the weakest side in Parliament (numerically speaking) hold office. Their opponents have only to forget their internal differences, and unite on any one question, and Lord John Russell must fall; yet he finds forbearance from all quarters. Lord George Bentinck will not only support him in what he may do, but thinks he might have done much more, certain of gaining an indemnity, even if he had turned line-of-battle ships into carriers of grain, and sent them between shore and shore, freighted with corn instead of cannon. There is something magnificent in the proposition; we wish all the fleets in the world were half as well employed; and then the

WRECK OF THE AMERICAN BRIG "SOMERS."—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

Armaments that thunder-strike the walls
Of rock-built cities, bidding nations quake, would bid be came sea nations feed and be friends. What a picture it would be! A whole squadron of majestic ships ploughing the Atlantic, and bearing the plenty of the New World to supply the (let us hope temporary) deficiency of the Old! How the great argosies of trade, the "rich burghers of the flood," would "overpeer the petty traffickers;" how emulation would be changed in itsobjects! An Admiral's renown would not depend on breaking the line, but in breaking bulk, not in the number of shots he had fired into a seaport town, but the number of quarters of corn he had poured into its depths! "It is a pleasant dream, and yet"—we are compelled to think the day is far off when we shall see its fulfilment; the "navies of commerce" may perhaps just precede the "armies of industry," we some time ago touched upon.

But such a proposal coming from the Leader of the Protectionists, shows at least that they are not so terrified at innovation, as Conservatives are supposed to be. A few years ago, such a plan would have been laughed down by the whole House, if it escaped being branded as revolutionary and radical; but it has been made and listened to, and thought not unreasonable; a little time and we shall become familiarised with the idea; it has been already partially acted on; more will be heard yet of the employment of fleets and armies in time of peace; soldiers will cease to be "chimnies in summer" as the old satirist called them; and ships will no longer be floating logs, suggesting in the descriptive phrase "laying up in ordinary," a very proper order of uselessness. The world moves after all; nothing quickens men's imaginations more than calamities, and even a famine may prove a spur to our progress.

The readiness of Lord George Bentinck to give the Ministers every assistance was also repeated in the House of Peers by the other Protectionist leader, Lord Stanley; but it was with far more ambiguity and reserve. He will not press them unduly, will make every allowance for difficulties, but his support is conditional. As long as they do not do this, and do not broach that—if they eschew innovation, if they do not tamper with "the institutions of the country," they may command Lord Stanley. But the array of negative phrases awakens doubt; they may be interpreted in many ways; but the most obvious reading seems to be this—that, provided the Government does nothing, Lord Stanley will help them to do it. Lord George Bentinck is a much younger statesman than Lord Stanley perhaps, but he has not learned from his great colleague but there is something positive, at least, in his speech, and purpose and action are what are wanted on all sides. The old bugbears of innovating and tampering have lost their terrors. The "institutions" of Ireland have not saved us from the fall into the midst of famine and misery, with no social machinery to relieve them: the sooner they are altered, the better. The Conservatives themselves have wisely ceased this constant harping on "the fear of change;" and it comes with special ill grace from Lord Stanley, who, in his day has had the control of —the Church, the Colonies, Ireland—has been the greatest "tamperer" and the author of more "innovations" than any statesman of the age.

WRECK OF THE UNITED STATES BRIG "SOMERS."

THE melancholy loss took place on the 13th of last month, whilst the vessel was maintaining the blockade off the harbour of Vera Cruz. The circumstances are detail'd by an eye-witness, a long letter to the New Orleans Picayune, whence we extract the following details:

On the evening of the 7th the Somers had taken shelter under Green Island, there being the usual appearance indicating a norther. Early in the morning of the 8th, a sail was reported from aloft. Captain Semmes got under way to chase, and stood out some miles, until he made out the John Adams, being on her return from Tampico.

As the wind had already hauled to the north, and the weather was threatening, Captain Semmes at once ran back to Green Island, intending to anchor as soon as he could regain his former berth.

On approaching the anchorage another sail was discovered, apparently standing down for Vera Cruz, through the passage between Green Island and Blanquilla Shoal, with the intention, as was supposed, of running the blockade. Apprehending that the strange vessel might succeed in her design, Captain Semmes was induced to change his purpose and run by Green Island, standing across the passage, to intercept her, making short tacks during the night. As the brig was then freshening from the north-west; but Captain Semmes hoped to be able to maintain his position until the suspicious vessel approached, and to cut her off from Vera Cruz. To effect this object it was necessary to press the Somers with canvass, in order to avoid failing to leeward upon the reefs, and finally to fetch Green Island anchorage.

The Somers was exceedingly light, having on board only 18 barrels of provisions, and about 600 gallons of water. When at the western point of Green Island reef, at about half-past nine o'clock, P. M., a squall came on, and after great exertion to save the vessel, she commenced drifting to leeward. Every effort was made to go over with great rapidity, and in thirty seconds was on her beam ends In less than ten minutes she sank. One or two minutes after she was over, most of the men and officers had gained the side of the vessel on the top. The boats and officers then cut away the rigging, and attempts were made to relieve her of her masts, but in vain. The small larboard quarter boat was in the meantime cleared away, and dropped carefully round to leeward, and received the top. The balance complement of five oar-men. Midshipman Clarke, who had gained the mainstay by swimming from the storage hatch, was ordered by Captain Semmes to take charge of the boat. Finding that there was no chance of saving the brig, and that she was fast sinking, Captain Semmes ordered Mr. Clarke to shove off with Dr. Wright and seventeen men, besides Purser Steele, to pull for Green Island, which was but a mile distant, and immediately to return, if possible, and save more lives. This order was at once executed, but not until some of those in the boat had solicited, by name, each of the officers left on the wreck to come with them. These officers resolutely declared that they would wait and take their chance with the brig.

It is a remarkable circumstance that three of the officers and all of the men with that cutter are saved. When the boat shoved off, the gale was blowing with great violence, and a heavy sea running, so that, for some moments it was a matter of doubt whether the boat would live. The boat, however, reached the island in about twenty minutes.

It left less than three minutes after the boat left the brig, Captain Semmes, finding the vessel settling under them, gave an order for every man to save himself. All simultaneously plunged into the water, and grasped the pieces, gratings, spars, coops, and other floating articles that they could first get hold upon down from the want of any support whatever; others struggled on frail floats, to be finally drifted on the reefs and dashed in pieces. Some were driven to sea to be heard of no more, and others encountered the worst fate that could be apprehended, in being devoured by sharks. Of near 60 who plunged from the wreck, only 17 escaped.

Through all this appalling scene, the greatest composure was observed by men and officers. There was no appearance of panic—no exhibition of selfishness. Those who could not swim were particularly enjoined to go in the boat.

With grateful hearts we have yet to mention the daring and prompt exertions of the foreign men-of-war. There were lying at Sacrificios, about two miles to the leeward of the wreck, her Britannic Majesty's ships Endymion and Alarm, and brig Loring, commanded respectively by Captains Lambert, Franklin, and Matson; the French brigs Pylade and Mercure, Captains Dubut and [illegible], and the Spanish corvette Louis Fernando, Captain Puente. As soon as the Somers was discovered, the boats of all these vessels were simultaneously called away.

The crew of the Endymion, to the number of 200, came aft and volunteered.

After great exertion, fourteen persons were landed, and taken to Green Island. The most gallant and well-directed efforts were made by the officers and crew in the boat of the Mercure. She reached ten men at sea to leeward, on a spar. The risk was incalculable. Five boats, representing each of the foreign vessels, reached the island, and took off twenty-three persons to their respective vessels.

The strange vessel proved to be the Abraxas, bound for the squadron at Anton Lizardo. She passed very near the Somers, but the catastrophe was so sudden, that she failed to discover it.

The Mexicans saw the accident from the mole, and cheered and exulted for a long time. The brig had been for a long time engaged in the blockade, and had done more to interrupt the commerce of the port than almost all the other vessels together.

Subsequently, eight more persons were picked up by the Mexicans, on the beach near Anton Lizardo, whither they were driven by the gale, on a hen-coop. They are held as prisoners in Vera Cruz. This makes forty-four, all told, who have been saved from the wreck. The Somers had nearly eighty souls on board, all told.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE

FRANCE.

The Parisians have been a good deal excited this week by the publication of two additional documents relative to the Montpensier marriage. M. Guizot laid these documents before the French Chamber of Peers on Monday, with the copy of Austria to the protest against the infraction of the Treaty of Vienna, implied in the incorporation of Cracow. The documents relative to the Spanish marriages are, first—a letter from Lord Aberdeen to the Spanish Ambassador, dated June 23, 1846; and, secondly, Lord Palmerston's entire dispatch to Mr. Bulwer, of the 19th July. A portion of this dispatch only had before been given. Lord Aberdeen's letter is of the utmost importance, for it goes to show that whatever may have been the nature of the engagement at Eu, his Lordship put upon it a totally different construction from that given to it by M. Guizot.

The discussion on the address of the Chamber has commenced. It has hitherto been uncommonly dull and uninteresting. M. C. Dupin, who opened the debate in the Chamber of Peers, was the only one who referred to the quashion of the Spanish marriages; and his whole speech consisted of a panegyric on M. Guizot, with the abuse of England.

We regret to find from the French papers that the food riots which commenced at Rouen are spreading over the centre and west of France. The afternoon of Sunday contains the following: "Troubles of a very grave nature have taken place in the department of l'Indre. Several carts laden with grain were, on the 13th, stopped between Argenton and Bazaneuil, and the people compelled the grain to be sold at a low price. On the following day the violence became greater; five or six houses were pillaged, and one of the proprietors who had offered resistance, killed. Upon the application of the Prefect, a reinforcement of troops has been ordered to the spot to repress further violence." The object of the rioters was, according to a letter in the Débats, to compel the holders of grain to sell their corn at a price to be estimated by the rioters themselves. General Regny has sent a detachment of cavalry to Bazaneuil, which he will immediately follow with a train of artillery. Disorders of a similar character have taken place at Laval, Vaiges, Entrammes, and Argentre, in the department of Mayenne. At Vitré, in the department of Ille et Vilaine, the miners had stopped the grain carts going to Laval. At Fougeres, the grain carts were also stopped from going to market. At Bulleon (in the Côte du Nord), scenes of great violence have taken place, occasioned by the grain being sent away. Tranquillity had happily been restored at Rennes. The price of grain was, however, rising. At Nantes corn had risen five francs the hectolitre. Arrests had taken place at Amanlis and Chateaugiron, in the neighbourhood of Rennes. At the market of Lignieres (Cher) pillage of grain was attempted, and so sudden was the attack, that the police could not resist it, and it was not until a detachment of dragoons appeared that order was restored.

The National states that disturbances broke out at Cervois-Tour, in the department of the Nièvre, on the 14th inst. It was feared that the rioters would extend their efforts to the communes adjoining Nevers. The same paper states that several persons have died of hunger in the mountainous districts of the department of the Upper Loire, rather than have recourse to the charity of their neighbours. The Réforme states that wheat is selling at Mans at 38 francs the hectolitre, being a rise within the week of three francs the hectolitre. At Boissac and Saumur, in the department of the Maine and Loire, a similar rise has taken place. The most alarming accounts have been received from the departments of the centre. At Tours flour is worth 100 francs the sack, and the scarcity of grain increases. The bakers refuse to purchase flour at the present prices, and the inhabitants are therefore become from the neighbourhood of Paris announce a rise of two francs the hectolitre in the price of wheat.

The internal state of the population of France, the apprehended consequences of the deficiency of vegetable subsistence, and the precautionary measures of the Bank, have created a crisis on the Bourse. The greatest agitation continues to prevail: every day witnesses a further decline in the price of all public securities. Accounts from Bayonne, of the 14th inst., state that the price of maize (Indian corn), which had previously been extremely moderate, had risen in the course of a few days more than 30 per cent. The present price is fifty shillings a quarter free on board. Several cargoes of maize had arrived from London, and vessels laden with Indian corn had already sailed for that destination. The Réforme announces a further rise in the price of wheat, to the extent of from 1f. to 2f. the hectolitre, in the departments of Eure, Eure-et-Loire, Seine-et-Oise, Mamers, Louviers, Lucon, Lille, Montivilliers, Havre, Orleans, Chateaudun, Vicsur-Aisne, Ferté-Gaucher, and Coulommiers. The Echo Agricole announces the arrival at Rouen of several cargoes of wheat from London, Hamburg, and Marseilles, intended for the supply of Paris and the neighbourhood.

The Duke d'Aumale, who has just attained his twenty-fifth year, is now entitled, according to the constitution, to take his seat for a seat and a vote in the Chamber of Peers. The Duke has already taken his seat

The Journal des Débats announces, that at a meeting of the Directors of the Bank of France, it was determined to raise the rate of discount from four to five per cent. The Commerce adds, that this resolution was adopted after much discussion

The Sentinelle des Pyrenees announces the return of M. Olozaga to Bayonne on the afternoon of the 12th inst.

A Court ball was given a few days ago at the Tuileries, of which the Esprit Public gives the following account: "The most distinguished persons were present at this fête, who were more noisy than Royal. Madame la Duchesse de Montpensier is an indefatigable dancer. Since her arrival in France, she has made rapid progress in the art of terpsichore, and the masters of the young Princess are very well satisfied with her. The diplomatists danced little, but played much. The card tables were placed in the Salle du Trone, and the Salon Blanc. Lord Normanby, a great amateur of whist, and one of the finest players in the three kingdoms, was at one of these tables; he had for partner M. de Brignoles, the Ambassador of Sardinia, against Serra Capriola, Ambassador of Naples, and Comte d'Appony, who, like Prince Metternich, his master in everything, likes playing high. At about one o'clock, the King and Queen, followed by the Princes and Princesses, and the most distinguished persons, went to the Salle du Théâtre to supper. The service was badly attended to. The servants of the Court are not sufficiently numerous to suffice for reception days and fêtes. A few clumsy maitres d'hotel that were hired, spread confusion everywhere. Madame de Montpensier ate with a good appetite; she had put her self in excellent humour. She did not cease questioning the Duke de Montpensier. Everything appeared to surprise her; and the Duke was pleased to perceive that at the Court of Madrid things were not conducted as at the Tuileries, and that Paris Christmas had not familiarised her daughters with an embarrassing etiquette. Only twenty-four tables were laid out for the supper, and each one could only accommodate ten persons at a time. And, while the ladies and gentlemen were seated, the dances that arrived to late took all they could, and sat standing. The deputies returned again and again to the tables, giving us a high opinion of Parliamentary gormandising. The supper did not end till two o'clock, and the dances continued till about seven o'clock. The fête would have been brilliant, had not the great number of persons caused so much inconvenience and confusion."

SPAIN.

We have Madrid papers to the 13th inst., but they are destitute of news. It was believed that M. Olozaga-Crooke would be elected President of the Congress of Deputies, unless another arrangement should be adopted on the arrival of M. Martinez de la Rosa, who was expected every moment at Madrid.

Letters from Gibraltar state that a body of Carlists had assembled in the mountains of Ronda, in convent at Estella, to deliberate upon and fix the day on which they should commence an insurrection against the Government!

Letters from Barcelona state that the usual peaceful disturbances had taken place at Pampeluna on the preceding Sunday. A number of young men, chiefly conscripts, assembled that day on the Toloza road; which fact having been communicated to the Alcalde, he marched to the spot with a body of the civil force to disperse the assemblage, but the rioters resisted and drove the guard into Pampeluna, following them amidst cries of "the Puerce." The rioters, after an address from the Mayor on the impropriety of their conduct, were induced to quit the city. Great excitement is said to prevail throughout the north of Spain, and a Carlist insurrection is considered inevitable.

The letters also state that M. Olozaga has not yet taken his address to the Spanish Chamber of Deputies, protesting in strong terms against its entering, in his absence, into any discussion of his double election. He expresses in advance his acknowledgments to each of his friends as may speak in his favour, but gives to no one authority to defend him. He claims this as an incontestable right in himself, which would not be denied him in any truly constitutional country.

PORTUGAL.

CHECK TO THE INSURRECTION.

We are glad to state that the letters from Lisbon of the 11th inst give assurances that a considerable progress has been made towards the pacification of the entire country. The provinces of Estremadura, Algarve, Lower Beira, and Tras-os-Montes, were the most disquiétées, and the road from Lisbon to Coimbra perfectly clear of guerillas, the telegraphs and posts being again established. Saldanha had marched northward from Coimbra, where he had met with a brilliant reception, and on the road to Oporto, in the neighbourhood of Rio Tinto, force was weakened every day by desertion, was retreating before him towards Oporto, which town, there was little doubt, would fall in a few days before the combined forces of Cassi and Saldanha, by which the insurrectio would be utterly extinguished

Several Miguelites had been arrested in Lisbon, being compro ised by Macdonald's Miguelite correspondence

The Queen's troops entered Coimbra on the 8th inst., amidst great rejoicing.

Before entering the town of Coimbra, Saldanha issued a proclamation, assuring the people they had no violence to fear from his soldiers. Macdonald's loss at Braga has been about 200; the loss on the Queen's side is variously stated at from 30 to 120. Cassi's men committed great atrocities at Braga, which has kindled a flame of indignation against him. Nothing decisive had taken place at Oporto.

COURT AND HAUT TON.

POLITICAL BANQUETS.

The Marquis of Lansdowne, as Lord President of the Council, gave a grand full dress entertainment on Monday evening, at Lansdowne House, to a distinguished circle of Whig Peers, including the members of the Cabinet having seats in the Upper House, and the mover and seconder of the Address in the Lords. Covers were laid for twenty-seven. At the dinner, the Speech to be delivered by her Majesty on the opening of Parliament was read by the noble host.

Lord John Russell, as first Lord of the Treasury, gave a grand Parliamentary dinner to a numerous party of Members of the House of Commons, at his official residence in Downing-street. The company appeared either in official uniforms or court dress. During the evening Lord John Russell read her Majesty's Speech to his distinguished guests.

Lord Stanley, as the recognised leader of the Protectionists in the House of Lords, gave a superb entertainment, at his mansion in St. James's-square, to the leaders of his party

The Duke of Wellington, for the first time during the last twenty-four years, did not give any political entertainment on the eve of the opening of Parliament. His Grace dined alone with Lord and Lady Charles Wellesley.

RETURN OF THE COURT TO WINDSOR.—On Wednesday the Queen and Prince Albert, accompanied by the Princess Royal, returned to Windsor Castle at a quarter past four o'clock in the afternoon. The Royal suite consisted of the Marchioness of Douro, Hon Misses Stanley and Dawson, Earl Dorle, Major General Bowles, Colonel Berkeley Drummond, Lord Alfred Paget and Colonel Seymour. Earl Spencer arrived at the Castle on a visit to her Majesty.

LEVEE AND PRIVY COUNCIL.—The Queen held a Court and Privy Council on Monday afternoon. At the Court, the Right Rev. Dr. Shirley, Bishop of Sodor and Man, was introduced to the Queen and did homage upon his being elevated to that see. The Privy Council was attended by his Royal Highness Prince Albert, and the Members of the Government. The Queen's Speech on opening the session of Parliament was arranged and agreed upon. Her Majesty gave audiences to Lord John Russell, the Marquis of Lansdowne, Viscount Palmerston, Viscount Morpeth, and the Lord Chamberlain

ADDRESS OF THE HOUSE OF LORDS TO HER MAJESTY. The Earl Fortescue, Lord Steward, and the Earl of Clarendon, Lord Chamberlain, had an audience of the Queen on Wednesday, at Buckingham Palace, and presented to Her Majesty the address from the House of Lords in answer to the Speech from the Throne. The Queen was pleased to return a most gracious answer.

PRESENTATION OF THE COMMONS' ADDRESS TO HER MAJESTY.—The Address, agreed to on Wednesday night, was presented on Thursday to the Queen, at Windsor, by the Members of the Privy Council, in conformity with the resolution of the House.

PROPOSED ARISTOCRATIC MARRIAGE.—It is understood that the nuptials of the youthful Viscount Elvington and Miss Dacre will be celebrated with much gaiety and rejoicing, about the middle of February; it is said that her Majesty and the Dowager Queen Adelaide take the most lively interest in the auspicious event, as forming a bond of union between two distinguished families of the British aristocracy.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

What sporting people would give one during the week now closed, but for the appearance of the acceptances and weights for certain of the popular Spring Handicaps, it is impossible to surmise. It was not the wall of the "poor froze-out gardeners" alone, that affrighted them from its propriety, but the bitter complaints of the expatriated men from Milton, and else every shrine of Diana. Had not Mr. Roebuck been good enough to infuse a little caloric into the opening of the Session, the temperature of Parliament would have been below zero. The gun, indeed, was busy, for the weather was favourable for walking, especially in the early portion of the week, and this has been an extraordinary season for fine pheasants, generally speaking, because of the brilliant summer that shone upon their infancy. But we pass these mere items of pastime, and proceed to deal with sport in earnest, which is horse-racing

The acceptances for the Great Metropolitan Handicap, to be run for in the Epsom Spring Meeting, were announced in the "Racing Calendar," published on Saturday last. They amount to fifty-nine—and certainly embrace (by inference) animals of a most miscellaneous character. Rather more than the half of the lot named have accepted—which was considerably more than might have been expected; for the Handicap is not a workmanlike affair. So much indignation did it create in a hundred and one quarters, that he publicly denounced it as "unfair." But, as the present practice runs, and such indictments are very harmless matters. Nobody knows who makes a handicap except a few that have the privilege of arranging behind the scenes, and the "public" is not a bit till it's hit." The extreme inconvenience of this anonymous system not to use a harsher term [illegible] must, and cannot much longer be allowed to prevail. Why should it? Does it give to the honesty than are engaged in the other business departments of racing?.....Surely not. It is a great pity that a race brought out with such spirit by its originators should be ruined in its popularity by the absurdities of the system, and the manner in which it is carried on. The weights on legs, Refraction, Camera Obscura, Jenny Wren, Lady Sarah, and several others—are perfectly unaccountable—so far as their promises as concerned. A very large field of horses have been weighted for the Chester Cup, and it promises to be a heavy betting speculation Already several animals have been selected by the book-makers, and some of them at prices which will probably well remunerate their backers.

Those who get on Newcourt, for instance, ought to get off him, at considerably less money—and the same may be said of Antler, Camera Obscura, and others now in the market. The unprecedented popularity of racing sweeps and lotteries furnishes great funds for backing horses—and that, of course, has a tendency to lower prices. For this reason, the favourites early picked out almost invariably go on improving—till the event is very near. Then begins the chapter of accidents Then down tumbles this impostor, and up goes that. The Chester Cup is proverbial for its vicissitudes—as the day approaches and, therefore, all we could suggest is with regard to those who would take care to hedge their investments carefully. To use a vulgar phrase, there is money to be hid out of the Great Metropolitan and Chester Handicaps in this way. Take the favourites as they come into the betting, and back them at the longest odds they are at. Watch the turn, and get off the moment they are "slack" in friends: that is to say, lay against them. Never have a fancy—have nothing a loser for ye—if ye can help it—and stand with caution ye may. The foolish man goes upon the turf; the wise man amuses himself with racing, but goes upon velvet.

TATTERSALL'S.

MONDAY.—A very general and natural expectation that the Chester Cup weights would be declared, brought a large number of subscribers to the room, and all seemed prepared for a busy day. Owing to some unexplained cause, however, they did not appear, and a good deal of angry surprise was manifested. Nevertheless, a good deal of money was laid out, and we may particularly instance Antler as having been prominently in favour. In other respects, the betting on this event was not remarkable for any decided feature. The Derby was only slightly touched upon.

REWARDERY HANDICAP.
50 to 1 agst Vanish (t)
Even 5 to 4 agst Ashe the Bold.

TWO THOUSAND GUINEAS STAKES.
4 to 1 agst Planet (t) | 5 to 1 agst Glenhill (t)

CHESTER CUP.

40 to 1 agst Antler (t)	1000 to 15 agst Dolphin (t)	1000 to 15 agst Cherissy (t)
40 to 1 ——— Newcourt	1000 to 15 ——— Hazlepot (t)	1000 to 15 ——— Miller (t)
40 to 1 ——— Mickey Free (t)	1000 to 15 ——— Horn of Chase (t)	1000 to 15 ——— Best Dower
50 to 1 ——— Pam (t)	1000 to 15 ——— Bonaparte (t)	1000 to 15 ——— Camera Obscura
50 to 1 ——— Burgundy (t)	1000 to 15 ——— Jenny Wren (t)
50 to 1 ——— The Flitch (t)	1000 to 15 ——— Lady Wildair (t)	1000 to 15 ——— Cherry

DERBY.

15 to 2 agst Van Tromp	40 to 1 agst Pantivy	66 to 1 agst War Eagle (t)
18 to 1 ——— Epsom (t)	40 to 1 ——— Con ingham	66 to 1 ——— West India Planter
20 to 1 ——— Planet	40 to 1 ——— Bonaparte (t)	(t)
20 to 1 ——— Glenhill	50 to 1 ——— Chatsopher (t)	66 to 1 ——— Redlam (t)
33 to 1 ——— Allerionian (t)	50 to 1 ——— The Saddler	66 to 1 ——— Horn of Chase

OAKS

5 to 1 agst Clementina (t)	12 to 1 agst Slander (t)
10 to 1 ——— The Farmer's Daughter (t)	18 to 1 ——— Mamma (t)

THURSDAY.—A very flat market: the select few present being more disposed to cavil at the delay in publishing the Handicap, than to speculate on it. The betting upon this event was not remarkable for any decided feature. The Derby was only slightly touched upon.

REWARDERY HANDICAP.
50 to 1 agst Vanish (t)
Even 5 to 4 agst Ashe the Bold.

TWO THOUSAND GUINEAS STAKES.
4 to 1 agst Planet (t) | 5 to 1 agst Glenhill (t)

CHESTER CUP.

30 to 1 agst Camera Obscura	50 to 1 agst Bonaparte (t)	50 to 1 agst Bryx
33 to 1 ——— Antler (t)	50 to 1 ——— Pal	50 to 1 ——— Bellum
33 to 1 ——— Dolphin (t)	50 to 1 ——— Beacon (t)	66 to 1 ——— Jobernes (t)
40 to 1 ——— Newcourt	50 to 1 ——— Punch (t)	66 to 1 ——— Emigrant (t)
40 to 1 ——— The Flitch	50 to 1 ——— Jenny Wren (t)	100 to 6 ——— Golden Box
	100 to 1 agst [illegible]

LEVEE

11 to 2 agst J. Scott's lot	10 to 1 agst Epsom (t)	40 to 1 agst Projectile (t)
8 to 1 ——— Van Tromp [offd.]	33 to 1 ——— Allerionian (t)	50 to 1 ——— The Liberator (t)
	66 to 1 agst War Eagle (t,

THE ST KATHARINE DOCK COMPANY. A dividend of two-and-a-half per cent. for the half-year was declared at the meeting of the shareholders in the St Katharine Dock Company on Tuesday. Although the business of the establishment has increased, the revenue, it appears, has not been equal to former periods, owing to the description of merchandise brought into the warehouses being less valuable, and therefore not yielding so large an amount of charges. Hence, in order to make this distribution, it has been found necessary to have recourse to the "rest." The Directors, however state, in their Report, that, should the revenue fail to increase considerably during the present year, they will be prepared, at their meeting in January, 1848, to recommend a decrease of dividend.

THE THEATRES.

HER MAJESTY'S.

To a very great number of our readers, and the least interesting or important event of the coming season, is one which they will gladly hear is nearly approaching—the opening of Her Majesty's Theatre. This year still greater than ever have been the curiosity and expectation excited on the subject of the programme to be issued by the management of this grand establishment, which we now publish.

The programme commences with a name often repeated, whose mention has excited more earnest aspirations than, perhaps, that of any virtuoso of this or any other age—that of Jenny Lind. The entrefaites, who has, by the most remarkable natural gifts, and by a style of singing and acting which overthrows many old prejudices and conventionalisms, unbalancing in their place the promptings of a sensitive and gifted nature, achieved the most decided and unqualified success, in a very few nights, despite all predictions to the contrary; and we shall enjoy the treat—a great one to a real lover of art—of welcoming the "Swedish Nightingale" to our shores. The names of the other prime donne, who, with the exception of our charming favourite, Castellan, and of Sanchioli, are all novelties in this country, are well known by those conversant with continental theatrical news. Madame Dorus, Madame del Carmen Montenegro, Madame Maria Naschi, Mdlle. Fanny [illegible], and, besides these, the contralto, Signora Vietti. The handsome tenor, Mr. Gardoni, of the Parisian Italian Opera, and the celebrated Fraschini, will both make their first public appearance in England. The former of these offers another instance of the persevering activity of the management; for, having been for some time the first tenor at the Académie de Musique, he has, as is generally known, been withdrawn from thence with much difficulty, and at a very pecuniary sacrifice. Next in the list stands the name of Signor Saperchi, a baritone, also new to us, and, it is said, of distinguished abilities. The great standard, and the yet greater Lablache; another new artist, Signor Borosi; besides the younger Lablache, and Corelli, are all included in the troupe; while, to add to all these, we have a good prospect of seeing Coletti, now at the Italiens, at Paris.

Such is the lyrical troupe of this season at Her Majesty's Theatre, defying comparison with that of any previous year we remember. But we have not done yet with this portion of our subject. The greatest creative, as well as executive, genius of the age will be called into action, and we shall have the pleasure of not only new singers, but new operas. Meyerbeer, Mendelssohn, and Verdi are all engaged in the service of this theatre. The two latter—the one working upon Shakspeare, the other upon Schiller—will produce two new operas, written expressly for Her Majesty's Theatre. Mendelssohn has chosen a subject, we should think, well suited to the imaginative and splendid character of his genius. "The Tempest," and, while the clever librettist seeks to employ upon adapting the plot to lyrical purposes, it is proposed to entrust the execution to a quatuor of artists, rarely equalled—Jenny Lind, Gardoni, Staudigl, and Lablache: and the execution of the work will be superintended by the great musical master, who visits England once in the year.

"The Robbers." Meyerbeer's "Camp de Silesie," performed by Jenny Lind and Staudigl, is also promised us, as well as the principal compositions of each of this great master; and, in addition to these, we are to have Rossini's "Robert Bruce," just produced at the Académie, at Paris, besides several other works new to this country. Added to these we shall again hear our old favourite operas, for the loss of which no novelty, however excellent, perhaps, could fully compensate. The season, which commences in the middle of February, will open with Donizetti's "Favorita," in which Gardoni will appear; and the première before Easter will include Castellan, Sanchioli, Montenegro, Fraschini, and Gardoni. Jenny Lind, whose engagement commences in March, will appear immediately after Easter.

Considerable changes have been made in the orchestra. While Balfe, Tolbecque, and Lualand, and others formerly belonging to the band, are retained, there are many new names of artists of repute, belonging to some of the first of European theatres. The following is a list of the principal performers.

Tolbecque, Leader	Vaschin, 1st Contre-Basso of the Royal Theatre, Turin
Nadaud, Leader of the Ballet	Piatti, 1st Violoncello, from Paris
De Ste	Pezzoli, 1st Bassoon
Platel, of the Conservatoire of Brussels	Bourjeau, Violoncello, Académie, Royal, Paris
	Peckart, Contre-Basso, Académie Royal, Paris
Wilde	Sedlak, 1st Clarionet Major
Nicholl	De [illegible] Clarionet Major
Kroutzel, 1st Bassoon	Lee, Flutist, Opera Comique, Paris
Lavigna, Violoncello, from Vienna	Zelas, Trumpet, Professor of the Conservatorio, Brussels

The Chorus will be composed of Italians, Germans, and English, and will comprise upwards of eighty performers, and we are assured that great pains have been lavished on its formation.

As for the Ballet, there could never have existed the slightest doubt but that in this branch of the entertainment, her Majesty's Theatre would have been triumphant. Carlotta Grisi, Lucile Grahn, and Cerito; probably, for a short time, Taglioni, and three new danseuses Signora Caroline Rossi, from the Scala, Milan; Wauthier and Mdlle. Caroline Bancourt, from the same theatre St. Leon, Perrot, and a new dancer from the Académie, M. D'Or; besides Madame Petit Stephan, and a bevy of coryphées, Honore, Elise Montfort, Thevenet, Julien, Lamoureux, &c. &c., form a galaxy of choregraphic talent truly and confessedly unrivalled. A ballet composer, new to this country, and of considerable reputation Paul Taglioni, and M. Casate, of La Scala will assist Perrot in his labours of composition, while to the latter will be allotted the musical portion of the work. A new ballet, by Paul Taglioni, will be produced at the opening, for the début of Mdlle. Rossi; but one of the most interesting of the choregraphic novelties will be a grand ballet, to be written by no less a personage than the well-known German poet, Henri Heine, one of the most noted literary characters of the day. The subject is to be taken from one of the old German legends, whose pesticl mysticism is so well adapted to the purposes of a ballet. By bringing such hands as these to the work, the idealising and intellectualising the ballet become more than mere empty words, and surely such danseuses as the Taglioni, the Carlotta Grisi, or the Grahn, of our day, are worthy to embody the conceptions of a poet. We have not, we are happy to say, done with the "Pas de Quatre," and the "Pas de Déesses;" but, in addition to these, Perrot's inventive powers will be set to work, to combine all the first-rate choregraphic artists of the troupe in a new pas, to be entitled, and most appropriately, "La Constellation."

Such is the programme of Her Majesty's Theatre for 1847, a striking memorial of what English capital and English perseverance can effect.

FRENCH PLAYS.

On Friday evening, as we announced, M. Frederick Lemaitre played, for the first time this season, in the celebrated drama by Messrs. Anicet Bourgeois and D'Ennery, "La Dame de Saint-Tropez;" and the performances was repeated, by the express command of her Majesty, on Monday evening, and again on Wednesday.

The drama is founded, as many of our readers are aware, upon the story of Madame Lafarge—the husband appearing as Georges Hurtner (M. Lemaitre), a ship-builder, and the wife, Hortense d'Auberive (Mademoiselle Carisse). The poisoning is effected by a villainous cousin, Antoine Caussade (M. Dumeny); but Hortense is suspected until the last, when the real assassin is discovered by Georges, as he is seated before a look ing-glass. He loves long enough to clear the character of Hortense from all suspicion, and join her hand to that of a young physician, Charles d'Arbel (M. Pascal) who has for her early love, and of whom Georges has been jealous throughout the progress of the story.

As a drama, "La Dame de Saint-Tropez" holds a very low rank indeed: brought forward as an original piece, it was hissed from the first stage of the humblest of the minor theatres of London; so little does the interest advance throughout the five long acts. But the acting of M. Lemaitre is, possibly, the most extraordinary representation of physical pain ever witnessed on any and fully makes up for the comparative dreariness of the earlier portions of the play; for it is not until the commencement of the fourth act, that he puts forward his powers to their full extent. His anger at the discovery of his wife's infidelity, and at the time, at the close of the third act, prepares the audience for much that is to follow. In the next scene, we find him under the first operation of the poison, and with energy enough to fight up against the advancing suffering; but, immediately after the same time, as he supposes that his young wife, to whom he is tenderly attached, cares but little for him. The whole of this act is rich in dramatic effect; passages which would be excessively dangerous with an inferior artist, but which, by the attention of the audience when occupied by M. Lemaitre's powerful by-play, dissolve it can be called, when explaining at the business of the scene; and the testing of the poison by the physicians is carried on to the nicest point of detail. The torments of the poison are apparent in his wasted limbs, upon which his clothes hang loosely—in his sunken eyes, and parched gasping breath, and short hacking cough. But when he discovers the real character of his wife, and her treachery, his powerful face, his eyes appear to blaze with the fire of fever, and every action betokens the sensations of a man who knows no release from constant gnawing pain. Never for an instant was the business of the character forgotten, and the certain fall upon his death; indeed, so terribly real is the whole performance, that one would not readily see it repeated; only, however, from the desire not to have the highest sense of its representation weakened by a too frequent repetition. The effect upon the large audience, for the theatre was crowded to the ceiling, was most singular, and the cheering at the close of the most important scenes very enthusiastic. M. Lemaitre was called for at the end of the fourth act, and after the conclusion of the play. He was ably seconded by Mademoiselle Carisse; and M. Dumeny's rough villany, as Antoine, was admirably sustained.

M. Lemaitre was to have appeared as Robert Macaire on Monday; but "La Dame de Samt-Tropez" was substituted for "L'Auberge des Adrets," by the express command of the Queen, at a late hour in the afternoon. He is announced to play in his last famous character Le Docteur Noir, as well as "Le Roi Jean" du Roi" and "Marie Jeanne," neither of which pieces has been yet played on these boards.

With the exception of the performances above noticed, the week has been unusually barren in theatrical events. The Christmas pieces have, with few exceptions, proved sufficiently attractive: we expect, however, that the HAYMARKET burlesque will outrun all its companions, and that, when the Christmas pantomime will have a fair career. The LYCEUM announces the last time of "The Butterfly's Ball," the evening; but Mr. Shirley Brooks's piece of "The Wigwam," will be brought out on Monday, with [illegible] Mr. Paul Bedford, enacting a new extravaganza. At the HAYMARKET, Mr. [illegible] is daily rehearsal, and will be ready for representation in a fortnight or three weeks. Mr. Jerrold, we hear, has reasons for withholding his comedy just as present. Mr. Buckstone's new drama, of serious interest, will be brought out at the ADELPHI within a month: but, before that, during its preparation, "The Green Hussar" will be revived for a week or two. Mr. Scott, whose performance at the Princess' Theatre we noticed some weeks ago, has been playing in tragedy at the COBOURG, where the pantomime still attracts: and another version of "The Battle of Life," has been brought out at the STRAND.

There appears to be no truth in the report that a circus, on the plan of Franconi's, in the Champs Elysees, was about to be built in Leicester square. There is little doubt but that the speculation, if properly carried out, would prove a highly lucrative one: it is, however, understood, that the preliminary business, connected with the erection of Mr. Buckstone's new theatre, is nearly settled.

MUSIC.

ENGLISH VOCAL MUSIC.

The first Concert of a series of four, illustrative of the history of English Vocal Music, was given at Exeter-Hall on Monday last, in aid of the Hullah Testimonial Fund, for the erection of a Music Hall. We do not presume to understand the announcement. As the profits of these Concerts, and of those at last season, to be appropriated to purchase for Mr. Hullah an edifice for his singing schools? If such be the case, then is his reward most disproportionate to his merits. Mr. Hullah is neither an inventor nor a creator; he has been simply an imitator and adapter of another man's ideas. To M. Wilhelm is the credit due of introducing class singing as an educational system; and Mr. Hullah having studied it in France, was the fortunate importer into England of the plan which has so enriched himself and his publisher. We have frequently declared our opinion that the singing classes, as a general school of art, are a complete failure—how permanent benefit could arise from such a superficial mode of teaching. What has been the result? Mr Hullah is now obliged to go back to fundamental principles; and at the Concerts in honour of his name, professional aid is called in, and the ma first of an organ, and not of an orchestra. Mr. Hullah has ended all the fuss and parade, and Government patronage of the singing schools—a return to the older and wiser plan of still instruction. The "Testimonial" is a cruel irony: it will be the mere second of a failure. As to the Concerts in honour of the cause, there is interesting matter in them. We like the notion of a popular series of Ancient Concerts, at moderate prices; and it is to be hoped that the programmes will be honestly concocted, and not "got together" for trade purposes.

The first part comprised a "Gloria in Excelsis," by Dr. Christopher Tye; the 25th Psalm, verses 5 and 6, set to music by Farrant, who died in 1585; a Prayer, by Tallis, dated 1557; a Chorus, by Byrd; a Metrical Psalm, by Allison, and another, by Dr. John Bull, the composer of "God save the King," and the first Music Professor of Gresham College; and a Te Deum, by Dr. Child, who died in 1635, and was called "The English Palestrina." The second part was devoted to secular music, and consisted of part songs, madrigals, dialogues, &c., by Edwards (1580), Morley (1595), Dowland (1597), Wilbye (1598), Bennett (1601), Perabosco (1609), O. Gibbons (1612), H. Lawes (1634), Wilson (1644), and Saville (1660). Miss Rainforth, Miss Dolby, Mr. Manvers, and Mr. W. Seguin (the latter at a short notice, in place of Mr Leffler, who was indisposed), were the principal vocalists. The chorus was formed from the upper singing schools; and Mr. Mayneted as Conductor, and Mr. Oliver May, an excellent musician, as Organist. The Concert was, of course, somewhat heavy with such antiquated specimens; but, on the whole, to the amateur who loves to trace the forms and ideas in the development of music in this country, gratifying. The second of the series is on the 8th of February.

SACRED HARMONIC SOCIETY.

Haydn's Oratorio of "The Creation," attracted an immense audience at Exeter Hall on Tuesday evening. The amateurs are at home in the choruses; and as Miss Birch, Mr. Lockey, and Mr. Phillips, were the principal singers, the performance was very gratifying. Mr. Lockey was encored in the lovely air, "In native worth." Encores are an especial nuisance in this country; but, as the fine tenor displayed such marked improvement, it was not so badly disposed Mr. Phillips was in excellent voice: some of his lower notes were worthy of his high powers. It is to be regretted that the orchestra is not selected with more judgment. There is a marked deficiency in the first and second violins Amateurs occupy places amongst the stringed instruments who ought to be in less prominent positions. The recent Chef d'Attaque is not the nominal leader; the former must be looked for at another desk. The consequence of this instrumental weakness is that the voices, and brass, and the organ, drown the subject of the composer. The "Creation" will be repeated on Tuesday next. Spohr has accepted an engagement to conduct some of his finest works; and as Mendelssohn will be here to direct his "Elijah," which he has recently [illegible] we shall have important doings by the Society.

THE MADRIGAL SOCIETY.

The 106th Anniversary Festival of the Madrigal Society, which was last year illustrated in our columns, was celebrated on Thursday night, at Freemason's Hall. About 100 amateurs and professors sat down to dinner. Amongst the former were Lord Saltoun, the President; the Earl of Oxford; Lord H. Paget; the Hon. Mr Callaghan; the Hon. and Rev. H. Legge; Sir Andrew Barnard, K.C.B.; Rev. Wentworth Beaumont, Messrs. Flower, Bennett, Salomon, Evans, Hart Davis, Rogers, Ayrton, Hogarth, Bishop, Granelen, &c.; amongst the artists were Costa, T. Cooke, Ella, Anderson, Cipriani, Potter, W. Seguin, Parry, Machin, Goss, Elliott, Wilson, J. Bennett, Severn, Hawley, Barnby, Foord, Coward, Walmesley, &c. After the cloth was removed the choir was formed; the basses (20) sat at the cross table with the Chairman; the tenors to the left of the chair (16); the altos (12) to the right. Dr. Turle, Mr. Hawkins, with the boys of Westminster Abbey, the Chapel Royal &c., occupied a table in the centre. "Non nobis Domine" was given in a most impressive style. The Madrigal was from W. Byrd, T. Weelkes, J. Ward, Giles, J. Wilbye, T. Wilbye, Luca Marenzio, T. Morley, A. Bicci, G. Croce, T. Bateson, and J. Saville, stars of the 16th and 17th centuries. Several madrigals were encored, amongst which was Wilbye's incomparable "Sweet Honey Bees."

The loyal and occasional toasts were drunk with the musical cheers; and the health of Mr. Oliphant, the indefatigable Secretary, who was absent from a domestic affliction, was proposed by Lord Saltoun, in a complimentary speech. Nor was the recollection of Sir John Rogers, the former President, effaced; for his health was given by the venerable Mr. Street, the father of the Society, in a most appropriate speech. It was altogether a delightful evening: one that connects the past with the present, and bids us look forward with cheerfulness to the future in music.

MUSICAL CHIT CHAT.

The nights for the Queen's Concerts of Ancient Music, at the Hanover-square Rooms, this season, have been fixed as follow: March 10, and 24; April 21; May and 19; June 2, 16, and 30; and Handel's "Messiah," for the benefit of the Royal Society of Musicians, will be performed on the 7th of July—a month later than usual, owing to the Ancient Concerts taking place every fortnight after Easter, instead of every week, as heretofore. The Directors are Prince Albert, the King of Hanover, the Duke of Cambridge, the Duke of Wellington, the Archbishop of York, the Earls of Howe, Cawdor, and Westmoreland. The Conductor is Sir H. R. Bishop; and Messrs. J. Cooke and H. Blagrove, first violins. Mr. Crosdeare is the secretary. It is in contemplation to give a Concert in aid of the family of the late Mr. Kearns. The widow and children will receive only £49 per year from the Choral Fund. Sir George Smart has generously consented to act as Chairman of the Committee of Professors, and Mr. Costa has generously given his services as Conductor.

Letters from Milan state that the health of Fanny Elssler is so precarious, that she will be unable to fulfil the engagement accepted by her, for the Royal Italian Opera, Covent Garden. Every admirer of the pantomimic art will regret the absence of its most accomplished votary.

On Tuesday morning the remains of Mr. Hawkins, the alto singer, were consigned to their last resting place, in the cloisters of Westminster Abbey. The burial service, composed by Dr. Croft, was performed. The verse, "From hence, Lord, the secrets of my heart," was originally set by Purcell, which we always held in such estimation that it was retained in Dr. Croft's service. Seldom has the sublime work been heard with more impressiveness, as the members of the three, Croft, Hall, and Purcell, together with several eminent amateurs, assisted, making altogether, a choir of 100 voices. The procession, which was formed in the nave of the Cathedral, was retarded in its progress to the choir by the ill-timed curiosity of many persons, and it was with some difficulty Mr. Hobbs's exertions restored order. Mr. Turle presided at the organ, and assisted the professors were Sir George Smart, Mr. Goss, Mr. King, Mr. Mosley, Mr. Hobbs, &c. Upwards of 2000 persons were present. Mr. Hawkins was much respected, and, we are glad to learn, has left his widow in easy circumstances.

Advices from Berlin state that the triumph of Madame Pauline Viardot Garcia in German Opera has been a great one in Italian. She made her appearance on the 1st inst., in Romeo, in the "Barbiere," and, in two introduced airs by Chopin, electrified the audience by her brilliant execution. Her cousin, Mdlle. Antonia Garcia Mendy, who made her first appearance in London at the Italian Opera, created a great sensation as a concert singer. Madame Viardot was to appear in Jenny Lind's part, in Meyerbeer's "Camp of Silesia," in "Robert le Diable," Halevy's "Juive," &c. Fanny Lind is carefully preserved in Vienna, on her engagements in Donizetti's "Fille du Regiment," in German. She was to remain in Vienna until the end of February. Berdau, the new tenor, was to appear shortly at the Parisian Académie Royale, in Halevy's "Reine de Chypre." On Monday last Madame Persiani had her benefit at the Italian Opera in Paris, when the "Barbiere" was performed. The first Conservatoire Concert for the season, under Habeneck was to have been given on Sunday last. Flotow, the composer of "Stradella" and of "L'ame en peine," is in Vienna, to superintend the production of a new opera. Mdlle. Cornelie Falcon appeared last season at her Majesty's Theatre, improved as an actress; her singing, that she has been assigned the part of Donna Elvira, in Mozart's "Don Juan," Grisi being the Donna Anna; Persiani, Zerlina; Mario, Don Ottavio; Lablache, Leporello; and Coletti, Don Juan. La Barbieri has been well received at Parma in Verdi's "Attila" and "Ernani." Duprez's leave of absence begins in March, and he will go to Germany for four months to sing in German. He has already sung on the English, Italian, and Spanish stage.

On Wednesday Mr. G. Robinson gave his [illegible] Concert at the Hanover-square Rooms, assisted by Miss Birch, Miss Dolby, Mr. Lockey, Mr. Phillips, Herr Reichardt, Signor Belletti, Mr. Blagrove, and Mr. Benedict. Mr. J. B. Smith gave his third Concert at the same place. On Monday, at Crosby Hall, will be the first of Dando's Quartet Concerts. On Tuesday, the "Creation" will be repeated at Exeter Hall: and the [illegible] meeting of the Melodists' Club will take place at Freemasons' Hall. On Wednesday, the fourth of the Sacred Concerts at Crosby Hall; and Mr. Turner's sixteenth Annual Concert at the Music Hall; and Madame Dulcken's first Soirée Musicale, in Harley-street. On Tuesday, the anniversary of Burns's birth, Mr. Wilson will give his Entertainment at the Music Hall.

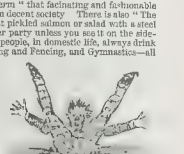
Mr. WILSON This vocalist has, in the most generous manner, proposed to give his Scottish Entertainment on Tuesday next, at the Music Hall, in Store-street, on behalf of the distressed Highlanders. Mr. Wilson sang at a Concert at Brighton on Friday night.

EVERYBODY'S COLUMN.

BY ALBERT SMITH.

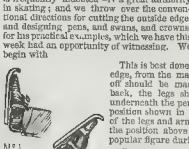
THE SKATER'S COMPANION

At the approach of any season of a popular sport and pastime of the people of England, we generally see various little books make their appearance to guide the tyro in the particular amusement. Thus, in summer we have "The Swimmer's Manual," filled with directions for cutting canes, sailing, smoking cigars, and flying kites in the water, and other remarkable feats which nobody would ever think of doing; but which feeble-minded individuals believe they have only to read to accomplish. Then there is "The Fokker's Pocket-book," teeming with various methods of shaving, in what the professors term "that fascinating and fashionable dance," none of which are ever perpetrated in decent society. There is also "The Handbook of Elegance," telling you not to eat pickled salmon or salad with a steel knife; and never to ask for beer at a dinner party unless you see it on the sideboard; even in houses where you know the people, in domestic life, always drink it every day. We have also the Arts of Boxing and Fencing, and Gymnastics—all the simplest things in the world, to be learned from directions—and this last frost has brought out all the editions of "The Skater's Footbook" from their repose in the bookseller's windows, as it has drawn forth the skates themselves at the ironmonger's doors.



MR. STRAGGLES PERFORMING "THE SPREAD EAGLE."

Our friend, Mr. Straggles—a man of much general knowledge, by whom our "Column" is frequently indebted—is a great authority in skating; and we throw over the conventional directions for cutting the outside edge, and designing pens, and swans, and crowns, for his practical examples, which we have this week had an opportunity of witnessing. We begin with

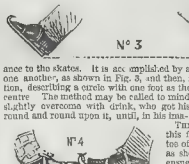


No. 1

CUTTING THE OUTSIDE EDGE. Allowing the nose to be the middle point of the body, Mr. Straggles usually succeeds in this feat, generally choosing the time when young ladies are looking on, by proceeding as follows:—He proceeds in a contrary direction to the former one: that is to say, up the slant of the ice towards the ground, and then throws himself forward, with the skates assume the position shown in Fig. 2. If a proper impetus has been obtained, Mr. Straggles can go some distance on the toes of his skates and the point of his nose, which never fails to excite the cheers of the spectators.

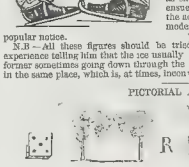
No. 2

THE CURVE SKATE. Mr. Straggles does this figure best upon very smooth ice, where the cuts do not offer much resistance to the skates. It is accomplished by allowing his feet to shoot away from one another, as shown in Fig. 3, and then, in the endeavour to recover his position, describing a circle with one foot as the other sticks in a hole and forms the centre. The method may be called to mind in the case of the Chelsea pensioner slightly overcome with drink, who got his wooden leg in a plug-hole, and went round and round upon it, until, in his imagination, he had gone many miles.



No. 3

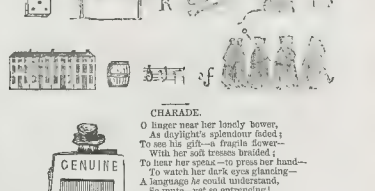
THE LONG AND SHORT.—The first part of this feat is accomplished by hooking the toe of the skate in that of somebody else's, as shown in Fig. 4, when a fall is safe to ensue. The second part, or Bolt, is simply the act of running away afterwards, which modest minds give way to, shrinking from popular notice.



No. 4

N.B.—All these figures should be tried on shallow water, Mr. Straggles's experience telling him that the ice usually breaks on a fall, and that the persons going down through the thin ice does not always come up again in the same place, which is, at times, inconvenient.

PICTORIAL AXIOM.



CHARADE.

O linger near her lonely bower,
As daylight's splendour fades!
To see his gift—a fragile flower—
With her soft tresses braided;
To hear her speak—to press her hand—
To watch her dark eyes glancing—
A language he could understand,
So much—yet so entrancing!
Was it not bliss? and yet it seems,
Without My First his fairy dreams
So much—yet so entrancing!
Had surely never furnished themes
For poet's meditations.

The vow pronounced the bridal o'er—
They leave at once old England's shore—
Gay people always bolt away
Like culprits, on their wedding-day,
But ere they cross the Channel,
The firefly roams 'till the birds half-dead,
And every other person's head
Is swathed in silk or flannel.
And washed-out hairs slide about,
Each strives to keep one handy;
And steward's boys rush in and out
With towels, mops, and brandy.
By dullest heads it may be reckon'd,
That everybody is My SECOND.

Now for My WHOLE. Are you so, pray?
And if you are, without delay
Get to your [illegible] and take a swing,
Or mount your [illegible]-frame thing
And let the worst come to the worst,
You'll be my second or My FIRST.

ETHIOPIAN INTERROGATIVE.

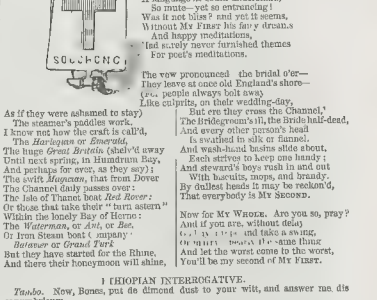
Thumbo. Now, Bones, put de dimond dust to your wit, and answer me dis conumbrickum.

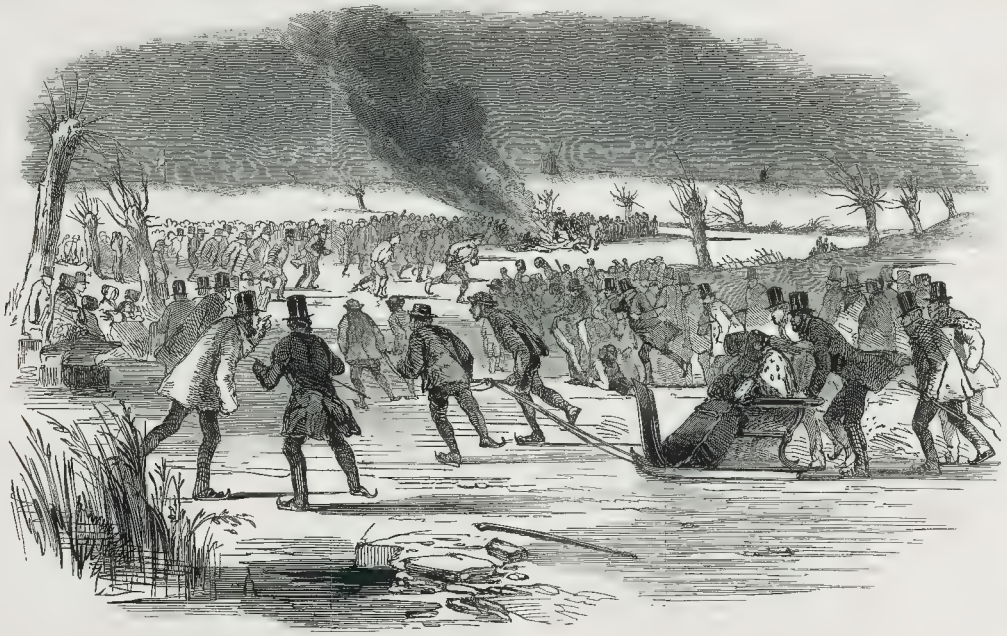
Bones. I give him up. Never was clever at multiplicashuns.

Thumbo. Well, then, listen here. What is——

Bones. Become——

Thumbo. No; dat not it. What is de best liquor dat de respectable and identical Old Joe can take for hims cough, which so bad it make him kick up behindand before, and tumble into pieces every time: which is berry inconvenient in the middle of a Polkums? What is dat specially and tickler best liquor, I say?





SKATING IN LINCOLNSHIRE.

SKATING IN LINCOLNSHIRE.

Our Illustration represents a spirited scene in the neighbourhood of the Washes of Lincolnshire and Cambridgeshire, during the late frost.

Our metropolitan Skaters are, comparatively speaking, but little aware of the extreme interest attached to Skating in the above counties. The sport is there extensively patronised by the nobility and gentry; and, in favourable seasons, ladies in sledges participate in the healthful ice-pastime. By aid of railway transit, these animated scenes are frequented by thousands of persons from all parts of the country, as well as from the metropolis; and, as the means of transit increase, we are persuaded that the above district will be visited by still greater numbers.

During the past week, the weather has been exceedingly favourable for Skating; and, on Wednesday last, the following important match for the Championship, "open to all England," was decided on Crowland Wash, when about 4000 persons were present, including lady-skaters. Sixteen competitors for the prize were entered, and the results were as under:—

Cross	beat	Hercot	Cross	beat	Hodgson
Hodgson	,,	Speechley	Chesterfield	,,	Chambers
Chesterfield	,,	Smith	Sharman	,,	Williams
Chambers	,,	Atkin	Clarke	,,	Strickland
Williams	,,	Darlow
Sharman	,,	Blood	Cross	beat	Chesterfield
Clarke	,,	Lehair	Clarke	,,	Sharman
Strickland	,,	Forth
			Clarke	beat	Cross

The length of "the Course" is half a mile, in a direct line; the distance run, two miles; being twice over the same ground.

In the deciding contest, won by Clarke, the first mile was run in three minutes and fourteen seconds; the two miles in seven minutes and four seconds. Great rivalry exists between the skaters of Crowland and Whittlesea. Cross, the ex-champion, is a native of Whaplad, near Crowland; and Clarke, a native of Yaxley, near Whittlesea Mere; both are of the better class of labourers. The matches were under the superintendence of James Whitsed, Esq., and Phillips, Esq., both of Crowland; and the whole passed off without the slightest dispute, or ill feeling.

Among the records of Lincolnshire Skating, the fastest Skater was a person named Staple, who, in the year 1816, ran a straight mile in two minutes and forty-five seconds, in still weather; and, out of fifty-four matches, he won fifty-three. For a short distance, a Mr. Perkins, of Thorney Abbey, was, perhaps, the fastest Skater ever known.

In favourable seasons, cricket matches have been played on the ice: its extent is about twenty miles.

The skate for running is different in shape to those used by the ornamental Skaters, the former being very shallow in the blade towards the toes, and forming nearly a straight line or inclined plane.

MODEL OF ANCIENT JERUSALEM.

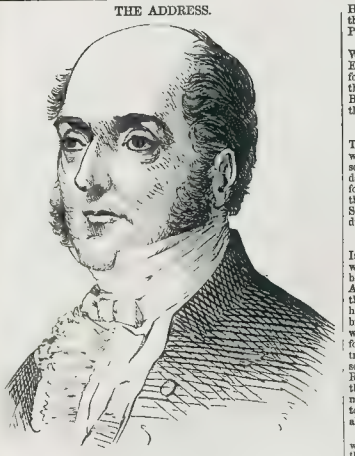
Jerusalem! The very word is a spell and talisman to conjure up from the grave of history the shades of the Twelve Tribes—the glory of the Temple with the Hundred Gates—the pride, pomp, and circumstance, of Solomon, in all his glory the Pharisees and the Sadducees, both deadly hypocrites the siege, the sack, the slaughter, and smoking ruin, by Titus Vespasian, one of the acts of "La Clemenza di Tito"—the preachings and sufferings, even to the death, most ignominious, of the Apostles and their Divine Master—the prophecies of Jeremiah and of our blessed Saviour, fulfilled to the very letter—these, and a host of other considerations, lead to the soul a sad yet sacred excitement when we gaze upon a picture or model of the "City of Peace." Miserable misnomer! for therein peace hath seldom been.

Mr. Brunetti, of Dublin, a gentleman who professes to be neither artist nor architect, but only an amateur, has constructed a model of Jerusalem, such as that city stood in the days of Herod, the King, or rather Pilatus the Tetrach. With indefatigable research from authorities which can most safely be relied on, Mr. Brunetti has given a local habitation to every name of street and edifice, hill, brook and valley, that are read of either in the Holy Scriptures, or in the works of the Hebrew Xenophon, Josephus. Decidedly the task was most difficult, and almost impossible to be divested of inaccuracies; and we doubt not that some inaccuracies have crept into this admirable work of Mr. Brunetti. For instance, there is no authority to show that the exterior wall was built in the days of our Saviour, but quite the reverse. For, notoriously, it was the custom then and there, as it has been almost everywhere in later days, to inflict the punishment of death extra muros. But this is a moot question; and, on the whole, we fully believe Mr. Brunetti's work to be a very near approach to the truth, if not the truth itself: and we cordially wish him success with his undertaking.

BRUNETTI'S MODEL OF ANCIENT JERUSALEM.

1. Herod's Palace
2. Prison
3. Castle of David
4. Hippicus
5. Phasaëlis
6. Mariamne
7. [illegible]
8. [illegible]
9. [illegible]
10. High Gate
11. Ditto of Benjamin
12. Gate of Gennath
13. Hebron Gate
14. Gate of Ephraim
15. Dung Gate
16. East Gate
17. Stairs
18. Tower lying out
19. Tomb of David
20. House of Caiphas
21. Ditto of Annas
22. Cenaculum
23. House of Mnesabasin
24. Pool of Siloam
25. Gate of the Fountain
26. Well of the Virgin
27. Holy of Holies
28. Inner Porches
29. Outer Porches
30. Beautiful Gate
31. Solomon's Porch
32. Golden Gate
33. House of Mahomet
34. Castle of Antonia
35. Palace of Acra
36. Ditto of Helena
37. Council House
38. Courts of Justice
39. Prætorium
40. Calvary
41. Holy Sepulchre
42. Gate of Judgement
43. Prison of Peter
44. Pool of Hezekiah
45. Suburbs
46. Tower of Psephina
47. Camp of Assyrians
48. Amphitheatre
49. Theatre
50. Gate of Ephrem
51. Road to Emmaus
52. Ditto to Samaria
53. Grotto of Jeremiah
54. Old Gate
55. Fish Gate
56. Fish Pool, &c.
57. Sheep Gate
58. Pool of Bethesda
59. Pool of Gihon
60. Aqueduct
61. Road to Bethlehem
62. Valley of Hinnom
63. House of Caiphas
64. Haceldama
65. King's Gardens
66. Mulberry Tree
67. En Rogel
68. Tomb of the Virgin
69. Caves
70. [illegible]
71. Where Isaiah was sawed
72. Tomb of Zachary
73. Ditto of Absolom
74. Ditto of St. James
75. Hill of Offence
76. Rock of Siloam
77. Jewish Cemetery
78. Path to Bethany
79. Where Jesus wept
80. Place of Ascension

THE ADDRESS.



LORD HATHERTON.

THE Address, in reply to the Speech from the Throne, is much more simply arranged in the House of Commons than in the French Chambers; custom has made it contrary to etiquette to oppose the Address, except under unusual circumstances; the discussion gives an opportunity to the Minister in person, or through the movers and seconders, who, of course, belong to the party in office, to explain more fully the scope of his policy than he could do in the Sovereign's Speech. The debate is, generally, all concord and agreement: if causes of discord exist, they are waived till a fitter opportunity, and knowledge and talent are not wasted on a form: in the French Chambers, on the contrary, the debates on the Address are continued through many days, are among the hottest of the session, and the result is the test of the Minister's political power. It is a satisfaction to find there is one thing at least that they do not "manage better in France." On our political stage "the curtain rises to soft music," though it often swells through a rapid crescendo movement to positive discord. The prelude, however, is pleasant and gentlemanly—the shaking hands before the fight.

"The first evening of the Session is devoted partly to the interchange of kindly and unanimous wishes, and partly to those desultory and irresponsible profusions with which Senates, as well as individuals, are wont to break the ground before affairs of overwhelming importance. As in the old play, Rumour or History delivers a prologue reciting the immediate antecedents of the story. Then enter the chief persons of the drama, one by one, and introduce themselves to the audience with conversation artfully contrived to illustrate their characters without precipitating the plot."

So says the Times; but, to descend more to details, there are two prologues in the movers and seconders in each House. On the present occasion, the mover in the House of Peers was Lord Hatherton; the seconder, Lord Carew. In the Commons, Mr. C. Howard, M.P. for East Cumberland, moved the Address; and Mr. Ricardo, M.P. for Stoke-on-Trent, seconded it. We give Portraits of Lord Hatherton and Mr. Ricardo. We may add that the task of opening the debate, either as mover or seconder, is often trusted to some young Member of Parliament, as an opportunity of introducing himself to the House; he is rather fettered in his topics, certainly, but talent can display itself in the style and mode of treatment: many of our statesmen have thus made their début. But, of late years, the practice has been departed from; last session the Address in the Commons was seconded by Lord Francis Egerton, who had been in Parliament many years; and neither Mr. Howard nor Mr. Ricardo are new Members.

LORD HATHERTON.

EDWARD J. LITTLETON, Baron Hatherton, of Hatherton, in the county of Stafford, was born in 1791; he succeeded to the estate of his grand uncle, Sir Edward Littleton, in 1812, when, by sign manual, he adopted the name, instead of his own patronymic of Walhouse. He sat in the House of Commons, for Staffordshire, as Mr. Littleton, and has filled the office of Chief Secretary for Ireland. He was elevated to the Peerage in 1835.

LORD CAREW,

Who seconded the Address in the House of Lords, is both an Irish and English Peer. He is Robert Shapland Carew, Baron Carew, of Wexford, in the Peerage of Ireland, and Baron Carew, of Castleborough, in that of the United Kingdom. He was born in 1787. He is the first Baron of the title, which was created in 1834. He is connected with the Carews of Devonshire.

MR. C. HOWARD, M.P.

The mover of the Address in the Commons, was the Hon. Charles Wentworth George Howard, the member for East Cumberland. He is a younger son of the sixth Earl of Carlisle, and was born in 1814. He is married to a daughter of Sir J. Parke, Baron of the Exchequer. He was returned for East Cumberland in 1840, on the death of Mr. Aglionby. In moving the Address, he confined himself strictly to the topics of the Royal Speech, and treated them briefly and modestly; he discharged the duty of the mover, but did not step beyond it.

MR. RICARDO, M.P.

Is a more practised speaker than the hon. gentleman he seconded, and went at some length into the policy of the Government; he set the debate fairly going. At a crisis when the Corn Laws and Navigation Acts are disappearing, and when Government is obliged to break through some of the strict principles of political economy, Mr. Ricardo has almost an hereditary title to be heard. He is related to the celebrated writer on that science, whose works are frequently cited along with those of Adam Smith. The family is of Jewish origin, and was founded by the Economist, who, being discarded by his parents for contracting a Christian marriage, left Holland, where he was brought up, settled in London, as a stock-broker; and amassed a large fortune. Mr. Ricardo is a merchant: on the present occasion, a better supporter of the Ministerial policy could not have been found. The Political Economist broke out in the following passage, which is rather above the usual tone of such speeches of ceremony as these opening harangues; he was alluding to the Navigation Laws:—

"When he considered that this was an island kingdom—that it had colonies washed by every sea—that its subjects, scattered throughout the four quarters of the globe, were almost in daily communication with each other—when he considered that our sailors were toiling in the seas of science in the frozen ocean, or braving dangers in the cause of humanity in the torrid zone—that our merchants were the best customers in all the markets of the world, and that our manufacturers were surpassed by none in industry and ingenuity—when he reflected on the resources of this country of every kind, he would rather confide in them than in the miserable remnant of laws made in other times and circumstances, which failed when made, which had since led to the separation of two countries from the continent of America; and were now a fruitful source of discontent in those dependencies from which we had withdrawn our prohibitions."

Mr. Ricardo sits for Stoke-on-Trent.

THE SPEAKER'S STATE COACH.

THE earliest State Coach in English domestic history is, probably, that of Anne Boleyn, about the year 1532; although this was a rather rude carriage, covered with cloth of gold. Elizabeth's "coach" was open at the sides, so that it was scarcely entitled to that name. The State Coach of Charles I. was richly gilt on the exterior, and lined with crimson velvet; and a rare print of this costly vehicle shows it to be more nearly allied than any other to the State Coach used in our times.

Of the superb items of olden pageantry, four specimens are kept in the metropolis: that of the Sovereign; of the Lord Chancellor; the Speaker of the House of Commons; and of the Lord Mayor. With the first and last of these our readers are somewhat familiar, from our periodical representations of Royal and Civic Pageants. Not so, however, the Speaker's State Coach, of which the public see little, and hear less than its sculpturesque richness deserves.

THE HIND STANDARD.

J. L. RICARDO, ESQ., M.P.

Its form is shown in our Illustration; and we find its outline to correspond nearly with a coach sculptured on the monument of Thomas Thynne, in Westminster Abbey, who was assassinated in 1682; the scene of the murder being represented on the monument, and showing Thynne to have been killed in his carriage. This is, however, a sort of chariot, with a low perch, nearly touching the ground, and the upper panels are filled with glass. Now, the Speaker's Coach is traditionally said to have been the State Coach of Oliver Cromwell; but we are not aware of the authority for this statement. We are inclined to consider the Coach of the time of William the Third.

The Speaker's Coach is of considerably smaller dimensions than either the Sovereign's or the Lord Mayor's; but, in design, is, to our thinking, more tasteful. It is elaborately carved throughout, and heavily gilt, and but sparingly picked out black. At the several angles are well-designed figures; those supporting the body representing impersonations of naval and military prowess, Plenty, &c. The box is held by two larger figures of Plenty; the hammer-cloth is of crimson velvet, trimmed with silver fringe; and the footboard is borne by two lions, and surmounted with a large grotesque mask.

We have separately engraved the Hind Standard, to show its highly sculptured character, it is crowded with figures and devices of antique and modern date.

The framework of the panels is richly carved; and the roof has a pierced parapet or border. The upper, side, and front panels, are filled with splendid Vauxhall plates of glass. The lower panels are very effectively painted with emblematic scenes. The Door-panel, shown in our Engraving, has a seated figure of Britannia, to whom female figures are bringing fruits, the horn of plenty, &c. The opposite door has also a seated figure, and another presenting the Bill of Rights with Liberty, Fame, and Justice. Beneath each door and panel, are sculptured maces, emblematic of the Speaker's authority, surmounted with a cap. In the four side panels are painted emblematic figures of Literature, Architecture, Science, and Plenty.

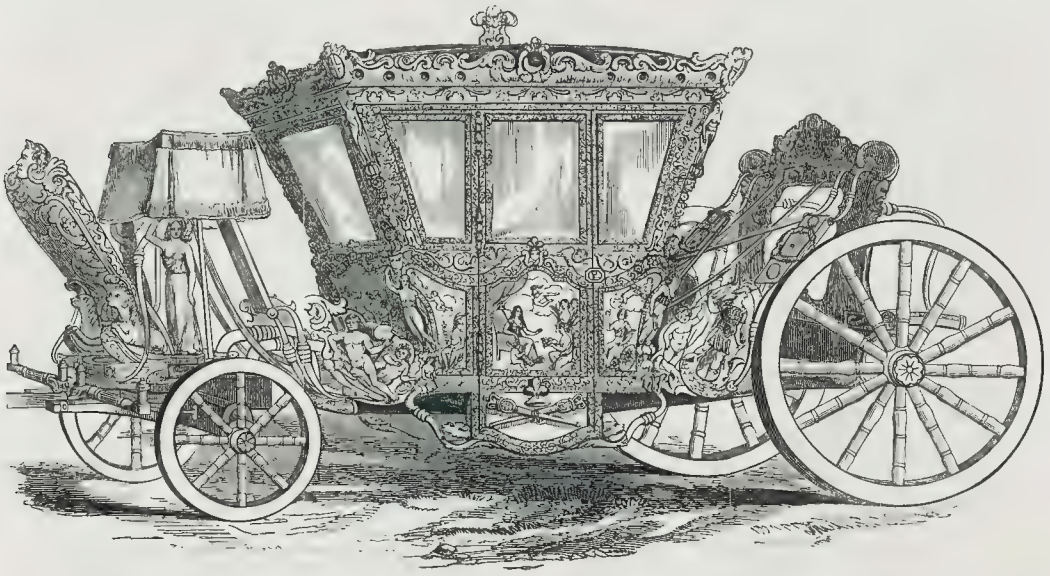
The back panel has a finer composition of Britannia, wearing a mural crown: St. Paul's Cathedral, shipping, &c., in the distance. The front panel, also, bears several emblematic figures. In the lower part of the pictures in the principal panels is emblazoned the Speaker's arms; and in the side panel pictures, the right hon. gentleman's crest. The coach is lined and trimmed with dark crimson velvet; it has two seats, and a centre one; on the latter sit the Speaker's Mace-Bearer and Sword-Bearer; and his Chaplain and Train-Bearer sit facing the Speaker; all wearing robes of State.

This Coach is used by the Speaker on opening Parliament, presenting addresses to the Sovereign, attending Levees; and, indeed, on State occasions, generally; when it is drawn by a pair of horses, in State harness.

The Coach is kept at the Royal Mews, in Princes-street, Westminster; and, visitors may inspect the golden curiosity for a trifling gratuity, by application at the left-hand lodge.

DIPLOMATIC ETIQUETTE.—The Ministers of Austria, Russia, and Prussia did not attend the opening of Parliament with the rest of the corps diplomatique, in consequence of the formal protest contained in her Majesty's speech against the recent annexation of Cracow. No doubt this step was taken by their Excellencies as a mark of deference and respect to an opinion so forcibly entertained and expressed by the Sovereign and Parliament of this country, with reference to the violation of the Treaty of Vienna by their respective Courts.

THE SMALL DEBTS ACT.—This act will be put into immediate operation throughout the several counties. The notice required to be given expired yesterday (Friday), and her Majesty will, with the advice of the Privy Council, fix the period and the several places when and where it shall take effect; after which period so to be fixed, parties who bring actions under 20*l.* in the superior courts will have to pay the costs of the same.



THE SPEAKER'S STATE COACH.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, JAN. 24.—Third Sunday after Epiphany.
MONDAY, 25.—Conversion of St. Paul.
TUESDAY, 26. Venus sets 5h. 26m. p.m.
WEDNESDAY, 27. Mercury sets 5h. 53m. p.m.
THURSDAY, 28. Jupiter sets 8h. 53m. a.m.
FRIDAY, 29. Uranus sets 10h. 54m. p.m.
SATURDAY, 30.—Martyrdom King Charles I.

HIGH WATER at London-bridge for the Week ending January 30

Monday		Tuesday		Wednesday		Thursday.		Friday		Saturday.
M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.
h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.
8 23	9 0	9 37	10 17	10 58	11 38	0 0	0 19	0 39	1 7	1 32	1 51

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"F. R. F.," Bristol.—L—— "Treatise on Railways."
"Curiosity" is thanked: but the Woolsack As cannot has already been illustrated
"George † †."—Apply at the College.
"F. T. S.," Chatham.—The anti-dated Bill is not strictly legal
"A. B. C.," Newbury, should wait for Mr. Warren's edition of "Blackstone's Commentaries;"—or the last edition of "The Cabinet Lawyer," a cheap work, very
"A Subscriber," Shropshire.—Van Amburgh is alive, but we know not his "whereabout."—We hear that Landseer is painting a fine picture of the Lion Tamer and his noble animals
"T \ The next of the Series will be duly announced.
"M. H. S.," Sheffield, should obtain the interest of a Member of Parliament
"Look-before-I-leap," Bristol, should pay the injunction of his own nom, as regards all Lotteries, Foreign or English
"S. B. R.," near Aberconway.—We have not received the Drawings.
"P—— T——" a Commercial System."—Apply for a Publisher, at 86, Fleet-street.
"R. J." Dale, Wales.—Mr. Butler resides, we believe, in New York
"A Constant Reader"—The Charades will be continued occasionally
"A Step-before Subscriber."—The cover for Vol. IX. of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS are now ready, and may be had, by order, through any bookseller.
"S. T." Clapham.—The coal will be about 20*l.*
"A Constant Reader," Penzance, refers to "The Charities of London," which useful volume contains the particulars of all the Public Schools
"After Tea" should turn Price's Patent Composite Candles, but take care to obtain the genuine
"A. P. S." The lady named is Mrs. T. German Reid
"F. L.," Shipdam, is thanked for the impression of the monastic seal, and the particulars of the old mill; but we cannot engrave them.
"A E," Sheffield.—No. 231 of our Journal contains an Engraving of Sir Charles Napier's Steam-frigate, &c.&c.
"A Subscriber" should prefer the Government Annuity
"Lemmington" may obtain, by order of any bookseller, two pamphlets on Marriage with a Deceased Wife's Sister; published by Benning and Co., Fleet-street.
"J. W." Sir E. Bulwer Lytton is engraved in No. 243 of our Journal; Mr. Macaulay, in No. 213.—Almost every London or Paris newspaper will give the other information required.
"A Constant Reader" should advertise his invention, and he may, probably, find a purchaser or patron.
"Puck," and "G. D."—We cannot undertake to reply to guesses of Charades.
"A Subscriber," Newcastle.—"The Bookbinder." Knight's "Guide to Trade."
"W. T.," Southnolton. The announcement will be duly made
"Two or Three Country Readers," Weston. The middle syllable of "Hebrides" is short
"S. B.," Haddenham, is thanked for the Drawings.
"Verax," Potter's Bar.—Thanks
"A. Z.," Maidstone. If a person of property die intestate, leaving a parent, and brothers and sisters, the property must be divided among them, in equal proportions
"Wessex."—We do not know the organ.
"G. S. N.," Liverpool. Madame Vestris was born March 1*st,* 1796, and Mme Taglioni in 1808. The latter is, therefore, the youngest. Charles Mathews was born in 1802
"Lincoln."—We cannot undertake to criticise every musical production sent to the office, and the notices of any other journal cannot be accepted.
"C. M. R."—We will ascertain by next week the amounts required to purchase the Annuity.
"Alice" Lord A has one surviving brother, a Rear-Admiral in the Royal Navy.
"The Chevalier De C—" The husband of the Princess Augusta of Cambridge is Frederick William Charles George Ernest Adolphus Gustavus, Hereditary Grand Duke of Mecklenburg Strelitz, elder son and heir-apparent of the present reigning Grand Duke.
"L. Z."—When forms of etiquette can be dispensed with; "he and his," "wife or power," without the addition of "Lordship," may be used. When the field of an Arms is "argent," and the first charge "sable," the heavens should be "white and black." When the field is "sable," and the first charge "argent," then the colours of the heavens are reversed.
"J. S. O." The National Debt of England is £791,3*s.*6*d*;140; that of France, 4,1*s*7,7*s*6; 366 francs: twenty-five francs should be reckoned for a pound sterling.
"R. L. B." Aston Clinton. Subscriptions to the Fund for the Relief of Extreme Distress in Ireland and Scotland, are received by the principal London Bankers: the Office of the Association at the South Sea House (or benevolent Correspondent's bank should not be kept split.
"A Constant Purchaser" is thanked. At page 21 and 23, the address of Milton's House should be No 19, York-street, not Duke-street, Westminster.
"Atalanta." We only know the gentleman by his published works.
"Mrs Harris."—Declined
"Light Dragoon"—We have not room.
"Syntax."—Apply to Messrs. Saunders and Otley, Public Library, Conduit-street, Hanover-square
"E. H. Z." We cannot tell.
"A Constant Reader." To what line of acting does our Correspondent refer?
"A Subscriber," Bath.—"White's Ephemeris" will give the information sought.
"A Subscriber," Aylesbury, should address a letter to the Secretary of the Institution
"Pelton."—We have not room for the names of the Parliamentary Committee in question
"B. B. B." "Darley's Geometrical Companion" is a good work.
"Electricus."—We regret that we have not space to give the information.
"Verax," Potter's Bar, is thanked for the lithograph
"W. A." informs us that the Prize offered, through the columns of the Times newspaper, for the best Poem on "Wyatt's Statue of the Great Duke," has been awarded to Mr. William Alexander, of Lower College, Oxford. Mr. Alexander's Poem is in form part of a work on the exhausted Era of Wellington and his companions in arms, which will soon appear.
"L. L. D." There is no one work of the kind: if the period meant is since the Union in 1800, a useful mass of facts may be found in Sprung Rice's (now Lord Monteagle's) celebrated Speech, when the Whigs were in office, on Mr. O'Connell's Repeal motion. (See Hansard.)
"A Subscriber," Sunderland. The four first Volumes can be had, bound in cloth, gilt; the 5th is still on sale, in single Numbers. The Panorama of London, is urged to go free by post, price 1*s*
"Anon Leeds."—We believe a Suspension-bridge across the Mersey, to be still in contemplation

The Royal Shetland Shawl, &c., Receipt Book, with the last Chart next week.
LOSS OF THE "SERIUS."—Mr. Mallory's interesting Sketches of the Wreck did not reach us in time for engraving this week: but they shall appear next.

ERRATUM (To "W. B.," Oldham; "An Artist;" "An Old Subscriber," Limerick; "An Amateur Artist," Brighton.)—At page 22 of the present Volume, in describing the colours of Mulready's picture of "Choosing the Wedding Gown," we have been led into an error, through a mistake of [illegible] version of our Engraving for one coloured after the original. For [illegible] are the true colours, as given in the description, namely, [illegible] petticoat, crimson hat, white feathers in dress, green over [illegible] or violet-coloured skirt; complexion, fair; hair light; articles upon the stool, blue velvet, with yellow flowers and green; pouch, brown; counter, brown (burnt sienna); mercer's cloak, dark green; stockings, black; hair, powdered; boy's coat and cap, purple; candle-shade, white; shop wall, lemon-colour, and light green." To this we may add, ribbon in the lady's hat, blue; shopwoman's dress, lake; shawl, blue; stool, red; mercer's handkerchief, pink.

BOOKS, &c., RECEIVED DURING THE WEEK.

[illegible]-day Brighton.—Knight's Weekly Volume.——Punctuation Reduced to a System.——The Children's Monthly Garden.——The Illustrated Juvenile Library.
Music. She's on my heart. Song——The Order of Daily Service.

 We beg to inform our numerous Country Subscribers, that the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS may be received free from crease, if they will only request their Agent, who supplies the Paper, to send it in the same manner as it is sent direct from our Office. The beautiful and expensive Fine Art Engravings would then be received as perfect as they come from the Press; and the collection of Numbers at the end of each half-year would be in a perfect state for binding. The extra expense incurred, by increasing the size of the envelope for the Paper would not amount to more than three halfpence a year for each annual Subscriber.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, JANUARY 23, 1847.

THE Ministry have plunged at once into business. The French Chamber wastes ten days or a fortnight in getting up the Reply to the Royal Speech: such an expenditure of time would not be permitted in England; there is abundant toleration even for the lengthiest and most prosy of orators, but he must speak upon a question, if not to one; he must say something with a purpose, or the semblance of a purpose. Ten precious days spent in discussing the sentences and periods of a compliment, would raise an outcry here, that no Ministry would venture to excite. So we dispose of the Address in one debate, with a short supplement, and then turn to the work before us.

The discussion on the Address itself furnished an alarming list of "necessities." Setting aside the great and overwhelming one, the scarcity of food, there seems to have been a vast amount of suffering occasioned by sheer mismanagement and abuse of powers. The Labour Act has been the means of creating a perfect army of paid officials—10,000 is the number stated—who have absorbed what might have been better bestowed: the Act is to be superseded, or extensively changed. The mockery of a Poor Law, which has been inflicted on Ireland, has aggravated the distress; a more cruel satire on relief cannot well be imagined. The Law forbids all out-door relief, even to the extent of a single meal of food; it cannot recognise the destitution of the country till it has gathered it into a mass within four walls. Crowding and bad ventilation, produce their usual effect, and "the fever"—words of frightful meaning in Ireland—breaks out. If any room is left, the applicants are admitted to swell the amount of disease within the house, or they are denied all relief, and sent to add to the victims of starvation outside it. Here is the evil of making such a law as that which governs the relief of the poor, a rigid, unchangeable statute. Those who put it into operation on the spot, should be allowed some discretion; it appears that, in many instances, Boards of Guardians wished to have the power of giving out-door relief in the shape of food; with hundreds falling round them, they must write for permission to do what is the merest act of common sense and prudence, to the Poor Law Commissioners at Dublin; after due official delay, they in every case receive—a positive refusal! A better example of the uselessness and mischief of these great central authorities could not be found; if they are of any utility at all, surely it ought to be from their power of suspending the strict letter of the statute, when it is inflicting ruin on the country. If they cannot do this, they may as well be abolished; if they can do it, and refuse, then they ought to be called to account for their folly, if it is nothing worse; at such a time as this errors have all the effect of crimes; "weakness in dealing with great questions," says Burke, "is never innoxious." The fact of men wishing to tax themselves justly and legally for the support of the poor in the very midst of their own local knowledge tells them is the best, being prevented from doing so by a "Central Board," is monstrous at such a juncture. That people should not be allowed to "do as they like with their own," is reasonable enough; but that the State should pay and support a knot of functionaries, to forbid people from doing good, and spending their property in the most sacred of duties, is something passing strange. A foreigner would hardly credit it, and in China it would be incomprehensible. To us, who see these facts enlarged over and over again in the British Parliament, the law appears to have emanated from Bedlam, for rationality it does not possess. There is such a thing as over-governing, as well as mis-governing, and Central Commissions often illustrate it. They seem to labour under a perpetual dread that, left to themselves, mankind will give away all their substance to paupers—will ruin themselves by extreme benevolence. It is a lost fear; all the Boards of Guardians we know are running the chance of having keen sense of the value of money, and a sufficiently earnest desire to keep the rates as low as possible. We do not believe they would ruin themselves for any man's persuasion, and might very safely be left to their own discretion in the disbursement of their own funds. But, an opinion seems growing up that Government can do everything better for everybody than anybody can do it for themselves. Self-preservation will soon have to be enforced by Act of Parliament, and we may see a Commission created, without whose leave the Chamberlain shall not pitch the Corporation cash-box into the Thames! And, as the City, left to itself, is not at all likely to do anything so absurd—so, Commissioners for the prevention of ruin by charity appear very unnecessary: such the Irish Commissioners assuredly are.

THE NAVIGATION LAWS.

On Thursday evening the last relic of the protective system, as applied to the trade in corn, was virtually abrogated, for a suspension of the slight duty now payable can hardly be considered anything else. Its re-imposition is at least doubtful, for little or no stand was made in its defence: even Lord George Bentinck assents; and within a few days corn will enter the ports of the United Kingdom without paying any tax whatever. It seems a general opinion that the effect of the measure will not be so great as anticipated; but the quiet disappearance of the last vestige of a system so long and fiercely contended for, is a remarkable fact—one, at least, worth noting.

And, at the same time, another blow is dealt at a second class of laws, equally founded on the protective system the Navigation Acts. If they existed in their full force, the abrogation of the Corn Duty would do but little to insure a large, and, above all, an immediate supply of foreign grain—at present the great object of the Government. To secure this, we must draw into our service the merchant ships of every maritime nation of the world: the work could be but slowly performed, if we permitted none but our own ships to bring the much needed food to our shores. The Minister abolishes the duty on foreign grain, and suspends the discouragement the Navigation Acts threw in the way of foreign shipping; and thus his measure is complete. The rest must be left to the resources of the world and the enterprise of man.

The Navigation Laws were strictly protective: they were intended to encourage the mercantile marine of England, by "protecting" it against the competition, in English ports, of the ships of other nations. The germs of these laws exist in the legislation of a very early period, but M'Culloch dates the first intelligible and positive enactment in the reign of Henry VII. Two of the principles of the Navigation Laws were then clearly laid down,—certain goods were prohibited to be imported, unless in English shipmanned by English seamen. Elizabeth excluded foreigners from our fishing and coasting trade—as they are excluded at the present day. The Commonwealth extended the Navigation Laws greatly. The Government of Cromwell was at variance with the Dutch Government, and the people of England were jealous of the immense commerce of Holland, which had got possession of the carrying trade of almost the whole world.

Against the Dutch principally was the Navigation Act of 1651 directed. It prohibited the importation of goods from Asia, Africa, and America, except in English ships; and it also prohibited the importation of goods or produce in any ship of an European State, unless the native growth or manufacture of that State alone. This was the great blow at the Dutch, who were carriers only, and had little native produce to export. This Act was adopted by Charles II.—continued to be acted on by successive Governments down to a recent period—and has been called the "Charta Maritima of England." To it has been attributed our naval supremacy; Adam Smith, admitting the narrow motive that dictated these laws, says they are as good as if they sprung from the most deliberate wisdom. Of late years, however, their efficacy has been doubted, and great relaxations have been forced on us by treaties of reciprocity, rendered necessary by the growth of the commerce of other nations. M'Culloch says—

It may be very fairly doubted, whether, in point of fact, the Navigation Law had the effects ascribed to it, of weakening the naval power of the Dutch, and of increasing that of this kingdom. The Dutch were very powerful at sea for a long period after the passing of this act; and it seems natural to conclude, that the decline of their maritime preponderance was owing rather to the gradual increase of commerce and navigation in other countries, and to the disasters and burdens occasioned by the ruinous contests the Republic had to sustain with Cromwell, Charles II., and Louis XIV., than to the mere exclusion of their merchant vessels from the ports of England. It is not meant to say that this exclusion was altogether without effect. The efforts of the Dutch to procure a repeal of the English Navigation Law show that, in their apprehension, it operated injuriously on their commerce.

But, in this respect, the effects of the Navigation Law, nor to the restrictive regulations of other foreign powers, but to the abuse of the funding system, and the excess of taxation, that the decline of the commercial greatness and maritime power of Holland was really owing. Neither does it appear that the opinion maintained by Dr. Smith and others, that the Navigation Law had a powerful influence in augmenting the naval power of this country, rests on any better foundation. The taste of the nation for naval enterprise had been awakened, the navy had become exceedingly formidable, and Blake had achieved his victories, before the enactment of this famous law. So far, indeed, is it from being certain that the Navigation Act had, in this respect, the effect usually ascribed to it, that there are good grounds for thinking it had a precisely opposite effect, and that it operated rather to diminish than to increase our mercantile navigation. It is stated in Roger Coke's "Treatise on Trade," published in 1671 (p. 36), that this Act, by lessening the resort of strangers to our ports, had a most injurious effect on our commerce; and he further states that we had lost, within two years of the passing of the Act of 1650, the greater part of the Baltic and Greenland trades.—(Vol. iii. 48.) Sir Josiah Child, whose Treatise was published in 1681, corroborates Coke's statement: for while he decidedly approves of the Navigation Law, he admits that the English shipping employed in the Eastland and Baltic trades had decreased at least one-third since the enactment, and that the foreign shipping employed in these trades had proportionally increased. (Treatise on Trade, p. 60, Colwig edit.) Exclusive of these contemporary authorities, it may be worth while to mention that Sir Matthew Decker, an extensive and extremely well-informed merchant, condemns the whole principle of the Navigation Acts; and contends, that instead of increasing our shipping and seamen, it had diminished them both; and that, by rendering the freight of ships higher than it would otherwise have been, it had entailed a heavy burden on the public, and been one of the main causes that had prevented our carrying on the fishery so successfully as the Dutch.—(Essay on the Causes of the Decline of Foreign Trade, p. 60, ed. 1756.)

The tendency of the legislation of the world is evidently towards the destruction of these systems of a former age. The prosperity of nations begins to be traced rather to their internal and native energies than to the success with which they can keep competition away from them; formerly, we did all we could to make our rivals poor; now we begin to see that it is better for a trading nation to have rich neighbours than poor ones; and thus we are losing our faith in Navigation Laws. The suspension of them is but the precursor of their abolition. The following extract from the writer before quoted, may console those who look with apprehension at the coming change:—

Suppose that all that has been said by the apologists of these laws were true to the letter; suppose it were conceded, that when first framed, the Act of Navigation would afford but a very slight and extremely polite assistance; that instead of a considerable presumption in favour of the policy of supporting it in the present day. Human institutions are not made for immortality; they must be accommodated to the varying circumstances and exigencies of society. But the situation of Great Britain and the other countries of Europe has totally changed since 1660. The carried wealth and commercial greatness of Holland have passed away: we have no longer any thing to fear from that quarter; and "he must be, indeed, strangely influenced by antiquated prejudices and by-gone apprehensions, who can entertain any of that jealousy from which the severity of this law principally originated. The London and Amsterdam formerly was, the grand emporium of the commercial world. universa orbis terrarum negotiatio and the real question which now presents itself for our consideration is, not how are we to get more seamen by what means may we increase? but what are the best means of preserving that undisputed pre-eminence in maritime affairs to which we have attained?

Now it does not really seem that there can be much difficulty in deciding this question. Navigation and naval power are the children, not the parents the effect, not the cause—of commerce. If the latter be increased, the increase of the former will follow as a matter of course. More ships and more sailors become necessary, according as the commerce between different and distant countries is extended. A country in the condition of Great Britain in the reign of Queen Anne, when her shipping was comparatively limited, might perhaps be warranted in endeavouring to increase its amount, by excluding foreign ships from her harbours. But it is almost superfluous to add, that it is not by any such regulations, but solely by the aid of a flourishing and widely extended commerce, that the immense mercantile navy we have now accumulated can be supported

THE QUEEN'S LETTER IN AID OF THE DISTRESS.

SIR G. GREY, on Wednesday, transmitted to the Lord Primate, and also to the Archbishop of York, the Queen's letter in aid of the subscription for the distressed population in Ireland and the Highlands of Scotland.

"Queen's letter to his Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury for a collection in aid of the subscriptions entered into for the relief of a large portion of the population in Ireland and in some districts of Scotland.

"Victoria R.,

"Most Reverend Father in God, our right trusty and right entirely beloved councillor, we greet you well. Whereas a large portion of the population of Ireland, and in some districts of Scotland, is suffering severe distress, owing to the failure of the ordinary supplies of food; and whereas many of our subjects have contributed into voluntary subscriptions for their relief, and have at the same time humbly prayed us to issue our royal letters, directed to the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury and the Lord Archbishop of York, authorising them to promote contributions within their respective provinces for the same benevolent purpose:

"We, taking the premises into our Royal consideration, and being always ready to give the best encouragement and countenance to such humane and charitable purposes, are graciously pleased to comply with their request, and we do hereby direct that these our letters be by you communicated to the several suffragan Bishops within your provinces, expressly requiring them to take care that public notice be made hereof on a sufficient Sunday in the present or the ensuing month, and in such places within the respective dioceses as the said Bishops shall appoint; and that upon this occasion the ministers in each parish do effectually excite their congregations to a liberal contribution; and that they collect the weekly offerings at their respective dwellings, by the churchwardens and overseers of the poor in each parish; and the ministers of the several parishes are to cause the sums so collected to be paid immediately into the hands of the Bank of England, to be accounted for by them, and applied to the carrying on and promoting the abovementioned good design.

"And so we bid you very heartily farewell.

"Given at our Court at St. James's, the thirteenth day of January, 1847, in the tenth year of our reign. "By her Majesty's command, "G. GREY.

"To the most Reverend Father in God, our right trusty and right entirely beloved councillor, William Lord Archbishop of Canterbury, Primate of all England and Metropolitan."

The letter to the Archbishop of York is an exact transcript of the above.

COUNTRY NEWS.

ELECTION FOR SALISBURY. An election for a member for Salisbury has become necessary, in the room of Mr. Hussey, resigned. We hear that Mr. Chaplin, the Chairman of the South Western Railway Company, has been applied to by some of the most influential inhabitants of Salisbury, to allow himself to be proposed as a candidate, and that, having received a still more unequivocal and general expression of the wishes of the constituency, he will at once enter the field. Mr. Martin, who has for some time past been announced as a candidate for the vacancy to be caused by the coming retirement of Mr. Campbell, has advertised his intention of taking this earlier opportunity of appealing to the electors.

REPRESENTATION OF THE CITY OF LINCOLN. Sir Edward Bulwer Lytton has intimated to his friends in Lincoln his intention of again presenting himself as a candidate for the representation of their city at the next general election. There are, therefore, already four candidates in the field viz., the two sitting members, Colonel Sibthorp and Mr. W. E. Cobett, and Sir Edward Bulwer Lytton and Mr. Charles Seely, who has adopted the title of the "Citizen Candidate."

THE DISTRESS IN IRELAND AND SCOTLAND. The country papers contain numerous reports of meetings held in various parts of the country for the relief of the distress existing in Ireland and Scotland. In all cases, these authorities have been numerously attended by people differing in religious creed and political opinion, but cordially agreeing in the expression of deep sympathy for our suffering fellow-subjects, and all proving their sincerity by putting their hands into their pockets. Amongst the towns prominently active in this work of charity, are, Sunderland, Bristol, with a noble subscription of nearly £5000, Bradford, £1800, Leeds, £3000, Halifax, £1800, Wakefield, Walsall, Lichfield, Leek, Hanley, Burslem, Stafford, and Norwich. The Catholics of Liverpool held a meeting a day or two ago, when they raised upwards of £1800 towards the fund.

POSTSCRIPT.

HOUSE OF LORDS. FRIDAY.

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE, by command of her Majesty, laid on the table certain papers relative to the Spanish Marriages.

On the motion of the Marquis of LANSDOWNE, their Lordships adjourned until five o'clock to-morrow (this day), in order to allow the House of Commons an opportunity of sending up the Corn and Navigation Laws Bills, which it was desirable to pass into a law as speedily as possible.

HOUSE OF COMMONS. FRIDAY.

NEW MEMBER. The Hon. C. Lawless took the oaths and his seat for Clonmel

NEW WRIT.—On the motion of Mr. TOLLEMACHE a new writ was ordered for the city of Chester, in the room of Lord R. Grosvenor, who had accepted the Chiltern Hundreds.

HER MAJESTY'S ANSWER TO THE ADDRESS.—Lord M. HILL appeared at the Bar, and stated that he had waited on her Majesty, and presented the Address in answer to the Royal Speech on the Opening of Parliament, and her Majesty had been pleased to deliver the following most gracious answer:—"Gentlemen of the House of Commons: I have received your loyal and dutiful Address with much satisfaction, and I look with confidence to your aiding me in my endeavours to maintain peace abroad, and to promote the general welfare and prosperity of my people at home; and I also feel assured that nothing will be wanting on your part to alleviate the sufferings in Ireland and some parts of Scotland."

SUSPENSION OF THE CORN AND NAVIGATION LAWS.

Mr. MITCHELL said he was afraid if the suspension of the duties on corn were not extended beyond the 1st of September next, that it would not be attended with that advantage which was desired

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said the object of the Government was to facilitate, as much as possible, the importation of foreign corn into this country.

The Corn Importation Bill was read a second time, passed through Committee, and the report received.

Lord John RUSSELL said he should move the third reading of the bill during the present sitting.

The Navigation Bill was read a second time, and went through Committee. There was no opposition to either of the measures.

Lord J. RUSSELL said the object of the Government was to obtain the importation of corn duty free as soon as possible.

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER repeated the same sentiment: it was desirable to obtain the greatest quantity of corn at the earliest possible moment.

After some desultory remarks from several hon members, Lord G. BENTINCK addressed the House, and said it was not his intention to oppose the bills.

MOLASSES AND SUGAR AND RUM BILL.

The House then resolved into Committee, and the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER rose to propose the resolution on which he meant to found a bill, authorising the use of sugar, molasses, and rum in distilleries and breweries. He was his intention to propose a measure of a permanent, and not of a temporary character. The right hon. gentleman proceeded to state the nature of his propositions. According to the present law, the use of sugar and molasses in distilleries was not prohibited, although there was some difficulty in adopting it as a substitute for malt. In the measures which he proposed to submit to the House, he was quite willing to allow the substitution of sugar in breweries, for while it mattered little to the revenue which of the two substances was employed. He did not believe that sugar would displace malt, because it would never be to the interest of the brewer to dispense with the use of malt, and unless the price of malt rose to an extravagant height, it was impossible that its consumption could decrease to any considerable degree. A large quantity of sugar, no doubt, would be used in breweries to mix with the liquor produced from malt, and hence the operations of the brewer would be much facilitated, and very likely extended. Recently, the price of malt was 64s. per quarter: it had risen to 68s.; and he was informed last night by a friend that it had risen as high as 70s. Taking it, however, only at 68s., the price of sugar was 47s. per cwt. Now, 180 lbs. of sugar, at 47s. per cwt., cost 70s. 6d., and will produce a quantity of beer equal to that yielded by a quarter of malt; so, by the substitution, one advantage would be gained, equal to the extent of 6s. upon every barrel of strong beer. At the present moment, therefore, the effect of the measure would be to have a considerable quantity of sugar to be used in breweries and distilleries, and the tendency would be to reduce the price of beer, and to increase its consumption by the people. It was not his belief that there would be, in ordinary times, if this measure were permanent, a competition between sugar and malt. It was his intention to introduce a proposition that brewers should be allowed to use duty-paid sugar in brewing. With regard to molasses, he was not prepared to make the same concession as in the case of duty paid sugar. He found that all the acts which had passed upon this subject prohibited the use of molasses, and although sugars had been permitted to be used in the process of brewing, the duty on molasses was at present 3s. 3d., and it was generally assumed that 2 lbs. of molasses was equal to a quarter of barley. Assuming, therefore, that 2 lbs. of molasses was equal to a quarter of malt, they would require to impose a duty of 3s. 3d. per lb. By the law at present sugar might be used in distilleries; at least it was lawful for any distiller to give notice that he intended to distil from sugar, but it was incumbent upon him that some time should elapse between the notice and the actual use

OPENING OF PARLIAMENT.

HER MAJESTY LEAVING BUCKINGHAM PALACE

HOUSE OF LORDS.

On Tuesday, the Parliamentary Session was commenced, with the usual forms, by a Speech from her Majesty.

The interest excited was unusually great, and, notwithstanding the extreme coldness of the weather, the line of route from Buckingham Palace to the House of Lords was densely thronged with spectators, from an early hour.

Long before twelve o'clock, the hour at which the doors were to be opened, vast crowds had assembled around the exterior of the house to witness the arrival of the Peers and Peeresses who were to be present on the occasion, and very soon after the doors were opened, the Royal gallery was filled.

At one o'clock, the Foreign Ambassadors and Ministers, great officers of State, and Peers and Peeresses, possessing the entrée, began to arrive. Among the former, we observed his Excellency the French Ambassador, his Excellency the Hanoverian Minister, his Excellency the Belgian Minister and Madame Van de Weyer, his Excellency the Turkish Minister and Lady, his Excellency the Danish Minister, his Excellency the Bavarian Minister, the American Minister, Madame Bunsen, his Excellency the Dutch Minister, Count Revel, &c.

His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge came early, and was loudly cheered by the populace. The Comte de Monicnolin, attended by the Marquis de Villa Count was accommodated with a place in one of the side galleries of the House.

The Marquis of Lansdowne, the Marquis of Clanricarde, the Earl Grey, the Earl of Minto, the Earl of Auckland, and the Lord Chancellor, were among the Ministers who reached the House early.

Precisely at two o'clock, the guns were heard which announced the approach of her Majesty, and, in a few minutes after, the prolonged note of the trumpet resounding through the Royal gallery apprised those who were assembled in the House of Peers that her Majesty had arrived. Immediately afterwards, the procession of Officers of the Household, and others who attend her Majesty on these occasions, entered the House by the side door leading from the Royal gallery. The Earl of Zetland bore the Cap of Maintenance, the Duke of Wellington the Sword of State, the Marquis of Lansdowne the Crown. Her Majesty followed, accompanied by Prince Albert. The whole assembly rose as her Majesty entered. Her Majesty bowed most graciously repeatedly, and the Prince then conducted her up to the Throne. His Royal Highness occupied the smaller Throne on the left, that on the right, for the Prince of Wales, being left vacant. The Duchess of Sutherland stood on the right of the Throne, close to her Majesty, and the Marchioness of Douro, as Lady in Waiting, stood near the Duchess. The Duke of Wellington stood immediately to the left of her Majesty, holding the Sword of State. The Marquis of Lansdowne stood to the right of the Throne, on the floor of the House, bearing the Crown, on a crimson velvet cushion.

The dullness of the atmosphere during the early part of the afternoon had rendered it necessary to light the candles in the House. Just before the entrance of her Majesty the weather brightened; the candles were, however, allowed to remain lighted, and the effect of the magnificent jewels worn by the Queen and the Duchess of Sutherland was thereby greatly heightened.

Her Majesty, having seated herself, desired the Lords to be seated. The Commons were then, according to custom, summoned to appear at the bar to hear the Speech read. Very shortly, the Speaker, attended by several members of the Lower House, appeared at the bar.

The Speech was then handed by the Lord Chancellor to her Majesty, who proceeded to read it with her usual admirable clearness and emphasis. It was as follows:—

THE QUEEN'S SPEECH.

"My Lords and Gentlemen,

"It is with the deepest concern that, upon your again assembling, I have to call your attention to the dearth of provisions which prevails in Ireland, and in parts of Scotland.

"In Ireland, especially, the loss of the usual food of the people has been the cause of severe sufferings, of disease, and of greatly increased mortality among the poorer classes. Outrages have become more frequent, chiefly directed against property; and the transit of provisions has been rendered unsafe in some parts of the country.

"With a view to mitigate these evils, very large numbers of men have been employed and have received wages in pursuance of an Act passed in the last Session of Parliament. Some deviations from that Act which have been authorised by the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, in order to promote more useful employment, will, I trust, receive your sanction. Means have been taken to lessen the pressure from want in districts which are most remote from the ordinary source of supply. Outrages have been repressed, as far as it was possible, by the military and police.

"It is satisfactory to me to observe that in many of the most distressed districts, the patience and the resignation of the people have been most exemplary.

"The deficiency in the harvest in France and Germany, and other parts of Europe, has added to the difficulty of obtaining adequate supplies of provisions.

"It will be your duty to consider what further measures are required to alleviate the existing distress. I recommend to you to take into your serious consideration, whether by increasing for a limited period, the facilities for importing corn from foreign countries, and by the admission of sugar more freely into breweries and distilleries, the supply of food may be beneficially augmented.

"I have likewise to direct your earnest consideration to the permanent condition of Ireland. You will perceive, in the absence of political excitement, an opportunity for taking a dispassionate survey of the social evils which afflict that part of the United Kingdom. Various measures will be laid before you, which, if adopted by Parliament, may tend to raise the great mass of the people in comfort, to promote agriculture, and to lessen the pressure of that competition for the occupation of land which has been the fruitful source of crime and misery

"The marriage of the Infanta Luisa Fernanda of Spain to the Duke of Montpensier has given rise to a correspondence between my Government and those of France and Spain.

"The extinction of the Free State of Cracow has appeared to me to be so manifest a violation of the Treaty of Vienna, that I have commanded that a protest against that act should be delivered to the Courts of Vienna, Petersburg, and Berlin, which were parties to it. Copies of these several papers will be laid before you.

"My relations generally with Foreign Powers inspire me with the fullest confidence in the maintenance of peace.

OPENING OF PARLIAMENT.

SKETCHED IN THE HOUSE OF LORDS.

"Gentlemen of the House of Commons,

"I have directed the Estimates to be prepared, with a view to provide for the efficiency of the public service, with a due regard for economy.

"My Lords and Gentlemen,

"I have ordered every requisite preparation to be made for putting into operation the Act of the last Session of Parliament, for the establishment of Local Courts for the Recovery of Small Debts. It is my hope that the enforcement of civil rights in all parts of the country to which the Act relates, may, by the measure, be materially facilitated.

"I entertain confident hopes that the hostilities in the River Plate, which have so long interrupted commerce, may soon be terminated; and my efforts, in conjunction with those of the King of the French, will be earnestly directed to that end.

"I recommend to your attention measures which will be laid before you for improving the health of towns; an object, the importance of which you will not fail to appreciate.

"Deeply sensible of the blessings which after a season of calamity have been so often vouchsafed to this nation by a superintending Providence, I confide these important matters to your care, in a full conviction that your discussions will be guided by an impartial spirit; and in the hope that the present sufferings of my people may be lightened, and that their future condition may be improved by your deliberative wisdom."

It was remarked that the passages which referred to Irish distress were delivered by her Majesty in rather a subdued tone, and with an accent of sympathy for the sufferings deplored; but when her Majesty came to the passage relating to the Spanish marriage, and also that which refers to the subject of Cracow, her tone became perceptibly changed; and, besides that she spoke more loudly and more emphatically, there was a slight abruptness in the delivery.

RECEPTION OF HER MAJESTY IN THE HOUSE OF LORDS.

With the reading of the Speech the ceremony of opening Parliament was concluded. Her Majesty and the Prince, preceded and attended as before, left the House on their return to Buckingham Palace. The Commons retired from the bar, and the Lords adjourned during pleasure.

THE ADDRESS IN REPLY TO THE QUEEN'S SPEECH.

At five o'clock, the LORD CHANCELLOR resumed his seat on the woolsack, having read her Majesty's Speech, and it also having been read by the Clerk at the table.

Lord HATHERTON moved the Address in reply to it. The noble Lord referred, at some length, to the unfavourable state of Ireland, which, though no longer, as heretofore, the theatre of wide-spread agitation, was exposed to a more formidable evil, in the shape of famine. The measures adopted last session, in anticipation of the existing evil, were insufficient to meet the necessity of the case, and it became, therefore, the paramount duty of Parliament to take into its earliest consideration the condition of the Irish people, with a view to its immediate amelioration. The measures said to be in contemplation, and, indeed, alluded to in the Speech, he thought very important. He referred to the temporary suspension of the Corn and Navigation Laws, and the admission of sugar for the purposes of distillation; and, when they should be brought under consideration, he hoped they would be dealt with in a liberal and comprehensive spirit. The noble Lord then adverted to the occupation of Cracow by the Austrians, which her Majesty designated as a manifest violation of the treaty of Vienna, but which he viewed with abhorrence, as a crime and a folly on the part of the Austrian Government. He shortly alluded to the other topics of the Speech, and concluded by moving the Address, which, as usual, was an echo of the Speech from the Throne.

Lord CAREW, who seconded the Address, dwelt chiefly upon the unhappy position of affairs in Ireland. Last year, he said, distress had been confined to some places, but in this it was universal. Unfortunately the poorest part of the population depended on the potato for existence, and it was that which principally then liable to, and was the cause of, their distress. When a whole population depended on a single article of food, and that was struck by the inscrutable decree of Providence, the pestilence which had appeared in Skibbereen, where it was most abundant in quantity and quality, a dense population had sprung up, and they were starving. He would do justice to the proprietors and farmers of Ireland, for when the necessity arose they had come forward as one man; they did not hold back, but made themselves liable to repay sums which were advanced to provide labour. Last year it was done on a small scale; but, now the whole country required it, it was impossible to do for them again. The common affection had united all parties; Protestant and C holic met together, and their only rivalry was that of charity. He (Lord Carew) had known all these things well, in the last pressure of trouble. He had assisted in the organization of the different relief committees, and although there might have been some abuses, yet, as a whole, they did their duty. Every one knew how the Irish people bore up against misery; but now there was not even harsh words used amongst them. No doubt there were outrages in some parts of the country, but in others the people bore their sufferings patiently. In his own county there was nothing which could be called outrage. Much had been said with regard to the purchase of arms. It had been said that the money given for food had been laid out in the purchase of arms. He believed the accounts were exaggerated. The majority of purchases were by farmers themselves. In his own case, and in his opinion, that the people of Ireland were struck by a dispensation of Providence, and that they so considered it.

Lord STANLEY said that, as Ministers had wisely abstained from introducing into her Majesty's Speech any topics which were likely to lead to discussion, it would be n ecessary for him, at the commencement of the session, to raise any debate which might embarrass them, particularly as, under existing circumstances, they were fairly entitled to forbearance. The fact of their being in possession of power arose from no act of their own; there were many in office against their wishes; in the laying position in which they were placed, they were entitled to aid, and, so long as they abstained from tampering with the institutions of the country, they should have the forbearance of him and those w.o acted with him. In her Majesty's Speech there was nothing which gave rise to h.e comment; but there was one omission—no reference was therein made to the financial condition of the country. It was very apparent that the Chancellor of the Exchequer must soon raise the interest on Exchequer Bills. The premium on Exchequer Bi s ranged some time ago as high as 8s8s., but now they were down to between 8s. and 6s. This subject required the most serious attention; and he would not therefore trouble by calling attention to the fact. With respect to our foreign relations, the noble Lord expressed his regret that the former good understanding between France and England had been altered for the worse, as was evident from the whole tone of the correspondence respecting the Montpensier marriage. He differed from both Lord Palmerston and M. Guizot as to the construction put by them on the Treaty of Utrecht, although it was not to be denied that the marriage of the Montpensier marriage was brought about was a slight and a discourtesy to England, which could hardly have happened had not the tone between the two countries been altered. Owing to the events of the last few months, the occupation of Cracow, which that would probably not have taken place, had not the misunderstanding as to wheat France and England unhappily arisen. With respect to Ireland, he believed that the description of distress existing there could not be exaggerated, and was sure that no sacrifice and no efforts could be proposed, which the people of England would not cheerfully responded to by Parliament and the people of Great Britain. He anticipated no difficulty to the granting of a Bill of Indemnity to Government for what they had done, as they had been taken by surprise by the extent of the distress, and as they were surrounded by difficulties, one of which, and not the least, was the difficulty of acquiring correct information. Under existing circumstances, any measures that should be proposed to supply food, such as a temporary suspension of the Corn Laws and the Navigation Laws, would not, in his opinion, be objectionable; but he believed that the agriculturists would be justified in pressing on the Government a modification of the Malt Tax, should sugar be admitted for use in our breweries and distilleries.

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE felt confident that the measures contemplated by the Government would add very materially to the supply of bread-stuff to this country. The admission of sugar for the use of breweries and distilleries was intended to be a permanent measure, but he believed its operation would be only occasional. The temporary suspension of the Navigation Laws would enable vessels of all nations to bring food to this country, and he believed that, if it did not reduce the price of food, it would, at all events, prevent its being very materially enhanced. With respect to the Montpensier Marriage, he thought it right to observe that the course pursued by the late Government and that pursued by the present Government were identical. He regretted the former good understanding between France and England should have been at all weakened, and should had with pleasure its restoration, but the discussion of these matters should not be further entered upon until the requisite information was placed upon the table. With respect to the state of Ireland, on Monday next he would move for papers for the purpose of enabling him not only to defend what had been done, but also to state what it was proposed to do for the future with the view of relieving that country from the evil by which it was now so awfully afflicted.

Lord BROUGHAM regretted that any untoward circumstances should have even for a moment cast a cloud over the good understanding which existed between France and England; but he hoped that nothing would be done to prevent the resumption of that entente cordiale, which it was of so much importance to have restored, but which might be rendered difficult by having discussions in either House of Parliament at present. He expressed his satisfaction relative to the measures would take place; and time would shortly restore matters to their original position. He condemned the expression used by Lord Hatherton in reference to Cracow, as unwarrantable and improper. He had said that it should be viewed these transactions with abhorrence

Lord HATHERTON.—The French Minister said the same thing.

Lord BROUGHAM.—Then the French Minister did wrong. Such an expression of vituperation should not be used by a Minister, unless he was prepared to go further. Next to that of France, the connection with Austria was natural and important to this country, and such expressions were calculated to produce mischief. The noble and learned Lord then adverted to Ireland, and eulogised the exemplary patience displayed by the people of that country under a visitation such as no person recollected to have afflicted any country for many years. He condemned the Government, however, to take care that the ides should not be taken up by the Irish people that they were to be supported by the public revenue. Their measures should be temporary and exceptional, and they should take care that it should be understood that it was but a temporary assistance, which must be repaid hereafter

Lord FITZWILLIAM believed that no small or half measures would do for Ire-

As far as he could form an opinion of those to be proposed by the ment, he approved of them, though he doubted if they would go far enough.

The Marquis of WESTMEATH, as an Irish landlord, expressed his gratitude to England for the sympathy so readily afforded to Irish distress.

The Earl of RODEN also expressed his thanks to the people of this country, and to the Government, for the sympathy shown to the Irish people

The Earl of HARDWICKE said that the ships of the line now in a state of inactivity ought to to be employed in the transmission of food

The Earl of BUCKINGHAM said there were already between ty and forty steamers, and fourteen or fifteen sailing vessels employed in carrying provisions.

In reply to a question from Lord STANLEY,

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE said that he only proposed on Monday to state to the House the measures contemplated by the Government, but he did not intend to ask for any decision upon them until they should come up from the other House of Parliament.

The Address was then agreed to, and the House adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS. TUESDAY.

THE COMMENCEMENT OF THE SESSION.

The speaker took the Chair at a quarter past two, and about ten minutes afterwards the House was summoned to the Lords, by the Deputy Usher of the Black Rod, to hear her Majesty's Speech on opening the Session. The Speaker returning, left the chair, and was followed to the House of Lords by nearly all the Members present. He returned in less than a quarter of an hour, and the House was adjourned until two o'clock.

NEW WRITS.—The House having met again at the above hour, the business of the day was commenced by the SPEAKER informing the House that during the recess, in conformity with the act, he had ordered the Clerk of the Crown to issue our new writs for Renfrewshire, in the room of P. M. Stewart, deceased; for the Eastern Division of Worcestershire, in the room of J. Somers Cocks, Esq., deceased; and for North Lincolnshire, in the room of Lord Worsley, called up to the House of Peers. A new writ was ordered for West Sussex, for the election of a Member in the room of Colonel Wyndham, who has accepted the Chiltern Hundreds; also for Salisbury, in the room of Ambrose Hussey, Esq., who had accepted the Chiltern Hundreds.

NEW MEMBERS.—The following Members took the oaths and their seats:—The Right Honourable E. Strutt, for Derby; Colonel Mure, for Renfrewshire; Sir M Cholmeley, for North Lincolnshire; and Mr Rushout, for East Worcestershire.

NOTICES OF GOVERNMENT MEASURES. Mr. Tufnell gave notice, on the part of Lord J Russell, that the noble Lord would, on Thursday, move resolutions in a Committee of the whole House on the Corn Laws. That he would also move resolutions on the same day, in Committee of the whole House, on the Navigation Laws. That, on Friday, Jan. 22, the noble Lord would move the appointment of a Select Committee on the Law of Settlement. And that, on Monday next, he would bring the state of Ireland under the consideration of the House.—Mr Parker gave notice that the Chancellor of the Exchequer would move, on Friday, Jan. 22, that the House resolve itself into a Committee of the whole House on the Customs and Excise Duties Acts.

GENERAL NOTICES OF MOTION. Mr. P Scrope gave notice that, unless he were anticipated by some measure on the part of Government to improve the condition of the Irish people, he would submit the following resolution on Tuesday, Feb 2 —"That the lives of the people of Ireland ought, in the eye of the law, to be as valuable as the lives of the people of England, and, consequently, that it was expedient to extend to Ireland the main principle of the English Poor Law granting them a right to relief from a public provision, to save them from perishing." (Cheers.) Mr. Hume also gave notice that, on Tuesday next, he would call the attention of the House to the violation of the Treaty of Vienna by the seizure of Cracow, with a view to suspend the payment of £100.000 annually to the Emperor of Russia, on condition that he would maintain the articles of the Treaty of Vienna.—Mr. Bernal Osborne gave notice that, on an early day, he would move for the total repeal of the Punishment of Death.

THE ADDRESS TO HER MAJESTY.

The House of Commons was not at all crowded at the commencement of the debate on the Address, and the absence of the more contentious topics relating the seats which the several leaders of the Opposition are to occupy, it may be as well to state that whilst the Speaker was reading the Queen's Speech, the principal seats on the leading Opposition bench were occupied by Lord G. Bentinck, Mr. G. Bankes, Mr Disraeli, Mr. Christopher, and Mr Smith O'Brien. Sir R. Peel was not then present; but Lord Lincoln was, and along with Mr. Goulburn, Mr S. Herbert, and Sir F. Thesiger, on the same bench, a little above the place usually occupied by the leader of the Opposition. At a quarter past five o'clock, Sir R. Peel entered the House, and took his seat near Mr S Herbert. Sir J Graham was at first at a loss for a seat, but ultimately found one next Sir J. W. Hogg.

The Speaker having read to the House her Majesty's Speech,

The Hon. C. Buller rose to move the Address to her Majesty in answer to it. The hon. member, after adverting to the distress in Ireland, said that, on the subject of the Spanish marriage, he would offer no remark, as Government were about to lay all the correspondence on that subject before the House. With reference to the destruction of the independence of Cracow, he could not but express surprise that such a violation of the sanctity of treaties should have taken place. (Hear, hear.) The attention of the House was invited to sanatory measures for the improvement of towns—a subject of the highest importance, and in reference to which most gratitude was due to those persons who had acted upon the Commissions, and who, by their reports, had made the people of this country sensible of the importance of the subject. Last year, he (Mr. Buller) was, as Member for Southwood Smith. The hon. gentleman then read the Address, which was, as usual, an echo of the Speech.

Mr. HUME seconded the Address. He contended that a temporary relaxation of the Navigation Laws was indispensable, and that every facility for the admission of foreign grain had become a necessity; and, if it could be shown that a large quantity of grain could be liberated without great loss to the revenue, then it would be only fair to admit sugar for use in the breweries and distilleries of the United Kingdom. The hon. member insisted that the new Free-Trade commercial policy had been eminently successful; that an increase of Customs Duties, and a large consumption of sugar, timber, &c., had been the result; and that they had every encouragement to go on in the same direction

Mr. W. S. O'BRIEN dwelt on the state of Ireland and the ineffici- of the measures adopted to meet the terrible emergency which presented itself. The Labour Rate Act of last session was worse than useless, and was calculated to lead to a much more serious state of things, by diverting labour from the culture of the soil to purposes utterly valueless. He called upon the First Minister of the Crown to state at once to the House the views entertained by Government in reference to Ireland.

Mr. P. SCROPE contended that Government had not displayed suffi nt energy in providing for the subsistence of the people in the present dreadful crisi-

Mr. LABOUCHERE said he never rose under a sense of such deep responsibility as at that moment oppressed him. It was impossible to deny the extent of the calamity described by Mr. S. O'Brien, or to say that the statements made by that hon. member were exaggerated. But, before the House could concur with the hon. member in charging the Government with all the deaths that had occurred by famine and destitution in Ireland, it would be but justice in them to consider well what the ordinary condition of that country was, and what was the extent of the calamity which had fallen upon her. The ordinary condition of Ireland was one of distress and poverty the people were, unquestionably, the worst housed, fed, and clothed, of any people in Europe. Their numbers, upwards of two millions were, for a great portion of the year, destitute; the calamity which had fallen on the land was one without parallel in modern times. Taking those things into consideration, he would ask the hon. Member for Dundalk—that the Government were responsible for every death that had occurred. With respect to the charge of having adhered to the pledge given by the Prime Minister last year, of intending to relieve the distress that had been anticipated from the horrors of famine. The right hon. gentleman proceeded to defend the system of Public Works in Ireland, which, though not free from defects, was yet productive of the greatest benefit. He then entered into the employment of the enormous and those gigantic operations set on foot by the Government for the alleviation of the distress

Lord GEORGE BENTINCK assured the Government that the advocates of the Protection policy had no intention of making Ireland the battle-ground of party They felt that the present Government had succeeded to the administration of Ireland at a most unfortunate moment. They were willing, therefore, to give time due to the Government to examine its acts with indulgence. The miseries of Ireland demanded sympathy, and it was the resolution of the Protection party to give their calmest consideration to any proposition that might be proposed for the alleviation of the calamity. But while disposed to cast a lenient eye upon the conduct of the Government, he was not prepared to admit that the measures they had already taken were such as could not improve. It was impossible to view the poor employment afforded as an effectual remedy: whilst upwards of 400,000 persons were constantly employed, the works they wrought upon were worse than useless. As to the non-interference with trade, such a maxim of political economy might be good in ordinary times; but when an unexampled calamity afflicted the country, the harsh rules of such dogmas should be relaxed, and the Government should not have hesitated to do so. It was perfectly unreasonable to have expected merchants and retailers to have sprung up once in Ireland in numbers sufficient to have provided ample and cheap food for the people. The noble and learned gentleman concluded by declaring that he supposed to exist between the Protection party and Parliament, and the country existing as duty on corn; the Protection party acknowledged no such compact, and therefore the Government were free to propose the removal of the 4s. duty, if they thought fit. Should the Government propose the removal of the duty of this 4s. duty, the Protection party would not oppose it; but it was their firm persuasion that no removal would give no benefit to the consumer. The Exchequer would lose the duty, but every farthing of it would go into the pockets of the corn-merchants and forestallers. Should the Government also think fit to propose the admission of sugar for the use of breweries and distilleries, the Protection party would offer l no opposition, although from experience they were of little expectation of benefit. Should a temporary interference with the Navigation Laws be proposed, the Protection party would not oppose it, though they believed such a remedy came too late. Let the Government, if they wished really to apply a remedy, throw aside the rigid principles of political economy, purchase corn wherever they could get it, and let them employ her Majesty's ships in carrying these supplies. Such a course would be brought into operation in Ireland in numbers sufficient to have provided ample and cheap food for the people. The noble and learned gentleman concluded by declaring that he supposed to exist between the Protection party and Parliament, and the country existing as duty on corn; the Protection party acknowledged no such compact, and therefore the Government were free to propose the removal of the 4s. duty, if they thought fit. Should the Government propose the removal of the duty of this 4s. duty, the Protection party would not oppose it; but it was their firm persuasion that no removal would give no benefit to the consumer. The Exchequ

HOUSE OF COMMONS. WEDNESDAY.

NEW WRIT FOR MIDDLESEX. A new writ was directed to be issued for the election of a Knight of the Shire for Middlesex, in the room of the Right Hon. C. Byng, deceased.

SUGAR FOR BREWING. The Hon. C. VILLIERS presented a petition, signed by all the leading merchants, brewers, and distillers in the City of London, calling the attention of the House to the great dearth of food in Great Britain and Ireland, and in other parts of Europe, and praying the House to rescind the penalties imposed on brewers using sugar and molasses.

PRIVATE BILLS. Mr. EWART moved that committees on all private bills should consist of five members, neither personally nor indirectly interested in the question submitted to their consideration; which motion was lost on a division by a majority of 7.

THE ADDRESS IN REPLY TO THE SPEECH.

The Report on the Address having been brought up by Mr C. HOWARD, Mr. HUME commented strongly on the course pursued by Austria in crushing the independence of Cracow, which he viewed as extreme flagitiousness, and was surprised that any hon. gentleman should have defended it in that House. He had intended on the previous evening to have moved an amendment strongly condemning that proceeding; but he confessed that after the speech of Lord John Russell so unnerved him (loud laughter) that he was unable to persevere in his intention (A laugh.) He was sorry that Mr. Disraeli should have attempted to prove that this atrocious act was no violation of the treaty of Vienna. The hon. gentleman, to establish his point, had gone to Westphalia and to —— in fact, he did not know where the devil he had not gone to (great laughter); but it was a manifest violation of that treaty, and it justified England in immediately refusing to pay any further instalment of the Russo-Dutch loan. This was a point to which he hoped the Government would address itself, for if treaties were to be thus violated with impunity it would be better at once to annul all our continental treaties, which were only observed by the other nations as long as it suited their own convenience.

A discussion ensued in the course of it,

Mr. PLUNKET expressed a belief that we had offended God by certain acts which had of late years been put on the statute book, and suggested that the Government should appoint a day of humiliation for the whole kingdom.

After speeches from several other hon. Members, the report on the Address was agreed to, and the House adjourned

HOUSE OF LORDS. THURSDAY.

The House met to-day, but sat for a very short time.

The Earl of FORTESCUE brought up her Majesty's answer to the Address, which was as follows:—"I thank you for your expressions of loyalty and attachment to my Crown and person, and you may rely with the most perfect confidence on my anxious desire to aid you in promoting at all times the prosperity and happiness of the people

No business of importance was transacted

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—THURSDAY.

THE REFORM BILL. Mr. T. DUNCOMBE gave notice that, on Thursday, Feb. 4, he would bring in a bill for the repeal of the rate-paying clauses in the Reform Bill

SUSPENSION OF THE CORN AND NAVIGATION LAWS.

On the order of the day for a Committee of the whole House on the Corn-Laws being read,

Lord JOHN RUSSELL rose and said, that he would give his reasons for proposing an alteration in the Corn and Navigation Laws. At the termination of the last session it was anticipated that the harvest would be somewhat under an average quantity; but the quality was high, and spoken of. An entire failure of the potato crop had, however, occurred in Ireland, and also in parts of Scotland, and the prices of corn were, in consequence, materially affected; but, on the other hand, there was, in the course of last year, a very large importation of foreign and colonial corn, amounting to 4,806,000 qrs. It was in consequence of this importation that there was not for some time a great rise in prices. In October and in the course of November there was not a very serious augmentation of prices. But, from that time, there had been a very considerable rise in prices. In August the price of wheat was 49s., and it had risen from that time to the 16th of January, to 70s. 3d. The rise of price in wheat had caused considerable apprehension as to the sufficiency of the supply. The rise in the price of barley had been still more considerable. The prices have been in—

Jan. 1843	..	39s.	7d.	In 1847.
Jan. 1843	..	26s.	5d.	First week ..	44s 3d.
Jan. 1844	..	32s.	7d.	Second week ..	46s. 5d.
Jan. 1845	..	34s.	3d.	Third week ..	50s. 0d.
Jan. 1846	..	31s.	11d.

That rise in price was very remarkable. That rise in the price, however, was very unsatisfactory with respect to those engaged in trade. The deficiency which prevailed in France did not, in November last, manifest itself; so that, until a recent period, that deficiency did not materially affect the market. It appeared from documents before him that, although in December the harvest was considered deficient, the deficiency was not thought to be so serious as it had since turned out to be. The failure in the potato crop in Ireland and Scotland had produced most material and important results. It had not only occasioned a drain in money as equal to £12,000,000 sterling, and which, notwithstanding the supply of 4,800,000 quarters of foreign corn imported, most seriously affected the corn markets generally, and the deficiency of the harvest in Western Europe had induced the Governments of several foreign States to alter the laws regulating the importation and exportation of foreign grain. From the north of Europe the information he had received did not lead to the hope that supplies could be obtained, at least for a time, from that part of Europe, whilst from the Black prices, although there did not appear to be any dearth of corn in that country. In America the harvest had been most abundant, especially in corn; but hitherto they had not had a great supply from that country, but they hoped soon to have large importations from thence. Now it appeared to them that it was their duty, as a matter of necessity, to adopt some way of the importation of foreign corn The duty, it was true, was reduced to 4s., but small as that duty might appear, it operated in conjunction with other obstructions most materially to prevent importation from foreign countries. At one time during last year, the prices of corn in that country and France were very nearly equal, and the abolition of the 4s. duty, with other obstructions, tended almost to keep foreign corn from England almost entirely. Under these circumstances the Government to see that what quantity of foreign corn might be introduced if the importduty were removed; but, in the circumstances of the country, and considering that it was their bounden duty to remove all obstruction, he proposed that until the first of September in the present year all duties on the introduction of foreign corn should cease to be imposed. The laws regulating the importation of foreign corn had been suspended at various times, and he hoped that the advocates of Protection would, under the present circumstances of the country, agree to the proposition he ventured to submit to the House, and he also hoped that the advocates of Free Trade would consider the proposition a reasonable and proper one. The noble Lord then passed from the consideration of the Corn Laws to that of the Navigation Laws, and pointed out by various statistical details the restrictive and injurious effects of these laws, and he therefore proposed the suspension of the Navigation Laws with respect to the importation of foreign corn, to the same period, viz.—the last September in the present year. He then moved that the Speaker leave the chair, for the purpose of the House going into a Committee of the whole House on the Corn and Navigation Laws. (Cheers)

Mr. G. BANKES seconded the motion. Those who acted with him, and thought that protection to native industry should be maintained, were now ready, as they had been last year, to open the ports for the purpose of remedying or alleviating the distresses of the country. It had been the general opinion that the ports should be opened; and they were ready to do so, but did not, in the expectation of such high prices, keep back their corn, but had hastened it to the market. (Great laughter, which continued for some minutes.) He had a full and entire confidence in being able to concur with the noble Lord; and, although he did not anticipate much benefit from the suspension, yet, if any benefit could accrue, they ought to make the trial

Sir W. JOLLIFFE described the extreme destitution which prevailed in Ireland, defended the conduct of the Irish landlords from the imputations which had been cast upon them.

Mr. GOULBURN, although perfectly sensible of the distress which prevailed in Ireland, and although perfectly sympathising with the unfortunate people of that country, yet he thought that that was not a time to enter into a discussion of it. He cordially supported the proposition of the noble Lord; and, although he was firmly convinced that if it had been proposed on an earlier period, great good would have resulted from it, still he was most anxious to avail himself of any opportunity to relieve the distresses of the country.

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER entered into a statement of the measures that had been taken in the distressed districts of Ireland, to alleviate the extreme suffering, particularly at Skibbereen and the south of Ireland.

Mr. HUME was glad Mr. GRATTAN censured the Government for not having laid this question before the House at once, as it would have prevented much of the blame that had been cast on them, on the first night of the session.

A discussion arose upon a question put by Mr. BARING, as to whether foreign ships, only partly loaded with grain, and coming coastwise, would be entitled to the exemption from the Navigation Laws.

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said all corn, under any circumstances, would be admitted free, but no other produce.

Mr. BARING and Mr. ROEBUCK thought the relaxation would not be extensive or complete enough to ensure success.

Mr. T. BARING would not oppose the suspension, but thought it would be of little use, except so far as it would show a sympathy with the national distress. If it was intended to lead to the repeal of the Navigation Laws, the Government must expect strong opposition from the shipping interest.

Lord G. BENTINCK supported the proposition, but would resist any attempt to abolish the present system. He hoped it was not the "small end of the wedge." He censured the Government for not having prevented the large export of provisions from Ireland; he hoped that the remission of the remaining duty on corn would do no good, as it would only go so much profit into the pockets of the corn dealers, against whom he spoke with great bitterness, advising Lord John Russell to deal with those who fattened on the gains of famine, and the misery of the people, in the Parisian mode, and the Emperor Nicholas in the Russian mode, as the history of Nadir Shah, in support of his opinion.

He was followed by Sir C. Napier, Mr. Roebuck, Mr. Disraeli, and others, who joined in a desultory debate. The tone of the whole discussion was decidedly in favour of the Government proposition

The several resolutions on which the bill will be founded were then agreed to, and the House adjourned at ten o'clock.

WESTMINSTER BRIDGE.—Lord Morpeth has announced to a deputation from the parishes of St Margaret and St. John, Westminster, that the bill for which notices had been given, for "the removal of Westminster-bridge and the erection of another bridge in lieu thereof at Charing-cross," will not be proceeded with.

OPENING OF PARLIAMENT.

THOUGH darkly Winter frowns upon the scene—
Though Want and Woe fling forth their shadows drear,
Right blightly rush the crowds to hail their Queen,
Dear to their hearts to Europe's freedom dear.
'Tis not the casket of the cuirassier
'Tis not the pomp and pride, and glittering sheen;
'Tis the pure spirit—merciful, serene,
We hail and hallow in the beautiful cheer.
GOD SAVE HER QUEEN! The World's Metropolis
May bless the sceptre which for good is sway'd;
Our Island still is Freedom's Salamis,
Whose wooden walls shall scarcely be dismay'd.
Let others hand base Perjury. We own
No such supporter to the British Throne.

Lady! most glorious is thy fate's award.
Ours of Royalty! few hearts so dead
But hail thy name when orisons are said,
Or from the shores of Ganges, to the sward
Of the swart savage, offering to his Lord
Prayer, by the wild Ontario: From the shed
Of the Esquimaux, from Australasian wold,
The universal prayer ascends to heaven.
The universal benison is given
For thee, fair Sovereign of the free and bold
The Queen of England; on whose flag the sun
Sets not; the ruler of a thousand suns.
Wherever barque hath dared, or swept the breeze,
Where Anson sailed, or Nelson fought and won.

Lady! the sceptre which thy grandsire wielded
For half a century of ruthless war.
When rose, and glared, and sank, the blood red star
Of Gallia's dread-god: when Europe yielded
To Britain's counsels, and her buckler shielded
A wounded world, that sceptre without scar
Or stigma of dishonour to thy care.
Gird at it not, is trusted, freely to evoke,
Like Ithuriel's wand, life's waters from the rock,
Were proudly sets our noble nation fair,
And calm; silence at the mere breathing
Never that sceptre, so wielded, knew a stain,
Shall it shall not be tarnished now in sight
Each link shall melt at Freedom's lightning stroke.

Yet, glance we at our home. The hideous view
Of "England's right arm," withered, paralysed—
The root by millions so dearly prized,
Blighted and gone: while famine's frightful crew,
Marshall'd by Pestilence, shriek Death's ha-ha,
Wild o'er the shuddering land. Too much despised,
The humble labourer dies without a shroud;
His children follow with stark Hunger's hue,
In frantic grief the poor wife wails aloud,
While days succeeding, darker scenes renew.
Oh! "Mercy, brightest jewel in the crown,"
Most brightly here thou shone in this sad time;
Worthy to bring th' Eternal's blessing down,
On heads that feel his attributes sublime.

Hence, every day, depart, with plenty freighted,
The barques, whose sails are bless'd by Christian love
Whose keels are 'neath the blessing-from above,
To 'suage the ruin famine has created.
His direful greed shall, speedily be eased.
His noble land, which often bravely strove
'Gainst his the baneful and Heaven-hated.
Bears in her breast the eagle with the dove—
The gauntlet cover'd by a silken glove—
The olden spirit never yet abated
Mighty and merciful. And hence comes Hope,
With manly Fortitude and Counsel sage,
Bidding our Isle courageously to cope
With ills the darkest on Time's darkest page L.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

THE COURTS OF ALDERMEN AND COMMON COUNCIL. About 120 members of the Common Council assembled in the Council Chamber, on Wednesday, for the purpose of receiving the suggestions of the sub committee appointed by them to consider the most advisable mode of proceeding on the next Common Council day, with respect to the bill, the third reading of which at the last court, the Lord Mayor refused to put. It appeared, Mr. Asharst said, desirable to the sub-committee, and they recommended, accordingly, that at the next court, a Committee of Privileges should be appointed to call upon the Lord Mayor to put the question of the third reading of the Common Council Qualification Bill, in order that the objection that they were not a legally constituted body might not be stated against them. It also appeared to them to be advisable to assert their right to have the question put the moment after the committees were appointed. Mr. Harrison said he thought it necessary to state that it was his intention to move upon a subject on which he believed he had the sympathy of all the members, before the question of the third reading of the Qualification Bill should be put. He meant the distressed condition of the Irish; to contribute the relief of which as soon as possible he should move that the sum of £2000 be voted. He (with) said so much to the members, in order that it might not be supposed that he meant to throw any difficulty in the way of the qualification question.—The Chairman said that he had been merely instructed to state the recommendations of the sub-committee; and, having fulfilled his instructions, and advised that the meeting should make no resolutions, but proceed with unanimity to the attainment of their object, he considered the business of the Committee at an end Mr Ashurst then vacated the chair.

FURTHER ADVANCE IN THE PRICE OF BREAD.—The bakers of the metropolis have raised the price of the quartern loaf, best quality, to 11½d., and the second quality bread will be 10d. in a few days. A general meeting of bakers is spoken of, for the purpose of establishing throughout the metropolis a uniformity of price, at which meeting it is intended to call upon factors and makers not to sell to any bakers who deviate from the regulated price.

GUY FAWKES AND THE HOUSES OF PARLIAMENT.—On Tuesday morning, Sir Augustus Clifford, Mr. Pulman, and Capt. Kincaid, with a party of Yeomen of her Majesty's Body Guard, made the usual search in the vaults beneath the House of Lords, preparatory to the opening of Parliament

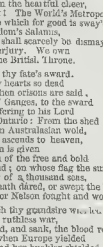
MORTALITY OF LONDON. During the month of deaths in the Metropolis, during the past week, shows a considerable decrease in the amount of mortality as compared with the numbers of the two previous weeks. The total number was 1091; the average for the last week five winters, 1068. The numbers births in the past was 1457; males 743, females 714

THE WEATHER IN THE METROPOLIS. A thick fog prevailed over the metropolis during the whole of Wednesday morning, which rendered the streets exceedingly gloomy and cheerless, and comparatively deserted. All business was transacted by gas, oil, or candle. In the evening, the wind changed to the south, and the frost, which has been severe since Sunday last, began to give way. About seven o'clock a fall of small snow commenced, and continued at intervals some hours, but the quantity altogether was not such as to cause any material impediment in travelling. On Thursday there was a good deal of snow.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED.

LORD KINGSALE.

JOHN STAPLETON DE COURCY, Lord Kingsale, premier Baron in the Peerage of Ireland, died a few days since. His Lordship was son of the late Hon. Captain Michael de Courcy, R.N., and succeeded to the family honours 20th Jan., 1839, at the decease of his uncle. He was born 17th September, 1805, and married, 2nd October, 1825, Sarah, daughter of Joseph Chadder, Esq., by whom he leaves issue, two sons and two daughters, the elder of the former, John Constantine, being now Lord Kingsale.



A singular privilege—that of wearing the hat in the Royal presence—has been hereditary in the family of De Courcy since the time of King John. That Monarch, in requital of the gallant bearing of the famous sir John De Courcy, Earl of Ulster, in accepting the challenge of the champion of the French King, Philip Augustus, desired the Earl to ask anything within his gift, and it should be granted. To which Ulster replied that, having estates and honours enough, he prayed that his successors might have the privilege (their first obeisance being paid) to remain covered in the presence of his Highness, and all future Kings of England. The request was readily conceded, and thenceforward each successive Lord Kingsale enjoyed this peculiar immunity. On the accession of William the Third, America, twenty-third Lord, appearing covered at Court, and his Majesty expressing his surprise at the circumstance, Kingsale thus explained the reason:—"Sire my name is De Courcy. I am Lord of Kingsale, in your Majesty's kingdom of Ireland; and the cause of my appearing covered in your Majesty's presence, is to assert the ancient privilege of my family, granted to Sir John De Courcy, Earl of Ulster, and his heirs, by John, King of England." The King acknowledged the hereditary right, and gave his hand to the Baron to kiss, whereupon his Lordship paid his obeisance, and continued with his hat on.

GEN. SIR WILLIAN ANSON, BART., K.C.B.

THIS gallant officer, one of the oldest Generals in the army, died at Brockhall, near Weedon, the seat of T. R. Thornton, Esq, on the 18th inst. His military career extended over a lengthened period, his first commission, that of ensign, in the 1st Foot Guards, bearing date in June, 1789. From 1806 to 1808, he served in Sicily, with the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel; and in the latter year, embarking for Spain, participated in Sir John Moore's campaign, and fought gallantly at Corunna. In 1809, he joined the expedition to Zealand; and in 1811, having received the brevet of Major-General, was attached to Kemmis's Brigade in the Peninsula. Here he gained high distinction, particularly at Salamanca, the Pyrenees, Orthes, Vittoria, Nivelle, and Toulouse, and received the thanks of Parliament.

He was one of the Board of General Officers, a Knight Commander of the Bath, and Colonel of the 47th Foot. In 1831, he obtained a patent of Baronetcy.

Sir William was the fourth son of George Adams Anson, Esq., of Shughorough, by Mary his wife, daughter of the first Lord Vernon; younger brother of Thomas, Viscount Anson, and uncle to the present Earl of Lichfield. Of George Anson, the celebrated circumnavigator the deceased Baronet was grand-nephew.

At the period of his decease, Sir William had completed his 74th year; he married, 26th Jan., 1815, Louisa Frances Mary, only child and heiress of John Dickenson, Esq., of Birch Hall, Lancashire, descended maternally from the ducal House of Hamilton, and has left, besides the present Baronet (Sir John William Hamilton Anson), two younger sons, and three daughters,

THE RIGHT HON. LADY MARY SHEPHERD

THIS accomplished lady, distinguished for her philosophic views and learned literary attainments, died in Hyde Park-terrace, recently. She was second daughter of Neil, third Earl of Rosebery, by Mary, his second Countess, only daughter of Sir Francis Vincent, Bart., and married, 11th April, 1808, Henry John Shepherd, Esq. At the time of her death, her Ladyship had just entered on her seventieth year.

SIR THOMAS CRAWLEY BOEVEY, BART.

THIS venerable Baronet died at Flaxley Abbey, Gloucestershire, on the 10th inst., aged seventy-seven. He was eldest son of the late Sir Thomas Crawley Boevey, by Anne, his wife, daughter of the Rev. Thomas Savage; and represented two ancient families, the Crawleys and Boeveys. The latter surname was assumed by Thomas Crawley, Esq., upon inheriting the estate of Flaxley Abbey, bequeathed to him by William Boevey, Esq., whose relict, Catherine, daughter of John Riches, Esq., of London, is supposed to be the Widow in "The Spectator," so inexorable to the addresses of Sir Roger de Coverley; and she is further described in Steel's Epistolary Correspondence.

Sir Thomas, the respected gentleman whose death we record, married 28th October, 1807, Mary Albinia, eldest daughter of the late Sir Thomas Hyde Page, and has left three daughters and one son, the present Sir Martin Hyde Crawley Boevey, Bart.

FINE ARTS.

LANDSEER'S DEER-STALKING IN THE HIGHLANDS. Engraved by T. LANDSEER and J. H. ROBINSON. Moon.

"The most manly and exciting of all our national sports"—Deer-stalking—has, of late years, been so eloquently and forcibly described by Mr. Scrope, that its practice has been considerably revived in Scotland. At all events, this gentleman's stirring and life-look volume on the noble sport has, doubtless, induced thousands to its practical enjoyment; and the subject becoming otherwise popular, has been illustrated by the first animal painter of the day—with a success which will be recorded in this branch of the British school. To this fact, the walls of the exhibition rooms of the Royal Academy have borne vivid testimony, for some seasons past, in a series of pictures achieved by the genius of Edwin Landseer; and which, in the words of the work before us, "exhibit the leading characteristics of the Scottish Highlands, the noble race of animals peculiar to the country, and the sportsmen in moments of intense anxiety, high excitement, and eager pursuit, or exceeding triumph."

This magnificent work, then, comprises six splendid engravings, most of them executed by the painter's brother, Mr. T. Landseer.

First, is "The Combat," a scene of mortal strife between two deer; their antlers interlaced, and their coats bristling in the furor of the fight, as

> When two stacs for their fair female fight,
> In Atho's glens, or on Ben Aulet's steep,
> With horns as fierce they meet,
> * * *
> And push for push, and wound for wound, return.

The next, "Waiting for the Deer to Rise," is, indeed, a masterly groupe, the action of which may be shadowed forth in the accompanying passage:—" But him keep weel back wi' the dowgs, er' I haud up this buss o' heather, an' tak' a leuk ahint it whatna like beast he is. But be sure ye dinna mak' ony steer, he's terrible tear! but I was na' easing the top o' his horns." And, how this injunction is obeyed! The stalker, with his rifle and his "buss o' heather," by his intense watching, bespeaks the anima. to be "terrible near;" all admirably seconded by the faithful dog keeping Brain down, and not letting him whinge, as he is counselled to do by a High under, in shadow; and Brain, the dowg, too, what a fine portrait of intensity. The entire picture is a glorious composition, exquisitely engraved by J. H. Robinson its size is 20 by 15 inches.

"Watching the Body" is the third scene; and this, by permission of the publisher, we have engraved. We quote the epigraph from "the Recollections of a Poacher":—

"Mony a lonsom sentry hae I keepit ower the body o' a gude beast, after I had wrocht sair to get him. See lang as ony daylicht wad be to be seen, I wadna betit to get him muvit, for I wanna wealling to tak chance o' the foresters gettin' a glint o' me, and sae I wad jest be to dra' it in'l the shelter o' some bealach, or in below a big stan', and syne wear awa' the time wi' the pipe. Eh! man! the pipe's a grannd friend to puir folk! I'd far shunner be wanting the whiskey nor the tobawco 'deed, tho' I'm no teetotaller, I'm no that sair on the whiskey, for a drink o' mulk I'll mak a man wholsomer nor ony speerits but I coudna carry on without the pipe!—she'll put by the worst of onything to eat, when it's maybe ill to get or when a man'll hae but as piece cake atween himsel an' the dowg; awsel than, he'll jest sit an' smok', an' tak' theokit o' the days that he's passed in travellin' after the deers."

The repose of this groupe is in effective contrast with the fierceness of "The Combat," and the intensity of "The Waiting," and the quiet enjoyment of the "lonsom sentry," and the almost dignified ease of the "dowg," characteristic of having really been an important agent in the struggle, are both admirably set off by the noble antlers, serving as a kind of natural framework for the portraits. "How to get the Deer home" is equally indicative of the painter's skill.

"If there be any gentlema of the south countrye, who, led by the love of vert and venison, has wandered to the far north, and not being privileged to ask for the large hospitality there so freely given, has occasionally strayed unbidden upon the glorious domains devoted to the Deer, he will know that the unlicensed joys of the forest are not without alloy, and that it is possible to be at times involved in predicaments not wholly pleasing."

Well, he has had a fine day's sport: not a luckless mouse, or mountain hare, ominous of ill! has crossed his path; and the first happy sweep of his glass has shown him a fair hart, such as he would be proud to kill; the line of stags, too, may have been favourable; and though he has had to crawl over pointed stones, "under the fair yet treacherous bed of lichenous mosses," and at length he may have hit the Deer in the right place, and he may be lying before him—next painful question will arise—"How am I to get him home?—the remaining hours of daylight are but few, and the nearest bothy five miles off." Then, the foresters may already have suspicions—may have watched and witnessed all that has been done! "How is the Deer to be got home?" The picture is a dark one, though it be relieved by the head of the Deer; the watching Poacher and dog, are here, and the atmospheric effect of the coming day is cleverly given.

DEER-STALKING IN THE HIGHLANDS—WATCHING THE DEAD.—PAINTED BY L. LANDSEER, R.A.

"The Last Scene" is next; for, as has been said of a nobler existence, "last of all comes death," here depicted by the slain Deer, touchingly illustrating the epigraph:—

> "The noble Deer! and is it thus he lies?
> Those limbs, which yester e'en with springy tread
> Traversed the rugged sides of steep Ben More,
> Listless and still. The glories of his brow,
> Which erst with matchless dignity he bore,
> Reclined against the cloudless azure of the sky,
> As o'er the mountain ridge he proudly passed,
> Now droop and trail upon ignoble ground
> The ear, of surest and acutest sense,
> Which noted e'en the slightest breath of sound,
> Is rudeness and dull.
> The full and piercing orb of that clear eye,
> Which laughed the dimness of the mist to scorn,
> In darkness sleeps: and his fine form
> O'er some mean bench in rude neglect is thrown."
>
> The Hunter's Lament, from the Gaelic.

"The Poacher's Bothy" is a fine composition; the dawn breaking, and pouring in at the rude window a rich light over the savage scene within, is in truly artistic spirit. And here lies the dead Hart, for better concealment in the box-bed, the Poacher's own rough couch; Laddie acts as sentinel; and here again is the eager vigilance of the "dowg," restrained by the vigorous grasp of his master's leg; and there is the bottle of "the right stuff, the real mountain dew," ignorant of excise; and, over all, the morning light, bronzing in its course the old horse-shoe, for years nailed to the shutter, and believed, by Kenneth, to have brought luck to him and his undertakings: all this is a true picture of lawless Highland life.

The title-page to this noble series is the head of a deer, drawn in masterly style.

Throughout the set of prints, the great Painter has been admirably seconded by the Engraver, Mr. Thomas Landseer. In short, we have rarely seen a work in subject and treatment more befitting the "ancestral home," as presenting true pictures of a noble national sport, in a style highly honourable to national art.

DESTRUCTION OF SKIRBECK RECTORY, BY FIRE.

On Sunday evening, the parish of Skirbeck, a short distance from Boston, in Lincolnshire, was the scene of a calamity which excited great sympathy in the locality—the destruction by fire of the Rectory House, the handsome residence of the Rev. W. Roy, D.D. The house was of considerable extent, and, within the last few years, had been much enlarged; and this circumstance, with the destruction of much valuable property, and the high respect in which Dr. Roy is held, caused an universal expression of regret throughout the neighbourhood.

The fire was discovered at about half-past six o'clock, by a young lady perceiving flames issuing from the wall of one of the bed-chambers, and evidently originated from a chimney between the old and new portions of the Rectory House. An alarm was given immediately, and a messenger was despatched to announce the same to Dr. Roy, who was performing divine service at the chapel on the Spilsby-road. The Rev. Gentleman briefly stated the event to his congregation, and dismissed them; and every one immediately quitted the chapel to render assistance.

In the meantime, the flames had spread with destructive rapidity to the old and new buildings, so that the fire raged on both sides of the party-wall. The engines arrived speedily from Boston, but the supply of water was very short; by eight o'clock, all hope of saving the building was given up; but the flames were cut off from communication with the cellars. Fortunately, there was no wind, or the stables, the adjoining premises, and even the old church, would have been in peril. By ten o'clock, the roofs of the mansion had fallen in; but, for hours after, the large timbers burnt with unquenched vigour.

It is estimated that not fewer than 10,000 persons had collected from Boston and the neighbourhood, and their exertions in saving property were successful. A large quantity of costly furniture and valuable books were rescued from the flames, and removed to the lawn; and, to the credit of the more humble classes of the spectators, notwithstanding temptation and opportunity, there was no instance of that heartless pilfering of property which too often occurs upon such occasions. The damage is great: the house and premises, valued at from £3000 to £4000, were only insured to the amount of £1000; the furniture, wine, plate, &c., were partially insured; the wine is preserved, and the greater part of the books and plate. We are happy to add that no lives were lost. So extensive and destructive a fire has not occurred in the neighbourhood for many years. It has naturally directed public attention to the necessity of obtaining more efficient engines, and a better supply of water than hitherto; and, now that the alarm is rife, we trust that proper measures will be taken for the security of property.

DESTRUCTION OF THE RECTORY-HOUSE, SKIRBECK, BY FIRE.

YORK HOUSE.

A few weeks since, the grey-fronted, antiquated-looking building, represented above, attracted the attention of all who passed near the Treasury Offices at

REMAINS OF YORK HOUSE, WHITEHALL.

Whitehall, by the complete dissimilarity of its architecture with that of the surrounding buildings. Yet few of those who stared listlessly at its buttresses, and Gothic doorway, enriched with battlements and carving, would have imagined that they were gazing on the last relic of the princely house called York Palace, built by the great Cardinal Wolsey!

The new Houses of Parliament have just been pulled down to make way for the commencement of the fine masonry; and, though we confess that Mr. Barry's design will be greatly enhanced by the portion which is to be built on the site of York House, still the walls and buttresses, and doorway of the old work seemed always as mementos of times by-gone, and, therefore, worthy of preservation. Not that there was anything very beautiful about the prim-looking old house, as it had been sadly mutilated and defaced: but still there were old associations connected with it, and, amongst others, that the leasecurious that it was the spot, where, in days of yore, was the Cockpit constructed by King Henry VIII., together with a bowling-green and tennis court, for his delectation, after he had stripped Wolsey of this, his magnificent abode.

A few yards from this building stood the celebrated Gate of Whitehall, said to have been built from designs by Hans Holbein, for Henry VIII.

THE WEATHER.

The past week has been principally frosty, and very dull, the sky having been generally covered by cloud. Thursday, Jan. 14th, was a very fine bright day; the reading of the thermometer in the morning was as low as 24½ deg.; by one o'clock, P.M., it had risen to 41 deg., which was the highest point it has reached during the week; it sank to 29 deg. before midnight, and to 21½ deg. by seven, A.M., on Friday, and this was the lowest reading during the week. Friday was a fine day, and since then to the present time each day has been cloudy and dull. It is remarkable that between Friday afternoon, January 15, to the present time, Thursday, January 21, the reading of the thermometer has not varied 9 deg., the extreme readings between these times having been 24½ deg. and 31 deg. The average temperature of Thursday, the 14th, was 32½ deg.; of Friday, was 32½; of Saturday, was 30½; of Sunday, was 29½; of Monday, was 29½; of Tuesday, was 31½, and of Wednesday, was 30 deg. The average temperature of the week was less than 31 deg. Some snow fell during the evening of Wednesday.

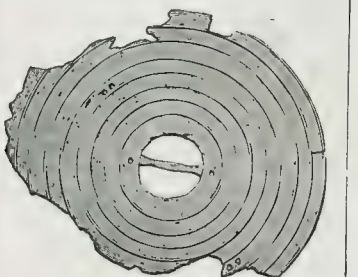
The following are the extreme thermometrical readings taken each day:—

Thursday Jan. 14, the highest reading was	41 deg.	the lowest was	24½ deg.
Friday, Jan. 15	35		21
Saturday, Jan. 16	34		24
Sunday, Jan. 17	30		27
Monday, Jan. 18	33		27
Tuesday, Jan. 19	33½		30
Wednesday, Jan. 20	32		27½

Blackheath, Thursday, Jan. 21, 1847. J. G.

ANCIENT BRITISH SHIELDS.

ABOUT a month since, a labourer employed in claying land in the parish of Coveney, in Cambridgeshire, turned up two British Shields in good preservation: they were found lying beneath the clay, under the fen soil.



ANCIENT BRITISH SHIELD.

These Shields are circular in form; and each measures about 22 inches in diameter. One is ornamented with concentric circles, stamped, in the metal; and the other with intertwining serpents. The handles of both are perfect; and there are remains of bronze holes for straps rivetted on the inside. They have been purchased for the Cambridge Antiquarian Society, by the Rev. S. Banks, of Haddenham; to whose courtesy we are indebted for the accompanying sketches.

It is conjectured that these Shields may have been lost by the upsetting of a canoe; as canoes have been found imbedded in the fen soil of the locality.

There are, in the Meyrick Collection at Goodrich Court, Herefordshire, several specimens of these early British Shields. They are ornamented with concentric circles, between which are as many little knobs as the space will admit. Each is rather more than two feet in diameter, with a hollow boss in the centre to admit the hand, as it was held at arm's length in action. "On comparing it with the Highland target," Sir Samuel Meyrick remarks, "we shall find that, although the Roman mode of putting it on the arm has been adopted by these mountaineers, the boss, rendered useless, is still retained, and the little knobs imitated with brass nails."—(Archæologia, vol. xxiii., p. 95.)

ANCIENT BRITISH SHIELD.

SEVERE WEATHER ON THE CONTINENT. Letters from Brussels state that, on the 15th, at six o'clock in the morning, the centigrade thermometer was 7° below zero, at noon at 5°, and four o'clock at 4° below zero. The continuation of this intense cold, and the want of employment, have greatly increased the horrid ips among the labouring poor in the neighbourhood of Brussels, and especially in the country. At Antwerp, on the 17th, at about eight o'clock, the cold was 9° below zero; the frost each day increases in intensity. So great is the destitution at Pesth, that the poor are compelled to grind the bark of trees for their subsistence. On a glance at the Continental papers we see with regret that want and misery are prevalent in many parts abroad.

THE LATE MR. BEVAN, THE BANKER. Mr. David Bevan, banker, of Lombard-street, and of Belmont, East Barnet, at which place he died on the 24th of December, has left funded and personal property to the amount of £200,000. He has bequeathed to his son, Richard Lee Bevan, £40,000; to his son, the Rev. David Barclay Bevan, M.A., Rector of Burton Latimer, Northamptonshire, the sum of £30,000, but from which is to be deducted the purchase money of livings, farms, &c., amounting to upwards of £16,000; to his daughters, Mrs. Mortimer, wife of the Rev. Thomas Mortimer, B.D., Minister of Gray's-inn-lane Chapel; Mrs. Morier, wife of Captain W. Morier, R.N.; and to Mrs. Stephenson, £20,000 each, and to Mrs. Bosanquet £1000, in addition to her fortune. The bequests to be for their separate use and to their children, but no grandson is to appropriate his expectancy in the purchase of a commission or his promotion in the army. The residue of his personalty, as well as all freehold, copyhold, and customary estates, he leaves to his son, Robert Cooper Lee Bevan, whom he appointed his sole executor.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE GEORGE BYNG, ESQ., M.P.—The remains of the late venerable George Byng, Esq., M.P., were interred on Monday in the family mausoleum, at Potter's Bar, near Wrotham. General Lord Strafford, G.C.B.; the Right Hon. George Stevens Byng, M.P., Secretary to the Board of Control; Mr. Tufnell, M.P., and other relatives, attended the interment. Mrs. Byng will occupy the family mansion in St. James's-square.

PROVISIONS FOR IRELAND AND SCOTLAND.—Her Majesty's Ministers have set apart a number of vessels, for the purpose of conveying provisions to the distressed districts in Ireland and Scotland.

HEALTH OF TOWNS.—IMPROVEMENT OF LONDON.

"I recommend to your attention measures which will be laid before you, for improving the Health of Towns, an object the importance of which you will not fail to appreciate." Her Majesty's Speech to Parliament, on Tuesday last.

This important recommendation from the Throne assures us that the sanatory measures for the "Health of Towns," will henceforth receive that attention from our Legislature, which their importance entitles them to; and that the amelioration of the condition of the labouring classes will form a prominent topic of the present Session of Parliament. It may, therefore, be as well to glance at what progress has already been made in this measure of wise economy; satisfied, as we are, that the result will prove encouragement to those who, in advocating the cause, are performing a great duty. We take, for this purpose, a pair of pictures of metropolitan life—the Evil and the Remedy. For the first, we select a locality, whereon the hand of improvement has been some time busy—viz., the notorious Field-lane, a specimen of the wretched house-accommodation for the working classes, and of the frightful moral results to which this foul neglect unquestionably conduces. Of the vile old places which formerly occupied the site cleared in our Illustration, we gave two effective views in a former No. of our Journal. The narrow avenue, known as Field-lane, with its tempting premiums for thievery, the pocket-handkerchief display, still exists: but will, we hope, shortly be cleared away by force of the wholesome doctrine, which enjoins cleanliness as next to godliness. Every reader of Mr. Dickens's novel of excellent purpose, "Oliver Twist," will remember how vividly he has sketched this locality; but the picture is so good a lesson of morality that we shall quote it:—

FIELD-LANE.

"Near to the spot on which Snow-hill and Holborn-hill meet, there opens upon the right hand as you come out of the City, a narrow and dismal alley leading to Saffron-hill. In its filthy shops are exposed for sale huge bunches of second-hand silk handkerchiefs of all sizes and patterns—for here reside the traders who purchase them from pickpockets. Hundreds of these handkerchiefs hang dangling from pegs outside the windows, or flaunting from the door-posts; and the shelves within are piled with them. Confined as the limits of Field-lane are, it has its barber, its coffee-shop, its beer-shop, and its fried-fish warehouse. It is a commercial colony of itself, the emporium of petty larceny, visited at early morning and setting-in of dusk by silent merchants, who traffic in dark backparlours, and go as strangely as they come. Here the clothesman, the shoe-vamper, and the rag-merchant display their goods as sign-boards to the petty thief; and stores of old iron and bones, and heaps of mildewy fragments of woollen-stuff and linen, rust and rot in the grimy cellars."

We now pass to the Remedy.

A MODEL LODGING-HOUSE IN ST. GILES'S.

The Model Lodging-House now building in George-street, St Giles's, is the second effort for the improvement of dwellings, made by the Society for Improving the Condition of the Labouring Classes; and we rejoice to find that they are thus encouraged to proceed in so laudable an object, by the complete success which has attended their first attempt, the erection of the Model Buildings, near Bagnigge Wells, of which we gave an engraving in No. 206 of our Journal. These Buildings, arranged for the separate occupation of twenty-three families, with one house for thirty widows, or females of advanced age, have been, from the time of their completion, in constant occupation, at rents remunerative to the Society, yet lower than is ordinarily paid by the labouring classes for much less comfortable and healthy apartments.

The Society, in building a Model Lodging-House for Single Men, has been influenced by a consideration of the awful disclosures made in the Report of the Health of Towns Commission, and in other well-known publications; disclosures painfully confirmed by members of the Society, who have inspected the condition of the existing Lodging-Houses in the metropolis. In many of these dwellings, numbers of the labouring classes are crowded together, without regard to sex, in the same low, dark, and noisome room, without provision for ventilation or drainage, nor any supply of water for the common purposes of cleanliness. Whilst some of these houses are frequented by the depraved and dissolute, the majority of the lodgers are hard-working people, who are doing their utmost to support themselves by the exercise of lawful occupations.

It is on behalf of this much neglected and deserving class, and with a view of showing how they may be rescued from the discomfort and contamination to which they are at present (through no fault of their own) so injuriously subjected, that the Committee decided on purchasing from the Commissioners of Woods and Forests a piece of freehold ground, in George-street, St. Giles's, a street chiefly occupied by lodging-houses, and situated between High Holborn and the new street, forming the continuation of Oxford-street.

The present Building, which is 80 feet in length, comprises six stories; the basement being devoted to a kitchen, wash-house, bath, stove, and store-rooms. On the ground floor, is provided a common living-room, 33 feet by 23 feet, and 10ft. 9in. in height, with an office and apartments for the Superintendent. The four upper floors are each divided into two dormitories, having a stone staircase between them, with washing and water-closets on each floor. The dormitories, eight in number, each ten feet high, will lodge 104 inmates; they are partitioned to the height of six feet nine inches, so as to place each bed in a separate compartment; whilst due regard is paid to the ventilation of the whole building, and especially of the dormitories.

The arrangement and design of the building are by the hon. architect to the Society, Henry Roberts, Esq., F.S.A.

The site of this House cost £1270, and the building itself will cost £3930, besides which a considerable sum will be needful for furniture, &c. &c.

The subscriptions received up to this time amount to no more than £3030 15s. There is, therefore, a deficiency of about £2000, towards which the assistance of the public is entreated.

It is our hope and belief that the House, when once open for the reception of lodgers, will become a self-supporting institution; and that, as such, it will prove a model for imitation in many of the large towns and densely peopled localities of the kingdom.

MODEL LODGING-HOUSE, ST. GILES'S.

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE (Friday). Since Monday the arrivals of English wheat have been on a moderate scale, but the number of sacks to-day was small. The supplies of foreign remain of the season on foreign corn had considerable influence upon the wheat trade, which was in a very dull state. Although very little business was transacted in any quality, holders refused to accept lower prices. In foreign wheat—both free and in bond—no trade was done, but the rates were almost nominal. The only supplies of flour of import in the breweries and distilleries caused the sale for barley and malt to run heavy, and, to effect [illegible] such extra cut to secure any sale worth mentioning. Beans and peas were in moderate request, at previous quotations. Oats, as previously quoted, were dull.

Arrivals this week:—Wheat, 4820; barley, 2750; malt, 3290; oats, 150. Irish: Wheat, [illegible]; Foreign: Wheat, 350; barley, 1320; malt, 360; oats, 5120; malt, —

English.—Wheat, Essex and Kent, red, 69s to 78s, ditto white, 76s to 85s; Norfolk and Suffolk, red 70s to 72s; ditto white 72s to 80s; rye, 45s to 48s; grinding barley, 25s to 27s; distilling, 33s to 35s; malting ditto, 37s to 40s; Lincoln and Norfolk malt, 75s to 78s; brown ditto, 70s to 72s; Kingston and Ware, 72s to 80s; Cuckoo, 82s to 86s; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire 70s to 72s; Kingston and Ware, 72s to 80s; Cuckoo, 82s to 86s; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire red oats, 23s to 24s; potato ditto, 25s to 26s. Youghal and Cork, black, —s to —s; ditto white, —s to —s; Sligo, —s to —s; Limerick, —s to —s; Londonderry, —s to —s; Galway, —s to —s; maple, 25s to 28s; white, 26s to 30s; beans, 40s to 45s, ditto old, —s to —s; peas, —s to —s per quarter. Flour, town-made, 50s to 52s; Suffolk, 50s to 52s; Stockton and Yorkshire 48s to 52s, per 280 lbs. Foreign: Wheat, —s to —s; Danzig, red, 72s to 73s; ditto white, 77s to 78s per quarter. In Bond.—Wheat, —s to —s; oats, new, —s to —s, ditto, feed, —s to —s; and peas, —s to —s per quarter. Flour, American, 33s to 35s, Baltic, —s to —s per barrel.

The Seed Market. Linseed, as well as cakes, has sold readily, at full prices. In other articles, next to nothing has been done.

Linseed, English, sowing, 50s to 53s; Baltic, crushing, 44s 6d to 45s; Mediterranean and Odessa, 43s to 45s. Hempseed, 35s to 36s per quarter. Carraway, 30s per cwt. Rapeseed, Muscat-seed, 39s to 40s; white ditto, 8s to 10s. Tares, 6s 6d to 6s 9d per bushel. English Rapeseed, new, £21 to £23 per last of ten quarters. Linseed cakes, English, £13 10s to £19 10s; ditto, foreign, £9 10s to £10 10s per 1000; Rapeseed cakes, £7 0s to £7 5s per ton. Canary, 55s to 60s per quarter. English Clover-seed, red, —s to —s; extra, —s to —s; white, 41s to 44s; extra, up to —s. Foreign, red, —s to —s; extra, —s; white, —s; extra, —s per cwt.

Bread. The prices of wheaten bread in the metropolis are from 9½d to 10½d; of household ditto, 8d to 9d per 4lb loaf.

Imperial Weekly Average.—Wheat, 70s 3d; barley, 32s 0d; oats, 22s 6d; rye, 50s 8 .., beans, 40s 0d, peas, 41s 11d.

The Six Weeks' Average.—Wheat, 63s 10d, barley, 40s 0d; oats, 27s 4d; rye, 47s 7d; beans, 42s 8d; peas, 50s 8d.

Duties on Foreign Corn.—Wheat, 4s 0d; barley, 2s 6d; oats, 1s 6d; rye, 3s 0d; beans 3s 0d; peas, 2s 8d.

Tea.—This market has been in a very inactive state since our last, yet prices rule about [illegible].

Sugar.—Considerable excitement has prevailed in this market, owing to the forthcoming [illegible] settlement meetings, and prices of the raw and refined article have advanced fully 2s to 4s per quarter. Brown lumps, 44s to 45s; and middling ditto, 39s 6d to 40s per cwt.

Coffee.—All kinds of coffee move off slowly, at late rates.

Rice. Most qualities have improved in value for the week, and is an active demand.

Provisions.—The best qualities of Irish butter are in good request at full prices; but other kinds have fallen in va ue as is per cwt. Fine Irish bacon is sleady at 50s to 52s for fine, and 46s for coarse. The arrivals of foreign butter are only on a moderate scale. All kinds are in fair request, but not dearer. Bacon moves off slowly, at former rates. The arrivals of Irish lard is firm, at previous currencies. Barrelled beef and pork are held at higher rates. All other kinds of provisions are unaltered in value.

Oils.—The market is tasteless, and prices are mostly supported.

Tallow.—A large business is passing in tallow, and many holders refuse to sell at present rates. P.Y.C., on the spot, 52s 6d.

Hay and Straw. Meadow hay, £3 3s to £3 18s; clover ditto, £3 3s to £4 16s and straw, £1 4s to £1 12s per cwt.

Wool. Although there is a better feeling in this market, no advance can be noticeable in the [illegible].

Potatoes.—The supply of potatoes being very small, the best samples have advanced to 220s per ton.

Hops (Friday).—Although a little more money has been obtained for the best new hops in pockets the demand is far from active, and the supply being more than equal to it, prices must be wants of the former. From the middling quantities of hops some slightly little is doing, at late rates. Sussex pockets, £3 16s to £4 7s. Weald of Kent ditto, £4 2s to £4 12, Mid and East Kent ditto, £4 os to £5 5s per cwt.

Coals (Friday).—Carr's Hartley, 24s 6d; Holywell Main, 22s; West Hartley, 24s 6d; Bradley's Ile one, 20s; Pemberton, 27s 6d and Stingo's Hartley, 24s 6d per ton.

Smithfield (Friday).—Although the supply of beasts on offer this morning was very limited, we have to report a dull inquiry for the best breeds of stock, at the late prices; however, a trifling depression in value. There were in the market 41 beasts from [illegible] here of sheep were small. The few prime old Downs were readily disposed of at [illegible] other kinds of sheep declined 2d per 8 lb. Calves were in short supply, and sold [illegible] at late rates. The pork trade was dull, yet we can quote no decline in the currencies. Milch cows were very dull, at from £16 to £18 each, including their small calf.

Per 8lb to sink the offal.—Coarse and inferior beasts, 3s 2d to 3s 4d, second quality ditto, 3s 6d to 3s 8d; prime large ditto, 3s 10d to 4s 0d; prime Scots, 4s 2d to 4s 4d; coarse and inferior sheep, 3s 8d to 3s 10d, second quality ditto, 4s 0d to 4s 2d; prime coarse-woolled ditto, 4s 4d to 4s 6d; prime Southdown ditto, 4s 8d to 4s 10d; large coarse calves, 4s 4d to 4s 6d; prime small ditto, 4s 8d to 5s 0d; large hogs, 3s 10d to 4s 0d; neat small porkers, 4s 0d to 4s 2d. Suckling calves, 18s to 28s, and quarter old store pigs, 16s to 18s each. Beasts, 555; calves, 130, sheep, 2320; calves, 190; pigs, 280.

Newgate and Leadenhall Markets.—We had a fair trade here to-day, and prices were not supported.

Per 8lb, by the carcase:—Inferior beef, 3s 8d to 3s 10d; middling ditto, 4s 0d to 4s 2d, prime large ditto, 3s 6d to 3s 8d; prime small ditto, 4s 4d to 4s 6d, large pork, 3s 8d to 4s 0d; inferior mutton, 3s 8d to 3s 10d; middling ditto, 3s 8d to 4s 0d; prime ditto, 4s 4d to 4s 6d; veal, 4s 0d to 5s 0d, small pork, 4s 8d to 5s 0d. [illegible]

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

The position of monetary affairs while the last week's article was writing, indicated an expressed belief that a very short time would elapse before the Directors of the Bank of England would find it necessary to still further increase the rate of discount. This belief proved well founded, for on Thursday the rate was advanced another one-half per cent, making four per cent the minimum. The state of the Foreign Exchanges has now begun to excite alarm, and this last advance is more to guard against the future, than from any immediate necessity. Money at present is in such demand, that the supply is not equal to the high rate of interest. While, however, this facility exists, there also exists the danger of its being lent abroad; and, as this would render the course of exchange still more unfavourable, specie would be inevitably taken from the Bank, and from the exchanges with Hamburg, Paris, and America, were all against England. With Paris, the rate is likely to decline considerably. Under such circumstances, the Directors of the Bank of England have a very delicate task to perform in the exercise of their discretion in the [illegible] rate of interest, and thus endeavouring to check the export of the precious metals as far as practicable.

Much speculation arises in connection with regard to the measures likely to be pursued for raising the funds required to meet the present and future exigencies in Ireland. The surplus revenue has already been invested, and an advance upon deficiency bills is declined in. It is, however, now said that the Bill will be brought at the present crisis; and, if it did, as a most objectionable proceeding. To find the existing floating debt, has been deemed likely; but it is to be feared that, under present prospects, a very large sum will be required. Even now, however, exist but little doubt that, at the March renewal of Exchequer Bills, an increase in the rate of interest must be given, if not at an earlier period.

The English Funds have undergone considerable fluctuations, consequent upon a large amount of business arising from the position of both commercial and political affairs. On Monday, the Market declined from the prices of the previous week, a fall in Consols. Reasons for the immediate decline. Thursday, prices of Consols was 92¾ to ¾. Increased heaviness was apparent on Tuesday and the publication of the Queen's Speech added to the downward tendency. Quotations, at closing, were 92¼ to ⅜ for money, and 92⅝ to ¾ for the opening price, on Wednesday morning, was 91¾, but a decline soon reduced the quotations to 91¾; a slight improvement, however, made the closing figures 92⅛. The news, on Thursday, of the additional loss of specie, and the rate of interest [illegible] Bank of England only produced a fall of about ¼ per cent, but the Market is easily depressed, and, at the close of the week, displayed no sign of permanent advance. From the above facts, it will be perceived, although a strong feeling prevails that Government must increase the rate of interest, or fund a large portion. Bank Stock has been well supported, and business on the other descriptions of stock has not confined principally to the Government Securities. Prices, at closing, stood for:—Bank Stock, 205; Three per Cent. [illegible] ¼; Three ¼-d-a-Quarter per Cent, 1854, [illegible]; New Three ¼ per Cent, 1854, [illegible]; Ditto, thirty years, 94; Ditto, thirty years, 94; India Stock, 262, India Bonds, 8 pm.; South Sea Annuities, 99¾; Consols for Account, 92¼; Exchequer Bills, 5.

Business in the Foreign Markets has been very limited, but prices are generally flatter. Mexican, on Monday, opened at 22½ to ¾, and closes at 22 for Account. Portuguese, notwithstanding the triumph of the Royal party, have fallen from Monday's prices to 34 ¾ to ⅞, the closing question of 34 ⅞. Spanish Bonds have fluctuated between 24½ to ⅞, and 24 to ⅝, the last quotation. Dutch Two-and-a-Half per Cents, on Monday, quoted 58 to ⅝; the closing quotation is [illegible]. The Four per Cent. Certificates were 93 to ⅝, on Monday; the last price 91½. Belgian Four-and-a-Half per Cents have declined from 94 96 to 93½; and Spanish Three per Cents now quote, for Account, 34½; having marked, on Monday, the same price.

Although there has been a gradual decline in the Share Market, wherever sales have been pressed, yet prices have not hitherto suffered to the extent anticipated. The scrips of the new lines are, however, materially depressed by any offer to the public. The prices, at closing, stood for:—Bank Stock, 205; Three per Cent. [illegible] ¼; Three ¼-d-a-Quarter per Cent, 1854, [illegible]; New Three ¼ per Cent, 1854, [illegible]; Ditto, thirty years, 94; Ditto, thirty years, 94; India Stock, 262, India Bonds, 8 pm.; South Sea Annuities, 99¾; Consols for Account, 92¼; Exchequer Bills, 5.

Business in the Foreign Markets has been very limited, but prices are generally flatter. Mexican, on Monday, opened at 22½ to ¾, and closes at 22 for Account. Portuguese, notwithstanding the triumph of the Royal party, have fallen from Monday's prices to 34 ¾ to ⅞, the closing question of 34 ⅞. Spanish Bonds have fluctuated between 24½ to ⅞, and 24 to ⅝, the last quotation. Dutch Two-and-a-Half per Cents, on Monday, quoted 58 to ⅝; the closing quotation is [illegible]. The Four per Cent. Certificates were 93 to ⅝, on Monday; the last price 91½. Belgian Four-and-a-Half per Cents have declined from 94 96 to 93½; and Spanish Three per Cents now quote, for Account, 34½; having marked, on Monday, the same price.

Railway Shares have been a gradual decline in the Share Market, wherever sales have been pressed, yet prices have not hitherto suffered to the extent anticipated. The scrips of the new lines are, however, materially depressed by any offer to the public. The prices, at closing, stood for:—Bank Stock, 205; Three per Cent. [illegible] ¼; Three ¼-d-a-Quarter per Cent, 1854, [illegible]; New Three ¼ per Cent, 1854, [illegible]; Ditto, thirty years, 94; Ditto, thirty years, 94; India Stock, 262, India Bonds, 8 pm.; South Sea Annuities, 99¾; Consols for Account, 92¼; Exchequer Bills, 5.

Business in the Foreign Markets has been very limited, but prices are generally flatter. Mexican, on Monday, opened at 22½ to ¾, and closes at 22 for Account. Portuguese, notwithstanding the triumph of the Royal party, have fallen from Monday's prices to 34 ¾ to ⅞, the closing question of 34 ⅞. Spanish Bonds have fluctuated between 24½ to ⅞, and 24 to ⅝, the last quotation. Dutch Two-and-a-Half per Cents, on Monday, quoted 58 to ⅝; the closing quotation is [illegible]. The Four per Cent. Certificates were 93 to ⅝, on Monday; the last price 91½. Belgian Four-and-a-Half per Cents have declined from 94 96 to 93½; and Spanish Three per Cents now quote, for Account, 34½; having marked, on Monday, the same price.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

[JAN. 23, 1847.

Consols, 92¼ Ditto Ditto, 1853, 92¼ Ditto Ditto, 1854, 92¼ Ditto Ditto, 1855, 92¼ Ditto Ditto, 1856, 92¼ Ditto Ditto, 1857, 92¼ Ditto Ditto, 1858, 92¼ Ditto Ditto, 1859, 92¼ Ditto Ditto, 1860, 92¼ Ditto Ditto, 1861, 92¼ Ditto Ditto, 1862, 92¼ Ditto Ditto,

TO GLEE CLUBS, CHORAL SOCIETIES, &c.

THE BRITISH HARMONIST, Publishing Monthly, Price FOURPENCE, contains the best as well as the cheapest collection of Glees, Madrigals Part-Songs, Anthems, &c., &c. Order a single number as a specimen.
Glasgow, WM. HAMILTON; and SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, and Co., London

COINS of the ANCIENT ROMAN EMPERORS: History of the Succession of the Ancient Roman Emperors, with the Prices of their Coins, busts, Portraits, their Dates and Mottoes, in part translated from F. P. WILHELM, Dealer in Ancient Coins, 48, Strand, London, price 1s., by post, 1s. 2d. Coins sent by post. Bought, Catalogued, &c.

MR WALKER'S GREAT COLLECTION OF CHESS GAMES.
Recently PUBLISHED, in 8vo, price 10s. 6d.

CHESS-STUDIES; comprising 1000 Games, actually played during the last half-century, &c. By GEORGE WALKER.
" This unique collection comprises 1000 Games played by Dr LABOURDONNAIS, 179 played by M'DONNELL, 63 played by PHILIDOR; and includes the best Games on record, played by ST. AMANT, KIESERITZKY, VON DER LASA, CORDRAN, JAENISCH, Deschapelles, &c
In the press, and to appear early in 1847, in one volume, 8vo. JAENISCH'S GREAT WORK on CHESS OPENINGS. Translated, with numerous notes, by GEORGE WALKER.
London: LONGMAN, BROWN, GREEN, and LONGMANS.

MUSICAL PRESENTS.—ORATORIOS and CHURCH MUSIC for VOICES, with Organ or Piano Accompaniment. The latest and best arrangements. No. 1. The SEASONS, from HAYDN'S score, by John Bishop, 12s. The Creation by ditto, 12s.—The SEASONS, arranged by Clementi, 31s.—The Mount of Olives, arranged by Warren, 12s.—Handel's Sublest Master, by ditto, 12s.—The Psalms of the Daily Services, by Jona Bishop, 6s.—Ditto, in Parts, each 2s. 6d.—Clare's Psalmody, 12 Books, each 6s.—Warren's choice for Chanting, 2 Books, each 6s.—London, Published only by Messrs. CRAMER and Co., 6, New Burlington-street, Music-sellers to the Queen

SUPERIOR SCHOOL BOOKS.
BUTTER'S ETYMOLOGICAL SPELLING-BOOK and EXPOSITOR; an Introduction to the Spelling, Pronunciation, and Derivation of the English Language. 56th edition, price 1s. 6d. bound.
BUTTER'S GRADATIONS in READING and SPELLING, upon an entirely new and original plan, by which displeasures are rendered as easy as monosyllables: with numerous entertaining and instructive reading lessons, in prose and verse. 30th edition, price 1s. 6d. bound
Sold by Simpkin and Co., Whittaker and Co., Longman and Co., Hamilton and Co., London. H. Mosley and Son, Derby; Oliver and Boyd, Edinburgh, J. M'Glashan, Dublin.

BEARD'S COLOURED PHOTOGRAPHIC PORTRAITS
at 34, PARLIAMENT-STREET, WESTMINSTER;
85, KING WILLIAM-STREET, CITY; and the
ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION, REGENT-STREET
"A great improvement has been effected by the patentees."—The Times

EDUCATION.—A LADY, who for several years has conducted an ESTABLISHMENT in the vicinity of the Regent's Park, proposes to take a Limited Number of YOUNG LADIES at the Sea-side, where they will receive a polite and liberal Education.—For Prospectuses, apply to 61, Queen-street, or to MISS BURDETT, 22, Effingham-place, Kensington.

DANCING TAUGHT, in the most fashionable style, by MR. WELLIS, 41, Brewer-street, Golden-square. Private Lessons in the Polka, Cellarius Valse, and Mrs Dow Temps, at all hours, to Ladies and Gentlemen of any age wishing privacy and expedition. An Assembly Room for Schools and Friday. Terms may be had on application as above.

JONES' £4 4s. SILVER LEVER WATCHES are selling at No. 338, Strand, opposite Somerset House. They comprise every modern improvement, and are warranted not to vary more than half a minute per week. The great reduction of 25 per cent since sole agent at Geneva, the Swiss manufacturers, are also at this house. On receipt of a Post-office Order payable to John Jones for £4 4s., one will be sent free —Real Gold Cases, with Glass for a Twenty-one Guinea Watch.

THE WELLINGTON BRACE.—A Pair of Braces without Buckles.—In these the length can be regulated more easily than by the old style of Prices the same as other braces of similar quality, viz., from 3s. to 10s.—To be obtained at all Hosiers and Outfitters; and wholesale, at 97, Wood-street, London.—N.B. Each pair is stamped "John Paterson, London; registered August 13, 1846"

LESSONS in MILLINERY and DRESS MAKING.—MRS. HOWELL, of Regent-street, two doors from Margaret-street, Sole Inventress of Teaching the Art of Dress-making, by Method of Lessons, undertakes to convey to persons of the meanest capacity a correct knowledge of Cutting, Fitting, and Executing in the most Fashionable Style, in Six Lessons, for One Guinea. Schools attended on the terms to be by substantiated by reference to pupils.—Apprentices and Improvers Wanted. Mulberry Rooms.—Paper Models

ALL this hubbub, in two or three provincial towns, about the EAST INDIA TEA COMPANY, is most likely end, as usual, in smoke. Even if there be a reduction will the public have Ten at less than Half-a-Crown a pound? That is the price at which the EAST INDIA TEA COMPANY sell their Tea at 6th begin other sorts at 1s. 6d. and 3s. 16d.; Coffee, 9d., 1s., and 1s. 3d. Offices, No 9, Great Prescott-street

WINDOW BLINDS.—The Patent Perforated Blinds being now brought to the greatest perfection by the introduction of a fine Gauze Pattern, similar in appearance to the weave of the finest Cambric Muslin, with every other requisite in all others, from the anti-corrosive nature of the materials of which they are made Price, in Imitation mahogany frame, 14s. 9d per square foot; best quality, 2d per square foot Transparent Blinds, each, 12s., 18s., 24s., 30s., 42s., and upwards.—PYLISH and PAGE, Sole Patentees and Manufacturers, 3, Queen-street, Cheapside, and from Chenies

CLARKE'S PATENT MORTAR LAMPS and LAMP MORTARS.—These incomparable Night Lamps are now manufactured in beautiful Plain, coloured, and painted glass, and papier machés, which, with the great [illegible] will be found invaluable [illegible] Manufactory, 114, PATENT LAMP [illegible]

PRIZE RHYME.

E. MOSES and SON, for a very long time,
Have omitted to publish their prices in rhyme;
And they certainly cannot but blame themselves here
For "sparse" in poetry ought to appear.
And with this they solicit the notice of each,
To their "very low figures," (not figures of speech).
Be [illegible]
[illegible]
Yes, you have the price exact;
Try, and then you'll prove it a fact.
MOSES sell their choice Suitas
Such as must with great applause,
For the sum of one pound five
'Tis a fact, as you'll prove
For night and shop [illegible]
A Winter Wrap [illegible]
At [illegible]
Tweed Trousers firmly made and fin'd.
Ten and sixpence w [illegible]
Double Trousers [illegible]
Dress Coats in which no fault is found
May here be purchas'd for a pound.
A Frock Coat, too, for one pound five
You purchase. Will any MOSES thrive?
For half-a-crown you may be dress'd
In what? a double-breasted Vest
Elegance and fit, without dispute,
Says a friend or Fancies by
The following, which you'll read with pleasure
Refer to clothing

MADE TO MEASURE.

Messrs MOSES undertake
For one pound five to cut and make
A Coat of waterproof, whose style
Will merits an approval by and by
At MOSES' dress-mart you will find
Coats of mid. cloth, well trimmed and lined,
Vest two pounds six is all you pay
Well then MOSES "twixt you and me"
Tweed Trousers made to order here
Cost eight and sixpence—that's not dear.
For one pound two and six you'll not
[illegible] you from the wet
For one pound six you may be drest
In trousers made the very best
For one pound twelve you may obtain
A stylish dress Coat—don't complain
The very best that can be sew
Will cost you only "two fifteen."
And Vests, just fit for gentlemen,
At eight and sixpence [illegible]
Twelve shillings you will find odds
A fancy sails, or a plush.
Boys' Tunics and Cassocks you'll buy
For one pound five well, that's not high.
And that (with your permission) is
A New Work: entitled "Costume Cassile," containing a detailed List of Prices and full directions for self-Measurement, may be had on application, or forwarded "POST FREE"
MOURNING to any extent at Five Minutes' Notice.
OBSERVE.—Any article purchased, Ready Made or Made to Measure, if not approved of will be immediately exchanged, or, if preferred, the money returned. E. MOSES and SONS, Tailors, Woollen-drapers, Clothiers, Hatters, Hosiers, Furriers, Boot and Shoe Manufacturers, and General Outfitters for Ladies and Gentlemen, 154, 155, 156, and 157, Minories, and 81, 84, 85, and 86, Aldgate, City, London.
CAUTION.—E. MOSES and SON regret being obliged to guard the public against imposition; but have learned that the unparalleled success of their "Method" of being connected with them, or "in the same concern," has been resorted to in many instances, and for various reasons, they have no connection with any other house in or out of London; and those who desire genuine advice, &c., should call at, or send to, the Establishment, as above, for Clothing, Outfitting, &c.
N.B. No business transacted at this Establishment from Sunset Friday to Sunset Saturday, when business is resumed at Twelve o'clock.

BRITISH COLLEGE OF HEALTH, NEW-ROAD, LONDON.—The principles of the Hygeian Theory are contained in the following propositions:—
1. The vital principle is contained in the blood.
2. Everything in the body is derived from the blood
3. All constitutions are radically the same
4. All diseases arise from impurity of the blood, or, in other words, from scrimonious humours lodged in the body.
5. This humour, which degenerates the blood, has three sources—the materials, the constitution, and the [illegible]
6. Disease and pain have the same origin, and may, therefore, be considered synonymous terms.
7. Purgation—or proper vegetable purgatives is the only effectual mode of eradicating disease.
8. Repetition—or upwards of twenty cures have amply proved "Morison's Vegetable Universal Medicines to be such proper vegetable purgative
9. From the intimate connection subsisting between the [illegible] and body, the health of the [illegible] quality of the other.
10. [illegible] of health
11. [illegible] essence of life
These terms have been adopted through an affectation of singularity, but march for the sake of drawing a sufficiently broad line of demarcation between the old and new schools.—Read the "[illegible]."

TO PAPER MAKERS, WHOLESALE STATIONERS, &c.—WANTED to APPRENTICE a YOUTH in a Good House of Business, where he will have an opportunity of acquiring a thorough knowledge of the Trade.—Apply to S. G. 17, Penton-place, Walworth, stating full particulars, premium required, &c.

COMMERCIAL BOARDING HOUSE, 22, BREAD-STREET, Corner of LITTLE FRIDAY-STREET CHEAPSIDE, LONDON [illegible] ing London will find [illegible] ...ble establishment, combined with comfort-able terms. Terms Bed and de... s. d.: Dinner, 1s. 6d.; Tea, 1s. Servants, 6d. per day

PURE ST JULIEN CLARET, 28s. per DOZEN; Pints, 18s.; Imperial Quarts, 36s. per Dozen, at the Property of a Gentleman, Wine Merchant, Strand, can be confidently recommended. Also, some superior Gordon's Golden Sherry, 36s. per [illegible] bottles; order, or reference, will be immediately forwarded

TONIC ALE.—This splendid description of Bottled Beer is now in perfection. It is strongly recommended by the Faculty as possessing peculiar stomachic qualities, promoting appetite, &c. Sold in quart and pint bottles, secured by Bates's Patent Caps, a JOSEPH STOCKTON, sole Agent, Stores, No 1, John's-mews, Bedford row

A SPLENDID 64 OCTAVE ROSEWOOD COTTAGE PIANOFORTE with Metallic Plate, and all the latest improvements, nearly new, to be SOLD, price £36, a Splendid Guitar with machine head, 3 Guineas.—Apply at H. R.'s 61, Long-acre

PIANOFORTES.—The cheapest house in London to purchase these first-rate instruments is at H. TOLKIEN'S, Manufacturer, 98, Great Russell-street, London-bridge. H. T., having completed his extensive alterations, begs his friends to view his splendid stock of PIANOS, which is now to be sold by any maker, and at about half the price charged by them. H. T.'s much-admired piccolos, cash price £25. Old instruments taken in exchange.—TOLKIEN, 98, King-William-street, London-bridge.

TO PURCHASERS of PIANOFORTES in TOWN or Country.—Mr. TIERNEY offers to parties his opinion and mechanical judgment in the choice of an instrument. Those who wish to make their outlay judiciously, and to possess a piano of such quality as will combine durability with permanent utility, will perceive their interest in the opinion of a practical workman of upwards of twenty-two years' experience.—Rolla-buildings, Pentonville.

EMBROIDERY, Knitting, Netting, Crochet, Tatting, Beadwork, and Fancy works generally, TAUGHT by an experienced LADY, at the residence of the Pupil, on very moderate terms. Where time is limited, a thorough knowledge of the Art of Embroidery imparted in a few lessons.—Ladies may be furnished to ladies whom the Advertiser has instructed. Distance immaterial. Orders executed Address (free) M. S., Rockingham-street, Euston-square.

THE TOILET of BEAUTY furnishes innumerable proofs of the high estimation in which GOWLAND'S LOTION is held by the most distinguished admirers of brilliant complexions This elegant preparation compounds the preservation of the complexion, both from the effects of cutaneous malady and the ravages of the variable temperature of the climate, with efficacy, and sustaining the brightest tints with which beauty is adorned.—"HOBY, SHAW, London," is in white letters on the Government Stamp. Without which none is genuine. Prices: 3s. 9d., 5s. 6d., quarts, 8s. 6d. Sold by all perfumers and medicine vendors.

GIBBINS' CREAM of ROSES and ROSEMARY.—This esteemed and elegant article is most respectfully offered to the Public, by GIBBINS, Court Hairdresser and Perfumer, 20, Parliament-street, St. James's-square, as the most delicate and effectual Preservative of the Hair. Being a pomade, it will be successfully applied in promoting its growth and luxuriance
GIBBINS' EXTRACT of ROSES and ROSEMARY is a Liquid made from the above-named plants, and when applied in Washing the Hair, renders it soft and glossy; or, after Illness its astringent properties prevent the Hair from coming off.
No 7, King-street, St. James's-square, London.

TROWSERS! TROWSERS!! TROWSERS!!!—A good fit in this garment can seldom be obtained.—R. GREAVES, Fashionable Trouser Maker and Tailor, 3-3, High Holborn, after many years' experience and study, is enabled to assert, without fear of contradiction, that he can give gentlemen with this garment better than any other person in London. The characteristic of his fitting is a gentlemanly style, with perfect ease for action, and no slouching, sitting, wood-carving, or riding. A well-assorted stock of the newest designs to select from. R. GRAVES, 313, High Holborn

MESSRS. NICOLL, Registered PALETOT Makers, 6th and 7th Vic. cap. 65, and TAILORS to their Royal Highnesses Prince Albert, Prince George of Cambridge, his Grace the Duke of Wellington, &c., respectfully beg to announce that the same moderate prices are still maintained, and that the fashionable Winter Over-Coat the Paletot, made of Llama Cloth, of a sandstone hue suitable for the coming season as that which has been so highly patronised for both its useful qualities and great casualty appearance during the late months.—To be had only, in London, at 114, Regent-street, and 22, Cornhill., and of the recognised agents in the country.

CHILDREN'S FROCKS, COATS, and PELISSES; Infants' Cloaks, Hoods Hats, and Bonnets; Long and Short Robes, French Cambric Caps, Day and Night Gowns, Robe Blankets, Lawn and Cambric Night Dresses, with every other requisite in baby Linen, at SHEARMAN'S, 5, Finsbury Pavement, Severs. Laudress of Children's Dresses accurately and carefully done. Observe the address, No. 5, Finsbury Pavement, 2d. to the 15s. 6d. to the rich embroidered Silk vestas, 8s., with every other article usually required. [illegible] young family will find economy in dealing at this establishment, where they can supply from stop to stop when juvenile clothing is required. An illustration and actual measurement will be sent free, on receiving a card enter

BERDOE'S WARM OVER-COATS, really WATERPROOF. —An extensive and superior assortment of [illegible] garments, adapted for every [illegible] climate, [illegible] Patent, [illegible] Patentee. W. BERDOE, Tailor and Over-Coat Maker, 69, Cornhill (corner side), and 96, New Bond-street, near Oxford-street (recently opened).

SHIRTS.—WILLIAM WHITEHOUSE, 166, STRAND, (Established twenty-two years), solicits the attention of Gentlemen to the Shirts he supplies for 6s. 6d. each, including washing They are made in various qualities and other styles, from Marsland's Patent Long-Cloth, with fine Linen fronts, &c., and are superior to those usually sold at 8s. 6d.; also all fine Linen Shirts, 10s. 6d., 12s., 14s., and 16s. Gentlemen waited upon in any part of London, or one sent as sample into the Country Post Free, upon receipt of the amount and is added as part payment of postage. The measure requisite is the neck, chest, and wrist tight

THE PANKLIBANON IRON WORKS AND GREAT WESTERN EMPORIUM for STOVE GRATES, Kitchen-ranges, fenders, and fire-irons; also furnishing ironmongery, in General copper, iron and tinned cooking vessels, best Sheffield plate, and table cutlery, japanned paper and iron tea trays, tea urns, ornamental tin and iron wire-work for verandahs, lawn tea and sea baskets, patent table lamps for candle or oil. Every article is warranted, and marked at the lowest prices, in plain figures, for cash.—Adjoining the Royal Bazaar, 58, B [illegible]

PARCEL POST COMPANY (Capital £50,000, in [illegible] shares of £1 each).—The Company will COMMENCE BUSINESS on Monday next. The Board has [illegible] based (in arrangements upon a remunerative [illegible] allotment of the shares on the equal [illegible] stock of the Company until after the [illegible] of the business operations of the Company will enable it to realise applications for [illegible] shares until the 25th inst., after which day no [illegible] be allowed. By order of the Board, E. T. GOUGH, Secretary and Resident Manager.
67, Fleet-street, London, Jan. 18, 1847

METROPOLITAN and SUBURBAN CEMETERIES SOCIETY.—(Provisionally Registered according to Act of Parliament.)
TRUSTEES.
Benjamin Bond Cabbell, Esq., M.P., F.R.S., &c.
Lukis James Hansard, Esq., &c.

The Committee have great pleasure in announcing that the estimates which have been since those in progress have now completed, and finally proved that by adopting a new principle of charge (in one payments), the public interest and the profits of the undertaking will be largely promoted.
The calculations which apply to their first Establishment at Woodford show that upon an unusually small proportion of burials at least 15 per cent per annum will be realised during 30½ years, in which period the ground will be fully occupied, and a remunerative application of burials it would exceed 20 per cent. per annum during 250 years, even at a reduction of prices.
The particulars and Prospectuses may be had of Messrs. Borradaile and Sons, solicitors, 30, Great Winchester-street; J. R. Stevens, Esq., architect, 3, Basinghall-street and of the Secretary, at the Offices of the Society, No 8, Broad-street-buildings.
By Order, R. HOARE, Sec'-tary

THE PROVINCIAL and GENERAL CEMETERIES COMPANY, affiliating with, and creating the Country Branches of the Metropolitan and Suburban Cemeteries Society.
First Capital, £100,000, in 8 [illegible] of £20 each. Ultimate Capital Two Millions, as agreed
Deposit Two Shillings per sh[illegible] being the full amount allowed by law for pre liminary expenses. No further [illegible] will be required. The Board is empowered to allot 61 per share to applicants for [illegible] shares until the 25th inst., after which day no [illegible] be allowed. By order of the Board,
E. T. GOUGH, Secretary and Resident Manager.
67, Fleet-street, London, Jan. 18, 1847

METROPOLITAN and SUBURBAN CEMETERIES SOCIETY.—(Provisionally Registered according to Act of Parliament.)
TRUSTEES.
Benjamin Bond Cabbell, Esq., M.P., F.R.S., &c.
Lukis James Hansard, Esq., &c.

The Committee have great pleasure in announcing that the estimates which have been since those in progress have now completed, and finally proved that by adopting a new principle of charge (in one payments), the public interest and the profits of the undertaking will be largely promoted.
The calculations which apply to their first Establishment at Woodford show that upon an unusually small proportion of burials at least 15 per cent per annum will be realised during 30½ years, in which period the ground will be fully occupied, and a remunerative application of burials it would exceed 20 per cent. per annum during 250 years, even at a reduction of prices.
The particulars and Prospectuses may be had of Messrs. Borradaile and Sons, solicitors, 30, Great Winchester-street; J. R. Stevens, Esq., architect, 3, Basinghall-street and of the Secretary, at the Offices of the Society, No 8, Broad-street-buildings.
By Order, R. HOARE, Sec'-tary

THE PROVINCIAL and GENERAL CEMETERIES COMPANY, affiliating with, and creating the Country Branches of the Metropolitan and Suburban Cemeteries Society.
First Capital, £100,000, in [illegible] of £20 each. Ultimate Capital Two Millions, as agreed
Deposit Two Shillings per sh[illegible] being the full amount allowed by law for pre liminary expenses. No further [illegible] will be required. The Board is empowered to allot 61 per share to applicants for [illegible] shares until the 25th inst., after which day no [illegible] be allowed. By order of the Board,
E. T. GOUGH, Secretary and Resident Manager.
67, Fleet-street, London, Jan. 18, 1847

TRUSTEES.
Benjamin Bond Cabbell, Esq., M.P., F.R.S., &c.
Lukis James Hansard, Esq., &c.
COMMITTEE OF MANAGEMENT.
H. [illegible] Berkeley, Esq., Lincoln's-inn-fields, Strand
John Berkeley Cotton, Esq., Broad-street-buildings
Edward Cotton, Esq., Regent's Villas, Regent's [illegible]
William Coppin, Esq., Northumberland-court
Captain Hackett, R.N., Upper Rutland-street, Dublin
George Hansard, Esq., Lincoln's-inn-fields, Strand
George Leslie Lee, Esq., Broad-street-buildings
George Frederick Minton, Esq., Berners-street
Edward Duke Moore, Esq., Arlington-street
George Kennett Pollock, Esq., Essex-street, Strand
William Stuart, Esq., Bedford-square
William Walmsley Thrumpton, Esq., Great Winchester-street
Charles Robert Thompson, Esq., Wimbledon House
James Tracy, Esq., Great Winchester-street
(With power to add to their number.)
[illegible] any district requiring a Cemetery to have a Committee of its own
[illegible] to act on the Board of Management.
SOLICITORS Messrs Borradaile and Sons
[illegible] Messrs. Borradaile and Sons, solicitors, 30, Great Winchester-street.
ARCHITECT J. R. Stevens, Esq., Basinghall-street and Committee.)
SURVEYOR Edward Haere, Esq.
The estimates of the Parent Society show a large annual dividend when the Company shall [illegible] on, until which period four per cent interest will be paid on the deposits

[illegible] of Management are now ready to receive applications for shares, which may [illegible] Messrs Borradaile and Sons, solicitors 30, Great Winchester-street; J. R. Stevens, [illegible] 3, Clement's-inn, Strand; Messrs. Sherwood and Sons, brokers, 52, Jermyn-street; [illegible] Colquett, Esq., 74, Old Broad street; Messrs. W. H. Cotton and Smith, Barnes; [illegible] Thomas Sloper, Esq., brewer, 23, Exchange street east; Liverpool: Henry Jan[illegible] 31 Cowper, Esq., 84, Victoria-street, Glasgow; James Pringle, Esq., Edinburgh; [illegible] Bankers, Messrs. Coutts and Co., Strand; Brokers, Messrs. Sherwood and Sons, London; or to the Secretary, at the Offices of the Society, No 8, Broad-street-buildings, where Prospectuses and all further particulars may be obtained.

W. H. SMITH and SON, NEWS AGENTS, 192, STRAND, beg to inform SUBSCRIBERS that the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, from the [illegible] will be supplied to the Large Envelope, to prevent Creasing.

H. BROOKS, News-Agent, 12, Warwick-square, London, begs to inform Subscribers to the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, that from the commencement of the New Year, he will send its elegant Journal in the Large Envelope to Prevent Creasing, Price 4d. per Number.

W. A. SCRIPPS and SON, GENERAL NEWSPAPER AGENTS, beg to inform each of their customers as now receive the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, and the public in general, that they have made adequate arrangements for the production of that Paper, and that, in future, the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS will be forwarded from their Offices in accordance with the directions so recommended particularly folded in Large Envelopes, to prevent creases. Terms for ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, and all other London, Provincial, and Foreign Newspapers, will receive the most punctual attention Advertisements received for insertion 13, South Molton-street, Bond-street, London, Jan. 14th

BLACK! BLACK!! BLACK!!!—SAMUEL OSMOND and CO., DYERS, No. 8, Ivy-lane, Newgate-street, London, have made arrangements for Dyeing every article of Ladies' Dress Black, for Mourning, on Wednesday in each week, and finishing the same in a few days if required.—Established above a century.

VERY RICH TARTAN SILK VELVETS, 4s. 6d. per yard. Rich Fancy French Silks, 2s. 6d. per yard. Very Rich French Satins and Moires, 3s. 6d. per yard Patterns sent Free of expense.—Address KING and ALLBAUT, 244, Regent-street.

DIAMOND DUST STROPS, for Sharpening Razors, Surgical Instruments, Pen, Table, and Carving Knives from 1s. to 10s. each. Diamond Dusts in boxes, from 1s. to 10s. each. Sold by J. BROTHERS and CO., 1, Angel-court, Strand, sole Importers of the Diamond Dust, and Manufacturers of the Diamond Dust Strops.—CAUTION. Purchasers should observe their signature on the strop label, and that the word [illegible] of the box has their signature on the side of it. Agents wanted. Bills free on application.

PRESERVATIVE TOOTH PASTE.—The effect is truly astonishing upon Discoloured Teeth, Diseased Gums, and Offensive Breath. The Proprietor has been induced to offer this article to the notice of the nobility and gentry, in consequence of numerous patients, who have found the benefit of its use.—Prepared and Sold by the Proprietor, Mr. HOLLANDS, Surgeon-Dentist, 5, Regent's Quadrant, and of all respectable Chemists in town and country.—A Liberal Allowance to Agents.—Only 1s. per Box.

ELEGANT PICTURE-FRAMES, &c.— "JEPHTHA'S DAUGHTER." WM. FOLLIT, 83, Fleet-street, has designed elegantly ornamented Frames, at a cost trifling to the beautiful Engravings, at a cost trifling to the beautiful Engravings, at a cost trifling to the beautiful Engravings

COMMENCEMENT OF THE PRESTON, FLEETWOOD, AND WEST RIDING JUNCTION RAILWAY, ON JAN. 18.—DRAWN BY W. PILKINGTON.

SOLUTION TO PROBLEM, No. 155.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. B to Q Kt 6th (ch)	Q to her 5th	3. Q R takes K's P (ch)	R to K's 4th
2. K R to Q B's 5th	R to K Kt 4th (a)	4. K R takes R (ch)—Mate.

(a) Black has a great variety of defensive moves: if to Q B's 3rd to interpose when the Rook checks, Kt to Q B's 6th for the same purpose, &c., but the result is still the same, mate is forced in four moves.

SOLUTION TO PROBLEM, No. 156.

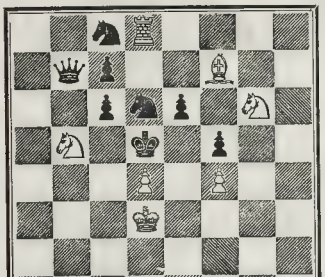
WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. Kt to Q B's 5th	K R P one	4. B takes P at K Kt 6th	P one
2. B to Q B's 2nd	P one becoming a Queen	5. Kt to K B's 2nd	P becomes a Q
3. Kt takes Q	P one	6. Kt to Q's 3rd—Mate

PROBLEM, No. 157.

By MR. H. J. A.

White having to play can mate in five moves.

BLACK



WHITE

CHESS IN FRANCE,

BETWEEN M. KIESERITZKI AND M. DESLOGES.

WHITE. (M. D.)	BLACK. (M. K.)	WHITE (M. D.)	BLACK. (M. K.)
1. Q Kt to B 3rd (a)	K P two	14. Q to K 2nd.	Castles
2. K Kt to B 3rd.	Q Kt to B 3rd	15. Q R P one	K R to Kt sq
3. Q P two	K P one (b).	16. Q Kt P two	K Kt P one
4. Q Kt takes P	Q P two	17. K R P takes P	K R takes P
5. Q Kt to B 3rd (c)	Q B to K B 4th	18. Q Kt P one	Q Kt takes Q P (c)
6. K P one	K Kt to B 3rd	19. P takes Kt	K R takes Q Kt (f)
7. K B to Q 3rd.	Q B to K 5th	20. Q B to Q Kt 2nd sq	K R to K Kt 6th
8. B takes B	Q P takes B	21. Q B P two	Kt to K Kt 5th
9. K Kt to his 5th	Q to K 2nd	22. Kt takes Kt	K B P takes Kt
10. Castles	K R P one	23. B to Q B sq	Q to K R 5th
11. K Kt to R 3rd	K Kt P two	24. B to K 3rd	B to K Kt 2nd
12. K B P two (d)	K Kt P one	25. B to K B 2nd	Q R to K R sq
13. K Kt to B 2nd.	K R P one	26. B takes K R	B takes P (ch)

White resigned.

(a) This is a very unusual method of beginning a game, but it is not particularly objectionable.
(b) Vide looks like a slip. If intentional, what are the fruits?
(c) Better, we should have thought, to K Kt 3rd
(d) Imprudently played.
(e) Mr Kieseritzki has now made a breach, and he retains the attack to the end.
(f) This was evidently unforeseen by White when he pushed the Pawn on Black's K

CHESS IN ITALY.

The following games, played at Modena, by M. Calvi, whose name is familiar to most amateurs, from his clever series of Rudimentary Lessons, and Messrs Bonetti and Discart, who occupy the topmost rank among the players of Modena, will be read with interest here; although the pleasure and instruction we derive from the study of Italian play is qualified considerably by the disparity in their mode of Castling with that adopted by the great triumvirate of Chess—England, Germany, and France. In these countries, our readers are aware, the operation of Castling is for the most part defensive; and consists, on the King's side, of playing the King to his Kt sq, and the Rook to K B sq; and, on the Queen's side, of placing the King on Q B sq, and the Rook on Q sq In Italy, however, greater license is allowed; the act is not merely a precautionary movement for securing the King from danger, but is powerfully instrumental also in carrying on the attack. There, in Castling on the King's side, the King may at once be moved to R sq, and the Rook to K sq; or, the King may be played to R, Kt, or B sq, and the Rook stationed next to him, or one or two squares distant. So, on the Queen's side, the King may, at a bound, be played to Q R sq, and the Rook take his place, or either of them be moved to any of the intervening squares.

There is another anomaly in the Italian game, too, which, like their mode of Castling, we would gladly see abolished; this is their passar battagha, or exemption of a Pawn in moving two steps, when first played, from being taken by a hostile Pawn en passant.

While these dissimilitudes in the practice of the game exist, the finest works of the Italian players must be comparatively valueless to the rest of Europe; and, on the other hand, the masterly productions on Chess by the three countries just named, can never be appreciated, and taken advantage of, as they deserve, by the amateurs of Italy.

GAME THE FIRST.

PLAYED BY MR. CALVI AGAINST MR. DISCART

WHITE (Mr. Calvi).	BLACK (Mr. Discart).	WHITE (Mr. Calvi).	Black (Mr. Discart).
1. K P two	Q B P two	28. Q R P one	Kt to B 2nd
2. Q B P one	K P one	29. Q B to Q Kt 4th	Q to K Kt 3rd (g)
3. Q P two	Q P two	30. K B to Q 3rd	Kt to Q sq
4. K P one	Q Kt to B 3rd	31. Q B to Q 6th	Kt to Q B 3rd
5. K B P two	K B to K 2nd	32. K B to K 2nd	K R P one
6. K B to Q 3rd	K Kt to R 3rd	33. K B to his 3rd	B takes B
7. K Kt to B 3rd	Castles (a)	34. Q takes B	K R P one
8. Castles (b)	Q B to Q 2nd	35. Q Kt P two	Q to K B 2nd
9. Q to K sq	K B P two (c)	36. B to Q B 5th	K to R 2nd
10. Q Kt to Q 2nd	Q R P one	37. R to Q 6th	P takes B P
11. K B to Q B 2nd	Q to her Kt 3rd	38. Q to Q sq	K Kt P two.(h)
12. Q Kt to his 3rd	P takes Q P	39. Q to Q 8th	R to Q B 2nd
13. K Kt takes P	Kt takes Kt	40. P takes P	P takes B P
14. Q Kt takes Kt	K B to Q B 4th	41. K to K 2nd	K to K Kt 2nd
15. Q Kt to his 3rd	Q B to Q Kt 4th	42. Q to K Kt sq	Q to K B 2nd
16. Kt takes K B	Q takes kt (d)	43. Q to K B 2nd	Q to K Kt 3rd
17. R to K B 3rd	Q P one	44. R to Q sq	Q to K sq
18. Q B to Q 2nd	P takes P	45. Q to K R 4th	K to R 3rd
19. Q B takes P	Q to K 3rd	46. Q to K B 6th (ch)	K to K Kt 3rd
20. K R P one (e)	B to Q B 3rd	47. Q to K B 8th (ch)	Q takes Q
21. R to K B sq	Q R to Q sq	48. B takes Q (ch)	K to R 2nd
22. Q R to Q sq	Q to K B 2nd	49. R to Q 7th (ch)	K to Kt sq
23. R takes R	B takes R	50. B to Q B 5th	R to K Kt 2nd
24. Q to K R 4th	R to Q B sq	51. R takes R (ch)	K takes R
25. R to Q sq	Q to K Kt 3rd	52. R to Kt 3rd	K to Kt 3rd
26. Q to K B 2nd	Q to K R 4th	53. Q R P one	Q Kt P two
27. R to Kt sq (f)	B to Q 4th	54. Q R P one

And the Game was abandoned as drawn.

(a) Castles, by playing K to R sq and R to B sq.
(b) In the same way, A to K sq and R to B sq.
(c) This is an obscurity of what the Italians call passar battagha. In this country, White might, if he chose, intercept the Pawn en traversite, by taking it, as if it had moved but one square, but in Italy it has the privilege of passing two steps without interruption.
(d) Better than taking the Rook, on account of Kt to Q 7th
(e) If the last move of Black's Queen is correctly given in the MS., which we doubt, believing it ought to have been Q to her B 2nd, White might now gain the exchange, it appears, by playing B to Q Kt 6th
(f) To prevent the advance of the Kt to Kt 5th.
(g) Threatening to toss the K. Kt. P with his Bishop; and, if the Q took the Bishop, to exchange Queens, and then take Bishop with Rook, which, however, was not of much moment, as White could take the K B P with his B at the proper moment.
(h) Well considered, though hazardous. If White take the Pawn, Black's Kt takes K P and gets into play.

GAME THE SECOND,

BETWEEN MESSRS BONETTI AND DISCART.

BLACK (M. B.)	WHITE (M. D.).	BLACK (M. B.)	WHITE (M. D.)
1. K P two	K P one	14. Castles on Q side(c)	Q to Q Kt 2d
2. K B P two	Q P two	15. B to K Kt 2d	Q to her B sq
3. K P one	Q B P two	16. B takes R	Q takes B
4. K Kt to B 3d	Q Kt to B 3d	17. Q to K R 5th (ch)	K Kt P one
5. Q B P one	B to Q 3d.	18. Kt takes Kt P	K Kt to R 3d
6. Q Kt to B 3d	K B P one	19. Q to K R 4th	B to K Kt 2d
7. Q Kt to B 2d	B P takes P	20. Kt takes R	B takes Kt
8. P takes P	Q Kt takes P (a)	21. Q B P takes P	P takes P
9 Kt takes Kt	Q to K R 5th (ch)	22. Kt takes P	Q to her 4th
10. K Kt P one	Q to K 5th (ch)	23. B to K Kt 5th	K to B 2d
11. Q to K 2d	Q takes R (b)	24. R to K B sq	Q to K 4th
12. Q P one	Q P one	25 Q takes K R P (ch)	White surrendered.
13. Q B to K B 4th	Q Kt P one

(a) It was not in mortal to resist the temptation of sacrificing the Kt.
(b) If he had taken the Q Kt, the following moves would probably have occurred

BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.
11.	Q takes Q Kt	13 Q takes K P (ch).	K takes Q
12 Kt takes Q B	K takes Kt	14. B takes Q	And Black has regained his Pawn.
13. Q to her Kt 5th (ch)	K to B 2d
14. R to Q Sd	Q B P one

(c) Moving K to Q Kt sq and R to K sq

COMMENCEMENT OF THE FLEETWOOD, PRESTON, AND WEST RIDING JUNCTION RAILWAY.

This important line of railway is intended to connect the town of Preston with the new port of Fleetwood, and the west coast with Yorkshire. The works were formally commenced at Preston on Monday last, when the Mayor (John Paley, Esq.) invited the members of the Corporation, and several gentlemen of the town and neighbourhood, to meet him at the Town-hall, and accompany him to the site of the works, about half a mile north-east of the centre of the town. The party assembled in the Council Chamber, at about twelve o'clock; and shortly after formed in procession, headed by the beadle and mace-bearer: the Mayor in his robes of office, being supported by J. Talbot Clifton, Esq., M.P., on his right, and on his left by Hesketh Fleetwood, Bart., M.P. for the borough; then followed the Recorder (T. B. Addison, Esq.), the Town Clerk, members of the Corporation, shareholders, and other gentlemen, to the number of about 700. The Procession having reached the site of the works, the Mayor marshed, and put on the dress of a "navvie;" as did also the Recorder, who was to wheel the barrow. Mr. Bray, the solicitor to the Company, then presented the Mayor with the spade, and his worship commenced cutting the turf, and, two or three pieces being thrown into the barrow, the Recorder wheeled it to a considerable distance, amidst the waving of the numerous flags and the cheers of the spectators; and this point of the ceremony is represented in our illustration, from a sketch made on the spot by Mr. Pilkington, of Bolton.

The turf being cut, the Mayor and the Recorder briefly addressed the company, explaining the prospective advantages of the railway to Preston and the west coast; and then returned to Preston. At half-past two o'clock, a numerous company sat down to a collation at the Bull'Inn, the Recorder in the chair, supported by Sir H. Fleetwood and the Mayor, T. Clifton, Esq., &c. Many toasts were drunk in connexion with the auspicious event of the day, after which the company separated.

The spade and barrow were designed and manufactured for the occasion: the former has a mahogany handle and polished steel blade, bearing the arms of the Company: it has been presented by the Mayor. The barrow is of bay-wood, French polished, and has on its side an engraved shield with the Company's arms, and an inscription commemorating the purpose for which it has been used; it has been presented to the Recorder.

NOOKS AND CORNERS OF OLD ENGLAND.

THE BOOTH HALL, GLOUCESTER.

THE threatened destruction of this ancient edifice renders it a peculiar object of interest at the present time. It is a timber building of considerable antiquity, probably of the time of Henry VII., and was the Town Hall of the City at that period; the place where the burgesses assembled, and where the corporate business of the town, and other matters connected therewith, was transacted.

THE BOOTH HALL, GLOUCESTER.

Its exterior presented the ordinary features of buildings of the fifteenth or sixteenth century. Its interior is one large hall, supported by massive oak beams, having at one side a gallery, and some remnants of hangings. It presents much the same appearance as the curious room in the Tower of London, called the Council Chamber; and both may have been contemporary erections. The floor above has been used as a lumber room, and the Hall itself, as a coach-house and stable to the large inn in the rear of which this relic of old Gloucester is situated

The modern Shire Hall stands close beside it, and is a curious instance of the difference in accommodation required in ancient and modern times. Within a few doors of the Hall there still stands various old timber houses; and, opposite, is the venerable Church of St. Nicholas. But Gloucester, like many others of our provincial towns, is rapidly losing its picturesque old timber houses: the house of the famous Jemmy Wood, the banker, has been demolished, and a very showy modern one placed on its site. All this is consequent on modern necessities; but it is useful to place on record, as we do now, the elder features of our country towns, for the benefit of future topographers Among many other examples of antiquity which are rapidly passing away, the old Booth Hall of Gloucester may be cited as a curious specimen of the ancient public offices of the land.

London: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, JANUARY 23, 1847.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 218.—Vol. X.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, JANUARY 30, 1847. [Sixpence.

THE IRISH POLICY.

ENDERED forbearing by the presence of difficulties, the Legislature has given an almost unanimous approval to Lord John Russell's measures. The Irish policy of the Government has been submitted to Parliamentary and public opinion, and has borne the test of both far better than Whig measures in general, and Whig Irish measures in particular were accustomed to do in years not long passed by. In the palmy days of the Grey and Melbourne Ministries, when the party was strong in numbers and influence, a cry of spoliation and revolution would have burst forth from one end of the kingdom to the other, on the announcement of such a scheme as the Premier laid before the Legislature on Monday. Now that a Whig Ministry, by a curious combination of circumstances, holds office, while actually in a minority, they deal with hostile interests, and depart from old principles, not only without being denounced, they do it with general assent, and something very like general applause. How is this? Why has opposition ceased? Why are those once so "willing to wound," now "afraid to strike?" Because a common calamity hangs over all, and differences must be sunk in the great emergency. So Protectionists give their aid in abolishing the last relic of Protection; and political economists acknowledge there are exceptional circumstances in which rigid principles cannot be applied; and Conservatives alter and destroy, unscared by that word of fear, "innovation," and all men and all parties are seen doing the things most opposite to those which, from their avowed opinions, might be expected of them; we are, politically, gathering grapes from thorns and figs from thistles.

The fact is, the consciences of our statesmen of both parties are somewhat weighed down and oppressed by the memory of former errors and short-comings towards Ireland. None have so fully discharged their duty, as to have acquired the right to accuse another. As Lord John Russell said on Monday last, "there have been errors, there have been defects," and they must be shared, not in exactly equal proportions, perhaps, but still shared, between the two great English parties who have by turns governed for the last century. Sins, both of omission and commission, lie at the door of both. The two sides became champions of political or religious questions, which aroused fierce hatreds and passions, which continued to be fought almost through generations, and by the noise of the conflict drew attention from the awful abyss of social misery that existed dark and silent beneath the feet of the combatants. If they, in the intervals of the struggle, legislated at all for the social condition of Ireland, it was by passing laws that increased the power of property, placed the Executive above the Constitution, filled the statute book with Arms Acts, Insurrection Acts, Ejectment Acts, and swelled the records of the country with tithe massacres, proclamations of martial law, and suspensions of the Habeas Corpus. In the midst of all these things came periods of famine—precursors of the heavier visitation that has now befallen us; but they were met by temporary expedients: England sent money and food, and, with more or less of suffering, the crisis passed away. But why all these things occurred—why Ireland was an exception to all Europe besides—no party, no statesman enquired; a fear of touching such a mass of evils seemed to outweigh the acknowledged necessity of "doing something:" the something was never done. So all parties now find themselves placed face to face with the most terrible of national calamities—Famine: with every difficulty aggravated tenfold, they must go to work at once; and England learns with dismay, that millions of men are dependent for life on its Treasury—that its Exchequer must freight ships with food—must frame a machinery of relief and distribution—must, for a long time to come, send out grants, loans, advances—must pay the wages of half a nation for this year—must even provide the seed for the harvest of the next. To all the objections made on principle, to all allegations of difficulty in practice, there is but one answer—it must be done! It is the general conviction of this necessity that silences opposition to the Government and its plan.

The details of that scheme do not challenge much criticism: it is rather a modification and extension of former expedients than anything wholly novel. Grants for Public Works, Loans, and all this class of measures, are familiar features of Irish policy. The only difference is, that the Exchequer is compelled to open the whole hand, where it formerly only unbent a finger. Half of what has been lent to the landed proprietors is made a free gift, provided they will pay the other half: further aid is promised them on better terms. Some abuses in the system of employment will be corrected; the proposition to reclaim waste lands is good in itself, but the Government has its hands too full to undertake it at present; what is done for Emigration will not amount to any practical change in the present system; and, of all the alterations, that which extends the operation of the Irish Poor-law is the most important, and shows that the Government is on the right road, but advances as yet timidly. The absurdity of Boards of Guardians not having the power, under the law, to give relief, even in food, out of the workhouse, though it might be crowded to excess, was too glaring, and the Irish law is now assimilated more to the English system, which, Heaven knows, is harsh and restrictive enough. We alluded to this subject last week, and need only remark here, that Lord John Russell might have gone farther in this direction with more effect. The appointment of Local Committees, who are to have some mixed and not very clearly-defined functions, in conjunction with the Boards of Guardians, but, as it seems, independent of them, will, we fear, prove a failure. Public rates, private subscriptions, and Government advances, cannot well be mixed up together, we think we see the elements of endless confusion in these committees, but are willing to hope the best from them. In principle, they acknowledge the necessity of an extension of the relief of the poor by rate on property; to this the land of Ireland must come at last; everything tends to hasten the period; and we will give our reasons for thinking so.

In the first place, public opinion in England is awakening to the subject. Ireland is beginning to create a formidable balance against us in the national account; neglect, carelessness, and laissez faire do not make a cheap system of Government but a very costly one. Absorbed in business as we are, and rather indifferent to abstract rights, Ireland might have been governed as a Colony till the end of time, if it could have been done without establishing a drain on the Imperial Exchequer, to which John Bull, by the Income Tax and otherwise, is so large a contributor. Former famines only roused an uneasy suspicion that all was not quite sound; but, with the disappearance of the evil, he relapsed into carelessness—forgot Ireland altogether, and sunk as many millions in Mexican Mines as would have turned Tipperary into a market garden; for

THE FAMINE IN IRELAND.—FUNERAL AT SKIBBEREEN.—FROM A SKETCH BY MR. H. SMITH, CORK.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

John, though immensely enterprising, is not perfectly wise in all his speculations. But this last call is too much for him. There is one book in which Englishmen devoutly believe, and that is the Ledger; its teaching may often be sordid enough, but it is useful—in some cases, indispensable: it is not safe to scorn even the Evangel of Mammon. By that light, such as it is, England has been receiving what she has lost by her positive enmity or careless neglect of Ireland: we are paying dearly for the errors of our fathers, which meet us on many a page of the journals of our Legislature. When Ireland had trade and industry, the merchants and manufacturers of England petitioned William the Third to "discourage" them; and the Dutchman did it. With the consent and applause of Parliament, the rising manufactures of Ireland were destroyed; it was made felony to wear any spun, and enterprise was punished as a crime. So capital went elsewhere; Ireland sunk; no middle class grew up; and slowly, but surely, the bulk of the nation was flung upon the Land alone, millions depending for existence on the lowest vegetable produce, while they exported cattle and provisions of all kinds to England, whose Parliament once voted even that importation "a nuisance." No poor-rate attached a portion of the rents of the soil, and appropriated it to the poor; the Landlord swept all, according to law, returning what he chose—according to conscience. Next to crushing the manufacturing industry of Ireland, our greatest error was allowing the land to go untaxed, for the support of the destitute. Both mistakes combined have obliged us to deal, for the last century, with a state of discontent, poverty, rebellion, anarchy, and crime, that has cost us—we return again to the money argument—millions upon millions. Grants, loans, subscriptions, have followed each other in rapid succession, and these have been but a slight outlay, compared to the continual expense of keeping up there a greater military force than in all the rest of the Kingdom besides. And past expense, again, will sink into a trifle in comparison with that of the future, if half the nation is to come to the Government pay-table. All this is beginning to alarm the tax-payers of England; and it is through the ledger—through the columns of profit and loss—that we shall be taught the wiser policy of encouraging industry, instead of blighting it, by "Act of Parliament." In the early part of the last century, it was the leading idea of the statesmen of England, that commerce and manufactures, in all the dependencies of the Empire, ought to be discouraged, and, on principle, crushed and destroyed. In this respect, Ireland and the Colonies of America were treated exactly alike. The laws against the industry of the "plantations," as they were called, are almost beyond the belief of the present age; yet, there they are, on the Statute Book—laws forbidding manufactures of all kinds, down to hats and nails, lest those of England should be injured; laws petitioned for by the people, deliberately passed by the Legislature, and supported by the public opinion of the time. This was the narrow policy of the age; it lost us America, but there its effects have long since disappeared; not so in Ireland, where the consequences of those errors still remain, and where we but reap the bitter fruits of the follies and crimes of our fathers. We can no more escape those consequences than we can repudiate the debts they handed down to us as a legacy of embarrassment. We must deal with the difficulties as we best can; any effort must be made for the present, and as soon as a better state of things is brought about, we must provide for the future. In doing that, we must depart as widely as possible from the precedents of the last century. Lord J. Russell quotes the Union Parliaments of England and Scotland as they once were, to show that we should never despair of improvement. It is sad to think that if we progress no faster, a century hence is the earliest period at which a satisfactory state of things can be looked for in Ireland; but if a beginning is not made, the better time will never come at all.

MORTALITY IN SKIBBEREEN.

THE "Keen" of comes wailing on the wind,
That sweeps o'er Erin's mountains blue;
It chills the heart of Earl and hind
It lands the land a ghastly hue!
The song of death by Death is chanted!
The dying hear the shroudless dead;
Th' mouthful clay a grave is granted—
The very worm averts his head.

Darkly proceed the famish'd cotters;
To-morrow may behold their grave
The young man towards the churchyard totters
The truest heart no more is brave
Those grey hairs may have known the wave
Where Nelson's SIGNAL boldly flew;
Perchance they dared the Gallic glaive,
And bear the scars of Waterloo.

Slowly the gaunt procession wends—
The blessed voice of Hope is faint;
Her zealous steps Religion rends
In misery o'er the dying plaint;
While Pestilence, on sable wings,
And vulture Famine in the blast,

Which vies well with the offerings
Paid to the Plague-Scourge of the East.

And yet—oh! paradox oh! shame!
Oh! blind improvidence! The land
Is of the best that ever came
Forth from its mighty Maker's hand
Fertile and fair, it should have been
The glory of the British crown;
And now, behold the sinful scene!
The seedless fields—the spectral town.

But Nature vindicates her God;
Teaches a lesson from the soil
A voice springs from the blighted sod
In mercy for the sons of toil.
The planter's energies expire
When ruck'd for one poor parcel rent;
And Labour meets better hire
Than the sad fare of Raleigh's fruit.

Affrights the ear that hears the sound.

The "Keen" comes wailing on the blast,
The voice of Winter-Ione the dirge;
The shadows of Despair are cast
Around the new grave's narrow verge.
Oh! let us hope the sad day will rise
To dissipate this fearful gloom,
And bring the blessings of the skies
To raise a nation from her tomb. L.

THE former accounts of the ravages of disease at Skibbereen continue to be but too sadly confirmed. From a drawing made on the spot, we give a sketch of a scene of no unusual occurrence, as appears from the following extract of a letter, received by Mr. Blake, of Cork, from Dr Crowley, of Skibbereen, dated Jan. 22:—

"Deaths here are daily increasing. Dr. Donovan and I are just this moment after returning from the village of South Reen, where we had to bury a body ourselves that was found in a field and thrown into a ditch! In a kitchen garden. We had to dig the ground, or rather the hole, ourselves; no one would come near us, the smell was so intolerable. We are half dead from the work lately imposed on us."

SCOTLAND.

FOOD RIOT AT ABERDEEN. A food riot took place in Aberdeen yesterday week. The unemployed met in the neighbourhood of the town, carrying with them a black flag, and after moving certain resolutions against the corporation and the magistrates, who, with the concurrence of the principal corn merchants, told them that shipments of grain would in the meantime be suspended. Throughout the day there was much excitement, and special constables were sworn in. Towards evening a flour cart was attacked, windows broken, and the police pelted with stones, but the latter having made a sally, about fifty men, "and a great number of women," were secured, which ultimately led to peace.

RIOT AT MACDUFF.—The greatest excitement prevails at all the shipping ports in this neighbourhood, in consequence of the enormous shipments of grain which are being daily sent away, and the rapid advance in the price of food. The quantities shipped at Portsoy, Macduff, Fraserburgh, &c., as well as at Banff, for the last two months, have been unexampled; whilst the price of meal has risen from 14s. to 20s. per boll; oats to 40s., and barley to 50s. per quarter. Yesterday forenight a formidable mob assembled at Macduff, to prevent the shipment of a quantity of meal and grain which had arrived in carts, and for the time they succeeded. They placed a high barricade of railway sleepers, found upon the beach, across the way to the vessels, and stripped off one of her sails to prevent her going to sea. Next day, the magistrates called a public meeting in the Town Hall to consider the matter, at which a deputation was appointed to confer again with the magistrates. The same disposition to prevent shipment is manifested at Banff and elsewhere.

THE LATE SIR C. MORGAN. The late Sir Charles Morgan, Bart., of Tredegar, bequeaths his very valuable freeholds in the counties of Monmouth, Glamorgan and Brecon, Park left landed and personal property to the amount of £130,000. He had by distinct settlement of real estate made provision for his younger sons, and for his daughters on their respective marriages, and for their children. He leaves issue, surviving Sir Charles Morgan Robinson Morgan, Bart., M.P. for Brecon, George Gould Morgan, Charles Octavius Swinnerton Morgan, and Charles Octavius Swinnerton Morgan, M.P for Monmouthshire; also two daughters, Maria, wife of Major-General Mumma, and Lady Rodney. He executed a further deed of settlement on the 26th November, 1844, and his will on the day following, by which he leaves to his son Charles Octavius, forty shares in the Rhymney Railway Company, and has appointed his eldest son, Sir Charles Morgan R Morgan, Bart., his testamentary legatee and sole executor. He particularly directed that his interment might take place by daylight in the family vault erected by his late father at Bassaleg. The Baronetcy was created in 1792.

* The Irish Lament for the Dead

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

FRANCE.

We are happy to state that the Paris papers announce the cessation of riots in the provinces. They have occurred in a few many places, and accounts of the disturbances are less serious have been received from the departments of the Seine Inferieure, Jura, Ile et Vilaine, Vienne, Dordogne, and from Angoulême. In the department of the Indre, where the disturbances were most serious, everything is now quiet. In a few other districts some riots have taken place, and cargoes of corn and potatoes have been pillaged, but not to any serious extent.

The Chamber of Deputies assembled on Tuesday, to hear the Address in reply to the Speech from the Throne. The discussion was fixed for Monday.

General Flores has arrived in Paris on his way to Madrid. He has relinquished all idea of proceeding with his projected expedition.

The Bill for the admission of corn at the minimum duty fixed by the law of the 15th April, has passed the Chamber of Deputies without discussion. It was brought into the Chamber of Peers, where the report of M. Charles Dupin upon it was read on Tuesday. The law will be passed with all practicable speed.

On Saturday evening, the King received the grand deputation of the Chamber of Peers, appointed to present the Address of the Chamber in answer to the Speech from the Throne. The Address was read by the Duke Pasquier, the President of the Chamber, and was a mere echo of the Speech. The following was the King's answer:

"I am very much touched with the sentiments expressed by the Chamber of Peers for my sons and myself. I thank the Chamber of Peers especially for the assistance which it has constantly lent to my Government, and the support which it has always given to the preservation to France of the advantages which she enjoys, and of which the maintenance of order is the first condition. The sufferings which weigh on some portions of our population profoundly afflict me. You will continue to second my efforts to lighten the burden of them, and to abridge their duration; and I am glad to manifest to you the confidence that, notwithstanding these painful trials, the prosperity of France, the object of all our wishes, will continue to follow that progressive march, of which it gives me great pleasure to be able to congratulate myself along with you."

The debate on the Address opened in the House of Peers. M. Guizot made a long and laboured defence of the course adopted by France in regard to Spain. The Ministerial papers express admiration of the eloquence, logic, and firmness displayed by M. Guizot on this occasion. The Opposition journals treat his discourse as confused, shuffling, contradictory, false, and cowardly. The close of the speech was anything but complimentary to England. The effect of what M. Guizot said, was, that the English are a good and rational people; that they will not bear malice to France; and, at any rate, that they must submit to necessity, the addition to which, in the report of the French debate, is—(on rit.)

SPAIN.

Our letters from Spain bring the important news of a change of Ministry, the members of the Isturitz Cabinet having resigned on the 21st in tant. The Journal des Debats gives the following account of the circumstances:—"In the morning of the 21st instant, M. Castro y Orozco had been named President of the Chamber of Deputies by 111 votes to 93, given to M. Bravo Murillo. The Ministry gave in its resignation, and the Queen immediately charged the Duke de Sotomayor to form a Ministry. M. de Sotomayor offered M. Bravo Murillo the portfolio of Justice, which was accepted. He afterwards applied to M. Mon, and requested him to retain that of the Finance department, but that gentleman refused. This refusal broke up the whole arrangement. The Queen, it is said, sent for M. Mon, and endeavoured to overcome his refusal. The names which are cited as likely to form part of the new Cabinet are those of General Pavia, and Messrs. Arteta and Pidal. The Duke de Sotomayor, is better known by the name of the Marquis de Casa Irujo. He belongs, like M. Bravo Murillo, to the Moderado party."

PORTUGAL.

We have accounts from Lisbon to the 20th inst. At that period Saldanha's army, in two separate divisions, had nearly reached the southern bank of the Douro. His passage of the river would be effected in a day or two, and, it was thought, would be scarcely opposed. The insurgents were reserving all their energies for the defence of Oporto, which the Junta and Das Antas have been provisioning for some time.

One of the Lisbon letters says that a complete coalition had been effected between the Miguelites and Democrats, and Royalist manœuvres were heating up for recruits in the province of Minho to join in the defence of the town. By the terms of this coalition, if successful, the Queen was to be dethroned; and it was to be afterwards determined in Cortes whether the crown was to be worn by the Marquis de Loulé's son, as Dom Pedro V., or by Dom Miguel.

The Count Das Antas did not make a stand at the Vouga, as was expected, but fell back upon Oporto, where he arrived on the 17th with about 4000 troops, of whom 1800 were regular soldiers. The total force in that city is said not to fall much short of 11,000 men, not including 2000 recruits raised in the provinces of Minho and Traz-os-Montes, and yet under the drill-sergeants' care. The Junta was taking most active measures, not only to defend the city, but even to undertake offensive operations. There appears to be no want of money.

The trial of Captain Stopford, of her Majesty's ship Gannet, for excessively flogging his crew, had terminated in his being honourably acquitted.

The latest advices from Oporto are of the 19th inst. At that date two English war steamers and a brig-of-war were off that port; but there was a "fresh" in the Douro, which rendered it difficult to pass the bar.

Lord Palmerston has caused a letter to be written in reply to one from Mr. Quarles Harris, stating that Vice-Admiral Sir William Parker will be instructed to take all proper and necessary measures for the protection of British subjects and property at Oporto during the continuance of military operations in and that place; and that the Vice-Admiral will be ordered not to remove the British naval force therefrom while any hostility is entirely restored.

The Admiralty have since ordered Vice-Admiral Sir William Parker, to detach another ship from his squadron in Lisbon to Oporto, to assist the Gladiator, steam-Fl. ate, and the Locust, sloop, 18, Lieut.-Commander Rivers, in protecting British interests during the present crisis.

THE UNITED STATES AND MEXICO.

The Zenobia, which arrived at Liverpool on Wednesday, has brought New York papers to the 6th inst. The most interesting item of news is a message from the President to Congress, in which he announces the appointment of a Lieutenant-General to command the armies of the Republic in Mexico.

On the 2nd instant, the House of Representatives having been called upon to support the war, by supplying the Government with the means to carry it on, and the Secretary of the Treasury having, for this purpose, recommended a tax on tea and coffee, in order to enable the Government to obtain a loan, the question was brought before the House for early adjustment. The House thought it best to give an early answer to the Secretary of the Treasury's polite invitation of self-taxation, and, accordingly, proceeded at once to deal with it in a most offhand manner. Mr. Wentworth, of Illinois, moved a resolution that it was inexpedient to impose any duty on tea and coffee. Every effort was made to get rid of the question by the opponents of the resolution, but in vain. The resolution was carried by a majority of 115 to 46. The majority is composed of anti-war and protective tariff Whigs and Democrats. It created great consternation amongst those Democrats who support all Mr. Polk's policy.

The news from Mexico is most important.

General Scott left New Orleans for Tampico on the 13th ult. Great [illegible] ness existed at Matamoras. Several Americans had been murdered on the route to Camargo and Monterey. From the latter place, we learn that, on the 12th of December, General Taylor would start for Tampico, and Victoria, with one division of the army, and a portion of a brigade. It was reported that General Urrea, with a force of 6000 Mexicans, was in the vicinity. It was reported, also, that Santa Anna had assembled a force of 28,000 men at San Luis. The chief, it is said, had imprisoned Arguelles and other citizens on a charge of cowardice. General Wool remained at Parras, and General Worth at Saltillo.

Mexico had become in the scene of intestine disturbances. The state of Tobasco, resenting the neglect with which the central Government treated the applications of the department for assistance at the time of Commodore Perry's recent attack upon Tobasco, had issued a pronunciamento declaring independence.

Yucatan, too, was involved in civil distraction. Congress had pronounced against the re-union of the department with the central Government.

Accounts from Tampico state that an attack, which was repulsed, had been made on that town by a body of 7000 Mexican cavalry.

THE OVERLAND MAIL.

In part of our impression last week, we announced the arriva of the Calcutta Mail of the 8th of December, which reached London on Saturday morning. The papers from Bombay are of the 18th of December; Madras, 18th December; and China, 30th November.

The Punjaub was tranquil, and it was said that the British army was about to leave Lahore. Lord Hardinge was still on his route westward.

The most interesting feature of the news is the detection of correspondence of a treasonable nature which had passed betwixt the Prime Minister at Lahore, and the rebel Cashmerian ruler, Shaikh Emaum-ood-deen. The object in view was to fan the flame of rebellion, and, by the assistance of the Sikh army, effect the overthrow of the Government. The Governor-General proposes punishing Lal Singh, by deposing him at once from his high office, and appointing Meean Jewahir Singh, the nephew of Ghulab, to be Minister in his stead.

The opium sale at Calcutta, on the 30th November, was not a stop to in a most extraordinary manner, resulting in the drug to an immense extent had taken place in Bombay and Calcutta, when a wealthy Marwarree opium dealer, of Mudra, declared his determination to raise the price of each chest to £200, which he was enabled to do from the fact of his having, in the Bombay speculation, who had entered the market before him. It, of course, became an object with them to frustrate a sale on the first day, that being the day's sale for which the speculations had been made. They, therefore, through their agents, combined to buy till the price of each chest rose to £13,000! The auctioneers gave over sale in the evening, not a chest having been knocked down. Whether the [illegible] ers have succeeded in the trick is for decision

A [illegible] hurricane was experienced at Madras on the 20th of November. For [illegible] ately, no loss of life occurred, though innumerable houses, roofs, walls, and trees, were blown down, and the sand from the beach drifted half a mile up into the town, and timber lying on the strand cast up by the sea into one of the streets of the native town.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS MONDAY.

THE CORN AND NAVIGATION LAWS.

The Corn Importation Bill and the Navigation Laws Suspension Bill, which has been read a first time on Saturday, as we stated in our latest impression last week, were re-light severally read a second time, and passed through all their remaining stages without any opposition.

THE STATE OF IRELAND.

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE moved for the production of papers relative to the condition of Ireland, and entered into a lengthened statement descriptive of the famine and its attending circumstances, of the measures of relief taken by the Government during the recess of Parliament, and of the bills which it was the intention of the Government to propose, as well for the remediation, as for the permanent improvement of Ireland. The statement made by the noble Marquis was similar to that of Lord John Russell in the House of Commons, and it is, therefore, only necessary to refer to the succinct analysis which we give of the noble Lord's speech.

The House was occupied till past one o'clock in the morning with a desultory conversation upon the measures and general state of Ireland. The feeling seemed to be generally in favour of the proposed measures; but as it was understood that the House would hereafter enter more specifically upon them, we may spare our readers the trouble of further reference to the speeches.

The Earl of DEVON, in the course of his remarks, made an explanation upon a point which has caused some surprise. The noble Earl said, "The Irish farmer, for the most part, would rather place his money in the savings' bank, than pay it away in labour; and this circumstance accounted for the deposits in those institutions being at present so very large. There had been many cases in which the farmer had received the money for his year's crops, had lodged it in the savings, banks, rather than pay for the labour they wanted, and had afterwards thrown themselves upon the public works."

The papers moved for by the Marquis of Lansdowne were ordered.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MONDAY.

THE GOVERNMENT MEASURES FOR IRELAND.

Lord JOHN RUSSELL detailed to the House the proposals of the Government for remedying the affections under which Ireland laboured

The noble Lord began his statement by saying that he never stood so much in need of the indulgence of the House, though he never had less occasion to ask that indulgence, as the House had already given sufficient proof of its willingness to grant it, most voluntarily. He then proceeded to give a general view of the condition of Ireland under the infliction of the potato failure, which he described as only imaginable by supposing a famine of the thirteenth century acting upon a population of the nineteenth century. He announced in a few words the plan to propose for leave to bring in two bills, one for the purpose of rendering valid certain acts which have been done under the authority of the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland; and the second, a bill for the improvement of private estates in Ireland, in the spirit of the Treasury minute of the 1st of December, which was well known to the House and to the country.

The Noble Lord thus stated the course which had been pursued by the Government: "When Parliament met last year, it was apprehended, that the potatoes would have been much diseased, there was about to be a very great deficiency in that country. That apprehension was not fully justified by the event. It was impossible, as I think, for any one exactly to say what the extent of the misfortune would be; but the fact, I believe, was, there having been a very plentiful crop of potatoes in the previous year, that although there was a very great quantity of potatoes injured, yet the quantity of food in Ireland last year was not very deficient. However, Parliament took means very early in the session for the supply of food for the destitute, by means of giving work upon the roads, and by public works. It was enacted that, upon the sessions being held in any barony, there should be a power to apply for money from the Treasury upon loan, and there should be a grant of money. Under this law, presentments were made to the extent of more than £1,000,000, I think; the presentments to the 31st of August, I believe, were £1,372,000: what was recommended by the Board of Works amounted to £476,000, and there was actually expended to that time £260,000. Before the end of the session of Parliament, upon the recommendation of the present Government, Parliament passed a further law, by which, on the one hand, the Lord-Lieutenant was enabled to require special baronj sessions to meet, in order to make presentments for public works, and, on the other hand, as a check to apply for money from the Treasury not in the shape of extravagant expenditure, the whole was to be in the shape of advance, and all the money was to be repaid. Very soon after the session of Parliament had closed, there arose a desire, in many parts of Ireland, to have presentments sessions, and to have public works sanctioned, but, more especially, there was a great demand to have those public works continued and completed which had been undertaken in the early part of last session. There was some objection made on the part of the Treasury to that proceeding, because the harvest was just coming in: there was a great demand for labour; and it did not seem necessary, except for relief, that it was advisable to complete them; however, it being put before us as a matter of good faith, an order was given that those works should be completed. But these operations were found extremely difficult for the land, although it was reinforced by the addition of two gentlemen exceedingly competent, I believe, for the task assigned them (hear, hear)—to make all their arrangements before they proceeded—sufficient in great numbers very soon, however, after the works were commenced, there came a complaint on the part of the proprietors and country gentlemen in Ireland, that these works were useless if they were not made productive measures. But this plan had been authoritatively condemned which some gentlemen in Ireland, that other works were likewise in themselves useless; and that they were not productive measures. Even I do not myself attach any great value to that objection. I think, the object being to relieve by giving to combine relief with a certain amount of work which should show that industry was not entirely abandoned—that the productive nature of the works was a question of secondary importance, and that the use for which they were undertaken was the main thing, in the first place, from loss of life, and, in the next place, from the indiscriminate asking of alms. In this country, during the distress which happened four or five years ago, in the course of one or two years the pauperees were increased from £6,000,000 to £8,000,000, an increase of £1,000,000 a-year; but, if an examination were made into the manner in which that million was expended, it would not be found that there was any great amount of productive labour. It must have been spent either in direct relief, or relief with such occupations as are given to poor men, in order to separate the man who is really destitute from the impostor. I do not attach any very great value to the objection which was then made: but, at the same time, as it was most desirable to obtain the co-operation of the landed gentlemen of Ireland, as it was desirable likewise, if possible, to have the works proposed by the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, with the consent of the Cabinet, after the case had been represented, sanctioned a plan by which the sessions were allowed to present for productive works in electoral districts. But this plan had been found to extend which another error was a still further desire expressed for what was called a townland division, and that the works should be separately presented for townlands. Now, these townlands are of various sizes and dimensions in Ireland, some of them containing 10 acres, and above a hundred acres, others are of a tolerable size; but, I believe, taking a general average of the whole townlands of Ireland, they do not contain above 350 acres each. The Government could not accede to such a demand. It appeared to the Lord-Lieutenant, and, as far as I have heard, it appeared to almost every one, even of those who were at first advocates of this plan, that it could not be beneficially adopted."

After adverting to the immense extent of the claims for relief, Lord John Russell stated the nature of the measures the Government now intended to propose for the alleviation of the distress of the Irish people: "The system had become so vast, and at the same time the destitution and the want of food had so greatly increased, that it was desirable to attempt some other temporary scheme, by which, if possible, the misery which they have now to meet might be mitigated, and, with so vast an expenditure of money, that more effectual relief should be afforded. It has appeared to us that it will be desirable to form in districts—not in electoral districts, but in districts which Relief Committees should be empowered to receive subscriptions, levy rates, and receive donations from the Government; that by means of these they should purchase food and establish soup kitchens in the different districts; that they should, so far as they are able, distribute rations with this purchased food to the famishing inhabitants; and that, furnishing that food, they should not require as indispensable the test of work, but that labourers should be allowed to work on their own plots of ground, or for the farmers, and thus tend to produce food for the next harvest, and procure, perhaps, some small wages, to enable them to support their families. After we considered this scheme, I communicated it to the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland. We have consulted the various officers of the Board of Works and at the head of the Commissariat. They are prepared to consider it favourably; and we have sent over to Ireland a preparatory measure, and next week a bill to be proposed to Parliament, to carry into effect this arrangement. There is a person in this country conversant with Ireland, having been long engaged in the public service of this country, who secured not only the general esteem of the Governments he has served, but of the people among whom his operations were carried on. The person to whom I allude is Sir John Burgoyne. He is now an Inspector of Fortifications in this country; and my wish was that he should undertake this task. I sent for him the other day, in order to propose that he should undertake it. He told me that he had obtained three months' leave of absence, and that, instead of devoting those three months to relaxation from the duties he was performing, he was quite willing to devote them to the service of the country, and go at any time he was required on the discharge of the duty which I proposed. He will be in communication with the Lord-Lieutenant, and will have the co-operation of Colonel Jones, and the Board of Works, of the Commissariat, the head of the Poor Law Commission, and of other persons who are competent and ready to give him assistance. In proposing the measures, with the view of affording, if possible, more efficient means of relieving the poor people who now are in want of food, and, at the same time, of setting loose great numbers of persons for the ordinary operations of agriculture, we must take care—and the Lord-Lieutenant is prepared to take care that the substitution of this system for public works shall be made as easy in the transition as possible. There will be no rude dismissal of the people at once, who, otherwise, might find great difficulty in obtaining subsistence; but, when the arrangements are made for carrying the scheme I have described into effect, it will be provided that no further assistance shall be made, and no new public works undertaken. The Lord-Lieutenant says, in regard to many roads which have been begun, that, if now abandoned, they will be left in the most incomplete and inconvenient state (hear, hear)— and that it is desirable to devise some mode in which that difficulty can be obviated. With regard to the money which has been already expended and which is now being expended upon these public works, a claim has been made that the whole of it should not be a burden upon Ireland. The calamity is severe and extensive, that, passing by the remote causes of it, and looking how heavily it has pressed upon the present possessors of property in Ireland—upon the whole, I think it right that the whole burden should not remain upon Irish property. We should, therefore, propose that an arrangement should be made by Parliament, by which, in such unexampled year, when an instalment becomes due, upon half that instalment being paid, the other half should be remitted; that the whole debt should be kept up till one half of it is paid, and that when the half of it is paid the remainder should be remitted; and thus it would be provided, that one half of the whole charge should be upon the public. I should state, on the financial part of this question, as regards the sums now issued, that they are issued out of the balances in the Exchequer, they are issued out of the Consolidated Fund at that neither is there now any intention of making any new issue of Exchequer Bills to meet that demand. But it must, at the same time, be considered, that, when I make such a proposition as that which has now been laid before the House, it is one which places a very considerable burden upon the finances of this country (hear, hear); and that, placing that burden upon the finances of this country, I do feel myself disabled from making some propositions I should otherwise have made, but which, considering the very heavy burdens arising from the destitution this present year, I should think it hardly fair to the people of this country to bring forward. It may be said, "Let the burden be borne by the Consolidated Fund;" but I feel it to be borne by the Imperial Treasury and Exchequer.' I trust always that those sums are not to be granted by Government or Parliament without most serious consideration (hear, hear). [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] that the British North American Provinces possess the elements of a mightier empire than any other portion of this continent.

TORONTO, THE CAPITAL OF CANADA WEST.

But we must not, on the present occasion, dwell upon a theme so vast and attractive. Even Canada itself, with its rapidly-increasing population and valuable productions, is too much for us to illustrate. We have, therefore, chosen a subject which, though diminutive in comparison, may prove more interesting by bringing vividly before our readers the wonderful progress which all the substantial improvements and comforts of life are making throughout these extensive Colonies; for, though the specimen we present is perhaps superior to any other, yet it is only one of many; for, all the towns and districts are steadily following, and with a rapidity almost inconceivable to the inhabitants of old countries.

Our specimen is the rise and progress of TORONTO, the CAPITAL of CANADA WEST, which, during the last thirty years, has advanced from a small village of wooden houses, with a few hundred inhabitants, and one miserable schooner annually landing its goods and passengers in a crazy boat, (for there was no wharf), to a city of elegant and commodious brick and stone buildings, with twenty thousand inhabitants, and numerous quays round its spacious and safe harbour, crowded with ships and steam-boats hourly coming and departing.

Among the causes which have induced this remarkable flow of prosperity, the following are not the least, viz., the natural advantages her peculiar position gives her, being situated at the head of one of the most magnificent inland seas in the world; her natural and capacious harbour, which is capable at any time of receiving within its bosom all the steamers and vessels engaged in the commerce of the country, where they may lie secure against the violence of any gale; the splendid country extending for miles in her rear, and on either side of her—which, although well-populated, is capable of an incalculable addition—a section of country, abounding with immense water power, which, for fertility of soil, and excellence of climate, is not surpassed by any other country on the continent of America; and, besides, she owes much of her industry, enterprise, and energy, to her merchants, tradesmen, and artizans.

Toronto is charmingly situated on the margin of Lake Ontario, near its upper or north-western extremity; it recedes from the water with a gentle acclivity commanding a superb view of the great inland sea, and is in the heat of summer cooled and refreshed by its breezes. The harbour is by far the best, safest, and most commodious on that side of the Lake from Hamilton to Kingston; is is formed by a remarkably long and narrow peninsula, in the shape of a half-moon, which breaks the sea in rough weather, and shields the vessels from harm. This peninsula, indeed, resembles an artificial breakwater rather than a natural production. Such a harbour is of course a place of refuge during storms and tempests, as it is also a point on which commerce has rested her golden wing.

The margin of the Lake is studded with mansions and private residences; among which the most picturesque may be mentioned is that of the Lord Bishop, the Hon. G. Crookshank, the Hon. T. H. Dunn, the Hon. R. S. Jameson, the Vice Chancellor, the Hon. C. Widmer, the Hon. R. Baldwin, the Hon. H. T. Boulton, Frederick Widder, Esq., Charles C. Small, Esq., Mr. Justice Jones, &c., &c.

Among the public buildings is St. James's Cathedral, capable of accommodating a congregation of upwards of 3000 persons; the new City Hall and Public Market, where the Municipal Body holds its deliberations; the Banks of Upper Canada—Commercial, British, North American, and Montreal; the former Government House, and Grounds, now held by the Corporation for the use of the citizens as Public Gardens; the Parliament Buildings, temporarily occupied by the Professors and Students of King's College, and as public offices; Osgoode Hall, the property of the Law Society, where the different Courts and Law Offices are to centralise; the Gaol and Court House, of cut stone; Upper Canada College; King's College, now in course of construction; the Hospital; the Provincial Lunatic Asylum; the New Garrison; St. Andrew's Church; Roman Catholic Cathedral; Trinity Church; St. George's Church; the new Wesleyan Chapel, and numerous other religious and civic buildings.

The College, under the direction of Mr. Principal Barron, and the University, presided over by the Rev. Dr. McCaul, are institutions of high repute. They are literally endowed; and, when the building of the University is completed, it will have no superior on this side the Atlantic.

Nor, while Toronto is thus provided with these essential requisites, is it deficient in those associations which contribute to amusement, for Toronto rejoices in a Race-course, Cricket-ground, a Racquet-court, and a Bowling-green; all of which are fully equal, if not superior, to similar matters in any of the provincial towns in England. Besides these, there are a Regatta Club, the Home District Agricultural Society, the News Room, Mechanics' Institute, Public Baths, and various other appliances of civilisation.

Toronto is an incorporated City, and has a Mayor, and Court of Aldermen and Common Council, comprised of ten Aldermen and ten Common Councilmen under whose enterprising management numerous public improvements have been carried out, by means of which the prosperity of the City has been greatly advanced—conspicuous amongst which are the extensive Gas and Water-works.

Toronto is an Episcopal City of the Diocese, being one of the Colonial Bishoprics lately established. The present incumbent—the first who has filled this high office—is the Honourable and Right Reverend John Strachan, D.D., who has spent nearly fifty years in promoting the cause of sound education and true religion throughout the Province.

In maritime advantages, Toronto has a marked superiority over any other town in Western Canada, having the harbour open at all seasons of the year; while all other localities of the Lakes are fast locked in icy fetters, and remain closed to navigation for three months in the year.

The City of Toronto is laid out at right angles, and the streets are spacious and airy. The principal outlets from the town—which are either planked or macadamised are Yonge-street, to the north, leading to Lake Simcoe, thence by Penetanguishene to Lake Huron; to the east, by the Kingston road, through several thriving towns and villages to Kingston; to the west, by Dundas-street, through a thickly-settled country, to Dundas, Hamilton, Brantford, London, &c; thus rendering Toronto the centre to which converge the products of the surrounding fertile country, thickly inhabited by an industrious population, to whom it gives manufactures and merchandise in return. Several enterprises, calculated to develop the internal resources of the country, and stimulate the progress of the City, have been projected, and will shortly be carried into effect. Of these, the most encouraging is the Toronto and Lake Huron Railroad, which will connect Toronto with Lake Huron at Sarnia or Goderich, in the far west.

Should the foregoing description of Toronto fail to convey an adequate or correct idea of its rapid progress to our old Country friends, we have been reminded by several visitors who have travelled in most parts, that Toronto, in point of situation, with regard to its resident population, and, speaking in general, more nearly resembles Southampton, in England, than any town we are acquainted with.

TORONTO THE CAPITAL OF CANADA WEST.

NEWSPAPER

SMEE'S HOT WATER ÆTHER INHALER.

IN a former Number (245), we called attention to the important medical discovery, whereby a state of the body could be produced by the inhalation of æther, which renders the patient insensible to the pain of the most severe operations. Since the discovery has been promulgated, medical men have been actively engaged throughout the country in prosecuting their enquiries upon the subject, and numerous forms of apparatus have been devised for conducting the inhalation.

It is found by experience that the more rapid the effect is produced on the body the better is the result for the patient. It is upon this idea that an Inhaler has been contrived by Mr. Alfred Smee, the Surgeon to the Bank of England, whereby the vaporisation of æther is promoted by warmth given to the apparatus from a little chamber of hot water.

Mr. Smee's Inhaler, which is here figured, was made by Mr. Ferguson, of Smithfield, and consists of a tin vessel, either circular or oval, about 8 inches long, and 3 wide, divided into two compartments—one smaller (A), to contain hot water; the other larger (B), to contain the æther. The large compartment is divided into two by a diaphragm, and has another opening to admit the æther, and the entrance of the air (d). Into this larger compartment a tube is fixed, which has a valve at the extremity (e), for inspiration, and another valve (g) near the mouth-piece, for expiration. The mouth-piece (f) has an indian-rubber covering, to adapt itself to different mouths.

SMEE'S ÆTHER INHALER.

When this instrument is to be used, the smaller chamber is filled with hot water (c), and a little æther, an ounce for instance, is placed in the larger compartment, which has sponge placed in it, to prevent its moving about. On inhalation, the current of air passes in the direction of the arrows, and is said to produce far more rapid effects than when any other instrument is employed.

This Instrument, with other ingenious arrangements for the Inhalation of Æther, have been submitted to us, by the Proprietor of the celebrated Depôt for Inventions, 201, Strand.

PAINLESS OPERATIONS.

AN operation was performed on Thursday afternoon, at the Westminster Hospital, by Mr. Hale Thomson, the eminent surgeon of that institution, for the removal of a very painful tumour from the abdomen of a female thirty-five years of age, who had been afflicted with it for several years, the case having baffled all attempts at alleviation by the usual remedies. She was subjected to the inhalation of the vapour of æther, from the apparatus invented by Mr. Robinson, of Gower-street; and the result was most successful, the patient not evincing the slightest sensation of pain during the operation, which was dexterously performed in an exceedingly short space of time. On being asked, at its termination, what she imagined she had undergone, she declared, "she had had a delightful dream;" and, in fact, appeared mortified at having been aroused from it. The operating theatre was crowded to excess: amongst the visitors we noticed Prince Jerome Napoleon, the Earl of Waldegrave, Viscount Falkland, Lord Morton, Sir Henry Middmay, Sir George Wombwell, and many distinguished foreigners.

On Tuesday, Mr. Arnott performed an operation for lithotomy, at the Middlesex Hospital, with the assistance of the ether vapour, and with eminent success. No sound of pain escaped the patient during the action of the knife; and the result was the more gratifying, inasmuch as the case was one unusually complicated. The patient was advanced in years, but the severity of the operation produced no effect on him; on the contrary, he was with difficulty made to understand that he was free from his affliction. The vapour was exhibited from the apparatus of Mr. Jacob Bell, assisted by Mr. Tomes.

THE NEW CHURCH OF ST. ANDREW, MARYLEBONE.

THIS handsome Church, for the district of St. Andrew, was consecrated, with the accustomed ceremonial, on Thursday. The first stone was laid Jan. 13, last year.

The Church stands on the east side of Wells-street, Oxford-street, a position attended with difficulties, which the architects, Messrs. Daukes and Hamilton, have succeeded in rendering into advantages.—"Thus, in the entrance front, occurring as it does in a part of the street not running directly north and south, in order to place the Church east and west, the line of the front does not range with the line of the houses, but is set back at the northern end, by which means room is obtained for the boldly-projecting buttress against the tower, and a picturesque effect is produced. The door in this buttress, and the introduction of a stairs' turret at the southern angle of the tower, greatly aids the appearance." (The Builder.)

The style of the new Church is Early Perpendicular. The length of the Church, inclusive of the chancel, is 78 feet; the breadth, from north to south, 65 feet; and the height of the nave, 55 feet. The tower and spire, both of stone, are, together, 155 feet in height; in the former are eight belfry windows, divided by mullions and transoms into four lights, and in the spire are four windows. The whole is built of Whitby stone, with Bath stone dressings. The windows are exceedingly well designed; the tracery being rich and elaborate in detail.

Along the front of the porch, formed between the tower and a buttress at the junction of the nave with the south aisle, is sculptured, "How dreadful is this place! this is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of Heaven. (Gen. xxviii.)"

On each side of the west door, within the porch, are poor-boxes, of stone, resting on boldly-sculptured brackets; and, immediately above them, are angels holding scrolls, thus serving as ends to the mouldings of the door, at the same time that the scrolls are adapted for plans solicitations for alms.

The appearance of the interior of the Church is very good; and from the galleries being set back, the general effect is that of great loftiness and space. The nave is separated from a wide aisle on each side by columns and arches, bearing a clerestory. Attached to the first column next the chancel, on the south side, is a stone pulpit, octagonal in plan, and approached from the south aisle by steps and a balustrade of stone. Around the pulpit are sculptured in relief these sentences:—"Blessed are they that hear the word of God and keep it," and, "Take heed how ye hear."

On the south side, [of the wall of the chancel, are two handsomely sculptured sedilia. A large, five-light window occupies the east wall of the chancel, with stone screen beneath it, with panels to receive the "Commandments." This altar-screen is exceedingly well carved; and the sedilia are of very beautiful design and execution. The altar table is, also, of good design; and, underneath it, on the dorsale, the cross is painted on a blue ground, diapered white. The chancel is paved with encaustic tiles, and the rest of the Church with the black and red diamonds from the potteries. The chancel is elevated three steps above the nave; and immediately in front of the steps is a very noble lectern, or reading desk, of brass, it is moveable, and the shaft rises from a deeply-moulded circular base, resting upon lions, as in some old examples. This is a gift, not being included in the cost of the Church.

There are galleries on three sides of the Church; but, being kept behind the main pillars, and carried on separate uprights, and stopping short at some distance from the east end, they do not interfere with the general design. The organ stands on the floor under a window, at the east end of the south aisle; and behind it there is a robing room. The organ has a Gothic front; to our taste, it seems thrust on one side; and we can scarcely imagine its effect can be so powerful as it would be if in the place usually allotted to the organ, at the east end, or so thrilling as if entirely concealed from view: half hidden, half exposed, it now appears as if it were to be put in some other place, and only waiting its opportunity.

The roofs are open, stained dark oak. The pews, low, and without doors, are similarly stained and varnished.

The font is placed at the west end of the nave; it is octagonal in form, with a bowl of the full size of ancient fonts, provided with a plain lid of wood. The sides of the octagon contain the symbols of the four Evangelists; the lamb; the symbol of the holy spirit; the sacred monogram, and a cross. Round the rim of the font is this sentence, sculptured in low relief: "Except a man be born of water and of the spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." John iii. 5.

The Church is well built by Mr. Myers, the contract for the bare building being £7000. "The ornamental work, including the oak reredos, on each side of the chancel to separate it from the aisles, sedilia, carved chancel seats, and the font already described, were the special gift of friends, designed by Mr. Pugin and others, and will cost between £400 and £500; besides which, there is the cost of the warming and ventilating apparatus, the gas fittings, the bell, the organ, plate, and furnishing the vestry; which will probably amount to £900 more.

"For the last of these items there yet remains a sum of £500 to be collected. The Church will accommodate 1200 persons; all the sittings will be free of rent charge, but for the exclusive use of the inhabitants of the district parish of St. Andrew, it being the wish of the incumbent, the Rev. Thomas Mount Fallow, A.M., that the inhabitants of a town parish should be similarly circumstanced, as regards seats in their parish church, with the inhabitants of a country parish. This is, we believe, the first of the new parish churches in London built on this principle."—(The Builder.)

The Church was originally projected by the Bishop of Chichester. The ground-landlord, the Archdeacon Berners, gave the freehold of the site, valued at about £2000, and the intermediate interests in the property were purchased by grants from the Metropolis Churches' Aid Fund, and the St. Marylebone Local Fund.

Towards the cost of erecting this building the Parliamentary Commissioners granted £600, and The Incorporated Society, £900; the rest of the money has been raised by the voluntary contributions of the parishioners of St. Marylebone, and it is hoped there will be no difficulty in obtaining the £500 still required.

The east window is to be filled with stained glass, to be designed and executed, without regard to expense, by Mr. Pugin.

NEW CHURCH OF ST. ANDREW, WELLS-STREET, MARYLEBONE.

RECTORSHIP OF THE PARISH OF ST. JAMES, WESTMINSTER.

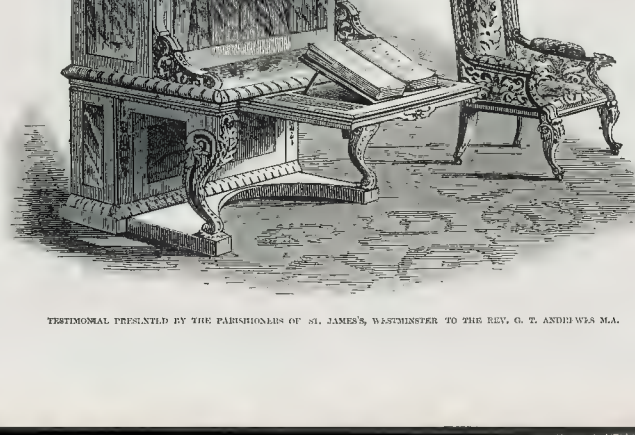
FOR several months past, a very strong feeling has been expressed by a great number of the Parishioners of St. James, Westminster, upon the refusal of the Bishop of London to accede to their wishes, by appointing to the vacant Rectorship, the Rev. G. T. Andrewes, M.A., Clerk in Orders, who has for many years enjoyed the respect and esteem of the entire parish. A Committee has been formed to further the interests of the Rev. Gentleman, and the correspondence of the parties has been published; from which it appears that the right of presentation was not in the Bishop, but the Lord Chancellor, the Crown being entitled to every third turn. The Chancellor then finding that, under this misapprehension the offer of the Rectorship had been made to the Rev. Mr. Jackson, upon the faith of which he had relinquished another appointment, and being furnished with the highest testimonials of his character, conduct, and abilities, his Lordship felt that he was only doing an act of justice in presenting him.

The new Rector having been thus appointed by the Lord Chancellor, and not by the Bishop, and the Committee finding that they could not render any further assistance to Mr. Andrewes, began to raise a sum of money sufficient to purchase such a Testimonial as would be both acceptable to him, and creditable to the subscribers; and, having obtained Mr. Andrewes's wishes with respect thereto, procured a series of books, consisting of Macklin's Bible, Boydell's Shakspeare, and Milton, elegantly bound. In addition, a handsome carved oak book-case, and chair, together with a valuable gold chronometer, and necessary appendages, have been purchased, and the address voted at a meeting has been elaborately written and illuminated upon vellum, to form a lasting record to his family of the high regard of the parishioners towards him.

To defray the expenses of these several articles, &c., the sum of £520 has been raised by the kind and voluntary contributions of 850 of the inhabitants.

We have engraved the Book-case and Chair, both of which were made by Mr Banting, of St. James's street.

Each of the volumes bears the following inscription:



TESTIMONIAL PRESENTED BY THE PARISHIONERS OF ST. JAMES'S, WESTMINSTER TO THE REV. G. T. ANDREWES M.A.

PRESENTED TO
THE REVEREND GERRARD THOMAS ANDREWES, M.A.
CLERK IN ORDERS OF ST. JAMES'S,
AND CHAPLAIN TO THE HONOURABLE THE HOUSE OF COMMONS,
BY THE INHABITANTS OF THE PARISH OF ST. JAMES, WESTMINSTER, IN TESTIMONY
OF THEIR AFFECTIONATE REGARD AND ESTEEM FOR HIS UNFEIGNED PIETY,
HIS MANY CHRISTIAN VIRTUES,
AND LENGTHENED GRATUITOUS SERVICES TO THE POOR INHABITANTS THEREOF,
AND TO PERPETUATE THE REMEMBRANCE OF THEIR ARDENT APPEALS TO THE BISHOP OF LONDON,
TO PREFER HIM TO THE VACANT RECTORSHIP OF THAT PARISH,
AS WELL AS EXPRESSIVE OF THEIR DEEP REGRET THAT SUCH APPEALS WERE DISREGARDED BY THAT PRELATE. MDCCCXLVI.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, Jan. 31.—Septuagesima Sunday.
MONDAY, Feb. 1.—Hilary Term ends.
TUESDAY, 2.—Candlemas Day.
WEDNESDAY, 3.—St. Blaise
THURSDAY, 4 Mars rises 4h. 53. a.m.
FRIDAY, 5 St. Agatha's Day.
SATURDAY, 6. Venus sets 6h. 2m. p.m.

HIGH WATER at London-bridge, for the Week ending February 6.

Monday		Tuesday.		Wednesday.		Thursday.		Friday.		Saturday.
M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.
h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.
2 30	2 57	3 21	3 41	3 58	4 12	4 25	4 45	4 59	5 13	5 28	5 46

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Subscribers who may experience any difficulty in having their copies of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS sent in the large envelope, to prevent injury and creasing, may observe in our advertisements page a list of Agents who have now adopted our suggestion, and send it exactly as it is sent from the Office. By this arrangement, the Paper is received perfectly clean; the costly Pen-Art Engravings are not injured; and the collection of Numbers at the expiration of every Six Months are in a condition to form the most valuable and interesting Volume ever published.

"H. P."—Gloucester. Mr. Deville has been dead some time. The second address in question is 17, Berners-street.

"A Constant Reader," Kendal, we suspect, has been imposed on.

"E.," Westminster, will be replied to in next "Enever Boyd's Column."

"C. C.," Balham, is thanked for his obliging offer; but the subjects do not possess immediate interest.

"R. M. S."—The salary is about £500 per annum.

"A Young Lady," who announces the Rev. H. Moore Richard Roach, should apply to Mr. Hatchard, the Magazine, or the Queen's Bookseller.

"T. T.," North Shields. We cannot venture an opinion upon so delicate a matter.

"S. F."—Apply, by letter, to Mr. Beale, at the Theatre.

"R. Z.," Leominster.—Apply at the Government Annuity Office, 19, Old Jewry.

"J. H. P." Possibly, the Solicitor could not make the service unmeasure.

"P. P." should apply, with proper testimonials, to the Post-Office Secretary.

"Lector," Canterbury, is thanked.

"A Constant Subscriber," Camberwell. Secretary's board-wages is 15s. per week.

"Bastian," Naplesbank, will find a good account of the Electric Telegraph in the "Companion to the Almanac."

"J. W. S.," Wakefield.—Foster's "Double Entry Elucidated" is one of the best and latest works on Book-keeping.

"Rusticus" should apply to the Government Annuity Office, 19, Old Jewry.

"Economista" should apply to the Secretary.

"G. T. K." and "W. B. A. P."—We have not room.

"Sarah," Fulham.—"Grounds."

"Anglicus" will find an account of Shakspeare's Birth-place, with two Engravings, in No. 237 of our Journal.

"Coy."—Address at Messrs. Longmans', 39, Paternoster-row.

"A Freeholder" had better apply to a Surveyor, or Solicitor.

"Gabrielle." The Bonsmar Chess-board may be had, by order, of any Bookseller.

"W. B. Lakeman, Devonport.

"R. L. T.," Ashton.—A practical work on Pyrotechny is published by Simpkin and Marshall.

"H. W." should apply to a Shipping Agent.

"C." We have not room for the Lines

"A Subscriber," Brompton. The Baron de Bode died about two months since, at his residence, St John's Wood: he has left one son.

"J. B. R." Cheltenham. We are not in possession of the information required.

"G. L." is thanked for the Lines; but, we have not room for them.

"G. S.," Twickenham.—We do not understand the note

"J. G." letter has been forwarded to a Coin Dealer, who will reply.

"Doubter," Edenborgh. The parties are reputed to be of the Society of Friends

"A. B.," Kendal, is thanked.

"R. H." Dr. Diffenbach's Work on New Zealand is sound and recent. The climate is very fine.

"R. J. W."—The Steam voyage to Italy by the packet named will occupy from 17 to 21 days. Address Southampton. The Paris and Lyons Railway is not yet completed.

"Angler."—Our "Angling Notes" were completed last Season.

"A Subscriber."—Neither of the Books in question is mentioned in the "London Catalogue," (1814 to 1840). Of the invention we had not before heard.

"Truro." Apply to Mr. Ash, Heraldic Engraver, 22, Paston-street, Hagmarket.

"D. C. L.," Liverpool.—Address Kay-street, Manchester.

"Pair Play" has not set us right.

"R. R." is thanked; but we have not room for the solution.

"A.," Great Yarmouth. See "Fleming and Tibbin's French Dictionary." The translation is, "I would if I could."

"R. A. T. F.," Henley, should advertise in the Windsor Newspaper

"G. E. C.," Leicester.—The "Chemical Gazette," published on every alternate month.

"A Staffordshire Potter" should apply to Mr. W. H. Carpenter, British Museum.

"The Illustrated New Testament" will be published in a week or two

"J. W. L."—We believe the Lyceum version of "The Battle of Life" to be that playing at Lover's.

"E. F." See the Vatican, above.

"H. M." Lincoln.—Declined

"G. L." Oxford.—Charades to be answered next week.

"Ben Bax," unless a Company, and on his road to Fortune, will be liable to duty

"Inquirendo," Somerset. The town of Bedford is well provided with Schools.

"W. R. H.," Isle of Wight, is thanked; but the Sketch is not eligible.

"J. B." Penchurch-lane; and "A. N." Gravesend. We cannot undertake to decide Wagers

"A Subscriber" Norwich.

"Obadiah" should apply to a Clerical Agent we, really, cannot undertake such inquiries

"G. W." should consult the Advertisements; and address a letter to the Theatre.

"T. M. P." is too late as the "Pentonville Prison, should apply to the Under Secretary of State, or one of the Prison Inspectors.

"Bupardes."—The descent of the property will, of course, depend upon the conditions of the Will.

"A Wedded Lady" is recommended to apply to a Solicitor

"A Subscriber to the Art-Union." The day for drawing the Prizes is duly announced; and the Prize-holders can take choice from the Pictures in the Royal Academy, from which the Prize Pictures are conditionally selected by the prize-holders.

"Ploughboy."—A capital of about £500 will suffice

"H. H." Walsall.—The "refresher" has been forwarded to the Artist.

"Пенуі-а-Lлеуі," Birkenhead.—"Ryan's Games?" or, "Whist, Illustrated by Kenny Meadows." (Bogue.) The slime of the snail is a good cement for mending china, &c.

"A Lover of Music." Cuts. We recommend Clinton's "School or Practical Instruction Book," published by Cramer, Beale, and Co. The author is also a first-rate teacher. Mr. Card, or Mr. Cutts, Mr. Ribas, Mr. Richardson, and Mr. Dofsky, are all great masters. Our Correspondent cannot do wrong by choosing either of these Professors.

"L. D." Lord Arundel has the reputation of being one of the best cornopean players and dancers in England.

"W. G., Exeter."—The proverb, "The longest way round is the shortest way home," is generally used as an excuse for going out of one's direct way, when such an agreeable companion as a lady, for instance—whose society may compensate for increase of distance, or even render the longer road the shorter one.

"Peruse." The best English translation of Eugene Sue's works is published by Messrs. Chapman and Hall, Strand.

"An Admirer."—The marriage is illegal

"P. M." is thanked for the view of Queen-square; but we have not room to engrave it

"Guernsey."—We do not consider that by either form the Legacy Duty would be avoided.

"Wales" should consult a German dictionary

"A Traveller on the Great Western Railway."—We scarcely think the suggestion practicable.

"G. R.," Kirkstall, should apply to the Registrar of the District in which the parties were married

"B. C." Exeter.—There are thirty-one club-houses in London: we cannot give the number of members.

"Is there any harm in it?" Wolverhampton.—The expense of transcribing the will depends on its length.

"A Subscriber," Bath, "No. I," Elgo.—Bourne's "Principles and Practice of Steel Engraving," 1s.

"R. A. Z." Redgrave. Address to the Private Secretary to his Royal Highness.

"H. B."—Apply to the Government Annuity Office, Old Jewry.

"J. F.," Torrington.—Stephens's "Book of the Farm" is a first rate work.

"W. R.," Colchester. We have not room.

"Filius Nobilis."—We will endeavour to obtain the information.

"A Lay Minister," Nottingham, is thanked.

An Old Subscriber" will have to pay the Income-tax on the profit accruing from the investment.

"S. B. G.," near Aberpassenny.—The drawing named has not reached us.

BOOKS &c. RECEIVED DURING THE WEEK.
Furnival's Taxation Revised.—American Slavery. —Knapp's Botanical Chart
Music.—"My Father's Portrait." By Miss Stanley.—Song, "Oh! come now Spring is smiling."

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, JANUARY 30, 1847.

At noon, on Wednesday last, the 27th of January, a Treasury order, founded on the resolutions of the House of Commons, suspended the duty payable on the import of foreign corn, and the trade in grain became perfectly free. To be of any effect, the suspension must continue till next harvest; and from that time the Corn Law itself will have but little more than a year to exist. The slight duty for so short a time will hardly be worth having to any interest, and it is therefore by no means improbable that we have seen the last of the system of restriction as applied to the trade in corn. The date is worth recording if only upon the probability, and for the sake of indicating a sic transit. Rarely has there been a more quiet demise; a stormy and "still-vexed" existence, a continual struggle for life for the last thirty years, terminated in a perfect euthanasia. The statute had given all parties so much trouble in its time, that the prevailing feeling at last was akin to satisfaction at the departure; it was looked on as a sort of happy release. Those who had been its most attached friends abandoned it in its last hours, with singular indifference; even Lord G. Bentinck moved no arrest of judgment; nay, was even a consenting party to that "suspension," from which, as from many others, rescue will come too late; life will be "quite extinct." At all events, it will never be resuscitated for very long, or to any purpose; and it is time to contemplate the state of things that will succeed it. For the present, the predictions of both parties, the opponents of the Corn-Law and its supporters, have singularly failed; the prophecies of the ruin that was to descend on the farmers, the destruction of rent-rolls, and the emigration of Dukes are all falsified. The farmers have seen no such times or prices as the present since their "golden age"—the war. Rent-rolls are as safe as ever, and Protectionist Peers breathe more freely; the Duke of Richmond, indeed, still dwells on Sir Robert Peel's "treachery," and talks of "nailing the colours to the mast," but, as the ship itself has gone down, it is difficult to see how this is to be done. The figure was worn out long ago, and now has a touch of the ludicrous. The same cause that has made such bad seers of the Protectionists has given colour to charges of exaggeration on the part of the Free-Traders; corn is not so abundant, it is said, and bread not so cheap, as they promised. They reply that more than its share of the corn grown in the world no nation can have under any circumstances; and, provided grain is at its natural price, the object of the system is attained. But the controversy has died out, and there really seems to be a general wish to make the best of what lies before us, with a disposition on the part of the Landed Interest to allow that they have not lost so much as they had been led to expect they should. The effect of the suspension of the duty, and the declaration of the Government policy generally, has been a fall in the Irish corn markets. It is supposed that both in England and Ireland large stocks are being held back: it is likely they will now be brought out for sale, but it may be years before the potato crop recovers itself: the quantities will be sown, with less confidence in it, and more risk of failure. This will leave a great deficiency in the supply of food that must be made up in grain. Looking at home and abroad, there is no prospect of the price of corn falling to the rate called "ruinously low."

On Monday Lord John Russell laid before Parliament the measures he proposes to adopt in Ireland. The House was crowded; the speech of the noble Lord was as one of the best he ever delivered; he seemed to rise with the occasion; the tone and sentiment of his address, indeed, would have warranted the expectation of a broader and bolder policy, as there is nothing permanent in the plan except the extension of the Irish Poor-Law. The other measures respecting the loans, grants, &c., are temporary, and based on former precedents. We have allided to the proposition more at length elsewhere.

On Tuesday, Mr. Fielden, who has taken the post vacated by Lord Ashley, brought in the Factory Bill. There was a disposition to meet it at once by a direct negative, but the general feeling of the House checked the rash and unseemly attempt. The limitation of labour is a question that must be discussed; the war of poverty and human sinews with gold and the power of steam is too unequal for a Government to stand neuter and see whole masses of population dwarfed down and enfeebled below the standard of mankind. A limitation is perfectly possible; it will but distribute production more equally over the year; practically, every mill that works short time shows the possibility of it; and exceptions in extraordinary cases may always be made. The discussion on the measure will hardly present any novel facts, but we expect to see a development of the less rigid opinion; rival capitalists may be left to fight their battles as they choose: but to say that all questions of work and labour should be left to the arrangement of the employers and the employed, is placing two systems on an equality, one of which is all weakness and dependence, the other all strength, power, and command; it is the duty of a Government to try and hold the balance between them.

On one occasion during the past week various honourable members who addressed the House fell into a train of story-telling. Lord George Bentinck began it with a tale of how Nadir Shah was accustomed to hang corn-dealers who "speculated for the rise;" urging the Premier to do likewise, or as nearly like it as the difference between English and Persian policy permits. The apologue and his application of it will hardly add to Lord George's popularity in Liverpool and Mark-lane; and, as if with the same feeling, Mr. Brown, the member for the great corn port—in his maiden speech, by-the-by—reproved the noble Lord, and met his tale by another—nay, by two, we believe; and Mr. Roebuck pursued "the humour" with two, or the parts of two more, from the "Arabian Nights." We do not remember a more pleasant Parliamentary evening. If senators would make a practice of "telling stories," in the innocent sense of the term, like the people in the above Eastern book, whose adventures cross each other, and mix up at last in a mass, like all the Belgian railroads at Malines, it would be an improvement on the present practice. The East, we may remark, is particularly rich in examples of "a vigorous policy" and "comprehensive measures." Famines, too, abound in its history; and at the present moment it might be useful to consult it. For instance, there is an account extant (written by one Marco Polo) of the policy of the great Kublai Khan, the ruler of China, in cases of famine and public disaster. It shows how little difference there is in the foundations of human society, when we find the Tartar King doing many things nine centuries ago identical with the measures of the Prime Minister of England at this day. Thus—

He sends his messengers through all his kingdoms and provinces, to know if any of his subjects have had their crops injured through bad weather, or any other disaster; and, if such injury has happened, he does not exact from them any tribute for that season or year; nay, he gives them corn out of his own stores to subsist upon, and to sow their fields

If we substitute rent for tribute, and the landlords as the receivers instead of the Khan, the resemblance is complete, except that the dues are withheld, not remitted. The Government purchases of corn, and the proposal just made to give seed to those who have not got it, are expedients of venerable antiquity. Again—

When there is a great abundance of grain, he causes magazines to be formed, to contain wheat, rice, millet, or barley, and care to be taken that it be not lost or spoiled; then, when a scarcity occurs, this grain is drawn forth, and sold for a third or fourth of the current price. Thus there cannot be any severe famine, for he does it through all his dominions; he bestows also great charity on many poor families in Tartary; and, when he hears of individuals who have not food to eat, he causes grain to be given to them. Bread is not refused at the Court throughout the whole year, to any who come to beg for it; and on this account he is adored as a God by his people.

The Government has been urged over and over again to sell corn under "the current price;" but, less bold than Kublai, it has refused; for which reason Lord John Russell, if we may judge from the Irish papers, is not "adored as a God by the people." The popular worship, if there is any, is for Sir Robert Peel. Nay, among Kublai's countrymen were not wanting political economists who declaimed against alms and charity, giving nothing to anybody—on principle; the race yet exists, and also that variety of it, the sage in the misery of a nation doubting but a kind of "serve you right" retribution, and traces every great calamity to the people's "own fault." Marco thus describes them :—

It must be observed, that the Tartars, according to their original customs, when they had not yet adopted the religion of the idolaters, never bestowed alms; but, when applied to by any necessitous person, repelled him with reproachful expressions, saying, "Beggar with your complaints of a bad season, God has sent it to you, and, had he loved you, as he evidently loves me, you would have similarly prospered." But, since some of the wise men among the idolaters, especially the Baksi, have represented to his Majesty that to provide for the poor is a good work, and highly grateful to their deities, he has bestowed charity in the manner now described, so that, at his Court, none are denied food who come to ask for it.

The Tartar mode of dismissing applicants for relief, before they had been converted by "the wise men among the idolators," is a short and easy one, that has often prevailed. Pope describes them to the letter -

> "God cannot love," says Blunt, with tearless eyes,
> "The wretch he starves" and piously denies

So similar are the subterfuges of human selfishness in all countries and all times! And so little change, it may be added, has the lapse of nearly a thousand years wrought in the policies and plans by which mankind are governed; and many who read the sketch of the "famine" measures of the barbarous Tartar King will think that, perhaps, the balance of wisdom, courage, and the fitting of means to ends, is more in favour of Kublai Khan than the British Parliament.

THE IRISH POOR-LAW.

THE Old Irish Poor-Law, now about to be extended, was little more than a mockery of a measure of relief; it was calculated for one in a hundred of the poorest population on the face of the earth, and that one per cent must be enclosed within the walls of a workhouse before the relief could be given. In the present crisis, the system has altogether broken down; the work-houses are full, indeed; but there are no means of legally relieving the numbers who cannot find place in them. The Act is, therefore, extended by Lord John Russell's measure, of which we subjoin an abstract; it is provided:

1. That the guardians of every union in Ireland shall provide for the relief of such destitute persons who are permanently disabled from labour by reason of old age, infirmity, or bodily or mental defect," the relief to be given either in or out of the workhouse, as the guardians shall think fit.

2. If, from want of room in the workhouse, or "for other sufficient cause," adequate relief cannot be afforded to other destitute persons (viz. able-bodied), the Poor-Law Commissioners may require the guardians, by order, to give outdoor relief, either for a definite time or indefinitely, and may suspend or revoke the order

3. Out-door relief to the able-bodied shall be given in food only

4. The Commissioners shall determine the scale of supplying fuel, and the mode of granting relief. They shall direct the appointment of as many relieving officers and medical officers as they think fit.

5. The relieving officers may give provisional relief in cases of necessity, and all relief given out of the workhouse shall be "charged upon the poor-rates of the whole union."

THE WEATHER.

TUESDAY, Jan. 21, was a very dull day; snow was falling during the greater part of it, till the evening, when sleet began to fall, and afterwards rain; its average temperature was 33½ deg. Friday was an extremely dull day, it being foggy, and heavy and dismal. The average temperature was 34½ degrees. Saturday was dull and cloudy, till afternoon, when the clouds became broken, and the reading of the thermometer rose to 44 deg., a point higher than it had been since Dec. 31st; its average temperature was 38 degrees. Sunday was a dull, cloudy day, with rain falling; the reading of the thermometer rose to 48 deg., being a point higher than it had been, with one exception only—viz., Dec. 21, since 1845, Nov. 27th. The average temperature of Sunday was 43 deg. Monday was a very fine day; its average temperature was 43 deg. Tuesday was a fine day: a calm of wind from the S. W. at 1 P.M. The average temperature of Tuesday was 43 deg. Wednesday was a dull day, the sky being cloudy at 6 A.M. About five A.M., the wind blew a gale from the S.W. The average temperature of Wednesday was 42 deg. The average temperature of the week has been 39½ deg., being nearly 9 deg. warmer than that of the preceding week.

The following are the extreme thermometrical readings taken each day:

Thursday, Jan. 21, the highest reading was	35 deg.	the lowest was	32 deg.
Friday, Jan. 22	36	.....	33
Saturday, Jan. 23	44	.....	32
Sunday, Jan. 24	48	.....	3
Monday, Jan. 25	47½	.....	36½
Tuesday, Jan. 26	46	.....
Wednesday, Jan. 27	49	.....	35

Blackheath, Thursday, Jan. 28, 1847. J. G.

COURT AND HAUT TON.

WINDSOR, THURSDAY EVENING.—(FROM OUR OWN Correspondent.)—Her Majesty and Prince Albert took their usual early walk this morning, in the private grounds in the Home Park. The Princes of Wales and the Princess Royal took equestrian exercise, upon their Shetland ponies. The Prince Alfred and Princess Alice were taken an airing at the same time. The Dowager Lady Lyttelton was in attendance upon the Royal Family. His Royal Highness Prince Albert, accompanied by Count Alexander Mensdorff, and attended by Lord Alfred Paget, the Hon. Captain Boyle, Major-General Wemyss, and Mr. G. E. Anson, hunted this morning in the neighbourhood of Ritchings and Colnbrook, with his pack of harriers. He had two excellent runs before returning to the Castle, to luncheon at Her Majesty, shortly before two o'clock. The Royal dinner-party, at the Castle, this evening, included her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, Count Alexander Mensdorff, the Baroness de Spaen, &c. Covers were laid for twenty.

COURT ARRANGEMENTS.—According to present arrangements, the Queen and her Royal Consort will leave Windsor Castle, and proceed to Buckingham Palace, on Wednesday, the 10th of next month (the anniversary of their marriage), preparatory to her Majesty's first Levee of the season, announced to take place on Friday, the 12th proximo. Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent will proceed to London at the same time; and it is conjectured, from the arrangements which have been made in the domestic establishment at Frogmore, that the Royal Duchess contemplates remaining a considerable time in the metropolis.

FETE AT WYNYARD PARK.—The Marchioness of Londonderry gave a splendid fete at Wynyard Park, near Stockton-on-Tees, on Monday, to a numerous assemblage of the nobility and gentry of Durham and Northumberland

CABINET DINNER.—Viscount Morpeth gave a dinner to the Cabinet Ministers on Wednesday evening, at his residence in Grosvenor-place

LORD AND LADY BROUGHAM'S BANQUET. Lord and Lady Brougham gave a grand banquet on Wednesday evening, at the noble Lord's mansion in Grafton-street. The guests included his Grace the Duke of Wellington, the Earl of Ellenborough, the Earl of Ripon, the Earl of Devon, the Earl of Shaftesbury, the Countess of Jersey, and Lady Cecil Caroline Villiers, Lord Lyndhurst, Lord Cowley, Lady Malet, Lady William Fowlet, and Viscount Strangford.

PROTECTIONIST BANQUET AT THE CARLTON CLUB.—Last Saturday, after the adjournment of the House, a numerous and distinguished party of noblemen and gentlemen, friendly supporters of protectionist principles, dined together at the Carlton Club. Lord Stanley presided. About sixty were present

VISCOUNT CASTLEREAGH.—Viscount Castlereagh has taken one of the spacious mansions in Chesham place, adjoining the one occupied by Lord John Russell.

ARISTOCRATIC MARRIAGE. On Tuesday the Rev. Frederick Neville, son of the Dean of Windsor, was married at St. George's Chapel, Windsor Castle, to Miss Fanny Grace Blackwood, daughter of Mr. Blackwood, late of the Ordnance Office. A great many fashionables were present. The last marriage at St. George's, and the only one since 1753, was that of Lord Falconbarg with Miss Cheshyre, his Lordship's third wife, which lady he courted when a boy at Eton College.

SUPPLIES OF CORN.—There were at Galatz, on the 4th of January, 300 cargoes of corn ready for shipment, chiefly to England, and 100 more were expected from the interior by the time the navigation should be re-opened.

POSTSCRIPT.

RETURN OF THE COURT TO TOWN FOR THE SEASON.

(From our own Correspondent.)

WINDSOR, Friday Evening.

Her Majesty will celebrate the seventh anniversary of her union with His Royal Highness Prince Albert, at Buckingham Palace, on the 10th of next month. The Court, according to present arrangements, will take its departure from Windsor Castle, for town, either on Saturday, the 6th, or Tuesday, the 9th proximo—the latter day being considered the most probable

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent will leave Frogmore at the same time, for Clarence House, St. James's, for the season.

Her Majesty and the Prince Consort, accompanied by the Royal Family, will proceed to Osborne House at the end of next month. The Court is not expected to remain at the Isle of Wight beyond ten days or a fortnight.

HOUSE OF LORDS—FRIDAY

Nothing of importance took place. A brief conversation arose upon the subject of Ireland.

THE SPANISH MARRIAGES.—The Earl of ABERDEEN wished to know whether any answer had been received from the French Government to the last dispatch of the Secretary of State, addressed to the Marquis of Normanby; and, if so, what then it would be laid on the table. He thought it very desirable that the correspondence should come to a close, because its further continuance might be productive of serious evil. The Marquis of LANSDOWNE said, an answer had been received to the dispatch; but it was not shown to his noble friend (Palmerston) until yesterday. His noble friend was now in possession of a copy, and her Majesty's Government would then consider the propriety of laying it before the House. Her Majesty's Government had not the slightest intention to suppress or withdraw any particle of evidence relating to these transactions.

The House adjourned at an early hour.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FRIDAY.

A great many bills were read a second time, and ordered to be committed.

IRELAND.—Mr. S. O'BRIEN asked what course would be adopted by the Government, on Monday, with respect to the bill relating to Ireland? Lord J. RUSSELL said he was not aware what hon. members intended to propose in relation to these measures, but the Government intended to proceed first with the bill of indemnity to the Government of Ireland, and then with the other measures relating to the distress in that country, in the regular order.

DISTILLING FROM SUGAR BILL.—On the order of the day being moved for the second reading of the Distilling from Sugar Bill, Mr. F. MACKENZIE said, he trusted as the bill was only printed this afternoon, and consequently had been in the hands of members but a few minutes, that the Government would consent to postpone it for a few days.—After a few words from Mr. HUME and other members, it was agreed that it should be read a second time without discussion. Any objection which could be urged against the measure might be done in committee.—The bill was then read a second time, and ordered to be committed.

The Buck Wheat Importation Bill was reported, and ordered to be read a third time

The second reading of the Customs' Duties Bill was postponed until Monday.

The House adjourned at a few minutes before six o'clock until Monday.

THE NEW MINISTER TO PORTUGAL.—Sir George Hamilton Seymour, the newly-appointed Minister from the British to the Portuguese Court, will proceed with his family and suite to Lisbon in her Majesty's steam-sloop Medea. The vessel is ordered to be fitted for the reception of his Excellency on her return to Woolwich from Frashwater, Isle of Wight.

LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

FRANCE.

The Journal des Débats of Wednesday states, that in order to supply the deficiency of the last harvest, it would be necessary to import as much wheat during the present year as had been already imported up to the 31st of December last.

The documents relative to the Spanish marriages, published in London, produced a most unfavourable impression in Paris as to the stability of M. Guizot's Ministry, and caused a considerable fall in the price of securities of every description on the Bourse on Wednesday.

Accounts of a disastrous nature have been received in Paris from Algiers. The French have had 130 men killed and wounded in a battle with the Ouled Djellal tribe of Arabs. The Moniteur Algerien contains the details of the affair, the principal of which are as follows:—"General Herbillon quitted Berrua on the 4th, and was met, at El-Outaya, by the Commander de St. Germain. They proceeded together to the oasis of the Sahara, where the recent approach of Bou Maza had seemed to have shaken the fidelity of the Ouled Djellal, and the Ouled Sidi Cheik. At the head of a detachment of 300 men, and 100 mounted men, amongst the former is comprised, unfortunately, M. Le Chef de Bataillon, Bi lon, of the 31st Foot, an officer of merit, young, and full of activity, and his loss deserves to be regretted. Bou Maza took no part in this affair. He had removed with his small camp to a distance of about two day's journey to the southward."

UNITED STATES.

Since the arrival of the Zenobia, we noticed in page 66, the Patrick Henry has reached Liverpool, but the papers are only two days later, and they do not contain any additional news, either from the United States or Mexic

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES, &c.

CAMBRIDGE. JAN. 27.

CAIUS COLLEGE.—The following appointments have just taken place:—The Rev. John James Smith, M.A., to be tutor; and the following, assistant-tutors.—Charles Gupps Prowett, B.A. (classics); Rev. John Rustat Crowfoot, M.A. (theology and philosophy); Rev. Joseph Jackson Cruise, M.A.; and Rev. William Bonham Donkin, M.A. (mathematics). The Rev. Alexander Thurtell M.A., of this College, has been appointed one of her Majesty's Inspectors of Schools.

ST JOHN'S COLLEGE.—The Rev. Richard Heighway Kirby, M.A., has been appointed Mathematical Master of the Royal School of St. Peter, in connexion with the Cathedral Church of York.

THE FOUNDLING HOSPITAL.—The Rev. Dr. Croly has been elected to the office of afternoon preacher at the Foundling Hospital.

ST. PAUL'S.—A Prebendal Stall in St. Paul's Cathedral has become vacant by the death of the Rev. A. R. Chenvel, M.A. It is in the gift of the Bishop of London. Mr Chenvel was Rector of Stanmore, and Vicar of Chigwell, Essex, both which benefices become vacant by his death.

IRELAND.

STARVATION AND FAMINE

The Cork Examiner gives a lamentable account of the state of Bantry. On the 18th instant, Coroner's inquests were held on the bodies of ten persons—six men and four women all of whose deaths were, according to the verdicts, from starvation, accelerated by disease or cold. That paper adds:—"Famine and pestilence are sweeping away hundreds, but they have now terrors for the poor people. Their only regret seems to be that they are not relieved from their suffering and misery by some process more speedy and less painful. Since the inquests were held, there have been not less than twenty-four deaths from starvation; and, if we can judge from appearances, before the termination of another week, the number will be incredible. As to holding any more inquests, it is mere nonsense. The number of deaths is beyond counting. Nineteen out of every twenty deaths that have occurred in this parish for the last [illegible] proceeded to the Central Relief Committee, exceeded in number and in painful details the arrivals of any day since this body was formed. Food, food, food, is the cry from every county in Ireland, with the exception, perhaps, Kerry, Donegal, Monaghan, Armagh, Tyrone, and even Down, the accounts are nearly as gloomy as from the poorest of the Munster and Connaught counties.

THE REPEAL ASSOCIATION.—Mr. O'Connell made another farewell address at the Association on Monday. He said he should be in the House in ample time for the discussion on Irish affairs. He would cry out, "Food food for the people of Ireland, or they perish." (Hear, hear.) Much had been said of the landlords. He would take care to have their conduct brought under the notice of the Legislature, and any relief sent to Ireland should be given to the people alone. His (Mr. O'Connel's) next topic related to the doings of the new Irish confederation. Mr. Meagher had published a letter in which he bldly avowed his designs was to effect a separation between England and Ireland. He read a passage from it, and pronounced it high treason. If such a letter had been written by any of the traversers in the late State trial, and read against them, they would all have been found guilty of high treason, and probably hanged. (Oh, oh.) Perhaps the Government would have been satisfied with hanging him (Mr. O'Connell). Mr. Morgan John O'Connell, M.P., and Mr. Thomas Steele, next delivered their quarters. Mr. O'Connell rose again and said—"I am sorry to say the Repeal rent for the week is only £15 16s. 9d. (moans and groans); a subject, however, of congratulation to many who call themselves Repealers."

THE DUBLIN CORN MARKET.—The Dublin corn market, on Tuesday, showed a further tendency downwards, and prices of all kinds of grain receded. Wheat sold cheaper, and was in general out of demand. Oats, oat meal, and seeds dull, and better supplies. The factors appear to have made up their minds for a still greater reaction. The 4th load (best quality) remained at 10½d.

REACTION IN THE CORN MARKETS.—We are glad to find that a reaction seems to have set in against the speculators; the Royal Speech, and the tone of the leading addresses in both Houses of Parliament, having had the beneficial effect of checking the upward tendency of prices of all kinds of grain. At the market of Athlone, last Saturday, there was a perfect panic among the farmers, wheat having fallen no less than 8s., and oats 2s. per barrel, under last week's quotations. Even at this reduction, owing to the abundant supplies, and the vast quantities offered for sale, it was rather difficult to obtain purchasers. A fall, though not on so extensive a scale, took place at the Limerick market on the same day. In Belfast, the previous activity of the grain markets yielded to a general dampness, and prices receded. The Wentworth Independent tells a much more flattering tale—that the markets there were largely supplied with every kind of grain, inasmuch that, from the "vast quantity offered for sale, it was rather difficult to find purchasers."

ANOTHER MURDER.—A few days ago, as Mr. Wayland, pay-clerk of the Board of Works, was proceeding on a car, accompanied by two policemen, towards Turoen, near Dundrum, they were attacked by six armed men with their faces blackened. They surrounded the car and shot dead one of the policemen, who sat beside Mr. Wayland. They then rushed at the car to get the money Mr. W. had to pay the men at work on the roads, when a fight ensued, and, after a desperate struggle, the fellows relinquished their design, and fled southward.

RE-APPEARANCE OF THE POTATO DISEASE.—The Cork Reporter of Saturday says:—"A gentleman residing in the neighbourhood of Kinsale, planted, in a field, about two years since, a quantity of sound potatoes, of the Lumper kind, and, on examining the produce yesterday, which, by the forced growth, had far advanced to maturity, he found them black and diseased."

ACCIDENTS AND OFFENCES.

SINGULAR AND FATAL ACCIDENT ON THE GREAT WESTERN RAILWAY.

A strange and fatal accident occurred on the Great Western Railway on Monday. The express train from Exeter to London, due at Paddington at half-past four o'clock, was proceeding past Southall at its usual speed, and had progressed about fifty yards beyond that station, when "the tire," or band of iron and wood which surrounds the ring of the right driving wheel, and which is about an inch and a half in thickness, twenty-three feet in circumference, and five inches in breadth, suddenly gave way, and, breaking into pieces, was hurled with inconceivable velocity in different directions. It so happened, that at the very moment this occurred on the up-line of rails, the four o'clock down train was approaching within 100 or 150 yards of the Southall station at a somewhat rapid speed about eight miles an hour, preparatory to stopping there. An immense fragment of the broken tire from the right hand driving wheel of the express engine, at least seven feet in length, and weighing about 240lbs., must have been hurled into the air for a distance of fifty or sixty yards, descended upon the second-class carriage of the approaching train next to the engine and tender. The violence of its fall was greatly increased by the speed at which the four coaches of the train were at the moment proceeding. It cut through the top of the carriage on which it fell with the precision of a knife, bisecting it by the longitudinal direction which [illegible] and smashing in its course the first three compartments of the carriage. The fourmost of these compartments is that in which the conductor's box is situated; but fortunately he was not there. In the second compartment there were about six passengers, all of whom escaped without any serious injury, save a little stunning from the tremendous concussion, when the fragment of iron fell through the roof of the carriage. Tearing its way through the roof of the carriage, the momentum adding to its destructiveness, it fell upon two men, named Henry Bishop and Henry Hall, and instantly killed them. The head was literally completely open, from the temple downwards, and his brains scattered about the carriage. Bishop's injuries appear to have been received at the back of his head, which has been completely smashed in.

The two dead men were acquaintances, and they were both cattle-dealers, Bishop residing at Cowley, and Hall at Colnbrook. Not the least singular part of this awfully event is, that the deceased men were returning from an ale-house at the very spot where they had the same day before the Assistant-Judge at the Middlesex Sessions, and in which Hall was acquitted from a charge of cruelty to animals, brought against him for carrying two calves from Croydon to Smithfield-market with their heads hanging from the tailboard of the cart. Bishop was about twenty years of age, and unmarried, but Hall, who was about thirty eight, has left a widow They were seated opposite to each other, and about the centre of the carriage, when the accident happened. A brother of Hall's, who sat by his side, was slightly injured by the fall of the piece of iron, and a Mrs. Ibbotson, wife of a paper-maker, of Bogle-end, near Colnbrook, was also much shaken and hurt. Several other passengers in the down-train were suffered by the accident, but their injuries were slight. Nearly at the same moment at which the disastrous occurrence above narrated took place, the engine of the down train ran against another fragment of the broken tire, from the driving wheel of the express engine, and was thrown off the rails. Its progress was delayed some time in consequence.

While these misfortunes were befalling the down-train, the express train, after a slight detention at Hanwell, to ascertain the amount of injury which it had sustained by the accident, proceeded on its way to town. It was then discovered that Mrs. Mountjoy Martin, who happened to be one of the passengers, had suffered a severe contusion from a piece of the broken tire, which, entering the side of her carriage, struck her violently on the hip, and threw her from her seat with great force. Dr. Locock was instantly sent for, and, under his direction, Mrs. Martin was removed to her own residence, and we are glad to hear that her injuries, though very severe, are not considered dangerous.

The engine which drove the express train, and the broken tire of which caused this most singular accident, is called the Queen. It was built in February, 1846, and was considered one of the best locomotives in the possession of the Company.

An inquest was commenced on Wednesday afternoon at the Red Lion, Southall, before Mr. Wakley. The bodies of Bishop and Halt were identified. The evidence chiefly related to the construction of the "tire," and no facts of importance, in addition to the above narrative were elicited. The inquest was adjourned till Monday.

SUICIDE OF THE HON. H. E. ADDINGTON.—On Wednesday week the Hon. Henry Estcourt Addington, son of Lord Sidmouth, committed suicide at his father's residence at Albury, near Guildford. It appears that the unfortunate young man (whose age is only twenty-four years) had, for some time past, been labouring under mental aberration, his malady being occasioned by the last result of a fever caught in the island of Corfu, while on military service. On the 9th instant, by the recommendation of his medical attendants, he was placed under the surveillance of a keeper, who was in the house at the time the melancholy event occurred. The Coroner for West Surrey (J. C. Woods, Esq.), has held an inquest on the body, at the Drummond Arms, Albury from the evidence of George Collins, the keeper referred to, it appeared that the deceased, in question, while shaving the deceased, he urgently solicited him to let him take the razor and shave himself, which of course was refused. Some time afterwards deceased proceeded to his bed-room, his keeper watching him, but not following him. Entering, however, shortly afterwards, he was deceased suspended to the bedstead by a black silk neckerchief. Notwithstanding prompt assistance, deceased never rallied. The Jury returned a verdict of "Insanity."

THE LATE POISONING CASES IN ESSEX.—On Saturday, the prosecution of Mr Thomas Newport, a respectable farmer at Clavering, at the direction of Sir G. Grey, the Secretary of State, charged with being accessory to the recent poisoning of children in that and the adjoining village of Maunden, was proceeded with at the gaol of Clavering, before the Right Hon. Lord Braybrooke and Mr. Bree Neeale, magistrates for the Saffron Walden district of the county. The result of the evidence was the determination of the magistrates to commit the prisoner for trial

ANOTHER SERIOUS FIRE IN LIVERPOOL.—Early on Wednesday morning a dreadful fire broke out in the spacious premises belonging to Mr. Challener, on the east side of Mason-street, Liverpool, which destroyed buildings and other property to a very considerable amount. It seems to have originated in a wooden shed used by Mr Challener as a place of temporary deposit for flour; but, as in most cases of the kind, the cause of its origin is involved in impenetrable mystery. From the wooden shed the flames were carried over to a range of brick stables, which was burned down. The fire next communicated with Mr. Challener's large warehouse, which was used partly as a flour store, and partly as a block manufactory. This has been entirely destroyed, but the property consumed in this building was to a very great amount. Three of the rooms were fully stored with flour, and the other rooms contained a large stock of blocks and steam machinery, the sale of which have been entirely wholly destroyed or rendered utterly useless. The fire next communicated with a fine warehouse belonging to Mr. Thomas Booth, the corn-merchant; and this warehouse also, together with the wine of its contents, has likewise been destroyed. A second warehouse belonging to Mr. Booth, and a large warehouse, belonging to Messrs. Lodge and Pritchard, on the east side of Hurst-street, both took fire; but, owing to the exertions of the firemen, they were only partially damaged. A small dwelling-house, adjoining Mr. Challener's warehouse, was also on fire for a short time, and its preservation is entirely owing to the efforts of the firemen. No correct estimate can as yet be formed of the value of the property destroyed, but doubtless it will amount to several thousand pounds.

CHARGE OF FRAUD AGAINST A CORN DEALER AT BIRMINGHAM.—A corn dealer, named Downing, extensively engaged in the business at Birmingham, and respectably connected, is now in custody in that town on a charge of obtaining between £3,000 and £4,000 on false pretences. Gomm was chiefly employed by millers as a commission-agent for the purchase of grain chiefly at the Stratford-upon-Avon, Worcester, and other markets in the Midland counties, and from the information which has at present transpired, it appears that he purchased grain on several occasions in the name of well-known houses, and that he sold the lots so purchased to other parties not mentioned to the original sellers; the monies received on this account he appropriated to his own purposes. The prisoner was to have undergone an examination before the magistrates at Birmingham on Tuesday, but on the application of his attorney a remand was granted. Proceedings have been instituted with the view to declaring Gomm a bankrupt; obtelias have been issued, and presented against him in the way of carrying out the proceedings; in the meantime parties in a position to do so have sold up his effects, so that in all probability but little will be left for the remaining creditors.

EXTENSIVE EMBEZZLEMENT AT MANCHESTER.—On Wednesday, at the Borough Court, Manchester, a cotton broker, named Thomas Smith, who was also intrusted (as servant to Mr. Alexander Henderson) with the management of an extensive commission agency to Messrs. Strutt, of Derby, was brought up on a charge of embezzlement. The prisoner absconded about two months ago, and it was then found that an examination of his accounts would disclose the amount of more than £10,000. He was apprehended on Monday, in Manchester, having come to the Bankruptcy Court, to surrender as a bankrupt, and get the protection of the Court. The examination was adjourned, but not disclose the extent of his embezzlements. It was proved that he had received a cheque from Messrs. Simon and Co., merchants, on the 29th of May last, for £320 14s., in payment of an account to Messrs. Strutt and Co.; and another cheque, for £18 8s. from Messrs. Potter Stell, and Co., merchants, on the 26th of June, on account of the same firm. The first of these cheques was upon the bank of Messrs. Jones Loyd, and Co., and the other upon the Union Bank of Manchester, and both were proved to have been cashed about the time of payment, but neither of the sums had been accounted for. The prisoner was remanded till next Wednesday, in order that other cases might be taken against him.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

ELECTION OF ALDERMEN AND COMMON COUNCILMEN.—A Court of Aldermen was held on Tuesday, to take into special consideration a proposal of Mr. Alderman Humphery, the object of which was to extend the franchise in the election of Aldermen and Common Councilmen. Mr. Alderman Humphery submitted a notice to that effect, which was met by an amendment from Mr. Hughes Hughes "that a Committee of the whole Court be appointed to consider the expediency of directing the Remembrancer to bring a bill into Parliament for the purpose stated by Alderman Humphery." The amendment was negatived, and, ultimately, Alderman Humphery's motion with additions suggested by Alderman Thompson—that the bill be prepared by the Remembrancer, under the direction of seven Aldermen, was adopted

REDUCTION OF BEER, SPIRITS, AND BREAD.—On Monday morning a great number of the licensed victuallers in London displayed the following bill in their windows "Beer and spirits at the original prices; thanks to Lord John Russell." They are now charging 3d. and 4½d. per pot over the counter, and 4d. and 4½d. in the house. Most of the bakers at the west-end of the metropolis made a reduction of a halfpenny and a penny in the price of the four-pound loaf.

WEARY OF ARRINGDON WITHOUT.—On Monday, a special wardmote was held at the Old Bailey, for the purpose of electing Common Councilmen for the ward of Farringdon Without, the previous election having been declared void. The result of the proceedings, however, was that all the parties who had been at first returned were again elected, without opposition.

REPRESENTATION OF WESTMINSTER.—C. Lushington, Esq., has issued a circular to the electors of Westminster, announcing himself as a candidate at the next election. Mr. Leader does not intend again to offer himself

MORTALITY IN THE METROPOLIS.—The total number of deaths registered in the metropolitan districts during the week ending Saturday, Jan. 23, was 1225—an amount, we regret to say, considerably above the usual winter average, at which the deaths stand as 1068. This unusual mortality appears chiefly attributable to the prevalence of affections of the lungs and respiratory organs During the same period of time 1334 births were registered in the metropolitan districts, being an excess over the mortality of 109

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

DEATH OF REAR ADMIRAL EDWARD ELIOTT.—The above gallant flag officer expired on Sunday, at Alcombe, near Minehead, Somerset, in the seventy-ninth year of his age

DEATH OF LIEUT. COL. FREKE We recret to state that Lieut.-Col. the Hon. Percy Evans Freke (Grenadier Guards), next brother to Lord Carbery, died, at Rome, on the 15th instant

DEATH OF AN ARMY OFFICER.—Admiral D'Arcy Preston, Deputy-Lieutenant of the North and West Ridings of Yorkshire, died on the 21st instant, at Askham Bryan, in the North Riding of the above county, at the advanced age of eighty-two years.

DEATH OF COMMANDER HAMOND.—Commander Graham Eden William Hamond, the Medea steam sloop, at Woolwich, second son of Vice Admiral Sir Graham Eden Hamond, Bart, died a few days ago. He was only thirty-three years of age. Commander Thomas Henry Mason has been appointed to succeed the late Commander Hamond in the command of the Medea.

WRECK OF THE "SIRIUS" STEAMER.

Then rose from sea to sky the wild farewell. BYRON

The brave barque comes on its foaming path,
It flies on the wings of steam;
Slight careth the crew for Ocean's wrath.
Or Winter's lurid gleam.
For the bold Sirius was the first
To cross the Atlantic wide;
When from both hemispheres outburst
A shout of joy and pride.

Now, on its native billow driven
The Sirius proud and high,
Trusted to sea and sky—
Mere trusted to the Captain's skill
And bravery of the crew,
Which never failed, beneath God's will,
To dare the Ocean blue.

Cheerly from Dublin's syren bay
The Sirius wing'd her flight,
Coasting the civic bow'rs of Bray
And Wicklow's harbour-height.
Now Waxford's hills—now Waxford's,
Loom o'er the raging sea,
And hopes are bright that the barque
Ere night
Shall enter the limpid Lea.

A shock—a shout—a fearful shriek
Rise over the mocking blast:
The ship has struck! . . . The breakers wreak
Their wrath on the deck, keel, mast.
She is sinking fast! . . . . The boats are out;
But scarcely they ply the oar,
When down they go—disappear like snow.
Or are dash'd on the savage shore.

And — Infamy's blight be on the name!
"The Wreckers!" now ply their trade!
Deaf to Religion's, to Mercy's claim,
They rob when they should succour aid.
Less merciful than wild Ocean's rage,
They plunder whom he has spared:
Infant and mother, youth and age,
The same vile treatment shared.

But, alas! the gallant barque is gone!
It's final "trip" is o'er:
Both north and south dire wrecks lie on
Hibernia's sea-rocks hoar
Great Britain and lost Sirius rolls
The one dark wave o'er your decks,
While dismally the tempest tolls
The knell of the noble wrecks. L.

In our Journal of last week, we detailed this lamentable loss of life and property; and, in addition to the brief artic, Mr. James Mahony, who was aboard the ill-fated steamer, has since enabled us to present to our readers the annexed interesting sketches; to which we append some additional particulars.

It appears that, by Monday morning's flood, the vessel was literally smashed fragments, and not a vestige of her framework, hull, [illegible] of spars, remained together. The only object discernable on the rock was a mast to a piece of the bulwarks, about the height of a man, which had apparently resisted the battering of the waves. There was, however, melancholy evidence to point out the unfortunate locality of the wreck, in the vast quantity of broken timber, floating about in the bay, almost the entire shore under a range of high cliffs, a little to the westward of the village of Ballycotton.

On approaching the spot, the scene was one in which the picturesque was in the small degree associated with the romantic and the wild grandeur of the scenery came into sad contrast with the shattered fragments of a once noble ship. Groups of peasants, principally females, were engaged in removing everything which the adventurous fishermen could reach collect on the rock where the vessel was wrecked, and carrying them up the hills, where each had a little depôt or heap in charge of some one. It is right, however, to state that what they principally had to pick-up, were pieces of timber, and the contents of some bales of cotton goods which were dashed on the rocks, and did not appear of much value. The efforts which the men near the wreck made to collect everything they could were most desperate. They each had a long pole, with a crooked piece, somethy resembling a pitchfork, and, armed with this, they ventured on the extreme point of the reef, where the surf was beating heavily. By such means, when they could get at them, they got to them on the subsidence of the surf, it was then carried up by the women, who scrambled along precipices that would appear almost inaccessible Several boats were also laying to about the remnant of the [illegible]ship, and they picked up some casks, though at a risk that few would like to encounter

"On a promontory adjoining, which commanded a fine view of the place (says Our Southern Special Reporter), we found Mr. James Mahony, the [illegible] the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, busily engaged in making sketches; and, having been favoured with a view of them, I can testify to their extraordinary fidelity.

Along the side of the cliff there were large parties of ladies, &c., who came in cars from Cloyne, Midleton, Aghada, and all parts of the surrounding neighbourhood to see the wreck.

The report then states the published outline of the catastrophe to be, in the main, correct; and adds—"The ship made a fair passage from Dublin, with about twenty cabin and fifty deck passengers. I believe there never was known on this coast so disastrous a shipwreck in such calm weather. A dense fog certainly prevailed; and, presuming the reckoning to have been regularly kept, the Tuscar, Coneybeg, and Hook Lights discerned up to one o'clock in the morning, the latter of which the vessel had run ascertained, it must have been known that they were then somewhere off that iron-bound coast, to approach which was certain destruction. I have heard surprise expressed that the captain, or chief, is was then carried up by the women, who scrambled along precipices that would appear almost inaccessible Several boats were also laying to about the remnant of the [illegible]ship, and they picked up some casks, though at a risk that few would like to encounter

"On a promontory adjoining, which commanded a fine view of the place (says Our Southern Special Reporter), we found Mr. James Mahony, the [illegible] the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, busily engaged in making sketches; and, having been favoured with a view of them, I can testify to their extraordinary fidelity.

Along the side of the cliff there were large parties of ladies, &c., who came in cars from Cloyne, Midleton, Aghada, and all parts of the surrounding neighbourhood to see the wreck.

The report then states the published outline of the catastrophe to be, in the main, correct; and adds—"The ship made a fair passage from Dublin, with about twenty cabin and fifty deck passengers. I believe there never was known on this coast so disastrous a shipwreck in such calm weather. A dense fog certainly prevailed; and, presuming the reckoning to have been regularly kept, the Tuscar, Coneybeg, and Hook Lights discerned up to one o'clock in the morning, the latter of which the vessel had run ascertained, it must have been known that they were then somewhere off that iron-bound coast, to approach which was certain destruction. I have heard surprise expressed that the captain, or chief, is [illegible] ering was not kept; but, at all events, with no stress of weather, and merely the impediment of a fog—a most serious one, no doubt—it is melancholy to think that such a vast sacrifice of human life and property has taken place, and that a noble vessel should be found dashed to pieces in a place where she had no business, in her ordinary course, approaching to."

On Sunday, the magistrates assembled, viz.—Mr. Knaresboro, R.M.; Mr. John, of Youghal; Mr. Penrose Fitzgerald, Mr. Hickson, and Mr. Hanning, held an [illegible]stigation at the Coast Guard buildings. The witnesses examined by the Magistrates were Eugene Donegan, Samuel Regan, William Hickey, and Captain Archer Cameron, all passengers on board. From their depositions we collect these circumstances of the wreck. About four o'clock in the morning, the vessel struck on a rock, it is believed, at Ballycotton Bay, on the coast of Cork, and afterwards struck and became a wreck; but on this point there are conflicting statements, several persons asserting confidently that it was on the same rock she at first struck that she subsequently went to pieces. Mr. Barnes, mate, gave the same account, and added that the engines were reversed, but it would appear she was not put sufficiently back, and, in about fifteen minutes, she again tailed on the rocks—the pumps were then set to work, but by this time the water had rushed in so rapidly as to put out the fires in the engine-room; and no hope remained for the affrighted passengers, but the chance of getting on shore. To this the energies of all were instantly directed. When one boat was ready to be lowered, a rush of deck passengers rushed into her, among whom were a sergeant and privates of the 67th Regiment, a corporal of the 1st Royals, five policemen, three sailors, returning after having been wrecked in a former ship, a boy of the line, the wife and child of Donegan (a coach-maker, native of Cork), and two or three other passengers, not known. Some awkwardness occurred in launching the first boat; but, however that may be, she was hardly clear of the ship's side when she went down, with all on board. A woman and child were also washed overboard by a sea.

The scene at this moment can hardly be described. Some were rushing into the cabin, and endeavouring to save their luggage; others knelt on deck, praying aloud; and more, in the agony of despair, were preparing to throw themselves into the sea. At this critical moment Captain Archy Cameron got into one of the ship's boats, with a seaman, and, after a terrific struggle in the surf, and having sunk more than once, he, with the aid of Providence, succeeded in making fast a rope on the rocks. With this aid, and by means of the life-buoy, about twenty of the passengers were slung ashore: and, very soon after, the Coast Guard boat was at hand, under the command of Mr. Cochlan, the chief officer, and in her and the ship's boat, and a boat belonging to the ...arbour, all were safely landed.

Among the cabin passengers were the Rev. Mr. Maunsell, of Millown, Kerry; Captain Gaynor, Butterant; Mr. Collis, of Fitzgibbon and Co.'s; and Mr. Torpy, of Cannock and White's. These gentlemen, together with the Rev. Mr. Hewson, Protestant rector of the parish, lent their personal exertions for several hours, in a most noble manner, to save and assist the helpless passengers. About nine o'clock, they began to make their way across the cliff towards the village; and, as no conveyances were to be had, all had to walk into Cloyne, a distance of about five miles. Several poor creatures, however, remained, in the hope of recovering their clothes, they having neither money nor food. They were most generously looked after by the Rev. Mr. Hewson, and a subscription was raised for them, by which cars were hired, and they were sent into Cork in a very miserable plight.

The account then details the disgraceful plunder of the wreck; and relates the distressing loss of a corporal of the 19th Royal Irish, who fell down a cliff about 120 feet high; he could not be got up, for want of a lantern and ropes, and on the rising of the tide he was drowned.

It is stated that one of the passengers (a Limerick man), returning from the West Indies, lost £2000 in his portmanteau, and a lady £1500. There are several others who have lost property to a large amount. The country people were making away with everything they could lay hands on, until the arrival of W. Knaresborough, Esq., S.M., with military and police from Middleton, the coast guards not being sufficient to protect the wreck from the immense mob assembled.

"This wreck presents another lamentable example of the consequence of not compelling the owners of packets to provide their vessels with boats of a size and build to live in a heavy sea, and stow safely a large number of persons. As usual, the best boat of the Sirius was launched only to be swamped, and 15 or 20 lives were lost. As the boat was overcrowded by 15 or 20 passengers, we infer what the size must have been, and how unfit for the exigency. One of Captain G. Smith's paddle-box boats would have received 40 or 50 people without danger. The boats which packets ordinarily carry are worse than useless. It would be far better for the safety of passengers that they had none. In this instance of the Sirius the lives were lost through the boat. Had there been no bad boat to trust to, all would have been saved. Packets should either be provided with good boats, such as the paddle-box boat, with flat floor and wide beam, and ample stowage, or they should have none, to serve only as a false reliance and a snare. A thimble, for a reservoir of water, would be as good a safeguard against fire, as a common ship's boat is in a thronged packet against the dangers of shipwreck."—Examiner

THE "SIRIUS" STEAMER

THE "SIRIUS," AS LEFT BY THE TIDE.

CLEARING THE WRECK.

SCENE OF THE WRECK.

WINDSOR CASTLE.

PRIVATE STATE APARTMENTS.

THE GRAND CORRIDOR.

We resume our Illustrations with a View of the Grand Corridor, the position of which in Wyatville's plan has been generally noticed in No. 232 of our Journal.

It is described in the article in the Penny Cyclopædia as answering a two-fold purpose; since, besides being what its name imports, it serves also as an in-door promenade and lounge, and is richly stored with pictures and other works of art: but, still, it looks expressly intended for what it is—a Corridor so adorned—rather than a Gallery made use of as a Corridor. On the south, the Corridor communicates, through intermediate lobbies, with the private rooms appropriated to visitors, which form distinct suites of three or four rooms each, with private staircases. On the east side, from the Victoria Tower inclusive to midway between the Clarence and Chester Towers, are the Royal Private Apartments, to which succeed the Private State Rooms: one of these is

THE GREEN DRAWING-ROOM,

A highly-enriched apartment, very spacious, and principally lighted by a noble bay window. The ceiling is elaborately embellished with gold on a pink-white ground; the walls are hung with rich green satin, striped, and the couches and other furniture are of the same costly material, in gold framework. Around the room are ranged dwarf book-cases, heavily gilt; and upon the slabs are placed bronzes, of exquisite design. A splendid chandelier hangs just within the bay; upon the walls are a few choice portraits, and mirrors of stately dimensions. This is, altogether, a superbly-appointed room.

It may conduce to the convenience of our readers, if we add here the Regulations for viewing the (Public) State Apartments, as issued by authority, a few days since:—

The State Apartments in Windsor Castle continue to be open gratuitously to the public, on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Fridays. The Lord Chamberlain's tickets may be obtained in London gratis, of Messrs. Paul and Dominic Colnaghi, print-sellers, 14, Pall-mall East; Mr. Moon, print-seller, 20, Threadneedle-street; Mr. Mitchell, bookseller, 33, Old Bond-street; Messrs. Ackermann and Co., print-sellers, 96, Strand. They are available for one week from the day they are issued.

Residents and visitors at Windsor, who have not had an opportunity of obtaining them in London, may obtain the tickets on application (between one and three o'clock, from the 1st of April to the 31st of October, for admission between two and four o'clock; and between twelve and two o'clock, from the 1st of November to the 31st of March, for admission between one and three o'clock) to Mr. John Roberts, the inspector in the Lord Chamberlain's department, at his office in the Winchester Tower, Windsor Castle. But these tickets will be available for the day only on which they shall be applied for.

The hours of admission to the State apartments are from the 1st of April to the 31st of October, between eleven and four; and from the 1st of November to the 31st of March, between eleven and three.

The tickets are not transferable, and it is contrary to Her Majesty's command that payment for, or in reference to, them, be made to any person whatever.

Guide Books may be obtained in London for 1d. each, from the parties who issue the tickets for the State apartments, and for the same sum from the Queen's tradesmen in Windsor where these notices appear

THE GRAND CORRIDOR.

THE GREEN DRAWING-ROOM.

MUSIC.

CONCERTS OF THE WEEK.

On Monday night, Mr. Dando commenced, at Crosby Hall, his annual series of Quartet Concerts, which well merit the patronage bestowed on them by the City amateurs. He was aided by Mr. Gattie, as second violin; Mr. W. Thomas, as tenor; and Mr. Lucas, as Violoncello—Sterndale Bennett taking the pianoforte; Mr. Clinton the flute; and Miss Dolby being the vocalist.

On Tuesday night, at Exeter Hall, Haydn's "Creation" was performed for the second and last time this season, with Miss Birch, Mr Lockey, and Mr Phillips, as the leading vocalists. The next Concert will be on the 9th of February, when Handel's "Dettingen Te Deum" will be executed, with a selection. As the authorities no longer permit orchestral performances at St Paul's, at the Annual Festival for the Sons of the Clergy, the "Te Deums" can only be heard with effect from the Sacred Harmonic Society. Spohr has been engaged to conduct his works during the present season; but the coming of Mendelssohn to direct his "Elijah," according to a letter of his agent in London, is not yet certain.

On Tuesday evening, Mr. Wilson generously gave his "Songs of the Highlands," at the Princess' Concert Room, in aid of the distressed Highlanders. There was a good attendance; and Mr Wilson was much cheered and encored in several songs—Mr. Land officiating with ability as pianoforte accompanyist.

The Melodists' Club had their first meeting for the season at Freemasons' Hall, on Tuesday evening.

On Wednesday evening, Madame Dulcken commenced her agreeable Soirées Musicales at her own residence, in Harley-street. The accomplished pianiste performed a Gigue, by Handel, in I Sharp Minor, and a Piece pour le Clavecin, in A, of Scarlatti; Hummel's Posthumous Grand Concerto, with orchestral accompaniments; Beethoven's Sonata in F, for violin and piano (the gem of the selection—with M. Sainton), and in one of Mendelssohn's Pianoforte Quartetts. Madame Dulcken's just perception of the recondite beauties of the above composers, and her fine execution, secured for her the warmest plaudits from an intelligent auditory. The scheme opened with Onslow's Quintuor in A

Minor, Op. 34, for two violins (Willy and Goffric), tenor (Mr. Hill), violoncello (Mr. Lucas), and contra-bass (Mr. Howell)—admirably executed by these clever artists. Mr. Benedict was the Conductor; and Miss Rainforth and Mr Manvers the vocalists. The next concert will be on Wednesday week (Feb. 10.) The general arrangements of these soirées are of the highest order; and, given an an elegant drawing-room, all the agrémens of a private party are experienced, with the hearing of first rate works by the great masters

The fourth of the fifth series of Sacred Concerts, given at Crosby Hall, under the able direction of Miss Mounsey, took place on Wednesday. These Musical Entertainments are the "Ancient Concerts of the East," and as wise men are found in that quarter, they are always treated to the most judicious selected programmes with such a selection as the most fastidious taste must admire. The organ playing of Miss Mounsey, in a Fugue by Adams, and an Andante by Mozart was deservedly applauded. The scheme opened with Dr. Boyce's anthem, "I have surely built thee a house," a splendid specimen of Cathedral music. Miss Steel then sung "The Voyager's Invocation," No. 2 of a set of six songs, by Preyer, a modern German composer. After Haser's "Ode to the Storm of Desolation," from the [illegible] Iphigenie," sung by Mr. Machin, Miss Steele and Mr. Lockey gave Goldard's Morning Hymn. Miss Cubitt was encored in Handel's song from "The Redemption." "Lord remember me." A Quintet, by Haydn, Kalkwoda's air, "The Star of Hope," sung by Mr Lockey; a Duo by Pergolese, "O, sing praises;" Mendelssohn's Chorus, "Truth;" Handel's air from "Joseph," "Ye disconsolate hearts," sung by Miss Steele and Handel's Chorus from "Judas Maccabeus," "Sing unto God," completed the first part. In the second, Mr. Machin gave an air by Schiehl, from "Judas Iscariot," "What pang is this?" impressively; the Ancient Trinity Hymn was encored; as also Mr. Lockey, in his excellent style of singing of Haydn's air, "In native worth;" and Miss Cubitt in Weber's Cantata. "See Nature." Miss Steele sang an air by Abbé Vogler, "Ye Nations;" and Miss Cubitt and Machin a duet by Otto Schmid, "All Hail!" Mendelssohn's Chorus, "Light," and a Chorus from Handel's Fourth Coronation Anthem, "The King shall rejoice," concluded this admirable Concert. Every piece is sung with English words by Mr. Bartholomew, and we would suggest the expediency of giving notes to explain the sources from which the new compositions are derived.

DEBUT OF MR. TRAVERS, AT DRURY LANE THEATRE.

We can at last congratulate the public on the advent of a tenor whose qualities will enable him to take the highest position as a dramatic singer. Mr Travers is an instance of what can be done in a remarkably short space of time. He is a native of Liverpool, the son of Mr. Thomas Romer—for Travers is a professional name—he is a cousin of Miss Romer, the vocalist, and was brought up as an artist; but, having displayed a fine quality of voice, he was induced to study under Mr. Frank Romer, the composer. He made his first appearance on the stage at Southampton, and then went to Covent Garden Theatre, his opening character being Edgardo, in "Lucia di Lammermoor." It is certain his success was so great that it might be called almost a failure; it was evident that he had been prematurely brought out. Mr. Travers then went to Italy, and, after a year's study under the best masters at Milan, he sang at several theatres with perfect success; and it is not two months since he was offered a three years' engagement at the Scala, an evidence of the appreciation in which he was held. Being resolved, however, to try his fortune in London, Mr. Bunn immediately offered him an engagement; and, on Thursday night, his powers were put to the test in the arduous part of Ferdinand, in Donizetti's beautiful opera of "The Favourite." Mr. Travers, although there were indications of a very promising nature in the early acts, did not really create a sensation until the close of the third, when he was called before the curtain; but, during the fourth act, his extraordinary capabilities were manifested beyond a doubt, and the curtain fell after one of the most brilliant triumphs we have ever witnessed. Mr Travers is what the Italians call a tenore robusto, or what we should designate a "strong tenor." His organ is, from the chest, pure and liquid in quality over its register; but, in the upper notes, beyond the G, somewhat harsh and strained. When, however, he used the falsetto, in the cavatina "Welcome once more the tranquil cloister," it was evident that he had trusted too much to his chest voice, and that it will be requisite for him to employ the head notes from time to time. By so doing he will avoid the muscular contraction which is palpable beyond his F, and which caused his intonation to be somewhat flat. Mr. Travers is a graceful actor, and a distinct manner than any singer now on our stage In this essential quality he resembles Duprez or our own Braham. His style is admirable, and in parts requiring strong declamatory powers, the new tenor will be invaluable. He is very fluent in recitation and graceful in action, with perhaps a little tendency to the Italian exaggeration, but the fault is on the right side. Better to be too energetic than [illegible]. Altogether, Mr. Travers is far superior to any other tenor on the Kr[illegible]stage, for he has voice, feeling, and the right school. Miss Romer was [illegible] and, despite of a little hoarseness, she is the best we have heard in the part, not excepting Madame Stoltz, when we heard this opera in 1840, the first night of its performance at the Académie Royale, in Paris. Borrani's Balthazar was superbly sung—his lower notes are remarkable for their depth and quality. We can award no praise to the other artists. Nothing could be more disagreeable than Stretton's staccato in the cantabile music assigned to the King; nothing more abominable than Mr Horncastle and Miss Collett, in the subordinate parts The orchestra was coarse and loud; and Schira, albeit pains taking, seemed to have no notion of sustaining the singers. The choruses proved that there has been hurry in the revival; but on the second representation the opera will, no doubt, be better done; and Miss Romer and Travers ought to draw great houses, if excellent acting and singing from English artists are not to be neglected. The scenery by Grieve is alone worth seeing. The house was very well attended

Mr. Wallace's new opera was read in the Green-room on Thursday, by Mr. Bunn, and will be produced in a few days.

MUSICAL CHIT-CHAT.

The new Opera, in three acts—libretto by MM. Scribe and Gustave Vaez—music by M. Boisselot—called "Ne touchez pas à la Reine," has been quite successful, at the Royal Opera Comique. The principal parts were sustained by Mlle. Lavoye, Mdlle. Mercier, Audran (tenor), Herman Léon, and Ricquier (bassoo). The plot turns on the saving, given by a cavalier to a Queen of Spain, in the time of the Moors, after he had saved her life; for which kiss he is sentenced to death, and is only saved through the gratitude of her Majesty, who consents to marry her subject. Mdlle. Nolasco, who understands Madame Stoltz's part in Rossini's pastacio, "Robert Bruce," failed completely. A new ballet, called "La Tartarne," was to be produced on the return of Carlotta Grisi from Rome. Duprez was about to leave for Germany, to sing at Berlin, &c., in the Teutonic language. At the first Conservatoire Concert, Habeneck, to the great joy of the subscribers, resumed his post as Conductor. Haydn's grand Symphony, with a Overture to "Der Freyschutz," a chorus from Mendelssohn's "Paul," Beethoven's Violin Concerto, executed by M. Alard, Hummel's "Offertoire," and Jomelli's "Agnus Dei," constituted the programme.

Madame Persiani's benefit at the Parisian Théâtre Italien was a great triumph or the Diva. She played Rosina in Rossini's "Il Barbiere," and her marvellous execution of "Una Voce," and of the singing lesson in the second act, electrified the house. It is recorded of this unrivalled executant in tours de force, that she never sang the same roulades twice in the lesson, but always varied them on every performance. Her daring ascent to E flat in altissimo, in perfect tune, caused the orchestra to rise en masse to applaud. Rancourt's Figaro, Mario's Count Almaviva, and Lablache's Bartolo, were admirable, as may be conceived. Grisi, at the eighth performance of Verdi's "Due Foscari," was called before the curtain, and had a plentiful shower of bouquets. Mario and Coletti are very fine in this opera.

Viardot Garcia, in Berlin, had been gaining fresh laurels in the German version of "Otello" as Desdemona. Madame Floyd treated a forori lately at Ghent, by her pianoforte execution. Dreyshock, the pianist, was giving concerts in Leipsick; and Liszt in Hungary. Madame Schuman, the pianiste, known as Clara Wieck, has been delighting the amateurs in Vienna

Mr. G. Budd has been unanimously elected honorary librarian of the Philharmonic Society, in place of Mr. Calkin, deceased.

Mr. Henry Phillips gives his Entertainment on Monday next, at the Sussex Hall.

On Friday next, at the Music Hall, in Store-street, will be the first performance of the Amateur Musical Society. The orchestra is expected to amount to upwards of ninety players, of whom the following are Professors:—Messrs. H. Blagrove, H. Hill, Kreutzer, W. Blagrove, violins; Mr. Hill, tenor; Mr. Hatton, violoncello; Casalani, contra-bass; Mr. Clinton, flute; Nicholson and Horton, oboes; Messrs. Bonse and Budderly, clarionets, Mr. C. Keating, bassoon. Messrs. C. Hooper and Rae, horns, Mr. T. Harper, trumpet; Mr B. Healy, trombone; and Messrs. Goodwin and Seymour, drums. Mr. Baile is the Conductor.

Mr. Lucas has announced his series of "Musical Evenings," at his residence, in Hanover-street, to commence Feb. 25.

SHUTTINGS FOR THE DIVIDENDS.—The whole of the National Debt department of the Bank of England has been completely re-organised by Mr. W. Ray Snee Not only are the accounts now kept with great accuracy, but the calculations of interest and deductions for Income-tax are generally printed on the warrants, and the period of closing the different stocks, for the purpose of making out the dividends, is shortened eight days. In the event of any great money question or political excitement, this would be found of great importance to the public.

THE SCARCITY OF FOOD.—The Times says:—"We are informed that the following document has recently been signed by the aristocracy, not of the richest province of the realm, at least of a large number of the highest ranks in our nobility. A similar voluntary undertaking was very generally adopted, under the patronage of Royalty, during the dearth which prevailed at the beginning of the present century. We, the undersigned, deeply impressed with the distress which prevails among a great number of our fellow-countrymen in Great Britain and Ireland, from the want of sufficient employment, and observing that the prices of food are rising, think it our duty to pledge ourselves to reduce in our family as far as may be practicable, the consumption of bread and flour, and we invite the co-operation of all those who may concur with us in our estimate of the present emergency.

THE ASHBURTON UNION.—It will be seen, from our Parliamentary Report, that the Government does not intend to take any step with respect to the Report of the Committee of last session on the Andover Union; but the Poor Law Commission is to be remodelled. An interesting epitome of the proceedings of that Committee has been published in the form of a pamphlet, in which the leading points embraced in the Andover inquiry are well put forth; and by means of which the public will be able to form an accurate judgment of the injustice practised towards the late Assistant Commissioners, Mr. Parker and Mr. Day.

THE THEATRES.

LYCEUM

"The Wigwam" is the name of a [illegible] farce, by Mr. Shirley Brooks, produced at this theatre on Monday evening. Being full of telling situations, and very smart dialogue, it was deservedly successful. A notion of the nature of the piece in the course of the action may be guessed from the plot. Erasmus Lobscouse (Mr F. Matthews), a respectable Bloomsbury grocer, having been driven nearly mad by his wife's temper, has run away, and travelled to America, where he fails in with the tribe of "Kutanahsehen Indians," and by a little tact comes to be, in time, the father of his tribe, under the name of Pandlenguam, adopting their dress and manners. He has brought up a native girl, Cora (Miss Mary Keeley) who is known as the "The Agile Deer's Foot." The tribe of Indians agree that she must marry; and Nongo, ("The Monkey's Uncle,") (Mr. Corbery), a low comedy Redskin, if such there be, is a suitor for her hand. At this juncture of affairs, Puffy Plumpton, Esq. (Mr. Keeley), a young gentleman in independent circumstances, is taken by the tribe, as he is wandering about the woods near Montreal, with his rifle. He encounters Pandlenguam, and whilst he is stating that he has come to America in the hopes of finding the erratic Erasmus Lobscouse (being engaged to his daughter, Julia (Miss Arden), discovers, by various slips of the other's tongue, that he has found his man. The young Indian girl, Cora, however, looks kindly on the white stranger, to the great disgust of "the Monkey's Uncle," who is always going to scalp everybody through the pates; and a match is got up between them, Plumpton being invested, by the other Indians, with the apparel and name of the "White Buffalo." All these plans are, however, upset by the discovery of Mrs. Lobscouse (Miss Forster), her daughter, and Owley, the maid (Miss Turner), in the forest, by the Indians. This leads to another discovery of the real Erasmus, by his deserted wife, just as the party are going to be immolated. But now a fresh position arises. The Indians will not let any of the male palefaces leave them, having once taken up the manners of their tribe; and they are all in dreadful distress, when they are relieved by the opportune approach of some British troops. Erasmus makes friends with his wife, who promises to reform her temper; Plumpton is reconciled to his sweetheart, Julia, who is beginning to get very jealous of the Indian girl, and sneers at her costume; and Cora herself retires very gracefully from the party in the wigwam. She does not, however, marry "The Monkey's Uncle."

It was very admirably played, the resources of the different performers having evidently been carefully taken, and the laughter of the audience was unceasing. Miss Keeley had a very pretty song to sing, composed by Mr. A. Lee—"The Wild Free Wind"—which she sang so well that it elicited a loud encore Mr. Keeley was not, as might have been imagined from his usual run of characters, a poltroon, but a very cool hand indeed in the most trying circumstances, and Mr. F. Matthews and Mr. Oxberry were also in uncommonly comical. The mysterious humbug of the former, and the screaming jealousy and indignation of the latter, as his rejected addresses, were alike provocative of the loudest laughter. A well managed "row" in which Mr. Keeley and his fair sister had a share, was warmly laid hold of by the audience, and the curtain fell amidst very loud applause. The piece will have a long run

On Thursday evening, another new piece was brought forward, being an adaptation by Mr. A. Wigan, of "Le Capitaine et le Voleur," a drama which has obtained considerable success in Paris, added by the talents of M. Arnal and Madame Rothe, in the two characters. Mr Wigan has long been identified with the Lyceum theatre, as a very ingenious performer in characteristic parts, and an author of no mean tact. The present piece will not detract from his reputation, as he has cleverly adapted the situations to English incidents. The scene of "£500 Reward," as the new drama is called, being transferred to the locale and times of the renowned Dick Turpin—that is to say, the reign of George the Second.

The interest of the piece, the plot of which is too intricate for detail, hangs on the fortunes of Valentine Honeyboll (Mr. Wigan), who is induced by a rival, (in order that he may be shipped off to America) to personify Dick Turpin, for whom a reward of £500 is offered. Innocent of the real profession of Dick Turpin, being deceived by an ingenious equivoque, he consults; which eventually entails upon him a series of perplexities, perils, and shifts, highly amusing and productive of much comical situation; which end, however, in his being united to the lady of his love Amelia (Miss Villars,) to the overthrow of the intriguing rival Captain Ruffle (Mr Butler)

The drama was entirely successful. Miss Villars played with her usual good taste, and looked exceedingly well in a becoming costume. Mr. Wigan was in high spirits. Mr. Meadows was exceedingly funny as the facile-minded Mayor; and Mr. Emery, in the part of the high-layman-loving butler, having still an interest in "the road," gave us an excellent delineation of the cunning family servant. The applause was unqualified at the conclusion; and Mr. Wigan, upon being called for, announced the piece for repetition every evening.

PRINCESS.

Another adaptation of the above piece, under the name of "The King of the Brigands," was produced here on the same evening. We shall notice it fully in our next.

HAYMARKET.

During the past week "The Invisible Prince" has been attracting crowded audiences, preceded by the comedietta of "Money" and "London Assurance." Her Majesty commanded the performance of the latter piece, with the burlesque, a few evenings since

On next Thursday Mr. Bourcicault's new comedy will be represented, the title, as we have already stated, being "The School for Scheming." The principal characters have been confided to Messrs. Farren, Webster, Buckstone, Howe, and Selby, whom the author will introduce to a Haymarket audience, after having approved of the peculiar talent of this gentleman in the delineation of the rôle, which is of considerable importance Mesdames Glover, Humby, Fortescue, Julia Bennett, Yarnold, Reynolds, Buckingham, and Stanley, compose the list of the battalion enlisted. We understand that two very effective and prominent characters, designed for Mrs. W. Clifford and Miss P. Horton, have been cut out of the piece by the author, the length of the work detaining entertainment, and the above characters being episodical. The last production of the author was "Old Heads and Young Hearts." According to the report of the coulisses, all the performers are highly satisfied with their parts. Rare instance of histrionic unanimity. A prologue will be delivered by Miss Julia Bennett in character.

FRENCH PLAYS.

On Monday evening, M. Lemaitre appeared in the three-act comic drama, entitled "Le Barbier du Roi d'Aragon." It was the first representation of this piece in London; and, if the unanimous, though silently-expressed, opinion of the audience be a hint to the manager, it will be the last. The selection which Mr. Mitchell makes from the répertoire of his actors, is in general so very judicious, it is almost a pity that the stars should exact the performance of pet parts, in preference to taking the tone of the public taste from one so eminently well-acquainted with it, as the lessee of the St. James's theatre has proved himself to be. If we mistake not, a version of this piece was produced two or three years ago at the Haymarket, when Mr. Wallack sustained the part of the Barber

COUNTRY NEWS.

REDUCTION IN THE PRICE OF CORN IN THE COUNTRY.—A letter from Liverpool of Tuesday says: "The speculators begin to find the ground slipping from under them, and to-day the corn market here has been 'all sell and no buy.' Flour has been freely offered at 2s. 6d. to 3s per barrel reduction, but the dealers have fought shy of the article even at the proffered fall. Our import from America continues very great—the ship, the Rappahannock, has to-day brought ten thousand barrels of flour, the largest quantity ever imported into Europe in one vessel. In addition to this she has brought fifteen hundred barrels of Indian meal and other provisions. Another ship, the Republic, has brought eight thousand barrels of flour and eight thousand bushels of wheat; another, the Cornelia, has four thousand five hundred barrels of flour; and another, the Empress, has five thousand barrels of flour and fourteen thousand bushels of wheat. The quantity of Indian corn poured in to-day is immense, and altogether the importations continue very great. It is natural to expect that the speculators would be staggered? In Lancashire, as elsewhere, the proposal of the Ministerial measures has had the effect of reducing the high price of corn in the various markets. Barley has been the most seriously affected. In Chelmsford market the fall in the article was at least 2s. per quarter on the prices obtained the previous week, and even at the decline but few sales could be effected. The nominal fall in wheat was 2s., but the quantity brought to market, and the little business done, gave indications of a much heavier depreciation. At Colchester the effect was similar, and also at Stowmarket Stortford, and other markets in Suffolk and Herts, held since the measures were fully explained in Parliament. It is a little singular that in nearly all these markets there was a rise of 3s. or 4s. per quarter in oats.

REPRESENTATION OF BATH.—The committee for supporting Lord Ashley have resolved to accept his Lordship's conditions, that he shall be returned free of all expense, and subscriptions have been commenced for raising a fund for that purpose

ELECTION FOR SALISBURY.—W. J. Chaplin, Esq., the chairman of the South Western Railway Company, was on Monday elected for the city of Salisbury, without opposition, in the room of Ambrose Hussey, Esq., who had accepted the Chiltern Hundreds. Mr. Chaplin was proposed by Mr. Richard Kelloy, and the seconder was Mr. W. Fawcett.

FOOD RIOTS IN CORNWALL.—On Wednesday (last week) there was some rioting at St. Austell. A body of labourers, from the china clay works in the neighbourhood, proceeded, to the number of about 150 in a body, through the streets, with the avowed intention of stopping the shipping of corn at a port called Pentewan, about two miles distant. Neither they nor their steps, and, of course, temporarily effected their purpose, as their numbers gradually increased until they mustered between 200 and 300; the vessels then warped off into the middle of the pool, to prevent their getting on board. Mr. Tremayne, of Heligan, an active magistrate, who was holding a court in the vicinity, was sent for. He addressed the throng, pointing out, in the kindest manner, the delusion under which they laboured, in imagining that such a proceeding as they had that day adopted could prevent the exportation of corn, or alter the prices. Having sent to the adjoining stations, he assembled a body of coast-guard men, in order to maintain quiet as the darkness came on, and also, assisted by another magistrate, swore in twenty special constables. Fortunately their assistance was little required, as most of the assemblage separated as night approached, without doing any injury.

OUR DOMESTIC COLUMN.

BLACK MONDAY.

So I am now. Is it the chaise I hear?
"Tears again, Teddy, is that like a man?"
Well, Bessy love, I know there's nought to fear,
Look! rumbling o'er the oaks comes little Fan,
Up! and a kiss; for this you trippi'd and ran.
Now good bye Bessy. Oh! the age between
With these rude fellows who can make comfort when can.
Tom fears me, loves not. Ned is fond in creen,
So proud and , that remains yet to be seen.

Good bye Mamma! "Remember!" Yes I will,
"Learning achiev'd, you said, sets me afloat
On the world wave" But 'tis a bitter pill,
You never knew the day-doled task by rote
Master is schoolly while mamma your note
In a sweet song, and from your real she threads
Her needle. Has the man sent my new coat?
I hope 'tis like a man's, as much as Ned's.
Well, if I'm late, they'll think us lay-a-beds.

Good bye! Oh yes the money's in my purse,
And that is safe, fees too for man and maid
They've both good wages, and the former our old nurse.
I mean to buy the best bat ever play'd,
And three-a-shilling rides o' the farmer's jade.
Tell father I am wearing for the pair
You know his promise, mind him what he said.
My running hand shall win. I mean to fag;
My pony shall race Ned's and beat that brag.

Good bye Ma, Bess, Fan! Sue all the chaise.
Take care of Fan, her doll's clothes make complete,
This shilling's for its shoes (don't say who pays?)
Love months! Think of it. "Rest not think; but meet
This long term's further end with a new treat."
You're right Sue. Shall I run again to Ma'?
I'll blow a kiss as the chaise clears the street.
Sure, here comes Ned in a merry mood with his pony
Drive on the chaise. Keep on a-head. Hurrah! G. H.

ECONOMY OF BREAD AND FLOUR.

(From a Correspondent.)

I am using the best wheaten bread with flour unmixed from the mill, at about eight-pence the four pound loaf: rather less than that price. My bread is made and baked at home, and four pounds of flour gives bread weighing, after it is baked, five pounds and a half. In the four pound loaf there is always, at least, one pound of water. When flour is at a low rate this water-tallage pays the baker for his trouble; when flour is at an average rate it yields him a large profit, when above medium rate it robs the poor. Water which paid him one-penny-halfpenny the pint or pound four months ago has not now risen in market value to threepence per pint or pound. We bake at home, having learned the fashion in America. Our cook here is an adept in culinary preparations, but knew nothing of bread-making: she learned it of her mistress in two lessons Where there is not a convenient oven (we use the iron oven in the range) a Dutch-oven of tin will answer the purpose, taking care to have heat thrown on the bottom: for this purpose a shelving bottom, catching the heat of the range, and reflecting it to the baking-shelf, is very effective. Boiled bread (yeast dumplings) is not to be despised. In the Southern States of the Union they always eat, at breakfast and tea, "biscuit;" that is, pie-crust, with little butter only in its composition, and beaten with the rolling-pin in making.

POTATO-POWDER.

Potato-powder, Icelandcal (calcined bread or sugar) forms an excellent toothpowder; it cleanses the mouth both mechanically and chemically; but, as it is dusty, or not easily miscible with water when alone, it may, on this account, be mixed with an equal weight of prepared chalk, and, if agreeable, be scented with a few drops of oil of cloves. Griffin's Chemical Recreations, new edition.

KNITTING RECEIPT BOOK.

A very useful little manual has just appeared, entitled "The Royal Shetland Shawl, Lace Collar, Brighton Slipper, and China Purse, Receipt Book;" by Mrs. J. B. Gore; and will, doubtless, prove an acceptable novelty to our ladyreaders. It contains concise Receipts for the several articles indicated in the title-page, accompanied by well executed illustrations. One of the latter we subjoin; the Receipt being mostly too technical for quotation. The Receipt for the China Purse is as follows:—

"Cast on in pale knitting thirty stitches; knit thirty rows, which is sufficient for the purse You must be careful, in knitting, not to turn the ribbon, as it will spoil the de-gn of the purse. When finished, join it up neatly, and trim it with gold or silver ornaments."

PURE AFFECTION.

Mr. James, in his admirable novel of "The King's Highway," has the following passage, beautifully describing the intense interest taken by one of the characters of the story in the fate of an almost friendless boy.

"All natural affections awaken and purify the human heart. Like everything else given us immediately from God, their natural tendency is to wage war against all that is evil within us, and every single thought or amendment and improvement, every regret for the past, every hope for the future, was connected with the thought of the beautiful boy he had left behind him at the inn; and, elevated by his love for a being in the bright purity of youth, he thought of him and his situation again and again; and, as he did so, the intensity of his own feelings made him murmur forth half audible words, all relating to the boy, or to the person he was then about to seek, for the purpose of interesting him in the poor youth's fate."

INCOMBUSTIBLE DRESSES FOR DANCERS.

If muslin be dipped into a strong solution of boracic acid, and dried, it is rendered incombustible, that is to say, it will not burn with flame. Some time since, an eminent female dancer in London met with a horrible death, in consequence of her dress taking fire from the foot-lights on the stage: such accidents could be prevented by passing the dresses, after being washed, through a strong solution of any salt containing a fusible acid. The substances that would answer best are boracic acid and phosphate of ammonia. The preparation could, perhaps, be conveniently applied in the sizing of the dresses. Fabrics so prepared, when dried, have no appearance of particular preparation. When brought into contact with fire, they are charred and destroyed, but do not burst into flame Griffin's Chemical Recreat ons, new edition.

MALT-TAX.

Mr. H. Ayres, in a pamphlet on "the Repeal of the Malt-tax," calculates that, from a quarter of malt, a labouring man could brew six barrels of wbo came table-beer, which would cost him about 9½d a gallon, without the duty on malt; and, with it, would cost nearly 4d per gallon.

COALS AND GAS.

In a paper read before a late meeting of the Statistical Society, by Mr. Fletcher, it is stated that, during the winter months, 800 tons of coals are used, on the average, per day, by the metropolitan gas companies, for the manufacture of gas; and, that, on the 21st of December, when the day is shortest, seven million cubic feet of gas are consumed in London and the suburbs.

EPITOME OF NEWS.—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

Letters from Tabriz and Bagazid announce that the plague has broken out in those cities. It is feared it may spread to Trebizond, and as the quarantine is there very irregularly observed, people at Constantinople were beginning to look some alarm lest it should again, after so long an absence, reach the latter city.

Private letters from Singapore announce the fact that a British naval officer has been despatched to take formal possession of Labuan; and as it was judged expedient that the Government Agent, Mr. Brooke, should be present at the hoisting of the flag, Captain Mundy was directed to call for him at Sarawak, on his way up the coast. By this time, therefore, we have doubtless established our first settlement in the Indian Archipelago.

The Journal du Havre announces the arrival in that port of 30,000 barrels of flour by eight vessels from the United States. This, it says, forms part of 100,000 barrels that have been shipped in the United States for France.

The raising of the discount of the banks of France and England has been severely felt in Frankfort, public securities and railway shares having fallen considerably in consequence. The news that the Belgian bank has raised its discount to 6 per cent. has added to the general discouragement. This is but momentary, as money is abundant, and bills are discounted at 3½ per cent.

The celebrated artist, Sigmund Frank, a painter on glass, died recently at Munich, at the age of seventy-seven. He was born at Nürnburg, and made himself famous by his indefatigable researches on the art of the ancient method of glass-painting, which was almost lost to the present generation.

The widow of the late Lieut.-Colonel Fawcett, whose melancholy death in a duel with his brother-in-law, Lieut. Munro, in 1843, will be fresh in the recollection of our readers, was married on the 8th inst., at the chapel of the British Embassy, in Florence, to Alfred A. Shaw, Esq., of the 2nd Madras Infantry.

A Paris paper states that the criminal prisons of La Force and the Conciergerie are at present peopled with almost as many nobility as the Faubourg St. Germain. On the 15th of the present month those prisons contained 56 gentlemen, 11 Knights of the Legion of Honour, seven Barons, six Viscounts, five Counts, and two Marquisses.

An inhabitant of La Gangnerie de Quipérie, department of Maine-et-Loire, (France,) whilst digging a few days ago, in a field belonging to him, turned up a vase containing 401 gold coins, worth, in mere weight as gold, 1,079*l*. They are all Roman coins of various reigns.

Lord Howden is appointed Minister from England to the Court of Rio Janeiro, to succeed Mr. Hamilton, who retires from ill-health, after many years of laborious services in different parts of the world.

A large parcel of American onions and gourds has been received by Messrs. Keasing and Hunt, and are intended for the use of the poorer classes as a substitute for potatoes. The "gourds" are usually sent as samples to test their use in this country. They are extensively consumed abroad for soups and puddings, and if their use is appreciated here, they will become an economical and nutritious substitute for the potato and other common vegetables.

From a private letter from Genoa, dated 18th Jan., we extract the following passage:—"Our Government has just issued a decree by which Lombardy Maize will now be subject to a heavy export duty, which is about equal to a prohibition."

A salutary blow has been struck at duelling in Mississippi, by a case of enforcement of a law of the State, which requires that the survivor shall be responsible for the debts of the man he kills in a duel.

It is generally supposed in Germany that Arch-Duke Stephen of Austria, son of the deceased Palatine of Hungary, will be elected to the dignity vacant by his father's death, although two other candidates will be proposed, Count Szechenyi and Count Teleky, the latter a Protestant.

We learn from a private letter, dated Naples 15th Jan., that the excitement amongst the populace, at the high price of bread and maccaroni was immense. The King had been stopped more than once. It was hardly possible to keep the exportation open much longer.

Considerable sensation has been created at Rome, in consequence of the Pope having himself preached a sermon on the 13th inst., on the occasion of the Festival of Kings. The custom is for the preacher when the Pope enters the church, to leave the pulpit and go and receive the orders of the Holy Father Pius IX. inquired of Father Ventura at what part of his sermon he had arrived? At the second, replied the Monk. Very well, father, rejoined the Pope, I will finish your task, give me your insignia of preacher. The Pope put them on, and then ascended the pulpit, to the great amazement of the crowd. As the sermon proceeded, tears were in every eye, but it was towards the end of the sermon that the general feeling was excited to the utmost pitch, when the Holy Father, turning to the Holy Sacrament, implored the blessing of Heaven on his subjects.

A letter from Rimini of the 10th, says that disturbances have taken place in various parts of the Pontifical dominions, owing also to the scarcity of food, but that they have subsided on the promulgation of a decree prohibiting the exportation of grain and flour. Disturbances, arising from the same cause, have also occurred in Tuscany, but they are stated to have been vigorously checked, whilst the Grand Duke has maintained the free exportation of grain.

The St. Petersburgh Journal of the 15th publishes a bulletin of the repulse of an attack upon the Russian fortress of Golowin in the Caucasus. The enemy is said to have retired after sustaining a loss of fifty men. The Russians state their loss at four killed and seven wounded. The Emperor, as a proof of his satisfaction at the brilliant defence of the garrison, has promoted some of the officers, and granted decorations to some of the privates.

Letters have been received from Tahiti, dated Aug. 6th. Everything was tranquil; the natives have not made any attempts to obstruct the works for the fortifications in the valley of Fanavin.

The Empress of Russia, according to accounts from St. Petersburgh, has derived so much benefit from her sojourn at Palermo last winter, that her Majesty's health is quite re-established.

A vessel, arrived in the West India Docks from Hamburgh (the first arrival from that port for several weeks past), has brought the immense quantity of 77,6·9 rape cakes, and also 16,820 linseed cakes, for cattle-feeding purposes.

The Electric Telegraph from Peterborough to Stamford was completed on Tuesday last, thus opening, for the first time, telegraphic communication between London and the borders of Lincolnshire.

On Wednesday a Court of Directors was held at the East India-house, when Lieutenant General Sir Willoughby Cotton, G.C.B., Commander-in-Chief of the Company's forces on the Bombay establishment, was appointed second member of Council at that Presidency.

We regret to learn that Mr. Standish, M.P. for Wigan, is dangerously ill, and that very slight hopes of his recovery are entertained.

A private letter from Paris, dated the 19th instant, states that it is there reported that his Holiness the Pope is about to address an encyclical letter, calling on all the faithful in Europe to come to the assistance of Ireland.

Medical men employing the agency of ether to effect surgical operations without pinning the patient, should be reminded that the vapour constantly given forth by this body is highly inflammable, and if brought into contact with flame while being inhaled, will be productive of very dangerous effects to the patient.

The appointment of Professor of Surgery to the Royal College of Surgeons, vacant by the resignation of Mr. John Flint South, caused by age and infirmities, has just been conferred on Mr. Frederick Paget, the warden of the Collegiate Establishment in St. Bartholomew's Hospital.

The Queen and Prince Albert have respectively given £20, and the Queen Dowager £10, towards establishing Public Baths and Washhouses for the poor at Liverpool.

The disease has appeared in potatoes which have been recently grown by artificial heat. The first intimation of the disease was last year received in the same manner, and at an early period. The re-appearance of this disastrous visitation must make certain, what is now sufficiently probable, that the suspension of the Corn-Laws will be converted into a permanent measure, and free trade in grain finally and fully established.

A meeting of agricultural and other labourers took place at Bicester on Tuesday night. About 200 labourers were present. A number of them, and some labourers' wives, addressed the company, which consisted of about 400 persons. It appears from the statements of the poor creatures that 8s per week is the highest wages that any of them receive, and that some able-bodied men are working for 6s per week. Wages are advanced but in few instances, and provisions are 25 per cent. higher. This, added to the severe weather, has sadly increased the privations of agricultural labourers.

The quantity of corn and flour imported into France between the 1st and 15th Jan., was 250,000 hect. The quantity remaining in store on the 15th was 306,000 hect. Between the 15th and 20th, there arrived in Marseilles from the ports of the Black Sea and the Mediterranean, 250,000 hect.

The National Club, which was first formed after the passing of the Maynooth Endowment Bill, as a rallying point for the Protestant party, have taken the Louses, No 2 and 3, Old Palace-yard, between the Houses of Commons and the House of Lords, which will open as a club-house in the course of a few days.

The line between Gravesend and Rochester is to be re-opened in the course of the ensuing month. A junction has been formed near the Gravesend terminus to connect the London and Greenwood branch of the South Eastern, in the course of formation.

The Duke of Richmond has presented the munificent donation of £200 towards the contemplated restoration of Chichester Cathedral.

The Bank of Ireland raised the rate of discount on Irish bills to 5*l*. and on English 4*l*.

The books at Lloyd's unfortunately show the loss of a great number of vessels on the west coast of Ireland in the late gales, the majority of them being grain loaded, inward bound.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"H. P." Your Problems have been examined with due care, and appear to be free from errors; but there is a great want of point in them. End-games, full of variation, three or four moves deep only, are the sort of thing we like.

"C. de Jaucourt." Your suggestion of numbering the Chess-board has been adopted, with frequent modifications, for the last hundred years.

"Harry Bolagur." Stalemate is a drawn game

"A. H." In Problem No. 155, if Black, at his second move, play K P two, White takes it with his Rook, mating him at once

"G. H." — "R. S. C." Received, and shall be looked to

"C. P."—The solution you require is—1. B to Q B sq.; 2. K to Kt sq.; 3. R to Q 2nd; 4. R to Q 4th (double ch.) Black's moves are all forced

"J. W."—Problem No. 159 cannot be solved in three moves, if Black play the best defence. In your favorable attempt, he is made to play the worst

"Pica."—It is evident that you do not comprehend the principle of Chess Problems. When the stipulation is that White effects mate in a given number of moves, it is to be understood that he will checkmate in that number, against the very best possible defence. So, to our solution of Problem 155, we give to Black the best moves, and the result is, mate in seventeen, supposing to the contrary, to four moves As to its being done in three, if Black make excellent moves, that is simply absurd. A Problem which can be solved, against the best play, in not less than fifty moves, may be solvable in one move, if the adverse side play badly. Your solution in four moves is a blunder: Black may play his K P two squares at his second move, and where, then, is your mate in two more moves?

"Nemo." They shall be examined, but you must give us time: we are overwhelmed with communications of the sort.

"H. T. F." Pray do not attempt the construction of Problems again till you are conversant with the moves of the pieces

"Cheshire." The Anniversary Dinner of the Liverpool Chess Club is to come off on the 5th of February. You must apply for Tickets to the Honorary Secretary, George Shrewtley, Esq., Liverpool.

"Tess." The piece we term a Bishop, the French call the "Fou:" its original name among the Persians and Arabs was "Pil," or "Phil." an Elephant, and this, with the prefix of the article al, has given us the various names, such as alfil, arfil, alfierus, alphinus, alfyn, alphyn, by which it is mentioned in the old Spanish, Italian, French, and English writers

"T. N. G." There is a quarto of fifty parchment leaves, beautifully illuminated, in the British Museum, entitled, "Liber Aforalis de ludo Scaccor. Jacobus de Cessolis." (Harln MSS 1275.) Cessolis is said to be the earliest writer on Chess, and this MS supposed to have been written about the year 1300.

Solutions by "Demi-Semi," "H. P.," "Hotspur," "Carlo Fallera," "Sopwcitta," "Avalonensis," "Flo," "A. H.," "C. A. F.," "Shaw," "A Rugbean," "Cary," "T. C. O.," "S. S. H.," "T. B.," "Bridgnorth," "R. K. S." and "W." are correct.

SOLUTION TO PROBLEM, No. 157.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1 Kt to K 7th (ch)	Kt takes Kt	3. Kt to Q B 7th (ch)	Q takes Kt
2. R takes Kt (ch)	P takes R	4. B to K B 8th.

And play as Black can he must be mated next move.

PROBLEM, No. 158,
By M. BRÉDE.

The conditions of this beautiful Problem are, that White engages to compel Black to stalemate him in eight moves.

BLACK.

WHITE.

CHESS IN AMERICA.

GAME BETWEEN TWO OF THE BEST PLAYERS OF THE BOSTON CHESS CLUB

WHITE (Mr. G. Hammond)	BLACK (Dr. R.)	WHITE (Mr. G. Hammond)	BLACK (Dr. R.)
1. K P two	K P two	12. P takes P (in passing)	Q takes P
2. K Kt to B 3rd	Q Kt to B 3rd	13. Q to her Kt 3rd	K Kt to R 3rd
3. B to Q B 4th	K B to B 4th	14. R to K sq (ch)	K to B sq
4. Q B P one	Q to K 2nd (a)	15. Kt to K 4th	Q to h 2nd
5. Q P two	P takes P	16. Q B to Q 2nd (c)	K B to Q 3rd
6. Castles	Q Kt to K 4th	17. Kt takes B	Q takes Kt
7. Q Kt P two	P takes P (dis ch)	18. B to Q Kt 4th	Q B P one
8. K to R sq	Q to K 2nd	19. Q R to Q sq	Q to her B 2nd
9. Q Kt takes P	Q B P one	20. B takes P (ch)
11. K P one (b)	Q P two	And Black surrenders.

(a) Not nearly so good as K Kt to B 3rd

(b) White has now a mutually developed game, while his opponent's is proportionably constrained. This is mainly owing to his faulty move of 4 Q to K 2nd

(c) Threatening to win the Q by first taking the B, and then playing B to Q Kt 4th if the Kt were taken.

CHESS IN ITALY.

PLAYED AT MODENA, BETWEEN MESSRS. DISCART AND BONETTI.

WHITE (Mr. D.)	BLACK (Mr. B.)	WHITE (Mr. D.)	BLACK (Mr. B.)
1. K P two	K P two	21. Q R to his 2nd	Castles Q side (e)
2 K Kt to B 3rd	Q Kt to B 3rd	22 Q R to Q Kt 2nd	K P one
3. B to Q B 4th	K B to Q B 4th	23 Q B takes Kt	K P takes B
4 Q B P one	K B to Q Kt 3rd	24 Q to K sq	Kt to K R 2nd
5. Castles (a)	Q P one	25 Kt takes Q R P (f)	P takes Kt
6 Q P two	Q to K 2nd	26 Q R P one	R to Q sq
7. Q P one	Q Kt to his sq	27 Q B P one	Q to her Kt 2nd
8. K B to Q 3rd	K R P one	28. Q takes R P	Kt to K B sq (g)
9. K Kt to his sq (b)	K Q P two (c)	29 Q to Kt 5th	Kt to Q 2nd
10. Q Kt P two	Q R P two	30. Q R P one	R to K 2nd
11 Q Kt P one	Q Kt to Q 2nd	31. R to Q Kt sq	K R to his 3rd
12. Q R P two	Q B P two (d)	32 Q R P one	Q takes Kt P
13. Q Kt to Q 2nd	K B to Q sq	33. Q to B 6th	K to R 2nd
14 Q Kt to B 4th	Q Kt P one	34 R takes Q	Kt takes R
15 Kt to K 3rd	Q Kt to K B sq	35. K Kt P two	R P passes P
16 Kt to K Kt 3rd	Kt to K Kt 3rd	36. P takes P	K B P to his 3rd
17 Kt to K B 5th	B takes Kt	37. Q takes Q P	R to Q 2nd
18. P takes B	Q Kt to K B 5th	38. Q to B 6th	K R to his sq
19 B to K 4th	K Kt to B 3rd	39. Q P one
20. K B P one	R to Q B 2nd	Black resigns.

(a) In the Italian mode, as described in our last number—K to K sq, and R to B sq.

(b) To enable him to throw forward his K B P

(c) This is to prevent the advance of the Pawn spoken of

(d) As we mentioned last week, this may always be done with impunity in the Italian game—if they do not permit a Pawn to take another in passing.

(e) Castling K on Q Kt sq, and R on K sq.

(f) From this point, White plays well to the end. (g) To the rescue.

CHESS ENIGMAS.

No. 109.—By Mr. MCG——y.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
K at Q Kt 3rd	K at his R 2nd	Ps at K R 5th, K B	K at K B 5th
Q at Q 8th	Q at her 7th	3rd, Q R 2nd, and	Kt at K 3rd
R at Q R 8th	R at Q 2nd, and K	Q B 5th	Ps at K Kt 2nd and
Kt at K 8th	at sq		4th, Q B 3rd, and
	B at K 6th		Q kt 4th

White to play, and mate in four moves

No. 110.—By Mr. KLING.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
K at his sq	K at Q 5th	Ps at K Kt 3rd, Q	Ps at K 4th, Q 4th,
B at K Kt sq	R at Q Kt sq	B 2nd, and Q Kt	and Q B 5th
Kt at K Kt 4th	Kt at Q sq	2nd
Kt at K 3rd	Kt at Q Kt 3rd	White to play, and mate in five moves.

No. 111.—By the Same.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.
K at his K 2nd	K at his K 5th	Ps at K R 4th, and
B at K B 4th	P at K R 3rd	K Kt 3rd
B at K 4th		White to play, and mate in five moves.

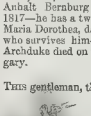
OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED

THE ARCHDUKE PALATINE JOSEPH.

THE ARCHDUKE JOSEPH ANTONY JOHN, Palatine, Governor, and Captain General of Hungary, Comes, et Judex Jazygum et Cumanorum, Field Marshal and Proprietor of two Regiments of Hussars, was the fourth son of Leopold II., Emperor of Austria, by his wife, the Empress Maria Louisa, daughter of Charles III., King of Spain. The Archduke was, consequently, Ferdinand, the present Emperor of Austria's uncle: he was born the 9th March, 1776, and was, during the last war, one of the leading and most distinguished Generals of the Imperial Army; his name will go down to posterity with a reputation little inferior to that of his gallant brother, the Archduke Charles.

As Viceroy of Hungary, the Archduke Joseph was generally esteemed and beloved; his rule was wise and moderate, and tended much to the peace and happiness of the Hungarian people. The Archduke was thrice married, first to Alexandrina Paulowna, daughter of Paul, Emperor of Russia, by whom—who died the 16th March, 1801—he had no issue; and, secondly, to Hermine, daughter of Victor Charles, Prince of Anhalt Bernburg Schaumburg, by whom—who died the 14th Sep., 1817—he has a twin son and daughter. The Archduke espoused, thirdly, Maria Dorothea, daughter of Louis, Duke of Wirtemburg, by whom—who survives him—he leaves another son and two daughters. The Archduke died on the 7th inst., at the Imperial Palace of Ofen, in Hungary.

THE HON. CHARLES STUART.



THIS gentleman, the fifth son of the present Earl of Moray, by Margaret-Jane, his second Countess, daughter of Sir Philip Ainslie, of Pilton, was lineally descended from the marriage of Sir James Stuart, so well known in history as "the bonny Earl of Moray," with Elizabeth, eldest daughter of the famous Regent Moray, of the time of Queen Mary.

A few years since the Hon. Charles Stuart entered the 72nd Highlanders, and served for some time in that regiment. His death occurred most suddenly. He was found lifeless in his bed on the morning of the 21st instant, at his residence, No. 10, Panton-street, Haymarket. The hon. gentleman had completed his thirty-second year, and was unmarried.

CHRISTOPHER BLACKETT, ESQ., OF WYLAM, NORTHUMBERLAND.

THIS gentleman, formerly Knight of the Shire for South Northumberland, was eldest son of the late Christopher Blackett, Esq., of Wylam, by Anne, his wife, daughter of William Ingham, Esq., and represented, as senior male heir, the ancient family of Blackett, the junior branches of which acquired such immense wealth by the lead mines of Durham.

Mr. Blackett, who formerly held the commission of Captain in the 18th Hussars, was born 22nd June, 1788; and married, 15th August, 1818, Elizabeth, younger daughter and co-heir of Montagu Burgoyne, Esq., younger son of Sir Roger Burgoyne, Bart., by the Lady Frances Montagu, his wife, sister of the last Earl of Halifax. He became, however, a widower in 1838; and has left one daughter, Frances-Mary, and three sons, the eldest of whom, John Fenwick Burgoyne Blackett, Esq., succeeds to the estates.

DEATH OF MR. CLOWES.—We regret to state that Mr. Clowes, senior, the eminent printer, of Duke-street, Stamford-street, died on Tuesday evening, after a short but severe illness.

DEATH OF MR. WARD, THE SHIPOWNER.—We are sorry to announce the decease of Mr. Ward, the extensive and well-known shipowner.

FINANCIAL CONDITION OF THE COUNTRY. The official account of the public income and expenditure for the year ending the 5th of January inst., has been published, from which it appears that the total income for the year was £35,790,138 7s. 5d., and the expenditure £50,943,430 8s. 3d., leaving an excess of income over the expenditure of £2,846,307 19s. 2d. The balances in the Exchequer, on the 5th of January, 1845, amounted to £8,492,260 8s. 6d., and on the 5th of the present month they were £9,131,382 8s. 10d. The diminution of debt within the year was as follows:—Reduction of "deficiency bills," £2,401,000; ditto, funded debt, £1,178,453. Total, £3,578,453.

FINE ARTS.

"THE CHOCOLATE GIRL."

THIS elegant Painting belongs to the class of which "La Curiosité" and "L' Oracle des Champs" are specimens; the last-named has been already engraved in our Journal. We now give "The Chocolate Girl," from the painting by M. Liotard, in the Royal Gallery at Dresden. It is supposed to be a portrait of the mother of a distinguished Hungarian prince. It has been beautifully engraved by Posselwhite, and is published by Mr. Hollaway, 14, Bedford-street, Covent Garden.

Fair Hebe of the old régime
Long banished from the Tuileries,
Thy full dark eyes appear to dream,
Thy smile to weave Love's plantastes.
Is it for you young cavalier
Who sighs and laughs, and laughs and sighs
The Spaniard's nectar—and will swear
The God's own nectar's on thy lips?

Trust not the flatterer, Jeanette!
His heart is fickle as his plume.
Though humble be thy station, yet
'Tis Queen-like o'er the lost one's doom.

Though diamonds in her hair be set,
And velvets of the richest loom
My robe her, trust me well, Jeanette,
So envies thee thy spotless bloom.

Or is it 'neath the Prado's trees,
Where dark eyed Madrilenes rove,
Thou weavest the cup, fann'd by the breeze
That hovers o'er the orange grove?
Alas! that day, too, is gone by.
The breeze is tainted by cigars,
" Acqua y fuoco," th' on_y cry:
And smoke the bower of Beauty mars.

Whate'er thy land, fair Girl! may Peace
Pyramid in sunshine round thy heart
Life's sweetest flow'rets seldom cease
To spring for such as now thou art—
Queen beside the Guadalquivir
Thou serv'st the cup beloved of Spain,
Or near the Prater—or that river,
Where Paris smiles o'er Syren Seine.

L.

THE PAPWORTH TESTIMONIAL.

ON Monday, a splendid, massive Silver Inkstand was presented to Mr. Papworth, the eminent architect, as a testimonial of respect and esteem, by his professional friends and pupils. Mr. Papworth, we regret to add, is withdrawing from practice owing to ill-failing sight; yet, this approaching event will assure him of the high estimation in which he is held by an influential body of London architects. The presentation of the Testimonial took place on Monday afternoon, at the house of Mr. Donaldson, in Bolton-gardens, Russell-square. The inkstand is of elegant design, and bears the following inscription:—

TO JOHN BUONAROTTI PAPWORTH, ESQ., M.I.B.A.,
ARCHITECT TO H.M. THE KING OF WURTEMBURG,
FIRST DIRECTOR OF THE GOVERNMENT SCHOOLS OF DESIGN IN ENGLAND, ETC.,
THIS TESTIMONIAL IS PRESENTED, BY A FEW PROFESSIONAL FRIENDS,
UPON HIS RETIRING FROM PRACTICE,
AS A TRIBUTE OF THEIR RESPECT AND ESTEEM,
FOR HIS TALENTS AS A DISTINGUISHED ARCHITECT, AND FOR HIS WORTH AS A MAN.
JANUARY, 1847.

Thomas Allason	Charles Fowler	Charles Mayhew
Samuel Angell	E. M. Foxhall	W. A. Nicholson *
George Bailey	George Gutch	James Noble
Charles Barry, R.A.	George Gwilt	W. M. Nurse
Thomas Bellamy	P. Hardwick, R.A.	George Papworth *
W. J. Booth	J. D. Hopkins *	W. F. Pocock
J. Borrell	Joseph Kaye	John Shaw
R. Cantwell	H. E. Kendall	J. Stokes *
C. R. Cockerell, R.A.	Samuel West *	William Tite
T. L. Donaldson	J. Lockyer	James Thomson *
	J. Lockyer, Jun.

The ceremony of the presentation was, at the request of the Committee, kindly undertaken by Mr. Cockerell, R.A., Professor of Architecture in the Royal Academy; and who, in an eloquent and appropriate address, adverted to the following reasons which prompted the Testimonial. These were, he said,

1st. Mr. Papworth's practice and assistance of his art in civil times, when there was hardly any other architect after the death of Sir William Chambers, R.A., found to sustain the reputation of the profession in England.

2nd. Mr. Papworth's reputation in a practice of nearly fifty-five years at home and abroad, for unbroken honour and purity of taste.

3rd. To the changes of taste that had occurred in every department of manufactured art, which had been benefitted in almost every branch by Mr. Papworth's employment from his own designs especially furniture, in which he effected a total revolution of fashion; which had been copied, and had been largely followed or drawn by other artists.

4th. To Mr. Papworth's noble perseverance in writing in favour of the arts and to his exertions in forwarding the formation of the schools of design, to his example in uniting the practice of landscape gardening with that of architecture and to his works on that subject and on the latter.

5th. To the high reputation acquired and maintained by Mr. Papworth for unblemished integrity.

Mr. Papworth's reply was short and eminently pathetic; he accepted the testimonial, he said, as a matter which through all his life he had wished for, and without which his death would have been unchecked by the reflection that others had judged him as his by no had endeavoured to deserve. Beyond the usual age of man, exhausted with the efforts of an unusually severely active life, shattered in memory and body, and on this his seventy-second birthday, unable

* Pupils of J. B. Papworth, Esq.

F I N E A R T S.

THE CHOCOLATE GIRL.—(LA CHOCOLATIÈRE.)—PAINTED BY LIARDOT.—(SEE PRECEDING PAGE.)

to distinguish the features of the friends who surrounded him, he felt that he had not long to live to enjoy the remembrance of a meeting with them which must always be most dear to himself and to his children. He concluded by thanking Mr Cockerell and Mr Donaldson for their kindly offices.

Such a gift (exclusively on professional grounds) has not before been bestowed upon any architect in this country by his compeers.

After the ceremony, the company were hospitably entertained by Mr. Donaldson, at luncheon.

SILVER INKSTAND PRESENTED TO MR. J. B. PAPWORTH THE ARCHITECT, ON MONDAY LAST.

ILLUSTRATED LITERATURE.

THE MAN IN THE MOON. No. 2.

VERY lively little book, under the joint editorship of Mr. Albert Smith and Mr. Angus B. Reach, which promises to make a hit. It is full of good-tempered pleasantry, and light shafts happily aimed at passing topics; and teems with humorous, well-executed wood-cuts. To beguile a railway journey—or, indeed, an hour anywhere—it is just the thing, and is quite as much adapted to the drawing room table, as the pocket of the traveller.

There is a large folding Frontispiece, designed by the principal artist of the Paris Charavari, "Cham," representing the adventures of a foreign gentleman in London—alone worth the price of the entire work, which is a marvel of cheapness—and all the subjects of the Month—from the Rival Italian Operas, to the Æther Operations—from the National Gallery to the Pantomimes—are turned to diverting account. We make the following extracts, as specimens of the illustrations:—

OUR PORTRAIT GALLERY.

"The Man in the Moon" has peculiar opportunities of taking a novel series of portraits of passing individuals. The novelty will consist in the power of delineating the inside, as well as the outside, of the head of the subject. The artist wondering where the continued flow of harmony comes from, commences with the head of

MR. BAIFE.

SONG OF THE PATIENTS.

FROM THE NEW BEGGAR'S OPERA.

How happy could I be with Æther
Were Mesmeric Charmers away
But whilst they perplex me together
The devil a word can I say.
Sing Robinson, Thomson, and Cooper,
Fol lol de rol, lol de rol, lay,
There's nothing like Æther and stuper
For making a heathful gay!

TAVERN PENS.

(COPY OF AFFIDAVIT.)

GEORGE ORDEAR, philosophical historian and lyric poet, maketh oath and sayeth—

That the above are true, exact, and faithful portraits of the pens with which he was supplied, to write "A Shower of Frogs," in the Crown Tavern.

TO PERSONS IN WANT OF EMPLOYMENT.—Since the impetus which the invitations of provincial Athenæums and Parthenons to authors to preside at their meetings have given to the trade of popular writers, and literary institutions offer great opportunities for literary [illegible] to get out charged

The Pope has abolished the toe-kissing business. The tribute in question will no longer, therefore, be paid upon the toe

THE BALANCE OF HAPPINESS.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE PHILOLOGICAL SOCIETY.—The origin of the word Editor was long lost in the mists of obscurity. It has, however, recently been ascertained that, owing to the continued series of perplexities and mental struggles endured by the unfortunate race in question, they have been from the earliest times in the habit of slapping their foreheads with their hands. Hence the term Head-hitter corrupted by degrees into Editor.

JUVENILE FANCY BALL AT PARIS.

JUVENILE FANCY BALL AT PARIS.

Among the "Festivities of the Season," in Paris, Bals Costumés, in which the children alone appear in fancy dresses, have been much in vogue. We incline to think the idea an improvement on the general practice of Fancy Dress Balls for children of a larger growth. We never saw one yet in which the costumes did not seem to sit uneasily and stiffly on the wearers, as if the whole affair needed an apology, which was made by each individual being as awkward as possible. The spirit of these social freaks is caught much better by children. They enter into it with the grace they carry into all their other sports; and they become their disguisements better: a diminutive Fairy Queen is quite en règle, where a full-grown emigrant from the Land of Fays has always something incongruous; the silver gauze wings do not carry off the assumption, but we can believe a child to be anything that prettiness and grace belong to as of right. One of these Juvenile Balls is a very brilliant and pleasant spectacle, besides being a source of unbounded amusement to the little Queens and Shepherds of the evening. We give a sketch of a group from a Parisian Ball of this kind: the peasant girl, it will be seen, sits beside the Queen, and the shepherd, with dog and staff, is promenading with a Sylph.

STEEPLE-CHASING AT SOUTHGATE.

Tuesday was a lovely day for this sport, which was well attended by motley groups of spectators, vehicular, equestrian, and pedestrian. A pleasant drive over the numerous white-railed bridges and culverts which span the New River, and streams of Hornsey and Edmonton, brought us to the Cherry Tree at Southgate, the head quarters of the men and horses. A descent of half a mile led to the ground, an elevated slope with a western aspect, which formed the starting and winning field. The line was well chosen, and the leaps, seven in number, with a brook taken both in going and returning. We need not say that the scenery of the vicinity is truly English and picturesque, as it must be well known to the majority of our readers; this last attribute was enhanced by the bustling throng which [illegible] whom we noticed many of the softer sex. At a few minutes before two, the horses, five in number, took their preliminary canter, and started for the first race.

A Sweepstakes of 10 sovs each, with 50 added. Six Subscribers.

Mr. [illegible]'s g h. Ranger	(Salt)	1
Mr. Lawrence's b g Crayfish	(Owner)	2
Mr. Stapylton's b g Carlow	(T. Oliver)	3
Mr. Markham's ch g The Governor	(R. Land)	0
Earl Strathmore's b g Walter Gay	(Rockley)	0

The race [illegible] till within three leaps of home, when Walter Gay, who seemed to have the lead of the affair, fell: he was, however, quickly up again, when he and the Governor came into contact: Land was unseated, and Rockley pressed a regular parlour, which threw both their chances out. Salt, on The Sailor, now single out Gaylad, and a rattling gallop into the w ning field ensued Gaylad swerved slightly from a straight line, and The Ranger came in a clever winner by several lengths. Gaylad would, in all probability, have won, had not Mr. Elmore lost his stirrups at starting. Carlow with Oth on his back, was an indifferent third, and the other two came in at their leisure.

THE SOUTHGATE STEEPLE CHASE.—SCENE AT THE BROOK.

After a lapse of nearly an hour, a field of nine just in an appearance for the second race.

A Sweepstakes of five sovs. each, with 20 added. 10 Subs

Mr Sadler's b c Thunder	..	..	..	(Owner) 1
Mr Markham's b g Little John	..	..	..	(B. Land) 2
Mr. A. Dixon's b h The Fox ..	..	..	..	(Sc ne) 1
Mr. Bevan's The Banker ..	..	..	..	(Reid)
Mr. Edwards's ch m Grace Darling	..	..	..	(Edwards) 0
Mr. Morgan's bl gelding ..	..	..	..	(Scott) 0
Mr. Lawrence's br g Warrior	..	..	..	(Mr Dockwell) 0
Mr. Venner's Mr. William ..	..	..	..	(Oliver) 0
Mr. Ritt's br g Saco ..	..	..	..	(Scyffert) 0

Mr. Moore's Conservation, with the top weight (11st 7lb) did not start. Now made a mistake early at the brook, and was soon thrown out. The Doctor and Little John now showed the way home, Mr. Morgan's gelding and the Warrior making a long run. The horses came in as we have arranged them in the list. Scott and M'Donough raising home. The sports wound up with a Hurdle Race, in which the spin of three times round the winning field, and down the d.p leading therefrom, was the most amusing affair of the day.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

"HANDICAPPING."

Of all the horrid, hideous notes of woe,
Sadder than owl sonns, or the midnight blast,
Is that portentous phrase, "I hold you so."
Uttered by friends, those prophets of the past;
Who, ahead of saying what you were should do,
Own they foresaw that you would do't at last.
And solace your slight lapse 'gainst "honor more t'
With a base remembrance of old stories.

BYRON.

Within the last half dozen years, there has grown into great popularity, and consequently into great practice, a novel expedient applicable to the so important sports, Racing and Yachting known thus as the Handicap. Its operation upon those pastimes, indeed, is by no means of a like nature, inasmuch as it is so constituted, or at least supposed to be so constituted, as to make the finish of horses or of vessels as close as possible, and that in a match as well as in a race. At a meeting at Newmarket, when a Handicap comes off, you expect to see the whole field, good, bad, and indifferent, well up at the conclusion: at a Regatta at Cowes, when a Handicap is sailed, the yacht that you would back may be running through the Needles when the leading craft is rounding the flag-boat of the R. Y. S. Club House. Ashore and afloat, therefore, our contrivance is a very different affair. The purpose of this notice is to show that you would do well to think further than extenuate—nor set down aught in malice: but, seeing that, unless some better system be adopted, it must "fall at last," we may be saved the regret and odium of being "prophets of the past."

Since the fable of the Father and his Son and their Donkey was written, people have given up the attempt to please everybody: it is looked upon as a Utopian conceit beyond the achievement of poor human nature. Probably it is just because you don't ask your friend to dinner when ye meet him, there's no reason that ye weak his nose: set modus in rebus. Now, there is no method in Handicapping as these presents are here shall proceed to illustrate—and there ought to be: there is no rule, but rather one mighty exception—exceptionable, so we hasten to show; keeping up our learned line—delectando partiergue nos—s!

Very recently, we spake of the sporting touring Handicaps, the weights for which appeared at the commencement of the year. The fashion of their philosophy may be gathered from the following samples. Armadale is required to carry 8st. 13lb for the Great Metropolitan Stakes, and a stone less for the Chester Cup: the standard between these two races being 6lb.; Best Bower, for the former, is set down for 7st. 12lb.; for the latter, 6st. 8lb: Bantam—"the best season I have known you don't ask your friend to dinner when ye meet him, there's no reason that ye weak his nose: set modus in rebus. Now, there is no method in Handicapping as these presents are here shall proceed to illustrate—and there ought to be: there is no rule, but rather one mighty exception—exceptionable—

WEIPPERT'S SOIREES DANSANTES, PRINCESS'S CONCERT ROOMS. On MONDAY, FEBRUARY 1st, and Every Monday.—A Subscriber of Two Guineas is entitled to a Double Transferable Ticket for Six Nights, and the subscription can commence on any Monday. The Palace Band consists of two same Artistes as attend her Majesty's State Balls and Almack's. Conductor, Mr Weippert; leader, Signor Serbini; cornet-à-pistons, Mr Handley; ophicleide, M Prosperi; M. C., Mr. Cornie. Commences at Ten o Clock. Tickets, Seven Shillings each, at Weippert's Quadrille Office, 21, Soho-square.

LOVE'S POLYPHONIC ENTERTAINMENTS.—VENTRILOQUISM EXTRAORDINARY. MANOR ROOM, STOKE NEWINGTON, Tuesday, Feb. 2. Mr LOVE will present, for the first time here, a LECTURE on the Devices sometimes employed by the gorgeous Temple of Science—Mount of Olives—Gin, with an Enchantment of some of the most celebrated Ventriloquial Professors of the age, country, and world. After which, also for the first time here, a TRIP to HARROW, with new Costumes and Appointments. To conclude with (first time) a TRAVELLER'S REMINISCENCE, or Mine Host a Dominos, or the Negro Head on the Heath. With other Entertainments too numerous to mention in Programme. Begin at 8. First Class seats, 2s.; Second Class, 1s. Books to be had at the Door, price 6d. On Tuesday, Feb. 9, at Waltham Cross. On the first Friday in each Month, at Shanley Hall.

ANCIENT JERUSALEM.—BRUNETTI'S beautiful original MODEL, as in the days of Our Redeemer, from the Bible and Josephus, the labour of years already visited by thousands. Presenting at one view the mighty scene of Him a Redeemer, of the gorgeous Temple, School of Hillel—Mount of Olives—Gethsemane—Cedron—Valley of Jehoshaphat—Place of Absalom—Tomb of David—Pool of Bethesda—Dolorous way, or Rue of street from Pilate's House to Calvary—Towers, Castles, Gates, Valleys, and every other object of interest connected with the Holy City—213, Piccadilly, near Regent-circus. From eleven till five, seven till ten. A Lecture every hour, in English. Admission, 1s; Children and Schools, 6d.—Mr. Brunetti's other Model is at Manchester

GRATIFYING TESTIMONIAL.—We need not say how highly we have been flattered by the deluge of epistles, all couched in the superlative degree of admiration, which has flooded our letter-box. We might make out a brilliant list of characters of as many of places; but, with native modesty, content ourselves with the following gratifying testimonial:—"Plough Hotel, Harrow, January 6, 1847.—To the Editors of THE MAN IN THE MOON.—Gentlemen, Some months ago (having previously enjoyed a cheerful state of mind) I was seized, while witnessing the performance of a burlesque, with a deep attack of chronic melancholy, which I vainly endeavoured to cure by the usual means. I read recently, as they appeared, all the comic publications of the day, while under receiving the slightest benefit till I was led, by an advertisement in the ILLUSTRATED NEWS, to purchase a number of your periodical, which I did on Friday last. A glance at the cover provoked a smile, and he (I had read a single page) I burst into a fit of hearty laughter, which I continued to look back upon. To make a long story short, your cheerful servant, "JOHN JONES SMITHERS."

P S You may make any use of this letter you like; and please send down a couple of dozen of your next number for the use of my poor neighbours.

No II of THE MAN IN THE MOON NOW READY. Price Sixpence.

Office, 17, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row. Sold by all Booksellers.

In 18mo, sloth, 18th Edition, price 1s 6d.

PRELIMINARY LESSONS on the HISTORY of ENGLAND. For the Use of Junior Classes.

By the Rev. [illegible] HAMILTON AND CO.

In 18mo, 2nd Edition, price 6d; sewed,

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS on the CATECHISM of the CHURCH of ENGLAND By the Rev F. B. FORTMAN, M.A., Rector of Staple Fitzpaine and Prebendary of Wells. Taunton: F. MAY. London: J and F. RIVINGTON

THE PREPARATORY LATIN GRAMMAR, for the Use of Little Boys. By the Rev EDWARD EVERARD, D.D., Incumbent of Bishop's Hull. Taunton: F. MAY. London: SIMPKIN and MARSHALL

COINS of the ANCIENT ROMAN EMPERORS: History of the Succession of the Ancient Roman Emperors, with the Prices of their Coins, Portraits, their Dates and Mottoes, is just published by F. WILLIAM, Dealer in Ancient Coins, 66, Strand, London, price 1s.; by post, 1s 6d. Coins bought or sold for cash. Sought, Catalogued, &c.

NEW WORK ON TURNING.

Now ready, 8vo, cloth, gilt,

THE HAND-BOOK OF TURNING,—Containing Instructions in Concentric, Eccentric, and Excentric Turnery: also various Plates of Chucks, Tools, and Instruments and Directions for using the Eccentric Cutter, Drill, Vertical Cutter, and Circular Rest, with Patterns and Instructions for working them.

By SAUNDERS and OTLEY, Publishers, Conduit-street.

The Art of Health, Happiness, and Long Life, in Two Volumes, 1s. each; by post, 1s. stamps

WHAT TO EAT, DRINK, and AVOID; with Diet Tables for all Complaints; 2. HOW TO BE HAPPY; on Regimen, Exercise, Sleep, Mental Government.—By ROBT. JAS. CULVERWELL, M.D. MRCS, L.S.A., &c. SHERWOOD, 23, Paternoster-row; the Author, 10, A Jermyn-street, and all Booksellers

THE CHEAPEST MUSIC BOOK EVER PUBLISHED.

THE BOOK OF MELODY and DRAWING-ROOM COMPANION, price 7s 6d, or separate, 1s each, on Monday, February the 1st, 1847, will be published, elegantly bound in cloth and gold, illustrated by J. ANDRADE, and edited by ROBERT GUYLOT, Composer of "The Rose will Cease to Blow," &c.; containing twelve original Ballads, Romances, and Bravuras, composed for the Pianoforte, and the Voice or Instrument Authors. Every care has been taken to render the work pleasing, moral, and fit for presentation. London: Published (for the Proprietors) by DAVEY and CO., Holywell-Hill

TALE OF LONDON LIFE IN THE MIRROR

Price One Shilling, with Illustrations

THE MIRROR, for FEBRUARY, will contain THE MISER'S WILL; by the Editor, PERCY B. ST. JOHN. Book II. The Japanese Minstrels. Two Hints on the Rook; by Edmund Oller. Habakkuk Sa lenbacher; or the Merchant of Jericho. The Wife: a Poem; by J. A. Heraud. Her Patron; by Frances Brown. Mr. Cornelius Webb's Dinner. My Uncle's Diary by Ion. The Bedouin Sheikh's Banquet. Mysterious Proceedings; by Percy B. Lacy. Anecdotes of Authors. Anecdotes of Actors. Literary Gossip. Fine Arts. Music. Visitation of Woo—Ireland; by C. T. Browne. Abd-el-Kader, or the Curse of Disarb; by Samuel Farquharson. Parliamentary Intelligence. Chess. 1 Crime of Poverty. Greater Thieves than Poverty. Brown. Assurance Societies with Literary Reviews. Notes of the Month, and Dramatic Notices. CHARLES OLLIER, 18 and 19 Southampton-street, Strand.

MR. COLBURN'S NEW PUBLICATIONS

I. AN OVERLAND JOURNEY to LISBON, at the Close of 1846; with a Picture of the Actual State of SPAIN and PORTUGAL. By T. M. HUGHES, Esq., Author of "A Journey to the Source of Spain." 2 vols. post 8vo.

II. [illegible] ATONEMENT. By MRS. GORE. Authoress of "The Banker's Wife." 3 vols.

III. VOLS. 3 & 4 OF GENERAL MONTHOLON'S HISTORY OF THE CAPTIVITY OF NAPOLEON AT ST. HELENA. Completing the work. Now First Translated and Published from the Author's Original Manuscript.

IV

A SECOND EDITION of CESAR BORGIA, an Historical Romance. By the Author of "Wyoming." 3 vols.

PART II. of the RE-ISSUE of [illegible]'S HISTORY of the LANDED GENTRY. To be Completed in 3 Monthly Parts. [illegible] vols.

STRAWBERRY HILL; an Historical Novel. By the Author of "Shakspeare and his Friends," &c. 3 vols.

"The number of these pleasing volumes has undertaken a bold task, no less than to present us with Horace Walpole as the hero of a love-romance. In "Strawberry Hill," our readers will find a large field of enter tainment of the most [illegible] description.

HENRY COLBURN, Publisher, 13, Great Marlborough-street

PRONOUNCED BY ALL THE PRESS TO BE THE BEST ALMANACK.

Now Ready, Published Annually, with Corrections,

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK, FOR 1847.

The Natural History by Mrs. Loudon. The Astronomical Department under the superintendence of James Glaisher, Esq., of the Royal Greenwich Observatory. Eighty splendid Engravings of Natural History, Sports, Field Operations, and Astronomical Appearances of the Months. A very interesting Chart of the Annular Eclipse, Duration of Moon-light, Illustrated. Magnetic Variations of the Compass, and all that can be desired or expected in an Almanack. Price 1s.; gilt edges, 2s.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"[illegible] Almanac contains a variety of useful, substantial, and w[illegible] on the following subject of moonlight, its presence or absence is known by light or d[illegible] [illegible] sports and out-door [illegible] and numerous [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

THE BUDRUM MARBLES IN THE BRITISH MUSEUM.

FRAGMENT OF ALTAR.

PORTION OF FRIEZE.

THESE celebrated sculptures have lately been secured to us by the active and praiseworthy exertions of Sir Stratford Canning, her Majesty's Minister at Constantinople. They are now safely deposited in the British Museum; but, we believe their permanent position to be scarcely yet decided on. They appear to have been built into a fort at the entrance of the harbour of Budrum, in Asia Minor, which occupies the site of the ancient Halicarnassus; and thence, by permission of the Porte, Sir Stratford Canning has caused them to be transferred to this country

These Marbles are supposed, with great probability, to have formed part of the celebrated Mausoleum, erected in Halicarnassus, by Artemisia, Queen of Caria, to the memory of her husband Mausolus, B.C. 360. The monument was one of the reputed "Seven Wonders of the World;" and, from Pliny's description of it, it was decorated with sculpture, and reliefs by Scopas, Bryaxis, Timotheus, and Leochares The tomb is stated to have been in existence so late as the 12th century, indeed, it would appear that it was only finally destroyed in the early part of the 16th, for it is expressly related by historians of the period, that the Knights of Rhodes destroyed the edifice, which they had opened up in the course of excavating for materials to repair a fort at the entrance of the harbour. Portions of the sculptures were then removed and built into the walls of the fort, and remained there until their recent removal.

If the above opinion of the identity of these Marbles be correct, in the opinion of a critical writer in the Athenæum, they "have an historical value scarcely less than those of the Parthenon:—for we learn from ancient writers that the frieze of the Mausoleum was the work of four of the most celebrated artists of the day—Bryaxis, Leochares, Scopas, Timotheus, or, according to Vitruvius, Praxiteles. The Budrum Marbles would thus represent the style of a period in the history of Greek sculpture of which, from the want of dated monuments, our knowledge is most uncertain—the century preceding the reign of Alexander the Great, and distinguished in the history of Art as the Praxitelian period."

The relics in the Museum consist of eleven slabs of a frieze, a portion of a draped female figure, and part of an altar. The subject of the former, like that of the Phygalian and Lycian friezes, is a battle with Amazons. The critic in the Athenæum writes:—

"At the first glance, we were struck by the masterly composition of the groups,—the knowledge and skill which distinguish the Athenian school. As the eye dwells longer, and compares more critically, we perceive certain peculiarities distinguishing the style from that of the older Greek friezes with which we are acquainted. With no trace of the careless, barbaric ignorance so apparent in the Lycian friezes—with more elaborate and skilful execution than the Phygalian these sculptures still want the simplicity, repose, and unconscious beauty of the art of Phidias. Though the general composition is finely conceived, the design and treatment are not without mannerism. The true proportions of the figures, when compared with those of the Elgin sculptures, appear unnaturally elongated; and the graceful flow of the draperies is singularly contrasted with the poverty and meagreness of some of the anatomical details and the constraint of the attitudes. We are at once reminded of Pliny's description of the new style introduced by Lysippus —who, in order to give greater height to his figure, substituted a greater dryness of treatment for the squareness and full muscular development of the earlier school. With this change in the type commenced that general decadence of art which may be traced step by step in the coins of the Seleucidæ, and other successors of Alexander; and which, from the evidence of the Budrum Marbles, according to their presumed date, must have been already introduced B.C. 350. This is rather an earlier epoch than that from which the decline of sculpture is usually dated; and it must be confessed that the Budrum friezes, when compared with the reliefs of the choragic monument of Lysicrates, a contemporary work, and other examples, are considered to be of the same period, exhibit far more strikingly the characteristics of decadence; and might, in the absence of all historical data, be assigned with great probability to the century after the death of Alexander, B.C. 323."

The Marbles were seen by Messrs. Dawkins and Wood on their way from Palmyra in 1749 or 1750, and were also seen, drawn and engraved, within a very few years of that time (in 1751 or 1752), by Richard Dalton, one of a party of English travellers who were then engaged with Lord Charlemont in exploring the coasts and islands of the Archipelago. The finding of the relics is thus described by Dalton:—

"After visiting Stanchio, we left our ship between that island and the continent, and rowed our boat into a small bay, at the end of which are several scattered houses; the place is called Bodrom, being the situation of the ancient Halicarnassus. On the side of a hill fronting the sea, are the ruins of a theatre; near the sea, on a small peninsula, stands a decayed castle, said to have been built by, and formerly belonging to, the Genoese. On our entering the court, we were surprised to find eleven pieces of sculpture stuck promiscuously into the walls, which by such an accident are most fortunately preserved. They represent the battle between Hercules, Theseus, and companions, with the Amazons.

"By the corresponding form and moulding of these remains, they seem to have formed part of a frieze to some grand building; and it is not improbable they may have formed parts of the ornaments of that celebrated wonder of art, which Artemisia erected to the memory of her husband, Mausolus.

"Near the same place, on the seashore, we discovered a round block of marble, perhaps part of an altar, on which is expressed a very elegant bas-relief; as to the attitudes, drapery, &c., the heads were much damaged; if we had had a proper barge we might have conveyed it away to the ship without any molestation or hindrance from the inhabitants."

The removal of these Marbles to our national Museum has already given rise to much discussion as to their original purpose, as well as their age. Mr. Hamilton, in a paper read to the Royal Society of Literature, differs entirely from the opinion which would identify them with the tomb of Mausolus

Mr. Newton, in some remarks read to the Institute of British Architects, considers that, in default of more direct evidence of the site which these Marbles originally occupied, their dimensions considered architecturally, or the character of their execution and subject, we must remain contented with the positive declaration of Fontanus, that the fortress of the Knights of Rhodes was built out of the ruins of the sepulchre of Mausolus; and, on the faith of this declaration, consider that in these Marbles we possess fragments of one of the Seven Wonders of the World.

A note, subsequently communicated by Mr Newton to the Athenæum, is, however, more direct in its evidence. Referring to the dissertation on this subject, by Sainte Croix—"Mémoires de l'Institut, classe d'Histoire," 4, p. 506, that learned author (says Mr. Newton), shows "That the mausoleum is noticed in ancient authors, from time to time, from the age of Lucian; and was still standing in the 12th century, in the time of Eustathius, the commentator on Homer,—who states that it was, and is, a marvel. To the testimony of Fontanus (previously quoted by Mr. Newton) he adds a more full and detailed account of the destruction of the mausoleum by the Knights of Rhodes, as narrated by Claude Guichard, in his work on the 'Funérailles et Manieres diverses d'ensevelir,' printed at Lyons, 1581, lib. iii. 5, p. 379. In that most curious narrative we find it stated that, in 1522, when the Sultan was preparing to besiege Rhodes, the Grand Master sent some of the knights to repair the Castle of St. Peter, at Halicarnassus. Looking about for materials, the knights found, in the middle of a level near the port, some steps of white marble. Making use of these in their repairs, and finding the stone good, they continued to excavate on this site. As they dug deeper, they found the base of the building enlarge; and, at the end of four or five days' excavation, they came to an opening like the mouth of a cave; entering which, they arrived at a great square room, surrounded with columns of marble, with their bases, capitals, architraves, friezes and cornices carved in half relief, representing combats and histories. The knights were at first struck with admiration at the beauty of this work, but shortly after, broke and destroyed the whole of it,—using it as materials. Besides this hall, they found a door leading into another, as it were the ante-chamber; where was a sepulchre of white marble, of marvellous beauty and brilliancy, which they had not time to examine, the trumpets having already sounded the retreat. On returning to the spot, next day, they found the tomb opened and rifled, and quantities of fragments of cloth and gold strewn about,—probably the work of pirates in the night. 'Thus,' says Guichard, 'this superb sepulchre, one of the seven wonders of the world, after having lasted 2247 years, was discovered and destroyed by the Knights of Rhodes, to repair the Castle of St. Peter.' After this clear and detailed statement, no reasonable doubt can, I think, be entertained that the Marbles now in the British Museum formed part of the sepulchre of Mausolus."

DRAPED FEMALE FIGURE.

THE NEW HOUSES OF PARLIAMENT.—The following Report, by Mr. Barry, the architect, appears in the Report of the Commissioners of Woods and Forests, just issued, showing the state of the works of the New Houses of Parliament, on the 30th of June last:—"The shell or carcass of the river front portion of the building is completed. The whole of the north and south flanks are now roofed in, and the carcass of the building completed, with the exception of a small portion of the coating on the ridges of the roofs. The Victoria Tower is 70 feet in height, and the ornamental roof over the State entrance within it, is in hand. The clock tower is 73 feet high, and is now above the adjacent roofs. The central tower is from 55 to 60 feet high, and the corridor portions of the building to north, south, and east of it, as well as a portion of St. Stephen's Hall, are at the same height. The whole of the low roofs over the corridor, and rooms surrounding the various courts, are completed. The Royal gallery is roofed in, the windows glazed, and the wood ceiling is nearly completed. The roof of the House of Commons is being fixed, and the New Palace-yard portion of the building is ready for its roof, which will be fixed forthwith. The brick arches forming all the floors in the part of the building, have been completed. The various brick arches forming the floors in other portions of the building are completed, and the stone groins and vaults required in various parts of the building are far advanced. The work at the crypt of St. Stephen's Chapel, and contiguous portions of the building, and also the vaults under the central hall, are at a stand, owing to difficulties in respect of warming and ventilating arrangements. The decorations of the walls and ceiling of the House of Lords are completed. In the House of Lords, and in the adjoining lobbies and corridors, the carpenters and joiners are proceeding with the fixing of the oak finishings. The joiners' work of the libraries, committee rooms, refreshment rooms, and corridors of access thereto, of the Houses of Lords and Commons, are for the most part prepared; but the fixing of these finishings, and the preparations of the joiners' works for other portions of the building, cannot with propriety be proceeded with, until a decision is come to in respect of difficulties connected with warming and ventilating arrangements. There are 1186 men engaged on the works, of which number 774 are employed at the building, 83 at the quarries, 202 at the Government workshops, at Thames Bank, upon the joiners' works, and 127 men upon miscellaneous works connected with the new Palace, both at the building and elsewhere."

MIDDLESEX ELECTION The election of a member for Middlesex, in the room of the late Mr. Byng, will take place at Brentford, on Wednesday next, the 3rd of February. It is expected that Mr. F. Pownall, the chairman of the Middlesex bench of magistrates, will be a candidate on the occasion. Another report is, that a gentleman of considerable standing in the county will offer himself as a candidate, in opposition to Lord Robert Grosvenor.

PORTIONS OF FRIEZE

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE 198 Strand, aforesaid —SATURDAY, JANUARY 30, 1847

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 249.—Vol. X.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 6, 1847. [Sixpence.

THE GREAT EMPLOYER.

COMMON consent has been given by all parties to the Ministerial measures in Ireland; yet that common consent does by no means imply universal approval. The time and the necessity alike forbid a severe analysis, or an opinion very generally entertained would be more freely declared — that these measures are rather a mass of expedients, and those old ones, than a scheme of policy. The number of separate acts and bills, with different sets of machinery, confuse the mind; there is no discerning where they run into and cross each other. They include many objects; some of them, judged by the enormous scale on which all national wants must be measured, almost ludicrously small—the grant of £50,000 for seed, for instance. All the loans, grants, and remissions of debt, to the Irish proprietors, are new versions of a very old song: with the single exception of the extension of the Poor Law, there is nothing in the plan that reaches through the present into the future. It is impossible not to think that the Government is losing a splendid opportunity of effecting much permanent good, if we look merely at one of its omissions.

It has become, for a time, at least, the "Great Employer:" its money is the spring of the social machine; and "the Government" —magnificent abstraction!—ever invested by the popular mind with powers far beyond those it ever has or ever ought to have, is the merchant, miller, money-lender, drainer, seedsman, and road-maker of a whole nation. Its trade in provisions will, we hope, be rendered unnecessary by a return of the more natural state of things. Drainage and agricultural improvements generally would be done better by anybody than by the Government, which invariably pays more and gets less work for it than any other master. A money-lender the Government has always been, in one shape or other; and if it makes its advances with a wise generosity, with its command of funds it can do much that individuals could never attempt. Governments have likewise been the first road-makers in all countries—in many, are still the only ones. That most of the public money, then, should within the last few months have been expended in work on the roads in Ireland is natural enough, and quite according to precedent. But it is possible to follow precedent too blindly; and the weight of opinion in Ireland itself, as expressed through its members, is that this labour has been almost thrown away. The "Great Employer" has been at fault, and, with all his outlay of money, has done nearly as much harm as good: we except, of course, the maintenance of the people: that has been so far effected, with dreadful suffering—yet still effected. But with enormous sums of money to be spent, a great quantity of labour to be employed—the employment being, in fact, the life of thousands—could not the work have been thrown upon something more beneficial than the universal Macadamizing that seems to have been going on in Ireland?

When the Roman legions conquered a country, the soldier changed the sword for the spade, and cut roads over its surface, the Imperial Treasury being the paymaster. But then they were the very best sort of roads known in that age; they are wonderful, indeed, even at the present day, when we have shot far ahead of anything the Romans ever dreamed of. We do not hear of their cutting footpaths through Gaul after having constructed an "Appian Way" to the very gates of the Mistress of the World. We fear we are not so wise in our generation. With a thousand miles of railroad in full operation, with a perfect knowledge that the new system will ultimately supersede the old one, and Mac-Adam become exploded, or driven into by-paths, and that men, despising the admonition of Bacon, will not stand upon the vias antiquas any longer, seeing that the new ones are better, the Government is content to spend millions in breaking granite into lumps, and spreading them thinly over certain portions of the surface of Ireland, and to call the process "road-making." It was the way roads were made once, certainly; but a change has come over the world, and there goes more to the construction of the paths of men than a pauper, a hammer, and a heap of pebbles.

We have spent now something like two millions of money in Ireland on the old system, that a few years hence will be superseded; the work being given half as charity, the object was rather the employment of certain numbers for a certain time, than the securing the best results from the labour. Thus, we hear it stated by those who must have the means of knowing, that roads have been "repaired" that did not want mending, and new ones made where none were required—that some, in fact, have been cut, "leading from nothing to nowhere." So general has been the "mending" process, that for miles and miles in some districts of Ireland, the roads are almost impassable. The difficulty of getting over a piece of fresh Macadamised road is well known to all travellers; getting along a few miles of one perfectly new is still worse; fifteen or twenty miles of broken stones is now a common thing in Ireland, and the consequence is, travelling is stopped or delayed, and the mails are four or five hours going the distance they used to do before the "improvements" in one or two!

THE ELEPHANT PLOUGH, FOR PREPARING A SUGAR PLANTATION.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

Now, while all this useless labour was being employed and paid for, there were whole lines of railroads ready to be made, but deferred by the difficulties of getting money at this crisis. The companies are formed, the bills passed; funds alone were wanting. Would it not have been wiser if "the Great Employer" had advanced some of his millions to those companies, taking the line itself as a security for repayment, and accompanying the loan with a positive condition that as much as possible of the work that employs unskilled labour should be proceeded with at once? Ireland is almost a new field of railways; its system will be a separate and entire one, and the Government might have secured at the outset some of those control over the lines that in England has been lost entirely. We have always heard that with roads Ireland was remarkably well supplied before, but railroads give an impetus to traffic that can be secured in no other way.

It seems to us a grave error to have spent all the public funds on a system of communication every day becoming more useless, and to have refused all aid to the best, the latest, and the one destined to be that of all future generations. The future should be the object of the statesman's acts; but there seems nowhere the boldness that can shake itself free from the fetters of the past: so we overlook Stephenson and Brunel, and all the wonders they have worked, and cling as if infatuated to the old shovel and hammer system of our fathers. We have spent our money and done no good, where we might, with no greater outlay, have afforded as much relief, and had great and useful results to show for it. Lord George Bentinck has done well in forcing this question distinctly upon the Government, as he did on Thursday evening.

THE "ELEPHANT PLOUGH,"

AS USED FOR PREPARING A SUGAR PLANTATION.

The peculiar and heavy character of the tillage required for the cultivation of the sugar-cane, renders it necessary to employ implements of great strength, and peculiar construction, to cut and ridge the trenches, which are five feet apart, and deep in proportion.

The Plough used for this purpose (shown upon the preceding page) is the invention of the Messrs. Ransomes and May, of Ipswich: it is constructed entirely of wrought iron and steel, having a mould-board on either side; and, from the vast quantity of earth it has to dislodge in its progress, requiring great mechanical power to draw it, it has been especially adapted for elephant labour. It will be perceived that the collar prevents the driver sitting upon the neck. Several of these Ploughs have already been sent to India, and report speaks highly of their effective operation.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE

FRANCE.

We are sorry to say that our private letters from Paris speak of great excitement among the population, in consequence of the high price of bread. The Faubourg St. Antoine, so often the scene of rioting among the workmen, has several times been thronged with noisy groups, but they have not yet proceeded to any acts of violence.

The rise in the price of bread was expected to create some disturbances in Paris on Sunday and Monday, but fortunately none occurred. The authorities, however, adopted great precaution to prevent an outbreak. The streets were patrolled during the night by large parties of cavalry. The whole of the guards were doubled, and all the people of the garrison of Paris were armed, to be ready for service in case of need. Fortunately, however, nothing occurred to render all these precautions necessary. The price of bread is now higher in Paris than it has been for the last fifty years.

The Chamber of Deputies has commenced the discussion on the Address. M. Roger was the first speaker against the Address. The hon. member said he regarded the incorporation of Cracow as a fact to be contemplated by the Northern Powers. The protest made by the French Government he considered as inefficient, and he censured the Ministry for the conduct it had adopted, which was, in his opinion, "wanting in power." M. Desmousseaux de Givre spoke in favour of the Address, and defended the policy pursued by the Ministry with regard to Cracow. He considered, however, the paragraph relative to peace to be couched in too affirmative, terms, but he did not, nevertheless, fear that war would ensue.

In the Chamber of Deputies, on Tuesday, the order of the day was the discussion on the Address (paragraph 3, referring to the Spanish marriages). M. Lesseps, in a maiden speech, spoke at some length in opposition to the policy of the Government on the subject. M. Lavergne followed, talking an opposite view, and praising the Ministry for the policy it had pursued on the occasion. M. Cremieux denied that the marriages were of utility to France—they had placed her in a state of isolation; he also denied that the principle that a Bourbon should reign in Spain was a sound one, inasmuch as that line would have contributed to the happiness of that country.

M. Guizot rose in his place, and, without going to the tribune, declared that after the moderation which had presided in the discussions of the English Parliament, he thought it his duty to postpone any explanations which he might have to give, hoping that a reconciliation could not fail to take place between the two countries. After these observations, received with marks of unequivocal satisfaction by the Chamber, the third paragraph was adopted with the greatest unanimity.

M. Dufaure then rose to develop the amendment which he had proposed in concert with M. Billault: "If, in consequence of this event, dissension has arisen between your Government and that of a neighbouring people, France has a right to expect that good understanding will be re-established without detriment to her interests or to her dignity." After a short discussion, this amendment was rejected by 242 to 98. The most important incident of the debate was the announcement by M. Guizot that he did not, after the friendly feeling that had been manifested in the English Parliament, intend to speak at all upon the paragraph, unless he should be attacked. In fact, M. Guizot did not speak, a circumstance that has excited the ire of the Opposition press.

On Sunday last, being the anniversary of the birthday of the Duchess of Montpensier, the Marquis de Brinalus, accompanied by the gentlemen composing the Spanish Embassy in Paris, paid a visit and compliment her Royal Highness. All the Spaniards of distinction at present residing in Paris were also received on the occasion. The Duchess has now attained her fifteenth year.

M. Janbert, Peer of France, and father-in-law of M. Dufaure, of the Chamber of Deputies, died last week at Paris. The Duke de Sabran, Peer of France, died at Marseilles a few days ago.

Very great curiosity has been excited in Paris by the appearance of M. Dumas, the eminent novelist, in the character of a defendant at the Tribunal de la Seine. The complaint was preferred by the Constitutionnel and La Presse, and some other Paris papers, the object being that M. Dumas had broken his engagement with the two above-named journals in the year 1845, and for not having written any one of the works he promised to write for 1846. The damages demanded were 50,000 francs. M. Alex. Dumas pleaded his own cause, in a style marked by much humour and outstanding will be re-established without detriment to her interests or to her dignity." After a short discussion, this amendment was rejected by 242 to 98. The most important incident of the debate was the announcement by M. Guizot that he did not, after the friendly feeling that had been manifested in the English Parliament, intend to speak at all upon the paragraph, unless he should be attacked. In fact, M. Guizot did not speak, a circumstance that has excited the ire of the Opposition press.

On Sunday last, being the anniversary of the birthday of the Duchess of Montpensier, the Marquis de Brinalus, accompanied by the gentlemen composing the Spanish Embassy in Paris, paid a visit and compliment her Royal Highness. All the Spaniards of distinction at present residing in Paris were also received on the occasion. The Duchess has now attained her fifteenth year.

M. Janbert, Peer of France, and father-in-law of M. Dufaure, of the Chamber of Deputies, died last week at Paris. The Duke de Sabran, Peer of France, died at Marseilles a few days ago.

Very great curiosity has been excited in Paris by the appearance of M. Dumas, the eminent novelist, in the character of a defendant at the Tribunal de la Seine. The complaint was preferred by the Constitutionnel and La Presse, and some other Paris papers, the object being that M. Dumas had broken his engagement with the two above-named journals in the year 1845, and for not having written any one of the works he promised to write for 1846. The damages demanded were 50,000 francs. M. Alex. Dumas pleaded his own cause, in a style marked by much humour and by modesty, as follows:—"Gentlemen, I desired to plead my cause in person, because the circumstances which brings me before you is not an affair of man to man, or interest against interest, but rather a sort of duel between honour and honour. I regret not seeing here M. Véron (of the Constitutionnel) and M. Girardin (Presse), for I shall be obliged to fire in the air, and the ball, instead of striking them, will fall at their feet." M. Dumas then read the double agreement entered into between MM. Véron, Girardin, and himself, and remarked that, although that agreement was a conditional one, the Constitutionnel and La Presse commenced on the following day, that "M. Dumas, being free from his engagements on the death of M. Dujarrier, had entered into an agreement with them to write exclusively for them for the term of five years." "That was not true," said M. Dumas, "as I still had to publish about eighty volumes on previous agreements, making altogether 226,000 lines, a number which the Academy, if they were called upon to produce an equal number in two years (and they are forty), would find no easy task to accomplish." M. Dumas then read the agreement entered into between MM. Véron, Girardin, and himself, and remarked that, although that agreement was a conditional one, the Constitutionnel and La Presse commenced on the following day, that "M. Dumas, being free from his engagements on the death of M. Dujarrier, had entered into an agreement with them to write exclusively for them for the term of five years." "That was not true," said M. Dumas, "as I still had to publish about eighty volumes on previous agreements, making altogether 226,000 lines, a number which the Academy, if they were called upon to produce an equal number in two years (and they are forty), would find no easy task to accomplish." M. Dumas then read the double

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—TUESDAY.

THE ANDOVER UNION.—Mr. ETWALL gave notice that on the 16th instant he would bring under the consideration of the House the report and evidence of the Select Committee of last session on the Andover Union. (Cheers.)

THE BUDGET.—In reply to a question from Mr. ROEBUCK, Lord J. RUSSELL stated that it was the intention of the Chancellor of the Exchequer to make his general financial statement on an early day, after the House shall have assented to the Irish measures.

CHARITABLE TRUSTS.—Lord J. MANNERS gave notice of his intention on the 16th instant to bring in a Bill relating to Charitable Trusts.

THE ADJOURNED DEBATE.

The Adjourned Debate on the Labouring Poor (Ireland) Bill was resumed by Mr. HAMILTON, who defended the Relief Committees and the landlords of Ireland, and contended that although the great absentee proprietors in that country had done their duty in the present emergency, yet much of the misery which prevailed was to be attributed to the course pursued by the smaller absentee proprietors of the soil. He did not object to relief being given under existing circumstances to the destitute able-bodied labourer, but he believed it would be most mischievous to make such a measure permanent in its operation.

After several Hon. Members had given their opinions upon the measure,

Mr. LABOUCHERE defended the conduct of the Government, and maintained that the Labour-rate Act had been productive of great benefit. He gave unbounded praise to those Irish landlords who had distinguished themselves during the present calamity by their public spirit and private charity; but, at the same time, he felt constrained to declare that the Government did not meet from the Irish gentry, generally speaking, with that support which they had a right to expect. They had put a fearful crisis to go through, and he should despair of the task before him did he not hope for the unanimous co-operation of the gentlemen of Ireland. He believed it to be the general wish of the House to allow these bills to be read a second time, and to reserve all discussions upon them for the Committee; and it certainly was most important that as little delay as possible should intervene. He did not believe that, as yet, much damage had been done by driving the people from the cultivation of the soil; but not a moment should be lost in carrying the measures which were designed to restore the labourers to the tillage of their lands. He insisted that the determination of the Government not to interfere with the course of trade was now most wise; had they turned retail traders in food, the utmost confusion would have ensued, and the horrors of famine would have been aggravated. With respect to the permanent measures framed to be consumed by the social state of Ireland, he considered it most unjust to describe them as having for their object to enrich the landlords without regard to the great body of the people. The right hon. gentleman concluded by arguing his belief that the presence of the soldiery had demonstrated by the representatives of England and Scotland was of almost equal importance to the measures themselves.

Sir R. PEEL reserved himself for the discussion of the general measures of the Government, but said he cheerfully agreed to a bill of indemnity for what they had done in the crisis which had arisen. At the same time, he thought that all the circumstances connected with that assumption of power by the Executive should be fully set forth. Sir R. Peel added, "With regard to the bill which constitutes Relief Committees, and which is intended to make a total alteration in the system under which relief is now granted, I am also willing to give my assent at once to that measure. (Hear, hear.) I think the evils of the present system are very great, and that the sooner you apply a remedy the better. I cannot help thinking there is great inconsistency, considering how nearly we are approaching that period when it will be impossible to employ labour upon reproductive works, so far as concerns the harvest of the next year—I think, I say, the sooner we enable the Government to make a material alteration in the present system, and promote labour by applying it to the present cultivation of the soil, the greater is the prospect of a diminution of the present difficulty. (Hear, hear.) I apprehend, there are scarcely two months left when, with reference to the spring corn—although I know that the labour is applied in Ireland under a fear from the condition of the soil, and partly from the greater moisture of the climate—although it is usual from these causes to apply labour to the cultivation of the soil for the purpose of producing spring crops at a later period of the year than in England, yet we are fast approaching that period when labour so applied, will be applied in vain. (Hear, hear, hear.) I think, therefore, the sooner we make an alteration in the present system, the better will it be for the future condition of Ireland. (Hear, hear.) I apprehend, that the sooner we adopt the right hon. gentleman (Mr. Labouchere) under-rating the dangers that arise from the application of labour to what are called 'public works.' I beg to remind the right honourable gentleman, that there was in August last, speaking of the operations of the late Government, when there were not more than 60,000 or 70,000 men employed on public works, then stated that very great inconvenience arose in Ireland, from diverting labour from its ordinary course. If that were in August last, when not more than 60,000 or 70,000 men were employed, how much greater must the inconvenience be to the cultivation of the soil when there are not less than half a million of persons employed on what are called public works? (Hear, hear, hear.) I am quite ready to give wide discretionary power to the Government for the purpose of altering that system." (Hear, hear.) The Baronet afterwards observed that, however important the present measures might be, there were others to be expected of still greater magnitude. "By far the most important of those measures are two or three of which we are not yet in possession, and of the principles of which, therefore, it is impossible to form a judgment. I will venture to say that that bill which shall enable those who are in possession of encumbered property to sell that property, is of the most vital importance, as bearing on the permanent condition of Ireland, than those measures which we are now discussing. (Cheers.) Then again, with respect to the cultivation of waste land, I will only so far allude to that measure as to say that I do hope the noble Lord will not pause before he undertakes to expend so much public money as that measure must involve. (Hear, hear.) At the same time, I thought the hon. member for High Wycombe (Mr. Osborne) expressed exaggerated the noble Lord's views upon that subject, for I do not understand the noble Lord to make any proposal to reclaim waste land except as a 4,000,000 acres of waste land. I entreat the noble Lord to bear in mind the exhortation of the Duke of Wellington, and if

FOREIGN CORN PORTS.

ROSTOCK.—FROM AN ORIGINAL SKETCH.

We resume our Illustrations of these centres of commerce, to which public attention is specially directed at the present season of scarcity. In the two instances we have selected, the prospects are by no means promising; for, according to the latest accounts, "At Rostock and Stettin holders had raised their pretensions, and few were willing to engage to ship wheat in spring below 62s. to 63s. per quarter."

ROSTOCK

is the principal trading port of the Grand Duchy of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, essentially an agricultural, wool-growing, grazing, and breeding country. The town stands on an eminence, in a flat and fertile districts, on the bank of the river Warnow, about nine miles above where it falls into the Baltic. It has a good harbour and commodious quays; and the outport is at Wartemunde, at the mouth of the Warnow. It has about 150 ships, which sail under its own flag; and the number of ships which, in ordinary times, arrive every year, is about 600, the foreign vessels being mostly Russian, Swedish, and Danish, and very few French and English. It is only, in fact, when our ports are open to the importation of foreign corn, that British ships are met with, in considerable numbers, in the ports of Mecklenburg. The exports are chiefly corn and wool. The imports are colonial produce, wine, and bay-salt. There are several manufactures of canvass, linen, baize, ships' anchors, soap, and vinegar, and some breweries, distilleries, and sugar refineries. The population is about 19,000.

Rostock consists of the old, the middle, and the new town, besides the suburbs, and it is surrounded with ancient fortifications. It is mostly built in the old fashion of the free German cities, with the gable-ends towards the street; but it has many large and elegant modern houses. The principal public buildings are the Grand Ducal Palace, the University, and the churches of St. Mary and St. Peter, the latter containing the tomb of Grotius. St. Peter's has a fine steeple, 220 feet high. Rostock joined the Hanseatic League in 1630, and was, for a long time, the next city in rank in the Baltic, after Lubeck. Great privileges were granted it by the Dukes of Mecklenburg, many of which it still retains; and, though its commerce is not so considerable as in the time of the Hanse, it is still a place of importance.

The navigation of the Baltic has, of late, been extraordinarily great. According to a letter from Copenhagen, of the 19th ult., the number of vessels which passed the Sound in 1846 was the largest ever remembered. They amounted to 18,765, exceeding by 2815 the number in 1845.

STETTIN.

This finely-built town is the capital of the province of Pomerania, and is one of the most flourishing commercial towns, and one of the strongest fortresses, in the Prussian monarchy. It is situated on an eminence on the left bank of the Oder, about 36 miles from its mouth. The town has a lofty citadel and forts, five principal gates, and eight posterns; and several Government offices. It has also a palace, formerly the residence of the last Dukes of Pomerania; a fine library, barracks, hospital, theatre, &c.; and several charitable institutions. The manufactures are woollens, linen, cotton, leather, hats, sail-cloth, &c. Boats and ships are built here, and the anchors for all the ships of the Prussian States are manufactured here. The trade is very considerable, it being the chief port for the manufactures and produce of Silesia, and for the importation of all kinds of foreign goods. The principal exports are corn, especially wheat; spirits, rape-seed, spelter, timber, &c. The population is upwards of 30,000.

"Stettin," says Mr. Macculloch, "is the seat of an extensive and growing commerce; and is now, indeed, the principal port of importation in Prussia. She owes this distinction mainly to her situation. The Oder, which flows through the centre of the Prussian dominions, is navigable as far as Ratibor, near the extreme southern boundary of Prussian Silesia; and is united by means of canals with the Vistula, the Elbe, the Spree, &c. Stettin is, consequently, the principal emporium of some very extensive and flourishing countries; and not only the port of Frankfort-on-the-Oder, Breslaw, &c., but also of Berlin. (From the latter to Stettin, there is a railway.) Stettin is a free port; that is, a port into and from which all sorts of goods may be imported and re-exported free of duty. If goods brought through the Sound, be imported at Stettin, and entered for home consumption in the Prussian States, they are charged with 2½ per cent. less duty than if they had been imported through any other channel. This is intended to reimburse the merchant for the Sound duties, and to encourage importation by this direct route, in preference to that carried on through Hamburg and Embden."

STETTIN.—FROM AN ORIGINAL SKETCH.

THE FIRST PROTESTANT CHURCH BUILT IN MAURITIUS.

(From a Correspondent.)

The foundation-stone of the above Church was laid on Monday, the 22nd December, 1845, being the day after St. Thomas's Day, by Lady Gomm, wife of his Excellency Sir William Maynard Gomm, Governor of Mauritius, amidst a vast concourse both of the white and coloured population of the island. The day was very propitious, and the ceremony was participated in by all with a deep and becoming interest. The Committee charged with the building of the Church had prepared a large tent and arranged chairs and forms for the visitors and children of the schools. The service commenced by the whole assembly singing the 1st, 2nd, 4th, 6th, and 7th verses of the 122nd Psalm. The Rev. L. Banks, the officiating minister in the district, then read select portions of the Sacred Scriptures, part of 2 Chron. 34th and 87th Psalms, and the Epistle and Gospel for St. Thomas's Day; after which prayers, principally selected from the Book of Common Prayer, were read by the Rev. J. S. Pering, Chaplain to the Forces. Lady Gomm then proceeded to lay the stone in the usual manner. After which, the assembly sung the 100th Psalm, the children of Grand River School, of Mrs. Brownrigg's School on the Beau Bassin estate, and those of the Plaine Wilhems Schools, leading. The Rev. Langrishe Banks then delivered an address, in which he dwelt upon the interesting fact that the foundation-stone, which was then laid, was the first stone of the first place of worship in connexion with the Anglican Church ever undertaken, as such, in the island, the Church of Port Louis having been originally built for another purpose; that it was the first stone of any house devoted to the service of God in the district of Plaines Wilhems; and that the language of the poet was hitherto literally true of the district:—

> The sound of the church-going bell
> These valleys and hills never heard;
> Never sighed at the sound of a knell,
> Nor smiled when a Sabbath appeared

But he expressed a hope that not only for the quarter in which they were, but for the island, the act wherein they had been engaged was only the forerunner of several similar, that the day would come when the sound of St. Thomas's bell would be answered from one on the heights of Moka,* whose echoes, he trusted, would not die away before they heard a responsive voice from the village of Mahebourg.

The Rev. gentleman, in concluding, expressed his conviction that it was by the extension of the Church of England in the Colonies that the strongest bond would be formed between the Father-land and the sons of Britain now settled in every part of the world. And, addressing himself to his Excellency and Lady Gomm, said, that on their retirement from public life, amongst the bright spots which might mark their path, one of the brightest would be the spot that marked the present day—the spot that marked their laying the foundation-stone of St. Thomas's Church, Plaines Wilhems.

His Excellency the Governor replied, in a short and touching address. "Glory, Honour, Praise and Power, &c.," was most heartily sung by all present, and the "Blessing" was pronounced by the officiating Minister.

The Church (which was completed in October last) consists of a chancel, internally 15 feet square; a nave, 42 feet by 23; a north porch, 8 feet square; and a vestry on the south side, corresponding exactly with the porch. In England, the area would be considered sufficient to seat 200; but in the climate of Mauritius it is calculated that it will conveniently hold but 150. The roof is open, and the style, the earlier variety of "the Decorated." It has been built partly by subscription, and partly by a grant from the Local Government. The expense, without pews or enclosing the burial-ground, has amounted to about £2300; £1000 of which has been granted by the Government. This sum appears large; but labour is most expensive in the Colony, and the cartage to the site of the Church, which is on the high ground in the interior, has added considerably to the outlay.

ST. THOMAS'S CHURCH, PLAINES WILHEMS, MAURITIUS.

The building, pulpit, reading-desk, and chancel having been completed, and the permission of the Governor, who with Lady Gomm, attended on the occasion, having been granted, divine service was performed in it for the first time on Sunday, the 18th of October, being St. Luke's Day. The consecration of it, upon the appointment or visit of a Bishop, is anxiously looked forward to. Upon the occasion of the first service, the Church was crowded; both at the English service in the morning, and the French service in the afternoon; for, as most of the French population understand only French, the English Liturgy, translated into that language, is used every Sunday afternoon, and also a sermon preached in that tongue. The Church has been provided with a very handsome stone font, the gift of Lady Gomm.

A newspaper of the Colony states:—"This elegant and substantial building was opened for Divine Worship, in the Communion of the Church of England, on Sunday the 18th inst. A considerable concourse of persons attended on the occasion. We believe one sentiment of satisfaction was felt at the union of strength, beauty, and simplicity in the building, for which we understand the country is indebted to the Rev. Mr. Banks, the Acting Minister, and Mr. Bayley, the builder. The Gothic windows and mouldings give a handsome appearance to the building, but there is no superfluous ornament; all the windows open, to admit a free circulation of air; for the sound of the voice, the interior is perfect; all the wood work is of teak, the stonework substantial, the roof of slate, and interiorly decorated in the Gothic style."

Our Correspondent adds:—"Should you be pleased with the design, you will be gratified with learning that I received the leading idea from a sketch I saw in the Illustrated London News"

* The foundation stone of the Church here alluded to has been since laid by the Governor on the 1st October, 1846.

Death of the Rev. J. T. Hewlett.—We have to record the death of this gentleman, better known to the literary world as the author of "Peter Priggins" (the name he wrote under), "College Life," "The Parish Clerk," "Parsons and Widows," "Dunster Castle," &c. He for many years was a contributor to Colburn's Magazine. In private life he was generally respected and admired for his jokes and pleasantries One of his associates was the late Thomas Hood, and he was his constant attendant when in town until within a few days of his decease. The most painful part of this record is to come—he has, unfortunately, left a family of nine orphan children totally unprovided for.

Election for Chester.—On Saturday, Hugh Lupus, Earl Grosvenor, was elected for the city of Chester, without opposition, in the room of his uncle, Lord Robert Grosvenor, who resigned his seat, in order to stand for Middlesex. Earl Grosvenor was proposed by the Mayor of Chester, Dr. Phillips Jones, and the nomination was seconded by Thomas Dixon, Esq.

The Adventures and Perils of the City Plate.—It is known that the Corporation of London possesses a quantity of valuable plate, the accumulated wealth of ages, and which rivals that of Royalty in costliness and splendour. A singular discovery has lately been made with respect to that treasure. A worthy Alderman, a namesake of the founder of a northern empire, and scarcely inferior in genius and sagacity to that renowned autocrat, with his customary sociability and love of good cheer, obligingly accepted an invitation to grace with his presence a Hebrew festival in the neighbourhood of St. Mary-Axe. Having long been a close observer of the peculiarities of the various classes with which he has associated, the sagacious knight was fully aware of the passion for display which distinguishes the "chosen people;" he was not, therefore, surprised at the gaiety and liberality with which his comparatively humble Hebrew friends had welcomed the honour of his company. When, however, the supper room was opened, and the knight with other guests entered, they were positively startled at the profusion and magnificence of the plate. On a little closer inspection, what was the worthy Alderman's astonishment to recognise his old acquaintances of the Mansion House. Of course the distinguished visitor was deeply moved at this discovery, and lost no time in communicating information of it to head-quarters. Upon inquiry as to how the treasure could have left its resting-place, the mystery was solved by the Davus of the Mansion House, who had the custody of it, admitting that he had been in the habit for some time previous of letting it out, when solicited so to do; and defended the practice by stating, that as his late master had done so, he saw no harm in earning an honest penny by following his example.

FEBRUARY.

Chill February! from beneath thy hood
The crystal tears of winter are descending;
Thy breast, still, to the songsters of the wood,
Opes warmly. Soon the parent bird is wending
Forth to the fields, to seek his nestling's food;
Or, haply, on the rainbow's rim is blending
His hymn of hope with the wind's concert rude.
Brave Month! albeit the shortest of the year,
Not the less joyful, February, art thou;
For Love and Hope shall welcome thy career,
And merry youthhood crown thy "frosty pow."
Hail to thee, February! within whose breast
The germing seeds of Plenty are caressed.

See! on the mossy bank, where still the snow
Is ling'ring, the sweet violet opes her eyes,
Timidly wooing the sun's genial glow,
To smile upon her through the frowning skies;
While, in the streamlet gurgling from the hills,
The speckled trout in glancing joy is seen.
The voice of nature every creature thrills,
On this, thy day, St. Valentine, I ween.
Joy to the patron saint of love and glee,
Whose "hearted throne" is hail'd by maid and swain,
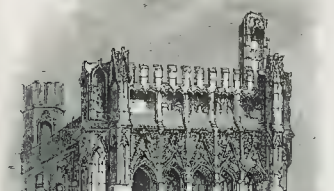
And triple joy, bluff February, to thee,
Whose fostering love can thaw cold winter's chain.
God speed thee, friendly month! Act well thy part—
Propitious to the sickle, sail, and mart.—L.

NOOKS AND CORNERS OF OLD ENGLAND.

CHAPEL ON THE BRIDGE, WAKEFIELD.

THE most interesting feature of the ancient town of Wakefield, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, is the "right goodly chapel of our Ladye, on the est side," as Leland states, of the fair bridge of stone over the Calder. It stands upon the site of a chapel built by Edward III. (1327-77), which appears to have been taken down and re-built by Edward IV. (1461-83), in memory of his father. The architecture is in the elaborate Gothic style, which prevailed in the 15th century; but, as the endowments were withdrawn at the Dissolution, it fell into decay, and was for sometime used as a corn factor's counting-house, though fortunately steps have been taken for its restoration. The building projects over, and partly rests on the starlings of the bridge; the latter has eight arches, and was built in the reign of Edward III.



CHAPEL ON THE BRIDGE, WAKEFIELD.

We were informed by a Correspondent, in September last, that sufficient money had been raised to re-build (? restore) the beautiful edifice; and that a design had been furnished for the completion of the interior for divine service. We trust that the good work has not been retarded. The outer wall is shown in our Engraving to be a picturesque ruin.

THE THEATRES.

FRENCH PLAYS.

M. Lemaitre continues his attractive representations at the ST. JAMES'S Theatre, and since we last wrote has been delighting the crowded audiences with his inimitable Robert Macaire, in "L'Auberge des Adrets." In noticing this drama last year, we alluded to the circumstances under which it attained its popularity. It was intended to be a play of terribly serious interest, but Lemaitre seeing that it would not succeed if so played, changed the character of it entirely: and since its first performance made the part of Robert Macaire entirely his own. Being his own, he has a right to do what he likes with it; and accordingly he "gags" it—to use a theatrical term—in a most entertaining manner: his last whim being to introduce an imitation of the Ethiopian Serenaders, in which his superb burlesque upon their banjo playing, elicits shouts of laughter from the audience.

All through the piece we have the realization of Daumier's admirable "Robert Macaire" series of sketches before our eyes, the great Lemaitre being the type of them. As the termination of his engagement is drawing nigh, we would recommend our play-loving readers not to lose the chance of seeing the most extraordinary actor in the world. Even, if they cannot follow his language very readily, they can shake their sides at his grand extravagant walks, and in fact at all his pantomime and drollery of action. In the very scroop of his snuff-box there is humour. Our Illustration is taken from that scene in "L'Auberge des Adrets," where the officers are examining his passport. The Gazette Musicale says, "On allez vous!" to which Macaire replies, "Allons donc!" (à London.)

HAYMARKET.

On Thursday evening a new comedy, called "A School for Scheming," written, as we announced, by Mr. Bourcicault, was represented for the first time at this theatre.

Before proceeding to detail the plot of the comedy, we may venture to point out a somewhat remarkable departure which the author has made from his usual style of construction. In his former works he has been contented to enlist the attention of the audience by the amusing development of character, an extreme buoyancy of animal spirits, a scintillation of epigram forming a series of loosely connected scenes, revealing no further object than temporary amusement. In spite of the growlings of certain crabbed critics, who wage war to the nibs against this school of purpose-less comedy, we boldly protest against their anathemas, and call to witness the works of Congreve, Farquhar, and even Shakespeare; and beg to know what is the deep moral object which dictated "Love for Love," or, "The Beaux Stratagem," or "The Midsummer Night's Dream," or "The Merry Wives of Windsor." But while we declare that a great comedy may exist, from which no great moral deduction can be drawn, we do not insist on the absence of it; and we are quite content to acknowledge its presence with applause, provided it does not interfere with, or occupy the place of, that great object, amusement.

"The School for Scheming" is a comedy written with a purpose which is apparent from the beginning to the end—which is never uttered, yet is perpetually before the eyes. The author has not viewed the word scheming in its commercial sense only; but, taking a broader view, considers all those who attempt to achieve any position—moral, social, or pecuniary—to which they may not be entitled, as schemers. To elucidate this principle, he has introduced the Honourable Claude Plantagenet (Mr. W. Farren), a broken-down rake, scheming to retrieve his fortunes by a rich marriage; Helen Plantagenet, his daughter (Miss Fortescue), a girl who schemes for a noble and wealthy husband, running into debt for her fashionable equipment with West-End tradesmen, who fix their faith on her matrimonial success for payment; The Mac Dunnam (Mr. Buckstone), a capitalist without a farthing, represents the commercial schemer. Craven Acton (Mr. Howe), the parvenu, the son of the wealthy manufacturer, the ruff-hunter, the victim of penniless lords, is the schemer for social position. Mrs. Fox Fyrench (Mrs. Glover), is the empty, vain, wily hypocrite—the parasite plant of society—a resumé of all the rest. The plot which is worked out by these characters is simple enough. Claude, trusting to retrieve his fortunes by a marriage with Mrs. Fox Fyrench, thinks to enhance his value in her eyes by a great match for Helen, in whom he finds a willing pupil. This girl, who is kept throughout the play, on a balance between her love for Craven Acton (who supposes himself to be ruined) and her ambition to become a Countess, forms a character as difficult to describe as, we do not doubt, the author found to draw. Chance lends some of Claude's creditors to exhibit to Helen the miseries of debt; and the insults to her by them teach her a bitter lesson, which decides her choice. She jilts her lover, and accepts the proposals of the Earl of Fipley (Mr. Selby); who, in his turn, jilts her. Claude marries Mrs. Fyrench, for her supposed fortune, and she weds him, on the strength of his misrepresentation. They discover their mutual dupery, and, driven to extremity, try to bring one of Helen's many admirers to propose; but find that they all drop off, one by one, leaving the schemers in the very trap they had laid for others. Even Craven, having overheard a scene in which Helen reveals her heartlessness, casts her off, reclaims his pledge, and leaves her. So ends the fourth act. During this time, the Mac Dunnam, who in the first act was a poor wretch, whose home is a hall-door and a brass-plate, makes a fortune in railways. His landlady, with whom he was in love, he now treats with contempt, offering her a set of worthless shares as payment of "a quarter's hall-door."

In the fifth act we find our dramatis personæ at Boulogne-sur-mer. Two years have elapsed: adversity has done its wholesome work; Claude and Mrs. Fox have turned out jolly, homely, good-tempered people; the Mac Dunnam, having lost all his fortune as rapidly as he acquired it, is reduced to be a commissionaire; whilst Helen has been so cured of her heartlessness, that she has applied a certain legacy of £30,000 to pay her father's debts. The result then follows naturally. Craven, returning from a tour in the East, discovers that Helen loves him still, and is worthy of his affection. The Mac Dunnam meets his former landlady in fine clothes, and discovers that the worthless shares he had given her had turned out the only good ones he had possessed; and that she has a little fortune, which she generously offers to share with him. And now to speak of the most important character of the comedy, who constitutes in himself the entire background of the drama. This is Job Sykes (Webster), the father of Craven. This character is a strange mixture of innate delicacy with intense vulgarity, and bears the stamina of the whole work. Job Sykes, a foundling—subsequently the stable-boy of Claude—by labour become a manufacturer, marries a lady of rank, who, soon disgusted with his vulgarity, leaves him, and educates her child apart from him, even causing Craven to change his name from Sykes to Acton. The father, still loving his son, follows him through life, averting danger from him, and eventually assumes the name and character of an usurer, to ruin his own son.

We regret that we cannot speak so favourably of this comedy as we have, from time to time, done of the author's previous productions; indeed, in the fourth act, the want of action, and somewhat wearying sentimental dialogues, called forth very unmistakeable symptoms of disapprobation from the audience. From this part to the end, it encountered tolerably strong opposition every now and then; but the curtain, at last, fell amidst loud applause, not, however, unqualified. It played four hours—a dangerous length when there was no rapidity of situation to amuse or interest the audience, and fix their attention.

The acting was very good; indeed, the manner of the Haymarket company had been taken closely by the author, and such characters were allotted to the principal performers as they could scarcely fail to render effective. But of all, we must give the chief praise to Mr. Selby, whose representation of the foppish Lord Fipley was perfect. Nothing could be more ludicrous than his make-up; and without running into absolute caricature, he invested the character with a finnikin absurdity that was exceedingly diverting. It was only to be regretted that he had not more to do in the last two acts; as, whenever he was on the stage, the audience were in high good humour

HEADS OF THE MONTHS.—DRAWN BY KENNY MEADOWS.

M. LEMAITRE, AS ROBERT MACAIRE, AT THE ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.

Mr. Webster's Job Sykes was a fine rough delineation of that kind of portraiture in which he so excels; and, but for the length of some of his speeches above alluded to, would have been very effective. Buckstone, in the different phases of the Mac Dunnum's career, convulsed the house. In his last scene he was ably seconded by Mrs. Humby; and here his poverty-stricken appearance was as ludicrous as his elegant costume, when dressing up to Lord Fipley, in the third act. We were sorry to observe, at times, an imperfection in Mr. Farren's utterance, which rendered what he said almost unintelligible. Mrs. Glover's Finishing Schoolmistress was superb: and the catechism of her pupils on the Peerage and the Opera, a very happy idea. Miss Fortescue, as Helen, was sweet, gentle, and lady-like: two or three natural bits of pathos were very touchingly played Miss Julia Bennett, Mrs. E. Yarnold, and Miss Reynolds, had three comparatively trifling parts of school-girls, which they rendered very amusing. Mr. Howe's part was by no means an easy one, but he acted with much judgment.

The house was crowded. At the conclusion of the performance all the principal characters were called for. Mr. Webster, then, with some difficulty, obtained silence to announce the comedy for repetition until further notice; and, finally, Mr. Bouricault crossed the stage, amidst general cheering. The comedy wants unsparing curtailment: this done, it will have an average existence; but we fear that it will not prove a second "London Assurance."

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, Feb. 7.—Sexagesima Sunday.
MONDAY, 8.—Half Quarter.
TUESDAY, 9.—Jupiter sets 3h. 7m. a.m.
WEDNESDAY, 10.—Queen Victoria married, 1840.
THURSDAY, 11.—Mercury rises 7h. 31m. a.m.
FRIDAY, 12.—Mars rises 4h. 47m. a.m.
SATURDAY, 13.—Uranus sets 9h. 36m. p.m.

HIGH WATER at London-bridge for the Week ending February 13.

Monday.		Tuesday.		Wednesday.		Thursday.		Friday.		Saturday.
M	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.
h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.
6 40	7 0	7 24	7 52	8 25	9 4	9 49	10 24	11 8	11 48	0 10	0 32

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"F. C. G."—The alteration in the law of Transportation has not yet taken place.
"J. B.," Chancery Lane.—We asked for the Sketch, which is, however, too revolting to be engraved. We trust that the disclosures now making may call the attention of the Commissioners about to inquire into the Civil Laws of Jersey and Guernsey, to the appalling fact of there being no public asylums for the reception of lunatics, in these islands.
"V. N. L.," Liverpool.—"Le Journal de Semaine" is, perhaps, the best literary weekly journal published in Paris.
"H. D. C.," Warwick.—We shall be happy to receive the Sketch and Description.
"Mary Blane."—The young Prince of Wales has not yet taken his seat in the House of Lords.
"F. H. Y." must excuse our giving dicta as to the pronunciation of proper names.
"J. C.," Seaford.—The coin in question, (of which a wax impression has been sent), is a sechin of one of the Doges of Venice, but we cannot tell which unless we see the coin itself. The intrinsic value of a sechin is about 9s.—Apply to Mr. Webster, 17, Great Russell-street, Covent Garden.
"A Junior Clerk."—Hall.—"The salary will probably not exceed £100 per annum.
"J. M. L." A list of the Governors of Christ's Hospital may be obtained by application at the Secretary's office, at the Hospital.
"Ephelon" should apply at the Establishment.
"A Draughtsman" is thanked for the hint. We often give illustrations of good specimens of Decorative Art.
"A Reclaw."—The grace per sheet varies from 4 to 12 guineas. An author is entitled to re-publish his papers which have been printed in a periodical work, unless there be a special agreement to the contrary
"Tyro," Dublin.—Apply to Mr. Bogue, 86, Fleet-street, who has published several Drawing-books.
"E. A."—If the horses were regularly purchased, there would be no theft in case of removing them without payment.
"Charades"—We have not room
"Van Tromp" is thanked for the hint.
"A. B. C." is not liable for his brother's debts, on account of his undertaking the settlement of one claim.
"Π. Π.," a Perpetual Subscriber.—The very coal of Fleet Market took place Nov. 20, 1829.
"V. R. Y."—There would certainly be a change that would make the Tables named incorrect at the present time: consult the last Census, the last edition of "Macculloch's Dictionary of Commerce," and "The British Empire," by the same writer.
"R. M. W."—The Treaties to which England has been a party are printed in the Annual Register for the years in which they were concluded.
"Filius Nobilis"—No application of the kind suggested would be attended to, and the questions can only be answered by an Peerage Agent.
"E. M."—The Birmingham Organ is not the largest in Europe. The Haarlem instrument, in Holland, is more colossal.
"Ein Tonkunstler." We do not know if there be a good Portrait of the artist referred to "Trust."—Lord A has two cousins, who are in the Army; we are not aware of either of them reside at Worcester.
"A Subscriber in the Country"—We do not think the creditors could compel the sale of the commission, or could stop the pay.
"Sisters."—We are not certain whether the 6th Lancers have returned from India: the 4th Light Dragoons have returned these some three or four years.
"A h A letter addressed to the author of "The Peerage," &c., to the care of Mr. Cowper, 13, Great Marlborough-street, will reach Mr. Burke.
"A Constant Leader."—We have already, on very many occasions, supplied the following information as to the prices of Commissions:—That of Ensign in the line, £450; Lieut. in the Foot Guards, £1,900; Cornet in the Dragoons, £840; in the Horse Guards, £1,400. The pay of Regimental Officers is as follows: Cornet in the Dragoons, 8*s. per diem; Ensign,* 5*s.* 3*d. per diem.*
"A. F."—Prince Albert has, we believe, no surname
"E. C." The Heroditra slaton of Lord Cottenham's motto is—"As the mind of each, so is the man."
"H. F."—Russia, as a one of the silliest Powers, contracted a loan for the expenses of the last War: it was raised in Holland. For a portion of that Loan, England gave a guarantee, which was continued on certain conditions at the Peace; and the conquest is still in force.
"A Subscriber," Cheltenham.—The Bank occasionally publishes a list of Unclaimed Dividends
"Troublesome," Loughrea.—It requires an instrument of very great power to discern five of Saturn's satellites, and none but the most powerful telescopes can show the sixth and seventh, even to a practised eye. We do not know the cost of such instruments
"J. H., Brixton, had better apply to a Ship-broker.
"Pont-et-un," Kingsland.—We do not undertake to decide disputes at Cards
"Old Man." We cannot state the name of the Author of "Two Old Men's Tales," &c.
"F. T." Liverpool.—The moulds for Stereotyping are of plaster-of-Paris.
"G. W. G."—We (Chester Courant) have heard a rumour, that the Rev. J. Slade, M.A., Vicar of Bolton, and Rector of Chester Cathedral, is to be the new Bishop of Man cluster.
"Omega." Camden Town.—All Insurance payments are made in advance.
"A Subscriber," Kensington.—The last General Election was in 1841.
"Viverra."—The property of persons dying intestate, and without heirs, goes to the Crown.
"W. F. I."—Does our Correspondent refer to an Engraving from "The Lady of Lyons"?
"X. Y. Z."—The address is 186, New Bond-street.
"An Old Subscriber."—We cannot reply to the Question as to the law of Debtor and Creditor in the Isle of Man.
"Richmond" may assume the name, but it will not be recognised in legal documents
"A Lover of Pets." Apply to Dean and Co., Publishers, Threadneedle-street.
"Delta" can only apologise.
"O. L. L."—The charge for the Advertisement will be 5*s*
"A Correspondent."—Kamptulicon is a patented combination of ground cork and India-rubber, which has been used in constructing life-boats.
"W. T.," Charing Cross, inquires why the crimes have been so lenient to the irregular mere of Rogers's "Italy."
"B C. Finsbury.—We believe the Reform Club to consist of about 1500 members.
"C."—Better, should forward his instruction to the Newsman who supplies his copy of our Journal.
"A Constant Subscriber." The Earl of Shrewsbury's Church at Cheadle has a spire 200 feet high; and six bells, besides the Sanctus Bell.
"Danger," to be safe, had better consult a Solicitor.
"A. L.," Rugeley.—A—The Hanwell Lunatic Asylum has provision for upwards of 1000 patients.
"Constance," Stoke Newington.—The East India Company have a College at Haileybury, Herts, as well as a Military Seminary at Addiscombe.
"A. M.," Liverpool, and "Isgarenado," Worcester, are thanked; but we cannot promise, at present.
"M. R. F.," Aberdeen.—The matter shall be rectified. We shall be glad to be favoured with the Sketches.
"J. D."—Next week.
"A Constant Reader" may obtain the two books by order of any Bookseller.
"C. C." Apply to Mr. Walter, Bookseller, near St. Dunstan's, Fleet-street.
"R. F.," Manchester.—Apply to Mr. Hollingsfed, 121, Long Acre.
"Ignoramus." Read Dr. Forbes's small work on Mesmerism.
"Clods" is thanked; but we have not room.
"My Old School" is too long for insertion.
"H. H."—See the volume entitled "The Charities of London," for a List of Almshouses
"A Lady—Mrs. Butler was stated, a few days since, to be at Rome.
"Income Tax." (Abergele), is liable.
"A Subscriber from the First." is recommended to apply through some friend to the British Museum Reading Room. There is no Catalogue of the Library in print.
"Censor," Chatteris.—Declined.
"A Folkestonian."—No. 114 of our Journal contains several Illustrations of the Overland Indian Mail. (Abstract Express from Paris to Boulogne.)
"Jaz," Dundee.—The mails for India, via Southampton, are forwarded on the mornings of the 3*rd and* 20*th of each month, unless they fall on Sundays, and then on the previous evening*
"Z.," London.—The present Parliament can sit legally until October, 1848.
"Charles," Kendal.—The fee for searching for a Register is uniformly 2*s. 6d.*
"W. X. Y. Z.," Bridgwater, is recommended to refer the legal query to a Solicitor
"Georgina," Ship.—There is no additional charge upon our Journal for its being posted in the large envelope.
"W. B. I." is thanked; but, we have not room for such matters, which may suit "The Veterinarian."

"Our Magazine Column" is unavoidably deferred.

BOOKS, &c., RECEIVED DURING THE WEEK.

The Greatest Plague of Life. Part I.—North of England Sketch Book. No. I.—North British Review. No. XII.—West on the Excellency of Man.—The Heroines of Shakespeare. Part X.—History of the French Revolution. (Colburn.)—The Poetical Language of Flowers. By Thomas Miller.—China By R. M. Martin. Part III.—Anatomy for Artists.—Select Writings of Robert Chambers. Vol. I.

Music.—Anthems and Services. No. XL.—The Music Book. Part IV.—Light of Heart am I. Song.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 6, 1847.

Ireland has been the burden of the week's debates, and a heavy and a sad one; yet this good results from the discussions, that the social state of that country is more closely examined than in those fiery battles of party which the youngest of politicians can remember. It is no fault of the members of the Legislature if all the vices of Ireland are not exposed. From the empty pageantry of the Viceregal Court, down to the squalor of the peasant's hut, all is anatomised; and singular it is to see that not one class escapes condemnation. Landlords reveal the mysteries hid in the strong boxes of lawyers and money lenders, and declare that they are only nominal proprietors of the soil; they have all the disposition in the world to do what is just and generous, but they are in the power of others; their names stand at the head of large rent rolls, nine-tenths of which find their way yearly to some scrivener's office in a dirty back street of the City. So they look on the distress around them bereft of power to assist. Then the real proprietor of an estate comes forward, and, though free of bond or mortgage, says he is fettered by the law of entail, by virtue of which some ancestor who died three centuries ago, governs from the grave, and prohibits his descendants from selling what they cannot enjoy, for the world is sadly changed since "the family" was high in the land, and many would gladly part with their birthright; but the law forbids men acting like reasonable beings, and so there is stoppage, impediment, and stagnation, where there should be life and activity. Then comes yet another proprietor, who is neither under a mortgage nor an entail; but, lo! the greater part of his estate is let for a long term of years to "a middleman," at a fixed rent. The landlord hears of exactions, extortions, and ejectments, of "the screw" being applied in all manner of ways, but he has no power to interfere; the odium is his, but not the profit—that goes to another.

The traces of civil convulsion, misrule, mistrust, and the hatred of a conquered for a conquering race, are found everywhere—in the statute-book, in national customs and feelings, in the memory of the people. The land is strewed, as it were, with the ruins of wars, conquests, and confiscations—unsightly relics of a past age, which have not yet been grown over and sunk beneath the soil. All this is apparent, even from the debates; in which each speaker contributes some fact to the mass that swells the heap of mournful anomalies all statesmen, as if by instinct, have alike avoided touching, till its corruption threatens to infect the whole empire. The lean kine of Pharoah's dream devoured the fat ones; and such will be the issue of the relative conditions of England and Ireland, if they go on as they are for any long period. Great wealth never yet stood beside utter destitution without actual diminution or constant danger of being absorbed: perfect security cannot be restored till the balance is to some extent rectified. This conviction weighs heavily on the Legislature at this moment: it may be traced in many a speech—it is proved by the very absence of those old topics that once mingled so largely in all Irish debates. The boldness, we might say the insolence, of faction is repressed in the dark shadow of impending ruin; and parties now see how vain, false, and puerile were their disputes compared with the great necessities of human existence, and the principles of human justice, which they confess they have all neglected alike. The two nations are terrified from their old follies, and begin to say to each other, "Let us set our hearts to know wisdom." What was once only exciting, has become unsafe.

Under this influence, we find in the debates a remarkable accord of all sects and parties in what is doing. There is, so to speak, an almost entire helplessness and incapacity for action, that makes all men accept the measures of the Government as the only ones. They are criticised, indeed; faults pointed out, failures predicted; but no one can suggest anything on the whole better. In the general stupor, the first who take the lead will be followed, and a weak Ministry finding universal consent can discharge all the functions of a strong one.

The debate on the Indemnity Bill of the Irish Executive for exceeding the acts of last session was virtually the discussion on the whole of the Ministeral measures, and it began and ended in two evenings, coming to a close rather unexpectedly on Tuesday, the second readings of the above Act, and the Bill for Extending the Poor-Law in Ireland, being agreed to without one hostile motion or amendment, for the change in the order of taking the bills, proposed by Mr. Williams, can hardly be called opposition, and even that found no seconder. The discussion itself was remarkable for little but that unity of purpose we have pointed out. From all sides came acknowledgments of past errors; it was a general Legislative humiliation, extorted by the sight of the mass of ills to be dealt with, with a much more perfect knowledge of what our fathers ought not to have done than of what we ought to do ourselves. Mr. B. Osborne opened the discussion with a smart speech, in which the English Liberal was blended strangely with the Irish Landlord: he went far beyond the field of Lord John Russell's operations, and plunged deep into the causes of evils, speaking with extreme severity of proprietors whose estates are not their own, with sarcasm of Dublin Castle, of the well-meaning people who do all kinds of mischief, and in denunciation of those religious rancours that complicate the difficulty of governing Ireland. But he over-rated the impracticability of reclaiming the waste lands, and exaggerated the effects of the Poor-Law on property, and could criticise better than suggest. Mr. Roebuck applied the actual cautery to the Irish Landlords with almost savage disregard of their sufferings; and did not spare the Parliament itself, so often the Landlords' helper: his remedy is the "English Poor-Law," and Ireland is drifting fast towards it. On Tuesday evening the Irish members contributed the greatest share to the debate; the "fellest opposites" were found agreeing, and professions of concord were abundant; there was almost a fraternization between Conciliation Hall and Dublin University. A painful suspicion of the cause of this unwonted approval of the Government proceedings intrudes itself: can it be that the proprietors of Ireland, however they may differ in all other respects, are ready alike to hold out their hands for loans and grants? This is imputed to them at all events, in many quarters; and, indeed, under the circumstances, the giver and lender is not likely to be very delicate; while the Landlords say so much in condemnation of themselves it is no wonder they are visited with suspicions and reproaches from others.

Sir W. H. Barron made a fierce anti-Saxon speech, in which he traced all the calamities of Ireland to the crimes of England, from the days of Strongbow downwards. Much of it was too true; but what is the use of dwelling so constantly on the past, when there is in the present no wish to imitate it? In the day of sincere repentance, why dwell on the old sins, rather than on the promises of amendment? Thus the speech was felt to be in a tone unsuited to the moment. Medendi tempus est, non accusandi. Mr. Labouchere defended the Government from almost the only charge brought against it, that of not doing enough; and Sir Robert Peel closed the scene by a short speech, in which he had a word of praise for everybody—Landlords, Board of Works, peasantry, Ministers, Mr. Trevelyan, Sir Randolph Routh, the pay clerks, the ladies; not a class or a person is there that has not done his or their duty in the most devoted manner: a slight admonition to the Landlords not to cry, "Give! give!" too long or too loudly, and to do something for themselves, was the only qualification of his eulogy. And here again a doubt crosses us. With such materials to work on, why has the leading statesman of the last twenty years got to say that "this thing is still to do"? Does not a twinge of conscience cross him, as he looks back through years and years of power, when all these evils existed, equally wanting the strong hand and the earnest will that should grapple with them? But an acknowledgment of past short-comings is not to be expected, and there is no outward sign, at least, of repentance for the sins of omission.

So ended the debate, calmly and quietly enough; yet in that very unanimity there is cause for alarm; nothing but extreme peril could have produced it; and, out of doors, the prospect of the cost and expenditure to be provided for widens every day: millions are spoken of quite familiarly!

The City of Cracow has addressed a protest to the people of Europe, which bears no signature, for none dare expose themselves to the certain death or imprisonment signing such a document would draw upon them; it is published in England and France; for in Austria and Russia it cannot be produced. Yet even under these disadvantages it will be read, as the reply to the manifesto of Austria, and the defence of her treachery which she has made through her diplomatic agents—a defence which has even been quoted with good faith in the British Parliament. The protest fully proves what we pointed out at the time, that the fears expressed by "the Powers" of Cracow, because it was the centre of discontent and plots, were cowardly if the terrors were really felt; and if they were not, then their statement was a miserable falsehood. The description given in the protest of the complete subjection of Cracow to the yoke of Austria and Russia, shows how impossible it was that anything of the kind could grow to a head in the city or territory. It was more completely grasped in the net-work of the Austrian police, than any other portion of the Empire, and if any plotters or conspirators existed in it, they are plainly shown to have been the paid agents of the Austrian Government itself. Conspiracies got up by their own agents are among the most common devices of despots; they give a pretext for "strong measures." Every one must recollect the massacres of Galicia last year; the object of the Austrian Government is to crush the nobility and the independent proprietors of Poland, in whom alone the spirit of nationality exists, and who are capable of attempts to reassert it. The serfs, sunk in ignorance and apathy, care little who is their master, and rather prefer the Austrian Government to their native Lords.

That Government has fostered the estrangement between the two classes, already divided from each other by a great social gulf, which can be understood only by those who have studied the operation of slavery as a system. That Government made itself the champion of every change in favour of the serf, but allowed the Lords (it is a better word than Nobility) to change nothing; and at the same time it made itself the popular benefactor; it threw on the proprietors all the disagreeable duties of the administration of the Austrian system; the Lords were the tax-gatherers, the enforcers of the conscription, of the corvées and the compelled labour. The Government fed the popular hatred by every stimulus till at last it broke out in a servile war; and, under pretence of defeating a conspiracy, it gave full license to the furious peasantry to massacre all who were not of the peasant class—the true meaning of the term "noble," in Poland and Russia. The peasants were, in fact, an irregular Austrian soldiery let loose on unarmed families, and paid per head for their work of slaughter, instead of per day. This alliance between the most refined despotism and the most brutal spirit of democracy, is not new in History; nor is the hatred of a centralising power to every class that can form even a wish to oppose it. It is the application of the principle contained in the "cutting off the heads of the tallest poppies." And this principle Austria wished to extend from her Polish provinces to the City of Cracow. So, alarms of plots, the propaganda, and the emigration, were pretended; an army entered the city, broke up the Government (all Austrian), and marched out with the authorities, leaving the community disorganised, but the guard-houses unwatched and full of arms, with incendiary agents scattered among the population, purposely to excite a commotion. The better class of the inhabitants met, formed a Provisional Government in mere self-defence, and defeated the plan. Then the Austrian army returned, with the declared intention of sacking and plundering the city; but a Russian force entered before it, and left no pretence for the crime: life and property were saved, though the last shadow of freedom was destroyed. Such is the purport of the Cracow protest; and, though its authenticity cannot be wholly relied on, there is not a fact stated in it, that is improbable. Lord Aberdeen said it was impossible Metternich could have been cognisant of such deeds: we do not know what is the limit of political atrocity the Austrian Minister sets himself; but he may have the benefit of the doubt, since it is well known his intellect is no longer what it was, and other hands now hold the reins of power in Austria. They seem to be rasher men, capable of committing great crimes, but with no talent for defending them; and if they cannot answer this protest better than they did the former remonstrances of Europe, they will stand for ever condemned.

COURT AND HAUT TON.

WINDSOR, THURSDAY EVENING.—(From our own Correspondent.) His Royal Highness Prince Albert, after promenading this morning with her Majesty, in the private grounds in the Home Park, left the Castle for Dorney, to hunt with his pack of harriers, accompanied by Count Mensdorff, and attended by several of the Royal suite. Her Majesty held a Privy Council at the Castle this afternoon. The Council was attended by Prince Albert, and nearly the whole of the Cabinet Ministers, who arrived at Slough by a special train from Paddington, and proceeded to Windsor in three carriages and four from Mr. Botesio's Royal Hotel. the Ministers, after partaking of a déjeuner at the Castle, returned to town at half-past four o'clock. Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, attended by Lady Fanny Howard and the Baroness de Speth, had the honour of joining the Royal dinner party at the Castle this evening. The band of the First Life Guards and her Majesty's private band were in attendance.

THE SPEAKER'S DINNER. The Speaker of the House of Commons had his first Parliamentary dinner this session, on Saturday last, at his mansion in Eaton-square.

CELEBRATION OF HER MAJESTY'S WEDDING DAY AT WINDSOR.—The seventh anniversary of her Majesty's union with his Royal Highness Prince Albert will be celebrated at Windsor, on Wednesday next, by a public dinner at the New Inn. In the evening there will be a ball at the Town Hall, under the stewardship of J. T. Bodborough, Esq (the Mayor), Colonel Reid and Ralph Neville, Esq. (the two members for the borough), the Hon. Henry Ashley, M.P., Captain Bulkeley (1st Life Guards), and eighteen members of the Town Council, and the principal inhabitants of the town.

PRESENT FROM THE KING OF PRUSSIA TO HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE PRINCE OF WALES.—His Majesty the King of Prussia has had manufactured a shield destined as a present to his godson, H.R.H the Prince of Wales. This superb present is now exhibited to the public in one of the Royal Museums in Berlin previous to its being forwarded to England. The shield is of silver, and covered with bas reliefs from models by Fischer. In the centre stands prominent the Saviour's head in gold, resting on a cross, around which are four female figures representing Faith, Charity, Hope, and Justice. The other part is divided into compartments inlaid with precious stones, the compartments containing subjects from the Old and New Testament. This magnificent piece of workmanship bears the following inscription :—" Fredericus Guilelmus Rex Borussorum Alberto Eduardo Principi Walliæ, in memoriam diei Bayt XXV. M. Jan., A. MDCCCXLII."

ILLness OF THE BARONESS DE BRUNOW.—We regret to hear that the Baroness Brunow is seriously indisposed. The Duchess of Gloucester and several of the nobility have sent to make inquiries after her Excellency.

CABINET DINNER.—The Marquis of Lansdowne (Lord President of the Council) gave a grand dinner on Wednesday evening at Lansdowne House to all the Cabinet Ministers (with the exception of Lord John Russell); and also to the great officers of State of the Queen's household, and the clerks of the Privy Council. During the evening the roll of Sheriffs for the present year was settled by the Noble Marquis, and the Lords of the Privy Council present, preparatory to its being arranged by her Majesty in Council.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

MEETING AT EXETER HALL UPON THE SUBJECT OF THE DISTRESS.—On Thursday, a public meeting was held at Exeter Hall, for the purpose of hearing the statements of gentlemen from Ireland and Scotland conversant with the extent of the prevailing distress, and the means taken to relieve it, with the view of giving the English public proper information on the subject, and exciting their sympathy and support. Samuel Gurney, Esq. was in the chair. Various resolutions in furtherance of the object of the meeting were then proposed by members of the Irish deputation, seconded by members of the Scottish deputation, and supported by English friends. From the statements made, it would appear that the estimated loss of last year's potato crop in Ireland was from 12 to 16 or 20 millions sterling, and that it would require ten vessels, of 500 tons burthen each, to come into the ports of Ireland for every day during the next twelve months, with Indian corn, to meet the extremity in which Ireland was placed, making an aggregate of 1,825,000 tons. The speakers gave a most lamentable and touching picture of the extent and consequences of the prevailing famine, and referred to a number of cases in support of their statements.

WESTMINSTER ELECTION.—Mr. George Thompson has declined to contest the vacancy in Westminster, about to be created by the retirement of Mr. Labouchere, in favour of Mr. Lushington. Mr. Charles Lushington will, therefore, receive the united support of all the Liberal section of the constituency

THE BRITISH MUSEUM.—A Correspondent has favoured us with the following substance of the reply to his application to be admitted to the Reading-Room of the British Museum :—"The regulations of the British Museum Reading-Room do not allow Sir Henry Ellis (to whom all admissions are deputed) to take the recommendations of parties who are unknown to him, or not in ostensible official stations. The recommendations of Peers of the Realm, Members of Parliament, Judges, Queen's Counsel, Masters in Chancery, or any of the great Law Officers of the Crown; any one of the forty-eight Trustees of the British Museum (the names of whom will be found in the "Royal Kalender," page 336), Aldermen of London, Rectors of Parishes in London, Principals, or Heads of Colleges, Eminent Physicians, and Royal Academicians; or of any gentleman in superior post to an ordinary clerk in any of the Public Offices (signing his official station with his name), are considered satisfactory, though the parties may be strangers to him, station being deemed a sufficient guarantee." (J. W. B. is thanked.)

FALL IN THE PRICE OF BREAD.—In consequence of the sudden fall of the price of flour and wheat at market, and the supplies of every description of corn, the bakers at the West-end reduced the 4lb. best bread to 9½d. and 10d., and the second rate 8½d. and 8d. in the Blackfriars-road. At Whitechapel, and some other districts, good bread can be obtained at 8d. the 4lb loaf.

DESTITUTION IN ST. LUKE'S, CHELSEA.—This parish contains about 45,000 inhabitants, of whom one in every fourteen is now actually receiving parochial relief. The returns for the week ending Jan. 30, were as follow :—Inmates of the workhouse, 397 ; children at the establishment at Tooting, 126 ; recipients of out-door relief, 2694 (being an increase in this class since last week of 668) ; the total amount to 3217, of whom about one-third are Irish. There have been from 150 to 220 new applications daily, and they seem likely to be still more numerous. The number of paupers at the corresponding period last year was but 1834, showing the enormous increase of 1383.

ACCIDENTS AND OFFENCES.

MURDER AND OUTRAGE AT DERBY.

On Tuesday evening, at five o'clock, a horrible murder was committed in Derby by a man named Cross, who, after committing the crime, was in the act of escaping from his house when he was capured by the police, and taken into custody. Cross is a gardener, living in St. Peter's-street, and the objects of his cruelty were his wife and Mrs. Osborne, the wife of a baker, residing next door to him. Cross and his wife, it seems, were in their house alone, and one of his daughters coming home, and not seeing her mother about, attempted to go up stairs, when she was prevented by the father, and an altercation took place. The daughter instantly went to her next door neighbour (Mrs. Osborne), and asked her to go in, and prevail upon her father to permit her to see her mother. Mrs. Osborne, on going to the house, was savagely attacked by Cross, who stabbed her in the neck and face, and would have murdered her had not the daughter seized and pinioned his arms. An alarm was given, and Mrs. Osborne, while bleeding in the most profuse manner, was conveyed into her house, and medical assistance was obtained.

On searching Cross's house, his wife was found with her throat cut. The poor creature lay upon a bed in the chamber on the first floor upstairs, and appeared to have sunk down upon it, as her feet nearly touched the floor. Her right hand was cut as if she had grasped the edge of a knife, and upon her wrist there was a severe wound One underneath her chin must have caused instant death. The floor had an immense quantity of blood upon it, as though some one had passed from the window, a distance of a yard and a half, to the bed, and the carpets were saturated with blood. By the side of the teaboard lay two knives, one a clasp-knife, covered with blood, the one no doubt which Cross had used against Mrs. Osborne. The wretched man appears to have gone into a kitchen and washed his hands, one of which is seriously wounded. Mrs Osborne was sufficiently sensible to depose to the circumstances before the Mayor, Mr. W. Eaton, but she lies without hope of recovery. The Coroner's jury returned a verdict of "Wilful murder " against Cross.

THE EXTENSIVE EMBEZZLEMENT AT MANCHESTER.—Thomas Smith, collector to Mr Alderman Shuttleworth, charged with embezzling money paid into his hands to the account of Messrs. Strutt, of Derby, was brought up at the Borough Court, Manchester, on Wednesday, for further examination. It was then proved that, on the 2nd Feb., 1846, Messrs. De Jersey, merchants, paid him a cheque for £150 12s. ; that, on the 23rd May, Messrs. Gumpell and Co. paid him a cheque for £51 6s. ; that, on the 13th June, Messrs. Abraham Dros and Sons, merchants, paid him £124 16s ; and that, on the 30th October, Mr. Zohn, merchant, paid him £7 on account of Messrs. Strutt ; and that he had accounted for none of those sums. At the conclusion of these proceedings, he was committed for trial. His attorney asked if bail would be accepted ? Mr. Maule intimated that £500 would be accepted ; but no bail was forthcoming, and the prisoner was removed in custody.

THE LATE FATAL ACCIDENT ON THE GREAT WESTERN RAILWAY.—The adjourned inquest on the bodies of H. Bishop and H. Hale, who were killed on the Great Western Railway, under the circumstances stated in our paper last week, was resumed on Monday morning, at Southall, before Mr. Wakley, and his deputy, Mr. Mills. No new fact of consequence was stated in evidence, and the Jury returned a verdict that "The deceased accidentally came by their death ;" accompanied by a recommendation that the tires should in future be secured in the manner recommended by the engineers who had been examined.

MILITARY FLOGGING.—Last Saturday morning at half-past eight o'clock, the whole of the troops in Woolwich garrison were mustered in the riding school to see the sentence of a district court-martial on Gunner and Driver J. Beaty, of the Chestnut Troop, Captain Brandling's company (10th batt.), carried into effect. The prisoner was convicted some time since by a district court-martial of the crime of desertion and of stealing half a sovereign belonging to Corporal Fraser, which the latter had entrusted him with to get changed. He was then sentenced to six months imprisonment and to be branded with the letter D. This sentence was carried into effect, and the prisoner was sent to the military prison, at Fort Clarence, Chatham. Whilst in confinement he attempted to burn his eyes with quick-lime, with the view of inducing a deprivation of sight for the purpose of being discharged. Which he detected, he was sent up to Woolwich to undergo the fatal punishment, technically called "tampering," and the district court-martial sentenced him to receive fifty lashes. The unfortunate man received the fifty lashes at the hands of two drummers. The prisoner, though evidently of a weak frame of body, bore the infliction with firmness, and at its conclusion refused to allow any of his comrades to assist in putting on his clothes. On returning into the open air he became faint, and was supported by three men up the steps of the Royal Chatham Hospital.

FATAL ACCIDENT ON THE MANCHESTER AND SHEFFIELD RAILWAY.—A fatal accident occurred on the Manchester and Sheffield Railway, on Sunday, near the Glossop Junction, on the confines of Derbyshire. It appears that two engines had gone up one of the lines for the purpose of clearing it of snow, when an engine passenger train, leaving Sheffield at the usual hour, overtook the engine-driver of the passenger train, James Robinson, attempted to save himself by leaping from his engine, but fell on the rail, and his tender and carriages of luggage train went over his body, and killed him on the spot. The collision was so serious, that several of the carriages were crushed, and two of the engines were much shattered. It is said that an attempt was made to signal the driver of the passenger train, as he passed one of the stations, but, owing to the weather, the machinery was out of order.

POSTSCRIPT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—FRIDAY.

LORD BENTINCK'S BILL.—Lord Brougham having moved for some returns relating to Irish Railways, a conversation arose respecting Lord George Bentinck's Bill. Lord Stanley, the Duke of Richmond, and Earl Fitzwilliam maligned the measure. The latter noble Earl expressed regret that the measure was not in the hands of her Majesty's Government, and trusted there would be no undue interference with the prerogative of the Crown, with respect to its passing.

EDUCATION.—The Marquis of LANSDOWNE laid upon the table the Minutes of Education agreed upon by her Majesty's Privy Council ; and, in doing so, said it was not his intention to ask the House to come to any conclusion upon any particular plan. The noble Marquis, however, mentioned the suggestions which the Privy Council had recommended upon the subject of Education. The Government did not intend to propose any large and comprehensive national system of Education, but would confine itself to offering suggestions as to what ought to be done in the distribution of the sum which had been voted last year.—Lord BROUGHAM and several other noble Lords made some comments upon the statement of the Marquis of Lansdowne, and the House adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FRIDAY.

NEW MEMBERS.—Lord R. GROSVENOR took the oaths and his seat for the county of Middlesex, and Earl GROSVENOR for the city of Chester.

MEDALS TO THE OFFICERS OF THE PENINSULAR ARMY.—Sir A. L. HAY put a question to Ministers as to the steps taken to carry into effect her Majesty's gracious intention of granting medals to the officers of the Peninsular Army. Mr. F. MAULE said, the Government were taking active steps to carry her Majesty's most gracious intentions into effect ; and he had no doubt in a short time it would be accomplished.

DESTITUTE PERSONS (IRELAND) ADVANCES BILL.

On the motion that the House should go into Committee on this Bill,

Mr. HUME adverted, at some length, to the distressed state of Ireland.

Some other hon. members having spoken, the House went into Committee on the bill.

A desultory discussion arose in Committee

Hals and the other recently introduced Government measures occupied the remainder of the evening. The House sat till a late hour.

WINDSOR, Friday Evening.—The Court will take its departure from the Castle on Tuesday next, for Buckingham Palace

ARISTOCRATIC MARRIAGE.—The marriage of Lady Eleanor Paget with Mr. Sackford Graham, was on Thursday morning solemnised at St. George's, Hanover-square. A very fashionable party were present

DEATH OF LADY CHRISTIAN DOUGLAS.—Lady Christian Douglas, sister of the Marquis of Queensberry, died on the 27th ult., at her residence in Edinburgh, in the seventy third year of her age.

LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

FRANCE.

Some of the Paris papers assert that the outrages and disorders, of which the scarcity has been the pretext in several parts of the country, have been instigated by a political party calling themselves Materialists or Communistes. The Gazette des Tribunaux of Wednesday, says

"For some days past, a vague rumour has been afloat of arrests having taken place which were suggested by political considerations. Several names were mentioned which had been already heard during former trials of the Republican party. From the information we have procured, it appears that fifteen persons belonging to that fraction of the Republican party whose understanding has been perverted by Communiste writings, have been arrested on serious charges. These individuals formed part of a 'Society of Materialists.' Their object was to carry into effect the principles avowed in their writings, in which it is proclaimed that all property is 'the fruit of robbery !' Several of the parties arrested are accused of theft, and even of more heinous crimes. One of them, judging his position to be desperate, blew out his brains at the Prefecture of Police with a pistol which he had concealed."

DEATH OF A PRINCESS.—The reigning Princess of Hohenzollern-Zigmaringen, Antoinette, neee of Murat, died at Sigmaringen a few days ago, in her 53d year.

IRELAND.

THE PROGRESS OF STARVATION.

The following is a portion of a letter addressed to the committee in London, by a gentleman whom the British Association for the Relief of Distress in Ireland and Scotland has employed to visit the most distressed districts of Ireland. It gives a most lamentable account of the distress now existing in Ireland :—

"Both the official and private reports and correspondence to which I had access in Dublin, had been unanimous in describing the state of Ireland, and particularly that part of it which the committee pointed out in my instructions as being that of the utmost distress and destitution.

"The circuitous route which I have taken to arrive at Westport, not only corroborated the above, but added a darker shade to the already dark picture of that distress and destitution.

"At Carrick-on-Shannon I found the poor-house and hospital crowded with half-naked and emaciated men, women, and children, prey to dysentery and fever, which terminated fatally. The number of daily deaths exceeded the supply of coffins, when the place could furnish "Between Carrick and Sligo, numberless straggling and ragged families had been observed, some crawling, some squatted on the road side, through which I passed unnoticed, all bearing downcast, broken, and worn-out countenance—fearful results of starvation, sickness, and the exposure to the inclemency of the weather, which alternated with rain and snow.

"At Sligo, I have found the streets swarming with the distressed, clamorous through hunger, although orderly, respectful to persons, and respecting their property. The poor-house presented an awful number of cases of fever and dysentery, which numerously terminated fatally. To these dreadful applications for admission are daily increasing, not only on account of the relief which is sought, but through the anxiety of these consciens of their approaching end to die in a poor house, and thus to be entitled to a coffin and a Christian burial.

"In that poor-house, or, properly speaking, workhouse, there are 500 persons sick, and the master and the under-master is fever !"

The Sligo Champion confirms the account given in the above letter of the state of that county. It says—"The Coroner is still busily engaged in this county—four cases of death during the last week. The following inquests have been held—the 22nd inst., at Shancogh, on the body of Francis Kelly. Same day, at Ballysumahaun, on the body of Catherine Hoy. On the 24th, at Ballisodare, on the body of Maurice Conroy. On the 26th, at Killery, on the body of James Cantwell. On the 27th, at Kilmacallon, on the body of James Kilmartin ; on the body of Michael Tighe ; at Rossmore, on the body of Michael Conolan ; at Ballinacarrow, on the body of Michael Hart. The verdict in every instance was ' Died of starvation.'"

The Tralee Chronicle thus reports on the state of the county of Kerry :—" Accounts of starvation and death reach us from every quarter of the county, and the scene which we witness in our own streets, and in the vicinity of Tralee, are wofully corroborative of the general destitution and waste of human life. Dysentery and fever are becoming every day more rife in our town. In Dingle scenery and fever are becoming every day more rife in our town. In Dingle they are dying by dozens from fever, dysentery, and starvation, and burying without coffins."

The Tuam Herald speaks thus of the county of Galway :—" From every quarter of the county we are literally besieged with the heart-rending particulars of the progress of famine. A respectable correspondent in the neighbourhood of Kilcouly has communicated to us the loss of no less than eighteen lives from fever and destitution during the last few days."

The Cork Examiner speaking of the district of Youghal, says :

"Inquests have been here held, and the verdict in each of three melancholy cases was 'Death by starvation.' A family of five children, consisting of father, mother, and son, lived at a place called the Wyndmill, about a mile from the town of Youghal. On the night of Tuesday (last week), the mother, Margaret, died in the cabin, died in the same bed with the father and children. Their landlord rendered so helpless that he could give them no assistance in their last struggle, nor even make their case known to the neighbours. The coroner held an inquest on the body the previous week there was returned another case of a still more horrible nature.

"A person named Thomas Millar, from Ring, a place on the extreme coast, opposite the Island, came with his wife to Youghal, where they both offered for sale at an apothecary's shop, the dead body of a male child, aged seven years. The authorities were informed of the circumstance, and the parties in his wretched home being interrogated, they openly acknowledged that this child was a nephew of theirs, who had died in their house, and they brought him to the doctor's to get something for the body that would keep the life in themselves and their children. The description they gave of their suffering was frightful in the extreme. On more than one occasion they had determined to kill, and eat the cat, only they feared it would poison them. The verdict in the case of this child, too, was 'Death by starvation.'

The equally dreadful calamity of pestilence excites the most painful alarm in the same county of Cork.

The Rev. Richard Boyle Townsend, vicar of Abbey Strewry, has addressed to us a letter full of harrowing details regarding the people about Skibbereen. In a postscript to his letter, the Rev. gentleman says :—

"The above description they gave of their suffering was given me by a physician :—

"'A man named Jeremiah Donovan (of the Abbey Lands) was in the habit of applying to me for relief. I missed him at my door for some days. On going to his house this morning, I was told that he had that moment dragged his father out for interment ! I then went across the road about 40 feet, and found him actually dead. Such is the hardening effect of the carnage which famine, plague, and cold are carrying on amongst us ! No possibility for the creatures to procure decent interment for their dead—a thing once so cherished by them ! They are now thrown or left to the dogs to prevent their starving !

DEATH OF SIR VALENTINE BLAKE.—A letter has been received in Dublin, announcing the death of Sir Valentine Blake, Bart.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

" J. N. P." and " A Subscriber."—The justly-celebrated Indian Problem appears every month on the wrapper of the "Chess-Player's Chronicle," and, as this work is now from its price, within the reach of everybody, hundreds of amateurs will be devoting themselves to its solution. It is much better, therefore, for the proprietors to withhold the key to it. Besides, no Chess-player of mettle will permit himself to be defeated by a position only four moves deep.

" P. Z. W."—To join the London Chess Club, you must first address a line to the Honorary Secretary, George and Vulture Hotel, Cornhill : every facility will then be afforded you.

" Iris."—A Pawn in such a situation, if moved two squares, may be taken by the hostile Pawn, if the adversary chooses.

" Sigma."—They are imperfect, and quite unsuited for publication, we are sorry to say.

" X. Y. Z."—The idea is ingenious : we will examine the moves attentively, and give an opinion next week.

" Subscriber" is right. The oversight of the inventor has been pointed out by several Correspondents.

" P. P."—" W. B. N."—" H. T. O." The quarterly subscription to the "Chess-Player's Chronicle" is only 4s. 4d., including postage ; and, for this trifle, you may have the periodical, with its week's instruction and entertainment, every Thursday morning

" W. H. L."—" Puzzler."—Pray spare us your " first attempts" at Problem-making, and let us have the fruits of your experience after the first few hundred.

" Cur."—We have not room to give the solution. Try it again—and again.

" V. H. der L." Berlin, is thanked. The resemblance is certainly too remarkable for accident, and shall be immediately pointed out to the constructor.

" J. G. B." Cheltenham.—The diagram No. 186 is quite correct. In the solution, it should be " 1. K to Q B 5th," not " 1. Kt to Q B 5th."

" S. B." Hull.—A great improvement on the others. See Enigmas in the present Number

" F. S. S." Dundee.—Somewhat too simple for our columns. Try again.

" Quartet." If " Quartet " will address a line to the Editor of the Magazine named, he will be sure to obtain the amended solution which we have not space to give.

" W. J. B."—Problem No. 148 cannot be solved as you suppose. Have the goodness to write more legibly. Correspondents should bear in mind that, unless their signatures are distinct, it is impossible, with the mass of communications we receive, to avoid confusion.

" J. G." Finsbury Chess Club. If you will denote half the time to the advance examination of your Problem No. 180, which you have pointed out correctly, you will then discover that it is correct and beautiful. The first move in No. 186 is " K to Q B 5th." " Kt" is obviously a misprint.

" B. J. K."—Your letters, to be noticed the same week, should reach us not later than Wednesday morning.

" Ludmagister."—Thanks for the information.

A Regular Purchaser."—Look once more, and you will see that White can mate at K B 7th, if the King's Pawn is pushed.

" J. R. B."—Decidedly better than the former attempts.

Solutions by " P. A." " P. S. C." " B. J. K." " Ludmagister." " G. A. H." " M. P." " G. T. R." and " F." Sandhurst, are correct. Those by " Fred," " Chetwind," " T. B. M." and " Milo," are wrong.

 Any Amateur in Edinburgh or Glasgow, desirous of playing a Game or two by Correspondence, may find an opponent by addressing a line to " Alpha," Windggates, near Leven.

SOLUTION TO PROBLEM, NO. 158.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. R to K Kt 8th (ch)	K to Q B 5 2nd	5. Kt to Q B 7th (ch)	R takes Kt
2. Kt to Q Kt 5th (ch)	K to Q Kt sq	6. Kt to Q Kt 6th (ch)	P takes Kt (ch)
3. Kt to Q 7th (double ch)	K to R sq	7. K takes P (dis ch)	Q takes R
4. Q to her Kt8th (ch)	R takes Q	8. R takes R (ch)	K must take Rook and White is Stalemated.

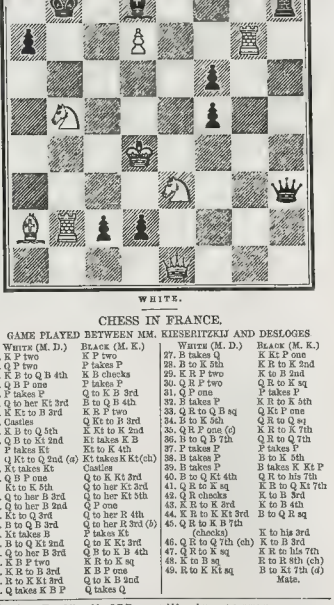
PROBLEM, NO. 159.

By MR. C. R. L.

White playing first can mate in seven moves.

BLACK.



WHITE.

CHESS IN FRANCE.

GAME PLAYED BETWEEN MM. KIESERITZKI AND DESLOGES

WHITE (M. D.)	BLACK (M. K.)	WHITE (M. D.)	BLACK (M. K.)
1. K P two	K P two	27. B takes Q	K Kt P one
2. Q P two	P takes P	28. B to K 5th	K R to K 2nd
3. K P to Q B 4th	K B checks	29. K R P two	K to B 2nd
4. Q B P one	P takes P	30. Q R P two	Q R to K sq
5. P takes P	Q to K B 3rd	31. Q P one	P takes P
6. Q to her Kt 3rd	B to Q B 4th	32. B takes P	K R to K 5th
7. K Kt to B 3rd	K R P two	33. Q R to Q B sq	Q Kt P one
8. Castles	Q Kt to R 3rd	34. B to K 8th	Q R to Q sq
9. P to K 5th	K Kt to K 2nd	35. Q R P one (c)	K R to K 7th
10. Q B to Kt 2nd	Kt takes K B	36. B to Q B 7th	Q R to Q 7th
11. P takes Kt	Q to K 4th	37. P takes P	P takes P
12. Q Kt to Q 2nd (a)	Kt takes K Kt (ch)	38. B takes P	B to K 5th
13. Kt takes Kt	Castles	39. B takes P	B takes K Kt P
14. Q B P one	Q to K Kt 3rd	40. B to Q Kt 4th	Q R to his 7th
15. Kt to K 5th	Q to her Kt 3rd	41. Q R to K sq	K R to Q Kt 7th
16. Q to her B 3rd	Q to her Kt 5th	42. Q R checks	K to B 3rd
17. Q to her B 2nd	Q P one	43. K R to K 3rd	K to B 4th
18. Kt to Q B 3rd	Q to her R 4th	44. K R to K Kt 3rd	B to Q R sq
19. B to Q B 3rd	Q to her R 3rd (b)	45. Q R to K B 7th (checks)	K to his 3rd
20. Kt takes B	P takes Kt	46. Q R to Q 7th (ch)	K to B 3rd
21. B to Q Kt 2nd	Q to K Kt 3rd	47. Q R to K sq	K R to his 7th
22. Q to her B 3rd	Q R to K sq	48. K to B sq	R to R 8th (ch)
23. K B P two	K B P one	49. R to K Kt sq	B to Kt 7th (d) Mate.
24. B to K B 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
25. R to K Kt 3rd	Q to K B 3rd
26. Q takes K B P	Q takes Q

(a) K R to K sq, followed by Q B P one, would have been a strong move.
(b) If to Kt 3rd, White could attack her with his Q Rook
(c) Very well played.
(d) Curious and pretty termination.

CHESS ENIGMAS.

(RITHERTO UNPUBLISHED.)

No. 112.—By Mr. WILLIAMSON.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
K at K R 2nd	K at K R 4th	Kts at K R 8th and	Kts at K 8th and Q
Q at Q B 7th	Q at her B sq	K B 2nd	7th
R at K 6th	R at K Kt 5th	P at K R 3d	Ps at K R 3d,
B at Q 8th	R at Q B 8th		K B 3d Q Kt 2d
B at Q 7th	B at K R 2d.	White to play and mate in four moves

No. 113.—By Mr. S. B., of Hull.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
K at Q Kt 3d	K at his 5th	Kt at K 6th
B at K Kt 4th	P at Q B 4th	Ps at K B 2d,
B at Q R 5th		Q B 2d and 4th

White, playing first, can mate in four moves.

No. 114.—By Mr. C. R. L.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
K at his B 3d	K at Q B 5th	Ps at K 2d and 3d,
B at Q 4th	Ps at Q 3d	and Q Kt 2d.
Kt at Q B 7th	Q Kt 3d, 6th, and 6th

White, playing first, can mate with his Kt in six moves.

DESTRUCTION OF EASTON LODGE, BY FIRE.

Another of the proud and noble mansions of England has fallen by fire—Easton Lodge, near Dunmow, Essex, the residence of Lord Viscount Maynard, which possessed a peculiar interest in that part of the Kingdom, not only from its presenting a noble pile, in the Elizabethan style of architecture, modified by the taste and luxury of the present day, but as forming the "stately home" of the Lord-Lieutenant of Essex. It is now a heap of black ruins, beneath which has buried much costly and valuable property.

This calamity, which has laid the main body of the fine old house in ruins, occurred at an early hour on Sunday morning.

It seems that, at three o'clock in the morning, while the noble Viscount and Lady Maynard were in bed, their attention was attracted to a strange crackling noise in some of the other apartments: and the first thought that suggested itself being that thieves were endeavouring to effect an entrance, his Lordship rose, and proceeded to his dressing-room. There he found an enemy far more formidable than human robbers. The whole apartment was filled with a dense smoke, and the flames were already curling up the walls of one side of the room, though the immediate cause of this ignition did not appear. His Lordship, with great promptness and presence of mind, endeavoured, in the first instance, so to apply the carpet as to smother the rising flames; and, all the household being aroused, the servants set vigorously to work with buckets of water, to endeavour to check the first progress of the fire. This, it was soon found, was vain. It was then resolved to summon the aid of the neighbourhood by means of the alarm-bell, when it was found in this they were foiled; the rope of the bell had become entangled, and thus rendered useless; but the situation of the mansion was soon after announced to the inhabitants of the district by the red glare that illumined the sky.

The small engine belonging to the lodge was useless to stay the flames. Another engine shortly arrived from Thaxted, and every exertion was made to get the engines into play; but, in the meantime, the flames had made fearful progress, swallowing up in an hour what centuries had spared. Many persons, who reached the spot early, had directed their efforts to the saving of the books, pictures, and other valuable articles in the library and billiard-room, in which they happily succeeded, so that the valuable paintings, with few exceptions, were saved and placed in the granary, and a large quantity of plate and costly furniture stowed in the coach house and other buildings, about twenty horses having been turned into the park, in order to make room, and preserve them from danger.

While the work of devastation was going on, the noble Viscount was busy directing, with great calmness and forethought, the efforts of the firemen and assistants; and Lady Maynard and the Hon. Miss Maynard, notwithstanding the cold blast of a wintry morning, maintained their place upon the lawn, watching the destruction of their princely home.

At a quarter before five the handsome old turret clock caught fire, the hands stopped, and, enshrouded in a sheet of flame, the whole fell into the burning mass below. Of the portion of the building nothing was left of the stately pile, except the curious and antiquated brick chimneys.

About six o'clock all efforts were directed to cutting off the communication over the billiard-room, and thus saving the part not then ignited. By the incessant labour of a strong body of persons this was effected, a large stream of water being poured by the engines upon the burning rafters of the centre rooms, and wet blankets placed to deaden the effect of the flames. This, with the left wing of the building, is the only part left standing.

As soon as daylight appeared, Superintendent Anderson and the police present, who throughout had been most strenuous in their exertions, commenced collecting and securing the property saved, which was found to be considerable, including the paintings, plate, and furniture, we have noticed; the wine, which was in ironed cellars under the library, which are brick, and the beautiful stained glass window in the library, representing the principal events in our Saviour's history, were got out, under the special direction of the noble Lord, and preserved intact. The whole of the wardrobe of the noble family was destroyed, the damage altogether done amounting to some thousands of pounds; and we regret to add that, though all the noble Viscount's farms are insured, the mansion and its costly contents were not so.

The first of our Illustrations shows the principal front of Easton Lodge, as it appeared some few years since; showing that portion of the mansion entire, which is now destroyed.

The second Engraving presents the scene of the ruins of this "fine old place," sketched the day after the fire.

EASTON LODGE, NEAR DUNMOW.—SOUTH VIEW.

MORTALITY IN THE LAST QUARTER OF 1846.

The official quarterly return of mortality in England presents some very interesting results. The account for the three months ending January. 31, 1846, of the population of one hundred and fifteen districts of England, is very unfavourable, as compared with the former period; 32,908 deaths were registered in the quarter ending Dec. 31, 1846, which is 7311 more than the corrected quarterly average of previous years, and 13,737 more than were returned in the corresponding season of 1845. The deaths in 1846 were 50,000 more than in 1845, and nearly the whole of the excess in 1846 arose on the last two quarters of the year, from diseases of a totally different character. Bronchitis (in many cases a consequence of influenza), asthma, rheumatism, and diseases of the stomach and liver, were more than usually fatal; 397 persons (including suicides) died violent deaths—a number nearly 100 greater than died from the same causes in the December quarter of 1845. The deaths from cold and want were nearly twice as numerous as in previous years. These fatal causes operated with fearful effect in Manchester and Liverpool. The deaths in Manchester during the December quarter of 1845 were 2555. In the corresponding period of 1846, they were 4029. In Liverpool, the deaths during the same period increased from 1981 to 2735. It appears from the returns of seven years, ending 1844, that the mortality of Liverpool and Manchester, and the worst parts of other towns, is nearly double the mortality of tolerably salubrious districts; and the document shows that, while the mortality of the latter districts was raised 50 or 60 per cent., the frightful mortality of the denser districts was raised from 70 to 100 per cent. in 1846, over 1845. The increased mortality in London conveys but a faint notion of the mortality in the larger towns of the country. The deaths in the December quarter of 1845 and 1846 were, respectively, 11,685 and 13,033, in the London districts; 27,483 and 39,872, in the other districts which made returns. The "high price of provisions, depression of trade, and distress," are referred to by some of the registrars, as causes of the high mortality in December; but it is worthy of especial notice, that no mention is made of the potato disease having had any direct connection with the mortality. The Registrar-General conceives that the excessive mortality is principally to be attributed to the animal and vegetable poisons, arising from accumulated filth, crowding in dwellings and workshops, closeness of courts, imperfect supplies of water, and the want of efficient sewers. The high temperature of 1846 accelerated decomposition, and increased the virulence of these effluvia poisons, as well as of the diseases which they promote. The Registrar-General adduces, as powerful evidence of the efficacy of sanatory measures, the comparative mortality amongst seamen during the time of the report is that relating to the meteorological phenomena during the period embraced by the returns of mortality. Although the mortality runs so high, the daily births have exceeded the deaths by 1056. The population of the United Kingdom in 1846 was about 28,487,000; the probable permanent increase was about 800 daily; for, although the births exceed the deaths by 1056, the surplus of 296 is the average number who leave the kingdom.

Frightful Accident with Fire-Arms. Yesterday week a lamentable occurrance took place at one of the houses about midway between Hertford and Ware. Mr. Golborne, a retired farmer, about sixty-two years of age, went into his garden about half-past one o'clock with a double-barrelled gun. He fired at and wounded a bullfinch, which, however, he could not catch, and it took refuge in a laurel hedge which parts the flower-garden from the kitchen garden. He called to his housemaid to come and assist him in catching the bird. She came into the flower garden, and looked about the hedge on one side while her master examined the other. Suddenly she heard the gun go off, saw Mr. Golborne fall, and heard him utter a slight groan. Being convinced that he was shot, she ran to obtain assistance. At that instant, Mr. C. E. Kolle, who resides in London, and who is married to Mr. Golborne's eldest daughter, came in at the gate, having just arrived from the Ware station, but he was too horrified to be of any assistance. Mr Golborne died almost instantly. How the accident was caused is uncertain; but it is supposed that, after firing at the bullfinch with one barrel, he ran up to the hedge, with the hammer of the second barrel on full cock, and thrust the butt-end among the twigs to discover the bird, and that the piece was fired by the trigger coming in contact with a branch. The muzzle must have been close to the deceased's chest at the time, as his coat, waistcoat, and braces were much burnt. The charge entered his chest, making an orifice of about two inches in diameter, and came out at his back. He bled but little externally. Mrs. Golborne was absent from home. As soon as Mr. Kolle had become in some degree composed, he set out on the melancholy journey of informing the different members of the family of their sad loss.

Fatal Coal-Pit Accident near Sheffield.—Yesterday week, a lamentable accident, attended with the loss of six lives, occurred at one of the Darley Main Coal Company's pits, at Worsbrough Dale, about four miles from Barnsley and ten from Sheffield. On that afternoon, about two o'clock, some men who were employed in one part of the pit fired a blast of gunpowder for the purpose of bringing down a large piece of coal. Shortly after the explosion, a large mass of coal was found on fire, and every exertion was used to stop up the driftways, or roads through which the air was admitted, and to put out the fire, by throwing water upon it. The men were engaged in this manner, from two o'clock until four, at which time, instead of having checked the flames, it was found they were gaining upon them. Exertions were made, and in the course of some hours the bodies of six men were found; and they were each removed to their homes. The other men, eight in number, who had escaped from suffocation, only with great difficulty, were, immediately after being removed from the pit, attended by a surgeon, who administered such remedies as their cases required, and, though suffering severely, there is every reason to hope that they will recover. The cause of the accident has not yet been clearly ascertained.

Cramoke Screens or Two Lovers.—Last Saturday, a young man named Hampson, about 25, the son of the landlord of the Fountain Inn, Wakefield, was found drowned in the river Calder, not far from his father's house, and a young woman, a dressmaker, named Morton, whose mother was formerly in the service of a Baronet's lady in the neighbourhood, was also found at the same time and place. It seems that some attachment had sprung up between the parties, which had not been agreeable to the friends of the young woman, but no very strenuous opposition had been made to their union. The suicidal determination must have been strong in each, for their bodies were firmly tied together with four handkerchiefs, which must have been fastened by Hampson, as the knots were tied behind the young woman. In his pocket was found a pistol loaded with ball, and two bullets, some powder, caps, &c.; and in her pockets was found a soft substance, like paste, which is supposed to be poison. What tends to make the affair more mysterious, is the total inability of any one to find a reason for the commission of such a rash act. There were no marks of violence on either of the bodies, nor anything to lead to the belief that either of them had come to their death by unfair means. The deceased young woman was about twenty-one years of age, a fine figure, and very pretty. An inquest was held on the bodies on Saturday, when the Jury returned the following verdict:—"Found drowned, without any marks of violence; but how, or by what means they got into the canal, there is no evidence to show."

RUINS OF EASTON LODGE, AFTER THE RECENT FIRE.—DRAWN BY MR. LANDELLS.

F I N E A R T S.

LA FLEUR DES SALONS.*

Fair Flow'ret of the Ball-room—Youthful Queen
Of Fashion, which obeys thee, as a slave;
How beautiful and graceful is thy mien—
Blooming as Venus from the fresh-born wave!
The Graces deck thy toilet, and a light—
An [illegible] around thee;
Flow'r des Salons, where Wit [illegible]
And [illegible] in colour'd dreams—
Where the gay world of Paris—Fashion's heart—
Thrills to the voice of Mirth and [illegible]
Throned in the souls of many, there thou art,
Sweet cynosure! amid the brilliant throng.
And yet, though gallant spirits round thee bow,
A cloud seems clinging to thy [illegible] brow.

Is it the pride of Passion, that would guard
The nestlings of the heart from vulgar eyes,
And, like the lark when soaring from the sward,
Can commune only with the glorious skies?
Or can it be that, in thy beauty's power,
[illegible] regardest as [illegible]
Vain votaries, to win from thee, fair Flower
Of the Salons! the [illegible] of a smile!
Or—oh! far worse—has unrequited Love
Brought darkness o'er the sunshine of thy soul—
And, 'mid the dance and song, thou still must prove
The pangs inflicted 'neath his dire control?
No! no! such doom could never low'r on thee,
Daughter of Beauty! 'mong the brave and free.

Fleur des Salons! fair daughter of fair France,
May Peace bestrew thy path with thornless flowers!
Light be thy footstep in the sprightly dance,
Joyous thy laugh in Beauty's spotless bow'rs;
And, haply, soon, when round the parent stem
Sweet buds of promise grace their mother's breast,
Oh! spotlessly may beam each "bonnie Gem,"
Worthy the heart on which it was caress'd!
Proud though thy triumphs in the dazzling hall—
Where thou, fair Excellence! still reignest Queen—
The mother's sacred love eclipses all
The pleasures that surround the brilliant scene.
Fleur des Salons! how feeble is the say
That fain would blazon Beauty's angel sway.—L.

LA FLEUR DES SALONS.—PAINTED BY DUBUFE.

* From a Painting by Dubufe. Engraved by J. A. Allais, and published in Paris by MM. Goupil, Vibert, and Co., and in London, by MM. Gambart, Junin, and Co.

THE ELECTION FOR MIDDLESEX.

On Wednesday morning the nomination and election of a representative for the county of Middlesex, in the room of the late Mr. Byng, took place at Brentford.

In spite of the inclemency of the weather, and the fact that the honours of the representation were not disputed by rival candidates, there was a goodly assemblage of electors and non-electors present on the occasion. The hustings were erected in the market place, and the arrangements were carefully made by the authorities to secure order in the proceedings. Shortly before the hour appointed for the nomination, Lord Robert Grosvenor, who was the only candidate who offered for the vacant seat, escorted by a party of friends and supporters, arrived in Brentford, and, driving up in a carriage and four, took his place on the platform. He was surrounded by Lord Marcus Hill, Sir Walter Stirling, General Sir De Lacy Evans, Mr. Whitbread, and other gentlemen of influence and distinction. Sheriffs Challis and Kennard appeared on the hustings in their robes of office, accompanied by Mr. Baylis, the Under Sheriff, and the other officers whose services are required to comply with the statutory forms necessary on such occasions. Lady Grosvenor and family were present, and seemed to take a lively interest in the proceedings. They arrived in carriages and four, accompanied by a cavalcade of his Lordship's supporters, decorated with ribbons and rosettes of buff and blue. There were a few banners and flags.

After the usual formalities, and a brief [illegible] Sheriff Challis, [illegible] E. P. Bouverie came forward to propose Lord Robert Grosvenor. He said: Friends and brother electors of this county—The proposal I am about to submit to you—the name of a gentleman to represent you in Parliament—is so likely to be received with general and unanimous approbation that I do not [illegible] to [illegible] you at [illegible] of [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] welfare of the people. If this principle actuates us, then are we bound to find another person who entertains these views, and who will endeavour to carry them out in the Parliament of the country. (Hear, hear, hear.) The whole political life of the noble Lord will prove that he is [illegible] person. (Cheers.) For twenty [illegible] has shown himself the friend of civil and religious liberty; he has shown himself the friend of the civil and the practical reforms which have agitated the country and he has been found always enlisted on the side of the people. (Cheers.) I entirely agree with the sentiments of the noble Lord from the many years' experience of his past life, and I have now, therefore, no hesitation in recommending him to your choice as your representative. (Continued cheering.) The man you require is Lord Robert Grosvenor, and it is with great pleasure that I propose him as a fit person to represent you in Parliament. (Cheers.)

Sir E. N. Buxton said—I have a great deal of pleasure in seconding the nomination of Lord Robert Grosvenor as a fit person to represent you in Parliament. [illegible] feeling respecting your late representative, I am sure that no one was acquainted [illegible] Mr. Byng, and I am convinced that no man whatever could, throughout such a lengthened political life—a life extending over 56 years—have preserved such a cordial feeling with his constituents, unless he had been actuated by the highest, the best, and purest motives. (Loud cheers). You are aware that during this period questions of vital importance to the world were discussed—but you are also aware, that whatever might be the inducements to overlook your interests, you had an honest and honourable gentleman to see to your own interests. I feel that we are met this day on a solemn occasion. If we consider the state of this country and of Ireland, we cannot send a man to Parliament without being conscious that we have a great and solemn duty to perform; and I confess that when I heard of Mr. Byng's death I thought it would be a difficult matter for the electors of this county to find another man to supply his place with equal satisfaction to yourselves and to the country. I do think, however, that you cannot find a man better qualified to fill the place of your late representative than the noble Lord who now offers himself to your suffrages. (Cheers.) We know Lord Robert Grosvenor to be the friend of the poor. (Cheers.) We know him to be a man who will not sanction any measure which he thinks inimical to the people or their Constitution. (Continued cheering.) Although I do not concur in every sentiment of Lord Robert Grosvenor, still I am of opinion that there is no man better qualified to represent us; and it is, therefore, with great pleasure that I second the nomination of Lord Robert Grosvenor to represent us in Parliament.

The Sheriffs having requested any person who had any other candidate to propose to come forward and do so, and no person responding, proceeded to take the show of hands. A forest of hands was held up in favour of the proposed candidate, and only two against him. The Sheriff declared Lord Robert Grosvenor to be duly elected as a member to serve in Parliament for the county of Middlesex, in the present session of Parliament.

Lord Robert Grosvenor then came forward, and was received in the most enthusiastic manner. The noble Lord said—Mr. Sheriff and gentlemen, electors of the county of Middlesex, I must beg, in the first place, to thank you most kindly for the kind and warm reception which you have been pleased to accord to me upon the present occasion. Gentlemen, it is not the first time that I have appeared upon the hustings. (A voice: "It won't be the last.") I hope not. Gentlemen, nothing, I do assure you, would have induced me to have obtruded myself upon your notice upon the present occasion, had I not been assured that I was called upon to do so by the united strength of the late lamented Mr. Byng's supporters, and the assurance conveyed to me by my friend behind me, Mr. C. Wallbridge, the Chairman of the Committee of which he was the originator and supporter—than whom, no person could be more capable of appreciating the sentiments and feelings of the electors of Middlesex—nothing less than those appearances would have induced me to sever that connection with my attached friends—the city of Chester (cheers)—who, during a period of more than twenty years, have honoured me with unwavering kindness, and such implicit confidence—nothing less than the assurance that you would give me the same co operation and assistance in the performance of the arduous duties now imposed upon me, would have induced me to undertake the serious duties attached to the representation of this country—Middlesex. Before I say another word about myself, you must permit me to discharge a duty I owe, and also to consult my own feelings, by saying something with reference to my late respected friend Mr. Byng, the late member for the county of Middlesex, whose memory is so justly dear to us all. (Cheers.) I do not know how, in a few words, I can better sum up my feelings than by using the words of the friends of that lamented gentleman, who would inscribe this proud epitaph upon his tomb, "That, having for upwards of fifty years represented not merely the rural and suburban portions of the county which I have the honour now to represent, but nearly one-half of the metropolis besides, during the most eventful and the most critical period of the history of the British nation, had at length descended to the tomb full of years, without a single enemy, and with the respect and attachment of all parties and all classes among his great and enlightened constituency." (Cheers.) During 39 years the period I have been in Parliament, I believe that I may say that political consistency, at present at a discount, was not much relied on. I do not attach any exaggerated notion to the idea of political consistency. I am not so presumptuous as to say that, during the time I have been in Parliament, I never modified my opinion upon any political questions reposed in me, that during the whole of that time I never was compelled entirely to alter my opinions upon any great measure brought before the House of Commons. (Cheers.) I, as a member of that small but determined band, aided in giving the first blow to those systems which I have described to you, by assisting Mr. George Canning, in his great struggle in 1826, and also by assisting Sir Robert Peel upon a very late occasion. (Cheers.) Now, gentlemen, during all this struggle, continued with various successes, I had always the distinguished satisfaction of finding myself, upon every occasion, side by side with your late lamented and respected representative, Mr. G. Byng. There are still many social, fiscal, and educational reforms to be accomplished, and which will require the most unwearied exertions to bring about; reforms which those I now address will, I doubt not, if their lives be spared, live to witness (Cheers.) I am truly attached to the working classes. (Cheers.) I feel deeply what we all owe to them, and especially the working classes of the metropolis. Mr. Cobden, than whom no person could be supposed to be a more accurate observer, said, 'that however great might be the industry of the working classes of the manufacturing districts to which he belonged, still, he must fairly state that the artizans of London were far superior to them.' I do not think that those working classes have been fairly treated; they have been most sadly neglected. I can assure the electors of Middlesex that any measure which may be brought forward having for its object the amelioration of that class will have my most earnest support. (Loud cheers). Now, gentlemen, sincerely thanking you for the very great kindness with which you have been pleased, on such a day as this, to receive the observations which I have addressed to you, and most cordially thanking you for the honour you have conferred upon me, I can only say, honour I value most highly—knowing that I shall very shortly be called upon to tell you in what way I have fulfilled the trust which you have confided to me, I respectfully, for the present, take my leave of you. (The noble Lord then retired, amidst loud demonstrations of applause.)

THE MIDDLESEX ELECTION ON WEDNESDAY.—SKETCH FROM THE HUSTINGS.—LORD ROBERT GROSVENOR ADDRESSING THE FREEHOLDERS.

Sir Walter Stirling then came forward, and in a brief address congraulated the electors on having chosen a member so eminently qualified in every way to be their representative.

Lord Robert Grosvenor then proposed a vote of thanks to the Sheriffs, which compliment was cordially responded to; and three cheers having been given for the ladies, the proceedings closed.

LORD ROBERT GROSVENOR.

Elections towards the close of the existence of Parliament are rarely contested with any strong spirit of opposition A year, or a year and a half, is too short a term to make it worth men's while to plunge into all the excitement and expense of a conflict in a large constituency, for a short-lived honour. A series of quiet, unopposed elections may therefore be taken as the premonitory symptoms of the natural termination of the existence of the Legislature; it is doomed, and men hold aloof for awhile:

> What mariner is not afraid
> To venture in a ship decay'd?
> What husbandman would ever yoke
> A sapling to the falling oak?

On the same principle, would-be Legislators avoid an expiring Parliament. This, joined with the general suspension of party politics, which has been produced by many causes, may account for a phenomenon which at on period would have appeared almost incredible—an Election for Middlesex without a contest. Some of the fiercest of our political battles have been fought in the Metropolitan County; Middlesex and Westminster were the very centres of violence and agitation; the conflict between Wilkes and the House of Commons, which has become an historical event, grew out of his election for Middlesex; he was expelled the House, and elected again, in a storm of popular fury, of which we can now form but an imperfect notion. The Journals and caricatures of thirty or forty years ago, exhibit a degree of political rancour and excitement, breaking out in tumult, violence, abuse, subsiding in drunkenness, and what we may call political debauchery, that present the most striking contrast to the quiet and orderly proceedings at the hustings at Brentford on Wednesday last; and the change is certainly for the better.

Lord Robert Grosvenor, M.P., who now represents Middlesex in the place of the late Mr. Byng, is well known in public life; he has been for many years in Parliament; he has taken the leading part on all occasions when the cause of Polish freedom could be advocated, or its defenders assisted; and the physical and moral improvement of the people has always found in him an able champion. He is the third son of the late, and brother of the present Marquis of Westminster. He has represented Chester ever since 1826, on the family interest; but has given up the seat for his nephew, who has just been returned without opposition. Though Lord Robert Grosvenor is better known to the public in connection with the cause of Poland than of his advocacy of any particular political question, yet the short sketch of his career which he gave from the hustings on Wednesday is not without interest. He said—"I was born and educated in the heart of the city of Westminster, and within the sound of its Abbey bells; I was introduced to political life 25 years ago, and at that time I found a Parliament unreformed, which could not in any way be said to represent the people of England—I found a criminal law full of unsatisfactory anomalies—I found civil disabilities and penal laws against our Roman Catholic fellow-subjects, and I found acts enforced which pressed in a most unjust and oppressive manner upon the consciences of those religious denominations which differed from the Church—I found slavery existing in our colonies—I found trade and commerce fettered by unjust monopolies—and, worst of all, I found it impossible to obtain the redress of grievances, however clearly they were proved. I hesitated not to attach myself to that small but increasing band of men who opposed themselves to this bad system; and, without going into any detail of the measures we succeeded in passing, I may say that we never relaxed in our exertions until we obtained that better state of things under which we are now living." This is tersely and truly stated, and reflected him from the necessity of an express declaration of opinions. It is singular that neither his mover nor seconder allinded to his exertions on behalf of the Polish emigration, since they have gained him so much respect from the English public. His Lordship is about forty-six years of age; he held the office of Comptroller of the House old from 1830 to 1834

Our Illustration portrays Lord Robert Grosvenor addressing the freeholders from the hustings at Brentford. His Lordship is surrounded by his Committee, the Sheriffs, &c.

The Bishop of Lichfield has notified his intention of holding general ordinations for the present year on Trinity Sunday, May 30; Sunday, September 19; Sunday, December 19.

New See of Manchester.—There is a rumour that the Rev. J. Slade, M.A., Vicar of Bolton, and Canon of Chester Cathedral, is to be the new Bishop of Manchester

Election for West Sussex.—Richard Prime, Esq., of Walberton, was on Tuesday elected, at Chichester, without opposition, for West Sussex, in the room of Colonel Wyndham. P. Curteis, Esq., proposed Mr. Prime, and in seconding he was W. W. Burrell, Esq. Mr. Prime is the Deputy Chairman of the Sussex Quarter Sessions, and Chairman of the Sussex Protection Society.

Prince George of Cambridge.—It is reported among the military circles in Dublin that his Royal Highness Prince George of Cambridge, K.G. and G.C.M.G., commanding the district, will shortly be appointed to a staff situation in Canada.

The Oxford-Wolverton Railway.—On Monday, at Walsall, the ceremony took place of cutting the first turf of the short line intended to connect the North Staffordshire Railway with the Grand Junction and the London and North Western line. A few weeks ago, the contract for three miles of the work was, from Walsall to the Bescott Station—was entered into, and the work commenced about the end of March. Immediately after the above arrangement, the contractor proceeded with the necessary steps for carrying on the work. Monday being appointed for the ceremony, C. B. Forster, Esq., chief engineer, proceeded, at eleven o'clock, to a field belonging to Mr. R. Dorset, near the New Mills, Walsall, and, in the presence of a great number of the leading men of the town and neighbourhood, and a large concourse of persons, turned up a few turfs.

Mortality of London.—The total number of deaths in the metropolis during the week ending last Saturday, was 1133, being a considerable decrease upon recent returns, and only 83 above the average of the last five weeks. The number of births during the week was 1,925—779 males and 746 females

Fire in Tramps-street.—Yesterday morning, about half-past two o'clock a fire, attended with great damage and destruction of property, took place at a cigar manufactory and tobacconist's, opposite the Custom House, Lower Thames-street. With great difficulty the family was made acquainted with their danger; and, by the time the engines were procured, a good supply of water was obtained; but the fire was not extinguished until property to a large extent was destroyed. The proprietor, it is believed, is insured against loss.

MUSIC.

DRURY-LANE THEATRE.

Mr. Travers has more than confirmed the favourable impression he produced on his début, noticed in our columns last week The universal exclamation on hearing him is, "We have a tenor at last," and it is a just conclusion. When it is considered that he has been studying altogether for the last five years, a more remarkable success has rarely been met with. It is generally supposed that he is finally resolved not to remain quiescent with his present triumphs The exquisite artists in the world, after a brilliant career, have not been ashamed to confess, that at the period when they were ably know how to sing, nature was beginning to affect the organ Mr. Travers has no deficiency of power; but he will have to acquire more flexibility and variety of tone, so as to get rid of a slight monotony in his style. His second performance of Fernando, in "The Favorite," was, however, a great improvement on the opening night. There was still a reserved timidness, and no evenness in their general [illegible] He will have to avoid the vice of the French school, called the recond, and lessons in dramatic action, of an experienced English master, would tend to moderate the exaggeration he has acquired from the Italian stage. The clearness and beauty of his pronunciation are worthy of a Duprez or a Braham, and there can be no higher praise. In the cavatina "Welcome once more to the tranquil Cloister," he is mightily encored; and Miss Romer and Mr. Travers, in the powerful duo finale of the last act, create an immense sensation. How the lady manages to the wear and tear of singing every night, is quite marvellous—she must have a throat of iron. She is as fresh and as beautiful as ever; and no part becomes her more than the Favorite, in the opera of which her singing is quite Malibranic. Borrani has also never been more advantageously heard than in this opera—the two last acts of which are the gems of Donizetti.

CONCERTS OF THE WEEK.

Mr. Henry Phillips's entertainment at the Sussex Hall, in Leadenhall-street, on Monday, was very well attended, and he was encored in several pieces. He announced that he would soon give the City amateurs "A Night with Dibdin," in commemoration of the jubilee of the company at his vivacious style of singing "Jolly Dick the Lamplighter."

On Tuesday, Messrs. Blagrove, Webb, Weslake, and Hancock, aided by Mr. C. Severn, performed quartets and quintets at the Horn Tavern, Doctors' Commons

The attraction of the Edinburgh Review at the St. Martin's Theatre continues undiminished. The first meeting of the Amateur Musical Society, at the Music Hall, in Store-street, took place on Friday.

MUSICAL CHIT CHAT.

On Monday next Mr. Dando's second Quartet Concert will be given at Crosby Hall. the second Concert of the Sacred Harmonic Music at Exeter Hall; and the Annual Concert of Mrs. A. Newton and Mr. G. Case at the London Tavern.

On Tuesday. Mr. Allcroft gives his tenth annual Concert Monstre, at the Lyceum Theatre.

On Wednesday, Mdme. Dulcken's second Soirée Musicale will take place, and Mrs. W. H. Cope gives her annual concert at the Bridge House Hotel.

In the course of the week, Miss Annie Romer (a sister of Mr. Travers, and a cousin of the Miss Romer) will make her first appearance in Adelgisa in "Norma," Miss Bassano enacting the Druidical Priestess.

On Monday next, Mr. Bunn opens his theatre, for the benefit of the distressed Irish and Scotch; the receipts will be appropriated, we are delighted to understand, as the committee has allowed the use of Drury Lane free of rent, and the artistes and employé give their services gratuitously. Mr. Wilson, the vocalist, has paid over to the Committee, for the aid of the Highlanders, the sum of £5. 19s. 6d., the proceeds of his entertainment on Tuesday week.

At the consecration of the beautiful new church of St. Andrew, Wells-street, Oxford-street, by the Bishop of London, a fine performance of old English church music was executed under the direction of Dr. Gauntlett, who presided at the organ; the "Te Deum," &c. declaimed to the ancient tune, according to a MS. formerly belonging to Norwich Cathedral, and of the date 1470. The "Jubilate" was sung in unison to a chant of the developed, or festival form. The new organ was built by Messrs. Hill and Co., under the plans of Dr. Gauntlett; it now contains a novelty, from being blown on a high pressure of wind, after the manner now universally adopted on the continent. At the evening service, the harmonised ritual music of Tallis, and an Anthem by Redford, a Tudor Quireman, was sung by the same choir, and the Psalms and Prose Hymns to the ancient tones.

The misapplication of the funds bequeathed by General Reid, to establish a Musical Choir in Edinburgh, by the Senatus, is likely to lead to legal proceedings. The learned Professors have no use for music, and have refused to open the lessons of a class room for Professor Donaldson, and the Town Council has taken up the matter. The grant of General Reid might have been of great value for art, but the money has been appropriated illegally there can be no doubt, to other purposes, the motto of the learned doctors being, "Throw music to the dogs—we'll none of it."

Mr. Frederick Webster, the stage manager of the Haymarket Theatre, has been appointed Professor of Elocution in the Royal Academy of Music.

Mr. Sternsdale Bennett is about to resume his pianoforte performances, at the Hanover-square Rooms. The first meeting of the Beethoven Quartett Society will take place on Monday, March 8, and be continued every fortnight, alternately with the Philharmonic Society's Concerts; M. Rousseloit is the director. He has engaged Herr David (brother of Mdme. Dulcken), the leader of the Leipsig concerts; M. Sainton, M. Vieuxtemps, as violins; Mr. Hill as tenor; and he will play the violoncello. Five performances will complete the fixed programmes of Beethoven's quartets, and, for the remaining three, there will be selections from Haydyn and Mozart. From a communication that has reached us we learn that the Choral Fund will contribute, in addition to £15 per annum to the widow of the late Mr. Kearns, a benefit of three shillings and sixpence for each child a-week, making altogether about £60 per annum, derived from this excellent institution. A meeting will take place on Wednesday next, at two P.M., at the Hanover-square Rooms, Sir George Smart in the chair, to consider the best means of aiding Mrs. Kearns and her large family in their difficulties. Mr. Costa has, in the handsomest manner, consented to officiate as Conductor. If a concert be given. The morning performance that it was Mrs. Kearns who originally suggested that her organ should be developed as a contralto.

FOREIGN MUSICAL NEWS

Accounts from Vienna of the 21st ult., state that Madame Schuman, the celebrated pianiste (Clara Wieck), had closed a brilliant career in that capital, and was about to make a tour in Bohemia, Prussia, and Saxony. Meyerbeer's "Camp of Silesia" was still in preparation for Jenny Lind. M. Lewis, the French oboist, had given a concert in Vienna, as also Master and Miss Neruda, the former a violinist, the latter a pianiste, both very clever children. Blasz, the clarionet player, and Madame Blasz after concerts in Vienna, had departed for Warsaw and Cracow. Balfe's "Bohemian Girl," after its successful production in Vienna and Prague, was to be performed at Munich, Brunswick, &c. Döhler, the pianist, was about to leave Moscow for Paris, to resume his professional career, although he has been lately married to a rich and noble lady. Emile Prudent, the harpist, has been creating a sensation at Milan by his performance of Beethoven's music.

The Parisian and Italian journals are in ecstasies with the acting of the celebrated comic buffo, Ronconi, at the Scala, in Milan, in Greco's "La Prova d'un Opera Seria" It is declared that he is second only to the incomparable Lablache in this part. Rovere is engaged at the Royal Italian Opera, Covent Garden; and Mario, the great tenor, at the Scala. The Gazzetta Musicale di Milano, of the 24th of January contains an article on the first performance of "Alzira," at the Scala, despite of the admirable acting of Madame Tadolini, Moriani, and Marini. The critic considers "Alzira" as not inferior to "Attila"—"Attila" to the "Due Foscari"—or the "Foscari" to "Giovanna d'Arco"; "Giovanni" to "Ernani," to the "Lombardi," and to "Nabucco;" but complains of the clumsiness in Verdi's style. The Monde Musical asserts that the infatuation of the Milanese for Verdi has quite gone down. The France Musicale, the editors of which have purchased the exclusive right to publish Verdi's works in Paris, stoutly defend the fame of their client, and declare that his "Attila" has been given in Europe thirty-three times, and received with enthusiasm. The truth, we suspect, is between these two versions of Verdi's popularity. He is unquestionably a composer of much merit, but he suffers from the indiscretion of his publishers, who strive to make for him a position, which his works of themselves will not earn for him. Madame Tadolini goes to Vienna after she has completed her engagement at the Scala. She will remain in Vienna until the month of November. Grisi, Persiani, and Corbari, until the end of the Carnival. In 1848, beginning in Genoa; and from thence she goes to Venice and Florence, and returns to Turin. A new one-act opera, called "La Bonquetière," the poem by M. Lucas, and the music by Adolphe Adam, was to be produced at the Royal Académie Royale de Musique; Mdlle. Nau, M. Ponchard, the new tenor, and Bremond, the basso, sustaining the principal parts. The new ballet of "La Taitienne" in rehearsal, the music by M. Gide. Mozart's "Don Giovanni" was given last Monday, at the Italian Opera, in Paris, for Lablache's benefit, he sustaining the part of the hero; Lablache, Leporello; Mario, Ottavio; Grisi, Persiani, and Corbari, Donna Anna, Zerlina, and Donna Elvira.

On the 20th of January the 25th anniversary of Spohr's nomination as Chapel Master was celebrated at Resse-Cassel, at the Court Theatre, on which occasion his seven operas, namely, "Azor und Zamira," "Jessonda," "Faust," "Pietro Albano," "The Alchemist," "The Gnome," and "The Crusaders," were performed On the same evening H.R.H. Prince Louis Hesse Cassel appointed Spohr Director-General of Music, and conferred on him the title of Aulic Councillor, and the King of Prussia sent to him the decoration of the Order of the Red Eagle of the third class.

Lyceum Theatre.—We perceive Mr. Allcroft is once more in the field, with his tenth annual benefit Concert on Tuesday next, and from the galaxy of talent he has brought together for the occasion, there can be very little doubt of his success. We need only mention a few of the Artistes engaged to give our readers an idea of the musical treat they may anticipate. Mesdames Bassano, Birch, Alberti, Lablache, Novello, the Misses Williams, Miss Maria B Lewes, and a Miss Reynell, who will make her first appearance. Then the Messieurs Harrison, Allan, H. Phillips, Lablache, Henry Russell, Mr John Parry, and many others, for whose names we must refer our readers to our advertising columns. The solo performers consist of Madame Dulcken, M. Benedict, Grattan Cooke, Harper, F. Chatterton, and Master Thirlwall.

EVERYBODY'S COLUMN.

BY ALBERT SMITH.

SPECIMEN OF A NEW CHEAP PERIODICAL.

RAPIDITY of travelling and reduction of prices, all over the world, have called into existence a new class of literature. The wonderful quantity to be procured for a penny has spelled people for giving half-a-crown; and the quick transit from one place to another has rendered articles of the old school comparatively worthless, as, according to the latest estimates, a traveller must go six times between Exeter and Newcastle—the longest continuous journey on the rail at present to be made—to get through an ordinary three volume novel.

To meet the times—as the cant phrase now goes for reducing any price that the public will not pay—it is proposed to start The Decimal Miscellany; the price being the tenth part of a penny, and the literature that of magazines generally—continuous stories, sketches, and poetry. A little confusion will arise in the brains of the readers from the number of serials; but not much more than is usually the case at present. And the grand feature will be the conciseness of the papers, adapted to the rapidity of locomotion. The following is a specimen number

I. TEDDY O'ROURKE, A TALE OF THE REBELLION.

Chapter I. Fair; is! Is! Katty Hooligan wasn't the purtiest lass between Wicklow Mountains and the Hill of Howth may I never have a button-hole to my galligaskins.

Wahsacrums!" said Corney Dwyer, "is it there you are now, Katty? Och! by all de powers, but ye're going after the masther, instead of the man."

And so Katty was, for the Squire was as bowld a gossoon as ever top'd a stone-wall in a hedge-chase. But Corney Cure, for the bed of St. Kevin, he'd be even with him.

(To be continued.)

II. A LEGEND OF THE RHINE.

The Baron von Blonderbunts kept open house at the Katzbangfals. "I love your daughter," said Sir Hildebrand. "You be (something dreadful)!" said the Baron. That night the fair Lenora fled with her lover, and the stormy Rhine engulfed its victims. The fisherman still hears their shriek at eventide, and the traveller gazes with interest at the ruined keep on the heights of Grabsburgh.

III. TO INEZ. SCANZAS FOR MUSIC.

Spring shower, passion flower; heart, apart; bliss, kiss; mine, thine; only, lonely; sever, ever; devotion, emotion; ever be, but to thee!

V. THE OLDE SQUIRE, A ROMANCE OF LONDON IN THE MIDDLE AGES.

Chapter I. How Master Wrenwood Letherby encountered Frank the Prentice, in Cheapc.

"Gadso! now, by my halidame, forsooth, thou shalt rue this saucy speech, Sir Knave," cried Master Letherby, drawing his long rapier.

"Gramercy! thou coystrel; out upon thee!" replied the Prentice. "I have faced too many swash-bucklers in Finsbury to fear thee, thou sorry wag-halter."

The cressets of the watch were seen approaching as the brawlers crossed their weapons, when the arrival of a third party broke up the contest.

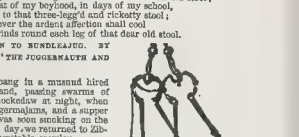
(To be continued in our next.)

VI.—THE DEAR OLD STOOL.—VERSES

I love it, though many may call me a fool,
But my heart-strings are tied round that dear old stool;
The seat of my boyhood, in days of my school,
I cling to that three-legg'd and rickety stool;
And never the ardent affection shall cool
That winds round each leg of that dear old stool.

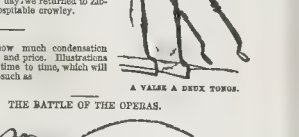
VII.—AN EXCURSION TO BUNDLEAUX. BY THE AUTHOR OF "THE JUGGERNAUTH AND THE JUNGLE."

We left Biddygobang in a munaud hired for the occasion, and, passing swarms of alligators, got to Chockedaw at night, when we lighted our raggarmajams, and a supper of hot rumahoodra was soon smoking on the buddies. The next day we returned to Zibbedehoy Jullock's hospitable crowley.



A VALSE A DEUX TONGS.

This will show how much condensation will effect, in space and price. Illustrations will be given from time to time, which will tell their own tale—such as



LUMLEY'S MONSTER MORTAR.

THE BATTLE OF THE OPERAS.

The "Battle of Life" between Bow-street and the Haymarket is progressing fiercely, and each party is confident of success. The Haymarket depends upon its bass nonsuitre, the throat of which has the power of throwing off notes which usually burst on a house with terrific effect. At either place, the intelligent assistant, who gives the tone to the audience, by directing [illegible]

THE MASKED BOUQUET BATTERY, is in constant practice, and he can now aim with unerring precision. Meanwhile, the following Song has been received from an Ethiopian Serenade:—

JENNY LIND.—A BALLAD.

To the popular Air of "Mary Blane."

I once engaged a singing girl,
And prized her as my life;
We signed and sealed as lovers,
And I made the rumours rife.
To home I came so happily,
And thought the girl I'd gain'd,
Till in the spring-time of the year
I lost my Jenny Lind.

Oh! fare thee well, sly Jenny Lind,
No feeling heart belongs to you;
Oh! fare thee well, sly Jenny Lind,
You're feeble as the wind.

While talking with press-lifted stars
Who mightly houses shinn'd,
The other came, and from my troupe
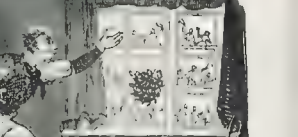
He stole deep Jenny Lind.
It grieves me very much to think
The nightingale has sinned;
But what the deuce am I to do,
If sold by Jenny Lind.

Oh! fare thee well, deep Jenny Lind,
I certainly believed you true.
Oh! fare thee well, deep Jenny Lind,
It's not quite right of you.



A TRAP TO CATCH SWEDISH NIGHTINGALES.

THE WEATHER.

THE past week has been dull, and at times very gloomy; the sky has been generally covered by cloud, and the air hazy, and nearly at all times saturated with moisture. Thursday, Jan. 28, the wind blew strongly from the S.W.; there were occasional showers of rain during the day, and the evening was cloudless: its average temperature was 39°. Friday was dull and cloudy til evening; its average temperature was 36°. Saturday was cloudy till afternoon; its average temperature was 34°. Sunday was a gloomy day, the sky being generally overcast; its average temperature was 33°. Monday, February 1st, was a cold dull day, and, with the exception of the clouds being a little broken at about noon, the sky was cloudy throughout; its average temperature was 31°. Tuesday was a cold day, a keen north wind was blowing, snow was falling frequently throughout the day; its average temperature was 32°. Wednesday was a dull, cloudy day; rain was frequently falling; its average temperature was 32°. The average temperature of the week has been 34°, being 5° colder than that of the preceding week. The amount of rain fallen during the month of January was 1 inches. The following are the extreme thermometrical readings taken each day

Thursday, Jan. 28	the highest reading was 44	deg. the lowest was 31	deg.
Friday, Jan. 29	.....	44	.....
Saturday, Jan. 30	.....	41	.....
Sunday, Jan. 31	.....	40	.....
Monday, Feb. 1	.....	36	.....
Tuesday, Feb. 2	.....	36	.....
Wednesday, Feb. 3	.....	35½	.....

Blackheath, Thursday, Feb. 4, 1847. J. G.

Erratum.—In the report for last week, the lowest on Jan. 27, for 35 deg., read 45 deg

INHALATION OF ETHER.

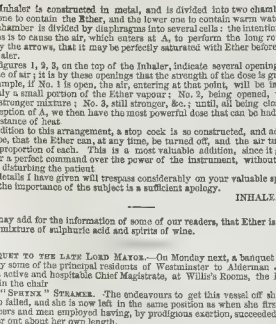
(From a Correspondent.)

THIS most remarkable and providential gift to humanity is now occupying so much of public attention, that I am induced to send you a few remarks, which I hope may assist to develop its perfect application; these being deduced from an experiment which accidentally occurred to myself.

I commenced my experiment by testing several of the Inhalers advertised, when, to my great surprise, I found I could not even inspire the cold mixture. The proportion of Ether appeared so great, and produced such a violent fit of coughing, accompanied with a sense of suffocation, that I immediately concluded the application of hot water, to promote evaporation, as totally absurd, and re solved at once to adopt the advice of an eminent practitioner, viz. to dilute the Ether vapour, rather than promote its activity by the application of heat. I afterwards repeated the same experiment, under the same circumstances on a robust person about twenty years old, and found the same strength of mixture which produced suffocation with me was inhaled by him without the least inconvenience. After one minute he was seized with a fit of laughter, clapping his hands together at the same time, in the most violent manner, precisely as though he had been under the influence of nitrous oxide, or laughing gas; indeed, his manner was altogether so extravagant and ludicrous, that several gentlemen present believed it to be affectation, and regarded him as a clever impostor

The next experiment was again on myself, with what I term the Graduated or Dose Inhaler. With this instrument I was enabled to inspire, at the commencement, air without any admixture of Ether vapour: afterwards the Ether was allowed to mix gradually with the air until I was inhaling the same strength of mixture without difficulty which, in the first instance, produced all the sensation of choking and suffocation. I deduce from this part of the experiment that no patient would refuse to inhale the Ether, if it were administered as I have described, and that it is quite impossible for persons with delicate lungs to take it unless the mixture is very dilute to commence with. The remaining part of the experiment is the most extraordinary, inasmuch as it was purely accidental. I should observe that when I sat down to inhale the Ether I had not the least intention to pursue the experiment further than testing it under several degrees of dilution, but, alas! when I had arrived to that part of the experiment described, I was spell-bound: I had imbibed the fascinating draught and was transported into other worlds. Hitherto the inhalation, although by no means disagreeable, appeared difficult and hurried, until I experienced a sensation stealing softly through my whole frame of the most extatic and indescribable pleasure. From this point the inhalation was no longer difficult, but appeared to be exceedingly slow and easy, and full of harmony; the mind was filled with exquisite imaginings; in short, it appeared as though the gross or material element had lost its hold of the senses, and left them unfettered to revel to the full enjoyment of all that the nervous or sensitive part of man is susceptible. This attempt at description will not be considered ridiculous or extravagant by those who have been under the influence of laughing gas. In one of the Magazines, I recollect reading an extract from a work entitled "The Opium Eater" The feelings and sensations there so powerfully pourtrayed, are an exact parallel, and were recalled to my mind whilst under the influence of the Ether. I am informed that my sense of feeling was at this period tested with the point of a pair of scissors, pinching, &c., &c. But what is worthy of remark is, that at this stage the water was constantly applied to the inhaler all over the surface, and being constructed in metal, I must at this time have inhaled almost the pure vapour of Ether. I was under its influence a considerable time, and was perfectly sensible of the change in the quantity or quality of my draught. With the exception of a slight sensation of sickness and drowsiness I experienced no after inconvenience. The period of influence with me was divided into two distinct parts: the first somewhat resembling intoxication full of excitement and activity; the second, the most delicious contentment and apparent quietude: probably the next state is torpor or total insensibility to pain.

The corollary to be drawn from these experiments, I again repeat, viz., that, in the administering of Ether, a Graduated or Dose Inhaler must be employed, by which the strength of the dose may, with facility, be adapted at any instant to the condition or temperament of the person to be operated upon, without the necessity of removing the tube from the mouth of the patient; and that the hot water apparatus, if not acually necessary in every case, is certainly useful to promote the activity and strength of the Ether when it may be required. The following is a diagram of an Inhaler, manufactured at 201, Strand. It is extremely beautiful in theory, and appears to possess all the necessary qualities:



THE GRADUATED-DOSE INHALER.

The Inhaler is constructed in metal, and is divided into two chambers; the upper one to contain the Ether, and the lower one to contain warm water. The Ether chamber is divided by diaphragms into several cells: the intention of these divisions is to cause the air to pass through A, to perform the long route indicated by the arrows, that it may be perfectly saturated with Ether before it leaves the Inhaler.

The figures 1, 2, 3, on the top of the Inhaler, indicate several openings for the entrance of air; it is by these openings that the strength of the dose is graduated. For example, if No. 1 be open, the air, entering at that point, will be in contact with only a small portion of the Ether vapour; but if all be open, they will produce a stronger mixture; No. 3, still stronger, &c.; until, all being closed, with the exception of A, we then have the most powerful dose that can be had, without the assistance of heat.

In addition to this arrangement, a stop cock is so constructed, and adapted to the tube, that the Ether can, at any time, be turned off, and the air turned on, or any proportion of each. This is a most valuable addition, since it gives the operator a perfect command over the power of the instrument, without, in any degree, disfiguring the patient

The details I have given will trespass considerably on your valuable space, but I hope the importance of the subject is a sufficient apology.

INHALER.

We may add for the information of some of our readers, that Ether is distilled from a mixture of sulphuric acid and spirits of wine.

BANQUET TO THE LATE LORD MAYOR.—On Monday next, a banquet is to be given by one of the parishioners of Westminster to Alderman Johnson, the late active and hospitable Chief Magistrate, at Willis's Rooms, the Hon. T. Talbot in the chair

THE "SPITZE" STEAMER. The endeavours to get this vessel off shore have hitherto failed, and she is now left in the same position as when she first struck, the officers and men employed having, by prodigious exertion, succeeded in dragging her out about her own length.

SUDDEN DEATH.—Captain Francis Fead, R.N, died suddenly at his residence in Woolwich on Sunday. The deceased officer was seated at breakfast with his family, when he was seized with a fit of apoplexy, and expired before medical assistance could be procured. Captain Fead was a Justice of the Peace for the county of Kent.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

THE PRIVILEGES OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.—JUDGMENT OF THE QUEEN'S BENCH REVERSED.—The Judges in the COURT OF EXCHEQUER on Tuesday gave their decision in the well-known case of Howard v. Gossett, the argument in which, after various adjournments, was concluded last term. It will be remembered that it was an appeal by Sir Wm. Gossett, the Sergeant-at-arms of the House of Commons, the plaintiff in error, against the decision of the Court of Queen's Bench, in the case of "Howard v. Gossett," in which that Court decided that the House of Commons, from the informality of the warrant, had no right to imprison the plaintiff; and that the defendant, Sir. Wm. Gossett, had acted illegally in taking Mr. Howard into custody. The Court now gave judgment on the writ of error, holding that the House of Commons, as one of the High Courts of Parliament, had perfect right to act in matters affecting its own privileges, and was not bound to state on the face of the warrant to the Sergeant-at-Arms all the formalities required in a warrant issued by an inferior Court. The superior Courts of Law of England exercised this right; and their Lordships were, therefore, of opinion that the House of Commons had an equal right to take and keep in custody any person the House might consider to be guilty of contempt. The Speaker's warrant was sufficient authority for that purpose. In the course of the argument, it had been urged, by the counsel in behalf of the defendant in error, that the possession of such a power by one branch of the Legislature might be greatly abused, without any remedy for such abuse. It might undoubtedly be abused; but the case was precisely similar with the authority reposed in the superior Courts of Law. It must be presumed that the exercise of the power would be properly directed; and that should any undue exercise of that power occur, that the good sense of the House would afford redress, as in the practice of the superior Courts. The decision of the Court of Queen's Bench must, therefore, be reversed.

MR. WAKLEY AND THE "MEDICAL TIMES."—IN the BAIL COURT on Wednesday, judgment was given in the case of the Queen on the prosecution of T. Wakley, Esq., M.P., v. Cooke. Lord Denman stated that the prosecutor had applied for a rule for a criminal information against the publisher of the Medical Times for certain alleged libels upon him in his capacity of Coroner during the investigation relative to the soldier White, who was flogged to death. The charges made were of a serious nature no doubt. The only question, however, for that Court to consider was whether or not the defendant, by some proceedings of his own, precluded himself from obtaining the interposition of the Court in his favour. The Noble Lord then proceeded to detail the circumstances of the case, and said that Mr. Wakley had in fact done nothing which gave rise to the opinion that his zeal had affected his conduct in the inquiry, and given rise to the reflection that he was eager to find proofs and pretences for his jury to censure the conduct which he himself had pursued. The Court was bound to say that it was not unreasonable to put this construction on his conduct. The Court gave him full credit for the sincerity of his opinion, and its justice was in a strong degree proved by the fact that it had been adopted by the State since that time. But if that opinion led to any influence on his conduct as Coroner, induced him to exclude evidence, and to utter censures, and to do those things which there was no doubt had been done in the case, their Lordships did not think that he was in a state to ask them to sanction proceedings which were unfortunately erroneous; and, therefore, in the exercise of their duty in these circumstances, they thought it right to say that the rule must be discharged.

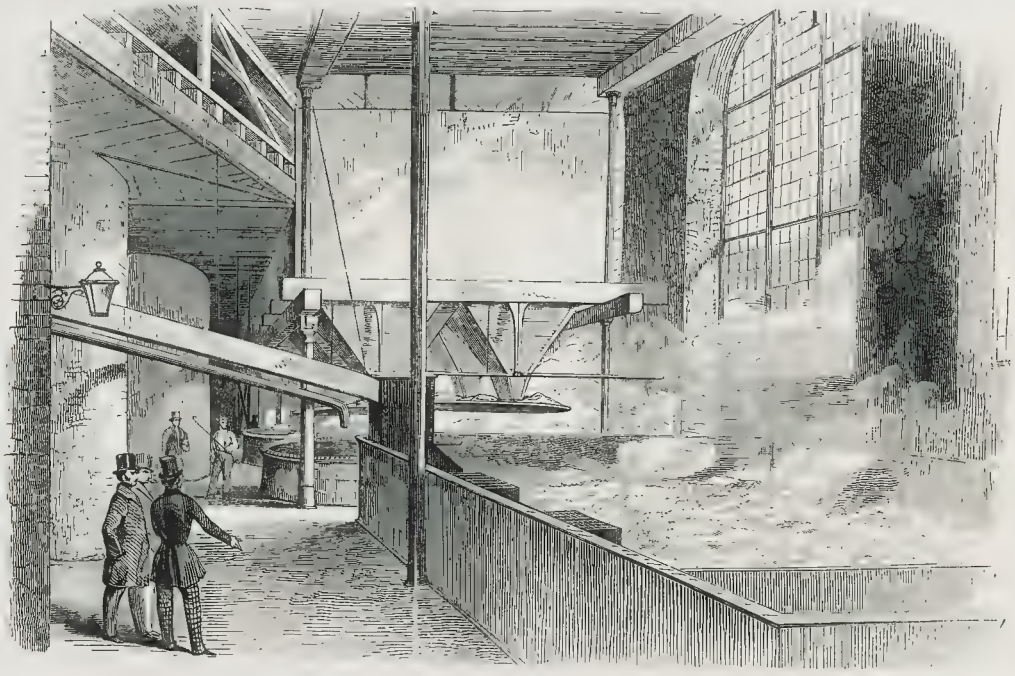
THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE (Friday). The fresh arrivals of English wheat since Monday have been but moderate, and to-day's supply is fairly supplied with samples of both red and white, a large number of which was the refuse of Wednesday. All kinds met a very dull sale, and clearances could not be effected without giving way somewhat in value. Scarcely any foreign wheat found buyers, owing to the firmness of the holders. No change to be noticed in barley—the supply of which was small—was firm, and previous rates were fully supported. We had a very dull sale for malt, but as there was no pressure upon the market, the downward tendency was not extensive. Oats moved off steadily, at full prices, but beans, peas, and flour were a mere drug.

ARRIVALS.—English: Wheat, 6450; barley, 6860; malt, 6640; oats, 8020. Irish: Wheat, 1760; barley, 2020; malt, ——; oats, ——. Foreign: Wheat, 5470; barley, 3070; malt, ——; oats, 2140. Total ..... 7220 sacks, 14,790 barrels.

English.—Wheat, Essex and Kent, red, 50s to 52s; ditto white, 52s to 55s; Norfolk and Suffolk, red, 47s to 52s; ditto white 52s to 57s; rye, 42s to 36s, grinding barley, 40s to 46s; distilling, 50s to 56s; malting ditto, 54s to 60s; Lincoln and Norfolk malt 70s to 75s; brown ditto, 74s to 78s, Kingston and Ware, 72s to 80s, Chevalier, 80s to 86s. Yorkshire and Lincolnshire oats, 24s to 26s, potato ditto, 26s to 28s; Youghal and Cork, black, —s to —s; ditto white, 26s to 28s; ditto brown, none; 24s to 26s; Sligo, none; 24s to 26s; Limerick, 24s to 26s; Londonderry, 25s to 28s; white

A VISIT TO MESSRS. BARCLAY AND PERKINS'S BREWERY.



PORTION OF THE GREAT BREWHOUSE.

One of the "Privileged Sights" of the metropolis is a visit of inspection to the vast Brewery of Messrs. Barclay, Perkins, and Company, in Southwark, which we may characterise as the largest establishment of its class in the kingdom, or indeed, in the world. By a "privileged sight," we mean that it can only be enjoyed by a letter of introduction, and as a privilege granted, by their courtesy, and a large proportion of the forty tons of distinguished visitors avail themselves of such permission to inspect the gigantic Brewery. Thus, among recent entries in the visitors' book, kept at the counting-house, we find the names of Ibrahim Pacha, and Prince Louis Napoleon Bonaparte, both of whom were highly gratified with what they here saw of the vastness of individual enterprise in this country. In the travelled sight-lover, it invariably excites wonder at its extent, and admiration of its completeness; and even the inhabitant of London, surrounded with her splendour, never fails, on visiting the Brewery, to be impressed with what Dr. Johnson called "the potentiality of growing rich beyond the dream of avarice." As evidence of our metropolitan greatness, we have deemed this vast establishment entitled to illustration in our pages; and if there are some accidental circumstances connected with the manufacture of beer which render the subject of special interest at the present season, we shall, therefore, proceed to submit to the reader the result of our visit to the Brewery, on Tuesday last, as originated by the artist by whom the sketches for the accompanying illustrations had been previously taken, merely premising that a detailed report of what we there witnessed, would fill several pages; and we must confine our account to the great scenes, or leading features, of the establishment.

The Brewery and its appurtenances may be described, generally, as occupying about twelve acres of ground, immediately adjoining Barkside, and extending from the land-arches of Southwark Bridge, nearly half of the distance to those of London Bridge. Within the Brewery walls is included the site of the famous Globe Theatre, "which Shakespeare has bound so closely up with his own history," and, in a history of the neighborhood, dated 1795, it is stated that "the passage which led to the Globe Tavern, of which the playhouse formed a part, was, till within these few years, known by the name of Globe alley, and upon its site now stands a large storehouse for porter." We are glad to regard this existence as theatrical. However, the first Globe Theatre was taken down about the time of the Commonwealth; and so late as 1720, Maiden-lane (now called New Park-street, of which Gobscally was an offshoot, was a long, straggling place, with ditches on each side, the passage to the houses being over little bridges, with little gardens in front before them. (Strype's Stow.)

Early in the last century, there was a Brewery here, comparatively very small: it then belonged to a Mr. Halsey, who, on retiring from it with a large fortune, sold it to the elder Mr. Thrale: he became sheriff of Surrey, and M.P. for Southwark; and died in 1758, leaving his property to a son, the friend of Dr. Johnson, who, from 1765 to the brewer's death, lived at the Brewery, and at his villa at Streatham. "Before the fire at the Brewery, in 1832, the room was pointed out, near the gate, in which the Doctor wrote many of his most celebrated works, more particularly his Dictionary." In 1781, Mr. Thrale died; and as he had no sons, his executors, of whom Dr. Johnson was one, sold the Brewery jointly to Mr. Barclay and Mr. Perkins, (the latter of whom had been the superintendent of the Brewery,) for the sum of £135,000! and the property is now held by the descendants of those gentlemen. The concern in Thrale's time must have been comparatively small; for he did not brew annually more than one-twelfth part of the quantity now brewed by the same establishment. Nevertheless, we remember it of considerably less extent, about thirty years since. In 1832, a great portion of the old premises was destroyed by fire; they were rebuilt as speedily as possible, with all the advantages of improved constructive skill, both as regards the premises and machinery: iron, stone, and brick are the materials chiefly employed, and all possible provision made for the speedy extinction of fire, by a plentiful and practical supply of water.

THE ALE "ROUNDS."

A VISIT TO MESSRS. BARCLAY AND PERKINS'S BREWERY.

STORE VATS.

The precise extent of the Brewery can scarcely be explained without a ground plan; but it may be sufficient to state that, having crossed by Southwark-bridge to the Surrey side, we descend from the Bridge-road to New Park-street, which is flanked by lofty buildings, connected by a covered bridge, or passage: these are ranges of malt warehouses, extending northward, with a wharf, to Bankside, of themselves a vast block of building.

At the termination of New Park-street, we proceed southward, through Park-street, both sides of which are occupied by the Brewery buildings, extending several hundred feet, and connected by a light suspension-bridge. To the right, is the vast Brewhouse itself, and the principal entrance-gate, fronting which are the offices and counting-houses.

Before we start, we may explain that from the roof of a large building (the mash room), nearly in the middle of the premises, may be obtained a bird's-eye view of nearly all the various parts of the establishment. Towards the north-east, on the river-side, is the wharf already mentioned, whence beer is shipped for exportation; to the north, are the two ranges of malt-warehouses, separated by New Park-street, and connected by the covered bridge, as also described; westward, is an open court, containing an engine-house, with all the steam-engine apparatus, two water-reservoirs, a cooperage, a building where casks are cleansed, sheds for containing empty casks, and various other buildings; southward, is a vast range of storehouses, where the beer is kept in vats; beyond these is a range of stables, for the dray-horses; to the south-east, are the fining-house and some of the storehouses; and, lastly, eastward, are the porter and ale brewhouses, connected by the suspension-bridge passing over Park-street below. Such is a general glance at the entire establishment; we will now descend to details, in the order observed in brewing.

THE STABLES.

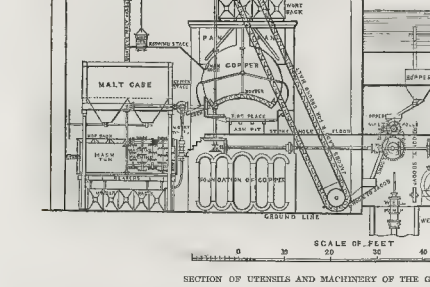
First, the water used is that of the river Thames, pumped up by a steam engine, through a large iron main, which passes under the malt warehouses, and leads to the water reservoirs, or "liquor-backs," as they are technically called. These two cisterns and their supporting columns are of wood, one of 45, the other of 30 horse power; the latter erected sixty-seven years since, and one of the boilers in 1810. The furnace chimney is 19 feet below the surface, and 110 feet above; and, by its great draught, creates the ventilation of the establishment among the forest of Southwark chimneys.

Next, to the malt-warehouses, in New Park-street. The malt is carried from barges at the river-side by porters, and deposited in enormous bins in the northern range of warehouses. Of these bins there are some two dozen in number, each of the height or depth of an ordinary three-storied house; they are filled by doors opening at the sides; and, on throwing a few grains into an empty bin from the topmost passage through the range of them, it had the effect of pebbles let fall into a well. It might be expected that such a store of malt would be a "happy haven" for rats and mice; there is, however, but a few of the latter; the rats breaking themselves to the strong drink elsewhere on the premises; but they are all kept in check by a standing army of cats, some forty-five in number, and who are regularly fed and maintained.



SECTION OF UTENSILS AND MACHINERY OF THE GREAT BREWHOUSE.

The malt, when wanted, is conveyed from the north to the south warehouses through the covered way across the street, by a very curious arrangement. The malt is first taken through a sliding door in the lower part of the front of the bin, and which door being lifted up, the malt rushes into baskets, placed there to receive it; and these are carried by porters, and emptied into a large funnel or hopper. Into this dips an endless leather band, worked by rollers at top and bottom, and carrying a series of tin buckets; and, as this band (or "Jacob's ladder," as it is termed) travels, each bucket dips into the malt, fills itself, travels upwards to the top of the building, and there empties the malt upon a canvess cloth, or "carter," which is stretched through the covered way across the street, works upon rollers at the two ends, and thus conveys the malt to the bins in the southern warehouses. Thence it is carried by porters, or flows through a pipe, into the mill, or grinding-room, and is taken up by a second "Jacob's ladder" into another hopper, whence it descends between steel rollers, and is thus ground or crushed into grist. The malt thus prepared is carried by a third "Jacob's ladder" to a height of sixty or seventy feet in the middle of the Great Brewhouse. Each of the "ladders" is a most effective substitute for porterage, and works almost unseen, being inclosed in a trunk or case the whole length, in which clods, or no carter, when the ascending ladder is covered with buckets full, and those of the descending ladder are empty.

We have now reached The Great Brewhouse, where we became sensible of the vast scale upon which the present brewing is here carried on; at least, as soon as we had recovered from the noise of working machinery, and steamy clouds rising throughout the vast building, and adding to the effect of the mighty and mysterious agency. The ascending room is built entirely of iron and brick; and is lighted by eight large and lofty windows on the east side; and all round the walls just below the roof, are openings to let out the steam. There is no continuous floor, but portions of the roof may be seen from the floor; and, looking upwards, whenever the steamy vapour permits, there may be seen at various heights, stages, platforms, and flights of stairs, all subsidiary to the cyclopean piles of brewing vessels, which reach from the ground to a great height.

To aid our description, we have availed ourselves of a sectional representation of the principal vessels and working apparatus, from a very truthful work, entitled "Days at the Factories," by George Dodd, in which Messrs. Barclay and Adjoining, too, is a cooperage, occupying three sides of a square; and here, and in sheds, were thousands of casks; the aggregate number belonging to the establishment exceeding sixty thousand!

Southward of the store-buildings are the stables, one range of which extends nearly 300 feet in length: galleries or lofts for provender above them; and an open space for ventilation along the middle of the stables; at night they are lighted by gas. At one end of the range is a building wherein is a small steam-engine used for crushing oats, and working a chaff-cutting machine; and the waste steam of the engine may be directed into a water-trough, so as to give the desired temperature to the water which the horses drink. The stabling is for 260 horses, over each stall is a number; formerly, the name of each horse was painted on a small board. Not far from the stables are the dwelling-house and laboratory of the veterinary surgeon; there are, likewise, accommodation for sick horses, a blacksmiths' and harness-makers' shops. And, not far from the Stables is the Painting House, where, between 600 and 700 inscription-boards, (as "Barclay, Perkins and Co.'s Entire,") are painted for victuallers during the year.

We have left ourselves but little space to add a few words, generally, upon the admirable system maintained throughout this vast establishment. Notwithstanding the great number of men and horses employed, there is no infusion of unnecessary bustle or avoidable noise. The work of loading the drays begins by four o'clock in the morning, and the quantity of business transacted during the day—the carriage and sale of beer—is enormous, but methodical, and by no means immense. The Large Brewhouse, we learned, was at work throughout the whole of last year (Sundays and seven "breaking days" excepted), owing to a vast increase of business. The firm are held in the highest respect, as well for their commercial integrity as for the magnitude of their establishment; they are liberal benefactors to every good and great work of their country and their district; and it would be impossible to point out any masters who are more considerate of the welfare of those parties to whom their interests are entrusted.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

THE CHESTER CUP.

Charm by accepting. Fope.

As spring approaches, or is supposed to approach, with the month on which we have entered, the catalogue of field sports grows "small by degrees" if not "beautifully less." But though numerically they be deprived of their fair proportions, February is generally born in particular lions—in hunting, for example. What it may yet do for the chase however remains to be seen: its opening was most propitious for the worshippers of Diana. Indeed, they have so far had a tantalizing season of it; the virgin goddess playing the coquette with them in an especial degree: never was weather so provoking. This instant weak set in as unsettled as a fine lady's humours. You did not know whether it meant to hail, rain, snow, freeze, or all four together. In this strait for "quick brooms" (whose alternative for "quist" is not suited for ears or eyes polite) the declaration of acceptance for the Great Spring Handicap was very opportune. The Chester Cup is one of the most popular channels for speculation that now fertilizes the turf. The Derby, indeed, commands more capital, but the public invest upon the handicap whose arena is the Roodee with more general zest than upon any issue extant. We will, therefore, for lack of more stirring employment, survey its policy, and the claims of such of its nominations as have thought fit to "charm by accepting."

The scale by which the weights for this race have been regulated is the lowest by nearly half a stone, of any made in the present year. Where they are to find jockies to ride the fag-enders—unless they import a cargo of Bushmen for the purpose—is a hard question. Coalders of three-score pounds a-piece, in their boots and unutterable et cæteras, are not as plenty as blackberries. Seeing such to be the case, one turns to the top of the tree, and certainly there the best fruit (for present use) appears to this Cyp. A glance lower down will show the condition of the market: the policy of those who resort to it would seem to be to take the long odds against animals of character—in stables of a similar sort. We cannot choose but conclude a known good horse, at racing weights, as far more dangerous than a universe of tag-rag-and-bobtail "turned loose." A handicap is supposed to be a contrivance to bring bad and good horses together; but it isn't nothing in nature or art can do that. Sometimes, by grace of the glorious uncertainty of Olympics, a wretch may win a great race of the kind—but it's the forlorn hope of an exception, rather than the rule. Not that we would insinuate that all the light weights are rubbishy. They must be anchored by the speculative—far from it—for there are some known good runners among that division. But the safest matériel to meddle with, if people must have cakes and ale, will be found here in the four and five-year-olds. Such animals as Sir Tatton Sykes, Tag, Sting, Mendicant, and others of their class, over such a course as that at Chester, with "all the talents" to pick their jockeys from, and all at fair racing weights, must furnish a much more formidable phalanx than a rabble of light boys, though fighting under any extensive advantages. It will be worth while holding the scale of weights and this principle in combination, where early investments on this great betting mart are concerned. By-and-by, when the blood is up and "make your game" the watchword, the time may be more mature for looking to good luck rather than good guidance.

NOMINATIONS FOR THE GRAND FRENCH STEEPLE CHASE.—Cavendish, Maid of Llangollen, Switcher, St. Leger, Little Tommy, Campline, Avoca, Discount, Albert, Christopher North, Jack, Cadwerthorpe, Francois, Frederick, br g by Glaucus, d by Belzoni, Magnet, Gazeley, Salius, Golden Rule, Trump, Lafflat, Rayman, Gayburst, Forester, Matchless, Loto, Peter Simple, Sabine, Cicy, The Page, Young Lottery, The Orphan, Conservative, Pioneer, Linkboy, Lucifer, Bachelor, Victress, br g by Tom Brown, Little John, the Roarer, Walter Gay, Little Ben, and Hippolita. The above are the nominations received in London; those made in Paris will be published as soon as they are received.

TATTERSALL'S.

Monday. A very full attendance, but owing to a general impression that it would be advisable to "hold hard" until the final declarations were made public, very little was done on the Chester Cup, none of the favourites were mentioned, or did any change take place. The Derby betting is noticeable only for the laxity shown to lay against Epirote and Lunedale, and to back the Goodwood nag. The general quotations show but little variation.

NEWMARKET HANDICAP.

15 to 1 agst Footstool (t)	25 to 1 agst Measure (t)
20 to 1 —— Lyncus (t)	30 to 1 —— Discomfort (t)

METROPOLITAN HANDICAP.—20 to 1 agst Lady Sarah (t)

TWO THOUSAND GUINEA STAKES.

4 to 1 agst Glenlife (t)	8 to 1 agst Conyngham (t)

CHESTER CUP.

7 to 1 agst Mendicant		50 to 1 agst Duke of Richmond	66 to 1 agst Golden Bee (t)
10 to 1 —— The Lamb		(t)	66 to 1 —— Inheritress (t)
10 to 1 —— Sedlam		50 to 1 —— Mermaid (t)	66 to 1 —— Lord Saltoun (t)
10 to 1 —— Echo-go-bragh		66 to 1 —— Intrepid (t)	66 to 1 —— Sir Tatton Sykes
10 to 1 —— Pink Bonnet (t)		66 to 1 —— Queen of Tyne (t)	(t)

DERBY.

7 to 1 agst Kent's lot	40 to 1 agst Sir G. Heathcote's	50 to 1 agst Will o' the Wisp
9 —— Van Tromp (t)	lot (t)	(t)
10 to 1 —— Epirote	40 to 1 —— Red Hart (t)	50 to 1 —— Bingham
10 to 1 —— Planet	40 to 1 —— Horse of Chase	66 to 1 —— Oxonian
10 to 1 —— Glenlife (t)	40 to 1 —— Wanota	66 to 1 —— Limestone
10 to 1 —— Conyngham	50 to 1 —— Prejocelle (t)	66 to 1 —— Black Dwarf
10 to 1 —— Echo to Cobweb s	50 to 1 —— Christopher (t)	70 to 1 —— Clarendon (t)
10 to 1 —— Lunedale	50 to 1 —— War Eagle

2000 to 25 agst West India Planter (t)

OAKS.

5 to 1 agst Sultana (t)	20 to 1 agst Rhadalia (t)	50 to 1 agst Ellen Horne (t)

Thursday.—The Betting this afternoon was limited in every respect, and only decisive in the manner shown in the back Golden Bee for the Chester Cup, and Mostyn's two favourites, Conyngham, Red Hart, and Bedlam, for the Derby. The outlay on the latter amounted to £3500. The room was thinly attended.

NEWMARKET HANDICAP.

5 to 1 agst Footstool (t)	20 to 1 agst Lyncus (t)	20 to 1 agst Queen of Tyne (t)
5 to 1 —— Sting (t)	20 to 1 —— Discomfort (t)	20 to 1 —— Lady Wildair (t)
	25 to 1 agst Measure (t)

METROPOLITAN HANDICAP.

16 to 1 agst Pink Bonnet (t) | 18 to 1 agst Lady Sarah (t)

TWO THOUSAND GUINEAS STAKE.

7 to 1 agst Conyngham (t) | 10 to 1 agst Lunedale (t)

CHESTER CUP.

7 to 1 agst Mendicant		33 to 1 agst Punch (t)	50 to 1 agst Sir Tatton Sykes
7 to 1 —— Lamb		33 to 1 —— Echo-go-bragh (t)	(taken)
7 to 1 —— Camera Obscura		50 to 1 —— Golden Bee	66 to 1 —— Annandale (t)
(taken)		50 to 1 —— Bourbon (t)	66 to 1 —— Chertsey (t)
10 to 1 —— Bed (t)		50 to 1 —— Pink Bonnet (t)	10,000 to 100 agst Rogalla (t)

DERBY.

7 to 2 agst Van Tromp	20 to 1 agst Glenlife (t)	33 to 1 agst Sister to Cobweb
7 to 1 —— Epirote	30 to 1 —— Conyngham	colt (t)
8 to 1 —— Planet (t)	33 to 1 —— Red Hart	40 to 1 —— Wanota
	50 to 1 agst Sedlam (t)

OAKS.—9 to 1 agst Farmer's Daughter (t)

The Wotton-under-Edge Steeple Chase.—three sovereigns each with twenty added—took place on Tuesday over four miles fair hunting country, and was run in about fifteen minutes. In the run were thirty-two leaps, nearly the whole of which were taken cleverly by the horses. In starting Forester took the lead, followed by the others. Swiftsure fell in the first leap, but made up his lost ground in a short time and headed his antagonists, and although he refused several of the fences, made excellent running. Swiftsure, Cricket, and Sportsman cleared the last fence together, when the run was splendidly contested by Swiftsure and Cricket, and was won by only half a length, Sportsman being only a length behind.

SCOTLAND.

Excitement in the North.—The north of Scotland is described to be in a state of insurrection. At Hurghead, two vessels, laden with meal for export, have been deprived of their cargoes. At Lossiemouth and Findhern, several carts, laden with oats, were seized a few days ago, and the captured victuals lodged in warehouses. The other places in the neighbourhood being in a similar state of excitement, forty soldiers from Fort George have been stationed at Elgin; and a company from Aberdeen has been sent to Fort Gordon, into which the inhabitants of Keith, an inland town, are said to be pouring in large numbers. Passing over intermediate districts, the food-riot folly has also reached the south. In Stranraer, disturbances was raised because two meal-dealers would not sell their meal at 3s. 6d. per stone. Carrots and leeks were also stolen. But the prompitude of the authorities prevented the riots from reaching say great height.

The Destitution in Scotland.—A public meeting was held, a few days ago, at Liverpool, in order to promote subscriptions for the suffering population of the Highlands of Scotland. There were many of the leading merchants present. Mr. George Grant, of the firm of Gladstone, was in the chair, supported by Messrs. Rathbone, Gibb, Charles M'Iver, Rankin, Watson, Macfie, Durnlop, and Stone. The Rev. Drs. M'Leod and Mackay attended from Scotland to advocate the cause of their suffering countrymen. The sum of £1500 was subscribed in the room, and much more will, no doubt, yet be collected in Liverpool.

Bank Robbery in Glasgow.—Yesterday week, a clerk of one of the most respectable houses in Glasgow repaired to the Union Bank, and drew a check of £1200. He then proceeded to the Commercial Bank, in the same street, with the money upon him. He was writing some order at the bank counter, after finishing which he put his hand into the pocket of his outside coat to draw out the money, where he thought he had it snugly deposited: but the £1200 were gone! It is now probable that he was reconnoitred by some expert English thief. Another bank robbery of £247 has also been committed.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—The following outline of the Arrangements for the Season 1847 is respectfully submitted to the Nobility, Patrons of the Opera, and to the Public. It is presented with the confident hope, that the successful exertions of the Management, combined with the liberality of Parliament, a Company still more worthy of the First Theatre in Europe, and of its distinguished Patrons, will ensure the continuance of their support.

ENGAGEMENTS FOR THE OPERA.—Mdlle. Jenny Lind, Mdme. Del Carmen Montenegro, Mdlle Lucciani, Mdlle. Fagnani, and Mdme. Solari, the Comicals, Mdlle Vietti, and Mdlle. Daria Nasolo, and Mdme Castellan Sig. Fraschini, the great Tenor of Italy: and the Asserio Tenor, Sig. Gardoni, Sig. Bassano, Sig. Marini, Sig. Gassia, Sig. Corsini, Signor Bouche, of La Scala (his first appearance); the celebrated Basso Cantante Herr Staudigl, and Sig Labocchetta. In addition to the above, arrangements are pending with Sig Coletti, of the Italian Opera at Paris.

ASTLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. W. BATTY.—Under the Patronage of the Queen, Prince Albert, and Royal Family.—MONDAY, FEB. 8th, and following Evenings, Second Week of the FOX HUNT, or, Life's Course of Man and Steed; with Mr. Batty's beautiful Steed of Knee Drill, Brown Bess, and complete Pack of Hounds. Scenes of the Chase, and the Grand Comic Pantomime. THURSDAY NEXT, FEBRUARY 11, the above Entertainments for the BENEFIT, AND IN AID OF THE FUNDS FOR THE RELIEF OF THE DESTITUTE IN THE SCOTCH HIGHLANDS, on which occasion Mr. Batty will give the entire evening's receipts, and trusts the public patronage will realise a sum for their relief as every effort will be made in the production of a Programme worthy the success of his Establishment brought into requisition.—Box-office open from Eleven till Four.—Acting and Stage Manager, Mr. W. H. Broadfoot.

LYCEUM THEATRE.—Mr. ALLCROFT'S TENTH ANNUAL GRAND CONCERT will take place on TUESDAY NEXT, FEB 9, at which the following talent will appear:—Mesdames Bassano, Birch, and Lebluche, Messrs. Harrison, Allan, H Phillips, F Lebluche, Brizzi, Gimbale, Sinclair, Henry Russell, and Mr. John Parry; also, the celebrated Lassian Ethiopian Serenaders. Mesdames Dulcken and Thirlwall, Benedict, Graziani Cooke, Frederick Chatterton, Blagrove, Harper, and Master Thirlwall. Conductor, Mr. Loder. Leader, Mr. Blagrove. May be obtained of the principal Music Sellers; of Mr. Bowley, 53, Charing-cross; Mr. Ries, 109, Strand; or of Mr. Mitchell, 39, Charing-cross. THOMAS BREWER, Hon Sec.

WEIPPERT'S SOIREES DANSANTES, PRINCESS'S CONCERT ROOMS.—MONDAY, FEBRUARY 8th, and Every Monday.—A Subscriber to the Soirées is entitled to a CHRISTMAS PARTY IN THE GOLDEN TIME. Mr. Weippert will commence on any Monday. The Palace Band consists of the same Artistes as attend her Majesty's State Balls and Concerts. Conductor, Mr. Weippert, leader, Monsieur Jacobi; clarionet-à-pistons, Mr. Handley; aphoniede, Mr. Prosper; M. C., Mr Cerile, Commences at Ten o'Clock. Tickets, Seven Shillings each, at Weippert's Quadrille Office, 91, Strand.

LOVE'S POLYPHONIC ENTERTAINMENTS.—VENTRILOQUISM EXTRAORDINARY, CROSBY HALL, Bishopsgate-street.—On WEDNESDAY, Feb. 10, and every Evening for a Week, Mr. LOVE will present, for the first time here, an ENTERTAINMENT on a Novel Construction, with New and Appropriate Costumes and Appointments throughout, entitled A CHRISTMAS PARTY IN OUR GOLDEN TIME. Mr. LOVE will represent each with ability and invisibly, and without assistance, the host and hostess, ladies and gentlemen, guests at the party, servants, &c., with other Entertainments, particulars of which see Programmes. Doors at Eight. Tickets 3s and 1s. On TUESDAY, Feb. 9, at WALTHAM CROSS: on THURSDAY, Feb. 11, at PECKHAM. 29, Arundel-street, Strand

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION. Professor SCHOENBEIN'S GUN COTTON, and other Explosive Compounds, with brilliant Experiments, lectured on by Dr. Ryan, Daily at Half-past Three o'Clock, and on the Evenings of Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays. The principle of the various ELECTRO MAGNETIC TELEGRAPHS, explained daily by Professor Bachhoffner, including the Patent of Messrs. Cook and Wheatstone, in use on the Railway, and the more recent Patent of Messrs. N ttard Gambi. The various Models explained. Magnified Specimens of DISEASED POTATOES, exhibited by the OXY-HYDROGEN MICROSCOPE, with the DESTRUCTIVE INSECT, surveyed by A. Smee, Esq., F.R.S., to be the cause of the disease. A BEAUTIFUL SERIES of NEW DISSOLVING VIEWS. The DIVING BELL and DIVER, with EXPERIMENTS. The PHENOSCOPE. NEW CHROMATROPE, &c. &c.—Admission, 1s.; School, half-price.

MRS. A. NEWTON and MR. G. CASE beg to announce to their Friends and the Public that their ANNUAL CONCERT will take place at the LONDON TAVERN, Monday evening, Feb. 8th, 1847. Vocal Performers, Miss Rainforth, Madame F. Lablache, Mrs. A. Newton, Mr. W. Harrison, Signor F. Lablache, Mr. N. J. Sporle, and Mr. John Parry; Instrumental, Miss E. Ward, Messrs. F Ubatterton, R Blagrove J Ward J. Case, and G. Case: Conductors, Mr. C Severs and Mr. Stewart Grover. Tickets, 5s. (to be served Seats (numbered), 5s. To be had of Mrs. Newton, 43, Lower Belgrave-place, Pimlico; Mr. Case, 51, Great Coram-street, Russell-square; Mr. Case, 54, Bishopsgate-street, at the Music Shops, and at the London Tavern.

WALHALLA, late Miss Linwood's Gallery, Leicester-square.—Under the Patronage of the Nobility, Gentry, and Several Distinguished Members of the Royal Academy. MADAME D'ANTONY'S UNRIVALLED TABLEAUX VIVANS with increased attraction. Madame WARTON will appear, by particular desire, in her much admired personation of INNOCENCE and SAPPHO every evening during the week The Public Press has unanimously declared this Exhibition to be the best of the present day Each Tableau accompanied with Descriptive Music, by a Band of first-rate talent, conducted by Mr. Reid. The Appointments by Messrs Adams, of the Royal Gardens, Vauxhall. Morning Performance at 3. Evening at Half-past 8 Stalls, 3s.; Reserved Seats, 2s.; Promenade, 1s. Juveniles to the Stalls and Reserved Seats, Half-Price.

READ THIS ! !—The most Valuable and Beautiful Volume ever published may be had for Nothing, if Subscribers to the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS will order the Weekly Journal in the Latter Half-year, to commence with January and ending, as it is sent from E. MARLBOROUGH and CO ; 4, Ave Maria-lane, Paternoster-row

COINS of the ANCIENT ROMAN EMPERORS : History of Money in the possession of the Ancient Romans, with the Prices at which Coins, and Portraits, their Dates and Mottoes, is just published by P. WHELAN, Dealer in Ancient Coins, 6d, Strand, London, price 1s.; by post, 1s 3d. Coins sent by post. Bought, Catalogued, &c.

MR. JAMES'S NEW WORK.
Now Ready, at all the Libraries,
THE CASTLE of EHRENSTEIN ; its Lords, Spiritual and Temporal; its Inhabitants, Earthly and Unearthly. 3 Vols. Post 8vo, Price £1 11s. 6d.
London: SMITH, ELDER, and Co., 65, Cornhill.

NEW WORK BY THE AUTHOR OF "THE NOVITIATE."
Now Ready, in 2 vols. post 8vo, Price 9s. cloth,
THE JESUIT IN THE FAMILY. A Tale. By ANDREW STEINMETZ. Author of "The Novitiate, or the Jesuit in Training ; Being a Year's Residence among the English Jesuits"
London. SMITH, ELDER, and Co., 65 Cornhill.

New Edition. Improved Small 8vo. Price 8s. 6d. With plates,
A NATOMY of the HUMAN BODY, Containing a Description of the Skeleton and Internal Muscles of the Human Figure. With Numerous Engravings on Wood By J. A. WHEELER. "A useful vade-mecum for Artists, whether studying from the Antique or a drawing school, or from the living model."—Spectator
London. S. HIGHLEY, 32, Fleet-street

Just published, with plates, 8vo., 7s.
BODY AND SOUL; or, Life, Mind, and Matter, considered as to their Peculiar Nature, and Combined Conflict in Living Things ; with a view to render the Physiology of Life and Mind more easily understood by the General Reader. By GEORGE RADFORD, Member of the Royal College of Surgeons, London, &c.
London : JOHN CHURCHILL, Princes-street, Soho.

IN RE HOUNSLOW INQUEST—WAKLEY against the MEDICAL TIMES.—The Criminal Information—its Refusal—and unanimous Condemnation by the Judges.—The only verbatim report of, with the Judgment of the Queen's Bench, in this deeply interesting suit—will be in the MEDICAL TIMES of Saturday next. To secure copies, orders should be given to the Newsmen and Booksellers. Price 8d.; Stamped, 8d.—Office, 69, Essex-street, Strand.

MANAGEMENT OF THE TEETH.—Now ready, Third Edition, Price 1s. 6d.,
THE DENTAL MANUAL ; a Guide to the Management of the Teeth.—This little Manual points out not only the best means of Preserving but Restoring the Teeth, a subject on which the Public are frequently very much in want of full information here given. It also explains the different processes, and thus enables every reader to form his own opinion on the subjects treated of.—SAMUEL MAUNDER, 4, Co., Bartlett's Hall Court

LETHIOPIAN SONGS, with Words. Genuine Edition. All the Songs sung by the Ethiopian Serenaders have been now Announced, in THE PIANISTA, for FEBRUARY, No. 77, price 2s.; p.p., 36 stamps They comprise 12 of the most Popular, viz.: Mary Blane, Lucy Neal, Buffalo Gals, Old Joe, Boatman Dance, Lucy Long, Over de Mountain, Old Dan Tucker, &c. &c. They were also given as Polkas (for dancing) in No. 76, p.p. 36 stamps All orders for these numbers of THE PIANISTA should be immediate, as the demand is enormous.—Pianistic Office, 72, Paternoster-row.

MR. DISRAELI'S NEW WORK
In the Press, in three vols, post 8vo,
C O N I N G E B Y;
OR, THE NEW CRUSADE.
By the Right Honourable B. DISRAELI, M.P.
Author of "Coningsby," "Sybil," &c
HENRY COLBURN, Publisher, 13, Great Marlborough-street.
Orders received by all Booksellers.

MR. WALKER'S CHEAP COLLECTION OF CHESS GAMES.
Recently Published, 8vo., price 12s. 6d.
CHESS-STUDIES; comprising 1000 Games, actually played during the last half-century, &c. By GEORGE WALKER.
* * This volume contains 34 Games played by De Labourdonnais, 179 played by M'Donnell, 82 played by Pallisby, and includes the best Games on record, played by St. Amant, Kieseritzky, Von Der Lasa, Cochrane Jaenisch, Deschapelles, &c.
In the press, and early in 1847, in one volume, 8vo., MR. JAENISCH'S GREAT WORK on CHESS OPENINGS. Translated, with numerous notes, by GEORGE WALKER.
S. and J. E. TAYLOR, Red-lion-court, Fleet-street.

NEW ILLUSTRATED WEEKLY PERIODICAL, PRICE 1½d.; STAMPED, 2½d.
HOWITT'S JOURNAL of LITERATURE and PROGRESS, EDITED BY WILLIAM and MARY HOWITT, supported by the first Writers of the age. Early Numbers have contained or will contain articles by Leigh Hunt, Barry Cornwall, Dr. Southwood Smith, W. J. Fox, Miss Milford, Miss Bremer, R. H. Horne, Dr. Carpenter, Dr. Smiles, Professor Nichol, Professor Wilson, &c.
The first Monthly Part is now published, and Mr. and Mrs. Howitt cannot but express their grateful sense of the confidence of the public in them, that the sale of the first Number within the first month reached a circulation of upwards of Twenty Thousand, and still rapidly progressing.
* * William and Mary Howitt have no further literary connexion with "The People's Journal." Published (for the Proprietors) at 121, Strand, corner of Surrey street.

TO READING FAMILIES.
Just Published,
THE NEW CATALOGUE of the extensive and valuable Subscription Library, Conduit-street, Hanover-square. With a view of meeting the increasing demand for works of a more valuable and standard character than are usually found in Circulating Libraries, the Proprietors have very considerably augmented their collection in History, Biography, Divinity, Belles Lettres, Moral and Political Philosophy, Voyages, Travels, &c. Every New Publication of interest is added immediately it appears, and to assist subscribers in the choice of New Works, Catalogues are furnished gratuitously. The terms of subscription for Reading in London, England, Scotland, and Ireland, may be had gratis and post free, on application to Messrs. SAUNDERS and OTLEY, Publishers, Conduit-street

JONES' £4 4s. SILVER LEVER WATCHES are selling at the Manufactory, 338, Strand, opposite Somerset House. They comprise every modern improvement, and are warranted not to vary more than half a minute per week. The great reduction of price now stated, and steadily, either of the Swiss manufactories, or any other house. On receipt of a Post-office Order payable to John Jones for £4 4s., one will be entrifree—Send for Mr. Waldeck's work, price 6d., free for Seventeen Stamps

GROSSMITH'S ARTIFICIAL HUMAN EYE MANUFACTORY, 178, FLEET-STREET (Established by J. B. Smith, 1760).—These superb gems of art are made by William Robert Grossmith in a few hours, to fit, without operation or pain, in every case where the sight has been lost. They are recommended by all the medical faculty as surgeons as protective to the cavity and preventive of the wasting and closing of the lids; the colour is perfectly matched, the countenance preserved, and the movements of the counterpart observed will not detect them from life.—* * * Forwarded by post to all parts of the world.

THE NEWLY-INVENTED INFLATED INDIA-RUBBER ELASTIC WHEEL APPLIED to INVALID CHAIRS. These Wheels give the Invalid's Carriage a degree of motion little inferior to possibly be attained by spring. They are absolutely almost over paved and gravel roads. They are much lighter and easier drawn than common wheels. And for gardens and pleasure grounds they possess the advantage of not admitting that they may be drawn over the lawn and soft gravel walks without leaving the slightest track For sale (under the patentees license) at G. MINTER'S Bath and Brighton Whee. Chair Manufactory, 33, Gerrard-street, Soho.

TEAS at WHOLESALE PRICES, 2, BUCKLERSBURY, CITY.

CHEAPSIDE.
Good Useful Breakfast Tea	.. .. ..	3s 0d to 3s 4d
Fine Do, Pekoe Flavoured	.. .. ..	3s 8d to 4s 0d
Rich Pekoe Souchong	.. .. ..	4s 4d
Good Useful Green	.. .. ..	3s 4d 3s 8d
Fine Imperial Gunpowder	.. .. ..	4s 0d
Superior Young Hyson	.. .. ..	3s 8d
Fine Scented Pekoe	.. .. ..	4s 4d

Reduced to wholesale prices, free for carriage to any part of England
MANN and CO, Wholesale Tea Dealers 2, BUCKLERSBURY, CITY.

GREAT SALE at GEORGE SMITH'S, 32, Ludgate-hill (late Rundell and Bridge's).—The progress of GEORGE SMITH'S NEW SYSTEM of BUSINESS renders it imperative that EXTENSIVE ALTERATIONS and ADDITIONS be immediately made to his premises. To prevent the unavoidable damage which must arise from the operations of DEMOLISHING and REBUILDING, he is compelled to submit to the ruinous loss of a "SELLING OFF." The reduction of prices upon the greatest portion of the Stock will vary from 25 to 50 PER CENT., and, in making this statement, George Smith begs to impress an additional fact, which is, that they are calculated as a saving of FIFTY SHILLINGS IN THE POUND IN ONE HALF in their purchase, they must remember that IT IS NOT UPON OLD STOCK that a reduction is required, but upon fresh new goods, the whole of which have been manufactured within a very few months. Comment upon the quality and description of goods is unnecessary; they are well known by the public to consist in every variety of moderate and useful, as well as the highest class of manufactures under the following heads :—INDIA, CHINESE, FRENCH, and BRITISH Shawls, Silks, Brocades, Satins, Satin Turcs, Velvets, Merinos, Cashmeres, Lama Crapes, Parasol and Printed Muslin Dresses, Fancy Handkerchiefs, Scarfs, and Shawls Cloaks and Flues, Damask Table Linen, Sheetings, &c. Sewn Cottons, &c. &c. The Sale will continue about three weeks. Every article marked in plain figures.

COALS are CHEAPER.—The METROPOLITAN COMPANY'S present prices for Cash are—Best Hetton and Wallsend, 20s. 6d. per ton: Seconds, 20s 6d. ; Small Coal, 14s. ; Coke, 17s. 6d.—Office, 279, High Holborn, opposite Red Lion-street

FOUR FIRES FOR ONE PENNY ! ! ! by EDWARDS'S PATENT FIREWOOD.—It lights instantly, and saves money, time, and trouble. Sold by all respectable oilmen and grocers. Families in the country supplied with 560 delivered to the carrier, on receipt of a post-office order for 1s., payable to Thomas Edwards, No. 18, Wharf-road, City-road.

PURE ST JULIEN CLARET, 28s. per Dozen ; Pints, 18s. ; imported direct by HEDGES and BUTLER, Wine Merchants, &c., 155, Regent-street, can be confidently recommended. Also, some superior Gordon's Golden Sherry. 36s. per Dozen. On the receipt of a Post-office order, or reference, will be immediately forwarded.

CURRALL and SON, importers of COGNAC BRANDY of the highest quality.—Choice old pale, at 60s ; and brown, at 48s per dozen Bottles, 2s. per dozen ; hampers, 1s Brandies at 21s. and 24s per gallon. Shilopagate-street within. Liqueur Brandy Port at 24s and 30s. per dozen.

TONIC ALE.—This splendid description of Bottled Beer is now in perfection. It is strongly recommended by the Faculty as possessing peculiar stomachic qualities, promoting appetite, &c. Sold in quart and pint bottles, secured by Rule's Patent Capsule JOSEPH STOCKTON, Sole Agent, Stores, No. 1, John's-mews, Bedford-row.

DANCING TAUGHT, in the most fashionable style, by Mr. WILLIS, 41, Brewer-street, Golden-square. Private Lessons in the Polka, Cellarius Also, any Value in Dancing Pumps at all hours. Families and Gentlemen of any age, wishing privacy and expedition An Evening Class on Monday and Friday. Terms may be had, on application as above.

PIANOFORTES.—The cheapest house in London to purchase these first-rate Instruments is at H. TOLKIEN'S, manufacturer, 29, King William-street, London-bridge. H. T. having completed his extensive alterations, begs his friends to view his splendid Stock of PIANOS, which is the largest ever submitted by any maker, and at about half the price charged by them. H. T.'s much-admired piccolos, cash price £25. Old instruments taken in exchange. TOLKIEN, 29, King William-street, London-bridge.

AMERICAN SODA BISCUITS.—The only shop in England where they can be had Genuine is WEBBER'S, 81, Lombard-street, near the Mansion House, Also, his new Valentia at 1s. 6d.; Frashing, 1s 6d.; Ginger Wafer, Thin Captains, and an infinite variety of Wine Biscuits, as per pound Madeira, Devonshire, and School Cakes, fresh daily. Soups—Mock Turtle, Ox-Tail, Gibier, &c., at 1s. 6d. a Quart.

ST. MARK'S HOSPITAL (MAYFLEPONE and PADDINGTON)
VICE-PRESIDENTS
The Right Honourable the Earl of Beverley
The Right Honourable the Earl Manvers
The Right Hon. and Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of London, F.R.S.
The Right Honourable Lord Teignmouth, F.R.S.
The Right Honourable Lord Sherborne
Sir Thomas Barring, Bart., F.R.S.
Sir Philip Forbes, Bart.
Lieut.-Colonel the Honourable E. G. Douglas Pennant, M.P.

The following Subscriptions and Donations have been announced:—
Annual Subscriptions marked A.D.

Her Majesty the Queen		£175 0 0
Her Majesty the Queen Dowager		30 0 0
His Royal Highness Prince Albert		52 10 0
His Royal Highness Prince George of Cambridge		20 0 0
Further amount of Subscriptions and Donations received, exclusive of the gift of land		16,439 16 6
Additional Subscriptions since the last Advertisement.
Capt. Cowles	£20 0 0	The Subscription of some Ca-
Mrs. Cowles	10 0 0	tholic Ladies .. .. ..
Mrs. Cowles	5 0 0	Mrs. Langstaff, Esq. (add) ..
Mrs. Gossett (3rd and 4th sub.)	2 2 0	John Horton, Esq. .. ..
E. Phillips, Esq.	10 10 0	Hy. Burton, Esq. .. ..
Rev. G. Hacker .. .. (A)	3 3 0	C. King, Esq. .. .. ..
A portion of the remains of a Charitable Fund at the dissolution of the late Chares de St. Leu, Esq., by his Executors	50 0 0	John Lange, Esq. .. .. ..
		Thos. Parry, Esq. .. .. ..
		Benjamin Hazes, Esq. .. ..
		Major Macfarlane (add) .. ..
		Rev. Thomas Jones (add) .. ..
		Edwin Hunsley, Esq. (add) .. ..
		G. H. .. ..
		Mrs. Parks (add) .. .. ..
		Sir George Rose (add) .. ..
		Charles Franks, Esq. .. ..
		Henry Postal, Esq. .. .. (A)
		Rev. D. Davies .. ..
		J. B. Walker, Esq (add) .. ..
		Rev. Smith .. ..
		Chas. A. Sayer, Esq. (add) .. ..
		Rev. Thomas Curtis .. .. ..
		Lieut.-Gen. Sir Jas. Wilson .. ..
		H. G. Stevens, Esq. .. .. ..
		H. Holland, Esq. (add) .. ..
		Sir Charles Chad .. .. ..
		Hy. Hanson, Esq. .. .. ..
		Rev. C. Smalley (add) .. .. ..
		Rev. D. Davies .. ..
		The Rt. Hon. Lord Teignmouth .. ..
		Thos. Sykes, Esq. (Lancaster) .. ..
		Israel Barnard, Esq. (add) .. ..
		Rev. D. Davies .. ..
		Robt. Stephenson, Esq. (add) .. ..
		George Leslie Saxton, Esq. .. ..
		Francis Morwatt, Esq. .. .. ..
		Rev. Thomas Curtis .. .. ..
		Major Brandreth (add) .. .. ..
		J. G. Constable, Esq. (add) .. ..
		C. E. Eddy, Esq. (add) .. .. ..
		Rev. John Miles .. ..
		Miss Humphreys .. ..
		Ditto .. ..
		Miss Caroline Humphreys .. .. ..
		Ditto .. ..
		Chas. E. M'Taggard .. .. ..
		R. Durant, jun. Esq. .. .. ..
		Wm. Dickenson .. ..
		W. H. Macnaghten, Esq. .. .. ..
		John Brent, Esq. .. ..
		Hy. W. Eaton, Esq. .. .. ..
		Rivarola Grenfell, Esq. .. .. ..
		William Cooke, Esq. .. .. ..
		James Layton, Esq. .. .. ..
		Hy. Mather .. ..
		John Pagen, Esq. .. ..
		Francis Grain, Esq. (add) .. .. ..
		Edward Tyrrell, Esq. .. .. ..
		Rev. Thomas Hammond, Esq .. .. ..
		Henry Coke, Esq. .. ..
		Lieut. Chas Baker, Esq. .. .. ..
		Wm. Murray, Esq. .. ..
		Wilson Hetherington, Esq. (add) .. ..
		Thos. A. Rainsford, Esq. .. .. ..
		A Devonshire Squire .. ..
		John Hall, Esq. .. ..
		A Sincere Friend and former Subscriber, without wishing to allow his name to be mentioned .. ..
		W. G. Tower, Esq. .. ..
		Edward Anderson, Esq. .. .. ..
		Jeffry Latham, Esq. .. ..
		Thomas Rose, Esq. (add) .. .. ..
		Rev. B. J. Norgate .. ..
		J. Dalrymple, Esq. .. ..
		W. J. Goodwin, Esq. .. ..
		A. B. Pengley, Esq. .. ..
		Samuel Lane, Esq. (add) .. .. ..
		J. Jaikes, Esq. .. ..
		Mrs. Hindman .. ..
		Chas. A. Saunders, Esq (add) .. .. ..
		Rev. Thomas Curtis .. ..
		[illegible] Esq. (add) .. .. ..
		[illegible] Esq. .. ..
		George Marshall, Esq. .. ..
		Jno. Mackenzie, Esq. .. ..
		[illegible] .. ..
		A Mite .. ..
		W. [illegible] Esq. (add) .. .. ..
		Wm. Watt, Esq. .. ..
		George Stancel Hatch, Esq. (add) .. ..
		John C. French Esq. .. ..
		Wm. Hamilton, Esq. (add) .. .. ..
		C. Davison Karr, Esq. (add) .. .. ..
		Wm. Ward, Esq. .. ..
		Jno. Wright Trotby, Esq. .. .. ..
		Mary Vallance, Esq. .. ..
		Jno. Hinsson, Esq. .. ..
		W. Lent, Esq. .. ..
		Wm. Bellamy Bowran, Esq. .. .. ..
		Wm. Carruthers, Esq. .. ..
		Hughes, Esq. .. ..
		H. E. Broughton, Esq. .. ..
		John Chaffers, Esq. .. ..
		Mrs. J. W. Walsh .. ..
		W. Walsh, Esq. (add) .. ..
		W. G. Chisholm, Esq. .. ..
		Mary Vallance, Esq. .. ..
		E. B. Hewitt, Esq. .. ..
		Mrs. Alfred Markwick (add) .. .. ..
		Mrs. M. Markwick .. ..
		— Robinson, Esq. .. ..
		Messrs. Rathbone Company .. .. ..
		Wm. Yorke Robinson, Esq .. .. ..
		John Chaffers, Esq. .. ..
		Total	16,943 7 6

The following additional Donations and Subscriptions were announced at the Public Dinner held at the London Tavern, on the 23rd December :—

		s.	d.
His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge	21	0	0
Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester	10	0	0

		s.	d.
T. e Marquis of Exeter	50	0	0
..el Bond Cabbell, Esq., M.P., add.	20	0	0
Lieut.-Col. Mundy	1	0	0
The Rt. Hon. Mr Justice Maule ..	5	0	0
Wm. Pickford, Esq.—Annual ..	5	5	0
Sir Benjamin Hall, M.P.	10	0	0
Rev. D. Davies, Rev. C. H. (add)	1	1	0
John Vigne, Esq.	10	10	0
Mr. Serjeant Channell (add) ..	5	5	0
Sir James Law Lushington	5	0	0
Lady Law Lushington	5	0	0
R. F. Dare Trail (add)	2	2	0
Lewis Wolfe, Esq. (add)	5	0	0
Frede. Cook, Esq. (add)	10	0	0
[illegible] Esq.	1	1	0
J. W. Nicklay, Esq. (add) ..	2	2	0
Sir Charles Napier	5	0	0
Thomas Key, Esq. (add)	5	0	0
George Lyall, Esq., M.P.	10	0	0
Thomas Key, Esq.	5	0	0
A. Edmund Hay, Esq.	31	10	0
Rev. C. Wilson, Rev. Josiah Erle.	1	1	0
Wm. Delafield, Esq. (add)	10	0	0
The Hon. Jeanette Percy (add)	5	0	0
Thos. Sikes, Esq. (add)	5	0	0
Robt. Gear, Esq.	5	0	0
J. Percy, Esq.	5	0	0
Sir George Pilliß, Lee (add) ..	10	0	0
Hy. Lee	1	1	0
Robt. Gardner, Esq. (add)	1	2	0
Hy. Ede	2	2	0
C. Hawles, Esq.	2	0	0
The Rt. Hon. the Lord Mayor of City	5	5	0
J. Labouchere, Esq (add)	5	0	0
Wm. Dawson, Esq.	5	0	0
Robt. Wilkinson, Esq (add) ..	5	0	0
Chas. Grenfell, Esq.	5	0	0
Rich. Davis, Esq (add)	5	0	0
Wm. Kinston, Esq.	5	0	0
Wm. Hodgson, Esq.	5	0	0
Jacob Birt, Esq. (add)	5	0	0
Charles Ourry, Esq. (add)	10	10	0
The Rt Rev the Lord Bishop of Bath	5	0	0
Mrs. Bloxam	5	0	0
Mrs. Brotham	5	0	0
Mr. White	5	0	0
Mrs. White	(A)	1	1	0
Mrs. Hawker	(A)	1	1	0
J. Gulgnard, Esq		3	3	0
J. H. Boodle, Esq. (add)		2	2	0
Lieut.-Col. Goldfrid (add)		5	0	0
Wm. James, Esq. (add)		21	0	0
C. Burston, Esq.		1	1	0
Edw. Marjoribanks, Esq. add ..		1	1	0
Right Hon. Sir Robert Inglis, Bart. (add)		2	2	0
John Thomson, Esq.		10	10	0
Wm. Ramsay, Esq		1	1	0
Joseph Somes, Esq.	(A)	1	1	0
John Ashston Yates, Esq		1	1	0
Joshua Walker, Esq (add)		21	0	0
Russell Ellice, Esq. add		5	5	0
Sir Thomas Fowell Buxton, Bart. (add)		5	0	0
Lord Wm. Powlett		2	2	0
Hy. Hoare, Esq.		5	0	0
J. G. Hubbard, Esq., (add)		50	0	0
Humphry Brain		10	0	0
William Goble, Esq. (add)		5	0	0
Robert Spike (add)		1	1	0
Ado phus Brandt, Esq.	(A.	1	1	0
Samuel D. Brandt, Esq.	(A.	1	1	0
John Newton, Esq.		1	1	0
Rev. T. Holdsworth		1	1	0
Rev. T. Hill		1	1	0
Jeremiah Evans		1	1	0
Thomas Dakin, Esq.		1	1	0
Hugh Wood, Esq. (add)		10	10	0
Rich. Wilson, Esq. (add)		10	10	0
Samuel Gregson, Esq.		2	2	0
Major H. Cohen, Esq. (add)		2	2	0
Thomas smith, Esq (add)		31	10	0
Hy. W. Goodhall, Esq.		3	3	0
George Bird, Esq		2	2	0
William Fuld, Esq. (add)		1	1	0
John Tait, Esq.		2	0	0
John Lucas, Esq (add)		10	0	0
Robert Walter Carden, Esq.		21	0	0
The Knowledge Society		5	5	0
Ditto	(A.	1	0	0
Florance T. Young, Esq.		52	10	0
John Murdock, Esq.		31	10	0
John Sarges, Esq. (add)		11	10	0
John Russell, Esq.		21	0	0
Messrs. Hodgkins and Son		31	10	0
Ernest T. Wire, Esq.		1	1	0
Henry Smith, Esq.	(A.	3	3	0
Rev. H. Oliver, Esq.	(A.	1	1	0
Wm. Down, Esq.	(A)	1	1	0
John Down, Esq.	(A)	1	1	0
Rev. C. S. [illegible]		1	1	0
Edwd F. Starbuck, Esq.		2	2	0
John Windsor, Esq.		1	1	0
Thos. Littledale		1	5	0
A. J. Chaloe, Esq., Rich.		1	1	0
Wm. Brownley, Esq.		1	1	0
Wm. Coventry		1	1	0
Chas Keene, Esq.		1	1	0
Wm. Bowden		1	1	0
Edwin Sanders, Esq.		2	2	0
Thomas Lyall, Esq. (add)		10	10	0
Rev. S. Norris, Esq.		1	10	0
Thos. B. Kent, Esq.		1	1	0
Messrs. Coutts and Co.		10	10	0
George Bartlett Hart, Esq.		5	0	0
Wm. Hart, Esq.		5	0	0

Making the Total Amount of Subscriptions .. .. £18,642 0 0.

The portion of the Hospital, which is now in progress of erection will not only have 100 beds for patients, but, also, will contain the board room, the chapel, the operating theatre, and other principal apartments required in a large Hospital; the design being intended, when fully carried out, to have beds for nearly 400 patients

Subscriptions and donations will be received by the following Bankers, viz :—Sir Claude Scott and Co., Cavendish square; Messrs. Curries and Co., Cornhill; Messrs Cocks and Biddulph, Charing-cross; Messrs Drummonds, 49, Charing-cross, Messrs. Coutts and Co Strand, and Messrs. Jo[illegible]son, Regent street, by William Latham, Esq., Honorary Secretary St. Oxford-terrace, and at the Committee-room, 21, Edgware-road; where any information may be obtained, and communications addressed

February 3rd, 1847. WM. FATHAM, Honorary Secretary.

LESSONS in MILLINERY and DRESS MAKING.—MRS. HOWELL, of 304, Regent-street, two doors from Regent-circus, Sole Inventress of Teaching the Art of Dress-making in a Series of Lessons, undertakes to convey to persons of the meanest capacity a correct knowledge of Cutting, Fitting, and Executing in the most finished style, in Six Lessons, for One Guinea. The correctness of this mode can be fully substantiated by reference to Ladies as Apprentices and Improvers Wanted.—Millinery Rooms——Paper Model.

REAL VALENCIENNES LACE.

Edgings	.. .. ..	from 4½d	to 1s. 3d. a yard.
Narrow Lace	.. .. ..	1s 3d	to 3s. 6d. ditto
Wide ditto	.. .. ..	2s. 6d.	to 7s. 9d. ditto
Do. very wide	.. .. ..	(worth 21s.) all at	12s. 9d. ditto

Real Mechlin Lace from 4s 9d to 8s. 9d. ditto
Patterns sent for inspection, address RING and SHEARD, 261, Regent-street, London.

SHIRTS.—WILLIAM WHITELOCK, 155, STRAND, (established twenty-two years), solicits the attention of Gentlemen to the Shirts he supplies for 6s. 6d. each, including washing. They are made in the Cravenet and other new styles, from Marsland's Patent Long-Cloth, with fine Linen fronts, &c., and are superior to those usually sold at 8s. 6d ; also all fine Linen ditto, 10s 6d., usual price, 14s. 6d. Gentlemen waited upon in any part of London, or one sent on sample into the Country Post Free, upon receipt of the amount and 1s. added as part payment of postage. The measure requisite is the neck, chest, and wrist (tight

MESSRS. NICOLL, Registered PALETOT Makers, 6th and 7th Vic. cap. 65, and TAILORS to their Royal Highnesses Prince Albert, Prince George of Cambridge, his Grace the Duke of Wellington, &c., respect fully beg to announce that the same moderate prices are still maintained; and that the Honourable Winner Over-Coat the Palatot, is made of Linens Cloth, of a substance as suitable for the coming season as that which has been so highly patronised for both its useful properties and gentlemanly appearance during the late summer months.—To be had only, in London, at 114, Regent-street, and 22, Cornhill; and of the recognised agents in the country.

BERDOE'S WATERPROOF OVER-COATS—
An extensive and superior assortment of first-rate Outside Garments, adapted for every purpose, and guaranteed to exclude any rain whatever; also of Berdoe a new and universally adapted Waterproof Cape, a Light Over-Coat for all seasons, may now be inspected both at his West-end and City establishments. The established reputation for efficiency and superior quality of W. Berdoe's well-known garments, obtained by ten years' extensive trial, renders (it is presumed) commendation now unnecessary. Such articles only supplied as will insure perfection.—W. BERDOE, Patentee of Waterproof Cape and Over-Coat Maker, 69, Cornhill (north side), and 96, New Bond-street, near Oxford-street.

CHILDREN'S FROCKS, COATS, and PELISSES; Infants' Cloaks, Hoods, Hats, and Bonnets; Long and Short Robes, French Cambric Caps, Day and Night Dresses, Boys' Hats, Caps, and Cambric Shirts, and every other requisite in Baby Linen, at SHEARMAN'S, 5, Finsbury Pavement. Several hundreds of Children's Dresses constantly on view, from the cambric infant at 10s., pantaloon at 10s 6d., up to the rich embroidered Silk Velvets, &c., with every other article usually required for a young family, thus obviating the trouble and inconvenience so long complained of in going from shop to shop when juvenile clothing is required. An illustrated Pamphlet, affording additional information, will be sent free on application by letter.

GIBBINS' CREAM of ROSES and ROSEMARY.—This esteemed and elegant article is most respectfully offered to the Public, by GIBBINS, Court Hairdresser and Perfumer (from Paris), 7, King-street, St. James's-square, as the most delicate and successful Preservative of the Hair. Being a pomade, it will be successfully applied in promoting its growth and luxuriance

GIBBINS'S EXTRACT of ROSES and ROSEMARY is a Liquid made from the above-named plants, and when applied in Washing the Hair, renders it soft and glossy ; or, after illness, its astringent properties prevent the hair falling off.

No. 7, King-street, St. James's-square, London.

THE PANKLIBANON IRON WORKS AND GREAT WESTERN EMPORIUM for STOVE GRATES, kitchen ranges, fenders, and fire-irons; general furnishing ironmongery, in limed steel, bronze, and block-tin cooking vessels, best Sheffield plate, and table cut

ST. MARY'S HOSPITAL, PADDINGTON

ST. MARY'S HOSPITAL, PADDINGTON.

In our Journal of date July 5, 1845, we illustrated the interesting ceremony of his Royal Highness Prince Albert laying the foundation-stone of this much-needed Hospital. The good work is now in active progress; and, for the purpose of raising the funds necessary for its completion, a public dinner took place on Tuesday last, at the London Tavern, which was attended by between two and three hundred persons.

In a statement and appeal put forth by the Committee, it appears that the sphere for the operations and benefits of St. Mary's Hospital will be the western district of the parish of Marylebone, the whole of the parish of Paddington, with Bayswater and Kensal-green, part of the parish of Willesden, and part of the parish of Kensington; that this immense area already contains 170,000 persons, of whom a large portion are in very humble, if not destitute circumstances; and that the deaths exceed an average of 3000 a year, occurring chiefly amongst the poor. These facts, with others, show how urgently St. Mary's Hospital is required in the above quarter. It is intended that the Hospital shall be equal in magnitude to any in the kingdom, and the Committee are now in possession of ground an acre and a quarter in extent. The building is ultimately to contain beds for nearly 400 patients; and the design, supplied by Mr. Hopper, the honorary architect, will permit advantage to be taken of every improvement which has been recently introduced into any other hospital, either in England or on the Continent.

The estimated cost of erecting and completing the three-fourths alone of the entire building is £34,000; of which sum, the cost of erecting and completing the portion now in actual progress of erection will be £19,000 To enable the Committee to complete that portion of the Hospital which is now in progress, further subscriptions are required, to the amount of £8000, in addition to which, a still further sum of about £3000 will be required to furnish and open the Hospital for the reception of patients.

The foundations for about three-fourths of the building have been laid; but, at present, the eastern portion alone is in progress. This will, when completed, contain beds for 150 patients; and will comprise the board-room, the chapel, the operating theatre, and the other principal offices required for the entire building in its finished state.

The entertainment of Tuesday was well served by Messrs. Bathe and Breach, the proprietors of the Tavern.

His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge presided, and was supported on the right and left by the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor, the Bishop of Tasmania, Sir J. L. Lushington, Rear-Admiral Sykes, Hon. Captain Percy, Colonel Sykes, B. B Cabbell, Esq.; H. F. Thistlethwayte, Esq.; the Deputy Governor of the Bank of England, Sir Benjamin Hall, Sir Walter Stirling, Mr. Broughton, Admiral Sir Charles Napier, Rev. Mr. Campbell, W. Eyre, Esq.; H. M. Kemshead, Esq.; Captain Whiteman, Mr. Sergeant Channell, W. Kindersley, Esq., and others

The cloth having been removed, "Non Nobis" was sung by Messrs. Hobbs and Co., who, with the band of the Coldstream Guards, pleasantly diversified the proceedings of the evening.

After the usual loyal toasts had been given,

The Chairman proposed "The Army and Navy."

Admiral Sykes and Sir J. L. Lushington returned thanks.

His Royal Highness then gave "The Church," and the Bishop of Tasmania returned thanks in a forcible and eloquent address

The Duke of Cambridge then proposed "The health of the Lord Mayor and Corporation of London."

The Lord Mayor returned thanks

His Royal Highness then gave "Prosperity to St. Mary's Hospital." He said that, from the increase of the population in the western district, a Hospital should be erected for the reception of the infirm poor The first stone was laid last year, by Prince Albert, and the Prince George of Cambridge presided over the festival. The prospects of the Institution were encouraging; and, although there was a deficit in the funds, they were not to lose all hope. They must remember that Rome was not built in a day; and they could not expect a work of this magnitude to be completed without very considerable exertion. His Royal Highness trusted that, within a very short time, he should see the building completed, and a College established, in connection with it, for medical students. He wished the undertaking every success.

Sir B. Hall thanked his Royal Highness for the countenance he had given to the Institution on the present occasion.

Sir C. Napier promised to afford it his utmost assistance.

The Lord Mayor proposed "The health of the Duke of Cambridge."

His Royal Highness, in reply, declared that if he had in any way contributes to the advancement of the institution by his presence, he was amply compensated.

Mr. B Bond Cabbell replied to the toast in honour of the Vice-Presidents.

The Rev. A. M. Campbell returned thanks for the trustees, and

The Rev. J. S. Boone, in an effective speech, acknowledged the toast in honour of the Committee.

His Royal Highness then left the chair, and the company immediately separated.

The amount of subscriptions during the evening was very favourable to the interests of the Hospital. It realised nearly £1,700.

The Hospital is built with red brick, similar to Chelsea Hospital, and is a plain, massive structure. It contains wards for the sick and for accidents; contagious wards, completely separated from all other parts of the building; an anatomy ward; a dispensary; an operating theatre; a chapel, and various rooms for the establishment. The warming and ventilation will be by means of the circulation of properly-tempered atmospheric air; and the foul air will be effectually drawn from the wards. Means are provided for the reception of the sufferers from accident without subjecting them to the increased misery of being carried up steps; the food will be conveyed from the kitchen to the various wards by shafts, and the medicines will be conveyed from the laboratory in a similar manner; and the whole building is arranged upon the plan of convenient application, in conformity to the suggestions of the medical gentlemen.

THE PATENT MILE-INDEX.

A simple and ingenious contrivance for measuring and indicating the distance travelled by wheel carriages, has been invented and patented by Mr. H. Von Uster, of the College for Civil Engineers, Putney.

EXTERIOR OF CAB, WITH INDEX.

The invention is equally applicable to private carriages as to cabs and other public vehicles, one of its advantages being that there is nothing unsightly in the apparatus, which, indeed, can scarcely be seen at all when the carriage is in motion. A piano-spiral rotator is concealed within the hoop of the nave of one of the hind wheels, and gives action to a shaft, or small rod of iron, which is carried horizontally nearly as far as the opposite wheel. At this point, a universal joint connects the horizontal with a vertical rod, which latter continues the action into the body of the carriage under the seat. Here, two or three wheels give motion to a suitable shaft or chain, which is concealed between the panels of one side of the carriage, and terminates near the roof in a dial-plate, provided with two faces, one inside for the use of the passenger, and the other outside, in which the driver and his fare can together note the position of the hands before the latter steps into the cab. Both dials have exactly the face of a clock, being furnished with an hour and a minute-hand; and hours, half-hours, and minutes, are indicated on the dial precisely as in the ordinary time-piece. As the hands perform the circuit of the dial, the divisions of hours, half-hours, and minutes, correspond exactly with the miles, half-miles, and fractions of a mile actually traversed by the vehicle. Thus, if the dial indicate 20 minutes past 12 when the passenger enters the cab, he will know that he has travelled exactly a mile when the dial within points to 20 minutes past 1; a mile and a half when it points to 10 minutes to 2; two miles when it arrives at 20 minutes past 2; two miles and a half at 10 minutes to three; three miles at 20 minutes past three; and so on. A small circle within the dial face, with a pointer answering to the second-hands of a watch, enables the owner of the carriage to satisfy himself as to the total number of miles which the vehicle has travelled to any given period.

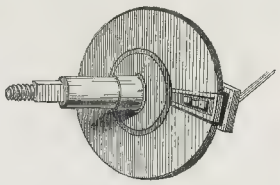


PLATE ON WHICH THE SCREW WORKS.

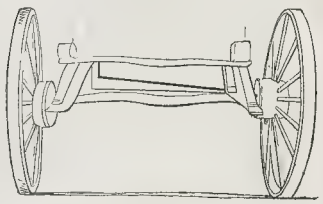
The passenger is thus supplied with a perfect check against overcharge, while the proprietor has the means of knowing the amount of mileage actually performed. The convenience and simplicity of adopting, as the index of distance, a method of calculation so familiar as the face of a clock supplies, need hardly be pointed out

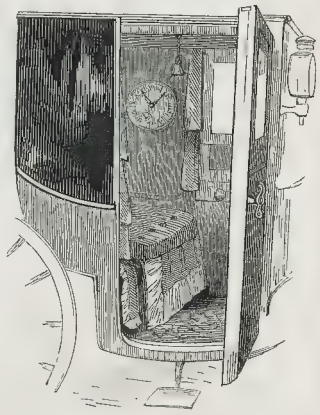
The possibility of tampering with the apparatus has been effectually prevented. The dials are protected by a thick glass, which must be broken before the hands can be reached; and even then they cannot be put backwards or forwards, but must be broken if moved at all. The wheels of the Index under the seat are boarded over, and cannot be reached; the shaft or chain which connects them with the dial is enclosed within the panel of the carriage, and there remains only the iron rod under the carriage that can be approached from without. This may be wrenched or bent by force, but in that case the action of the Index would cease altogether. It may probably be necessary to protect this rod by spikes behind the carriage, or by what is, we believe, called an opera board, or even to enclose it in a small wooden tube; in which latter case it would, like all the rest of the apparatus, be rendered entirely inaccessible.

The principle on which the Index is connected with the motive power admits of the former being fixed or placed in any part of the carriage, and can, therefore, for private use, be put in a neat box, into the seat of the same.



ROD AND TUBE AT THE BACK OF CARRIAGE.

There can be no doubt that the application of the Mile-Index to public carriages—particularly to cabs—would be very satisfactory to the public; and that a very large increase of passengers would be the result, were they protected from the chance of overcharge, which they may be by this invention.



INTERIOR OF CAB, SHOWING INDEX.

The National Debt.—The annual account of the sums received and expended by the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt in the year ending the 5th of January, 1847, has been prepared and presented. The creditor side of the account exhibits a sum total of £3,576,731, arising from cash received at sundry times from the Exchequer, and interest on stock, &c. The debtor side shows the following items—viz., a sum of £9700 paid for £16,120 Reduced Annuities, £253,102 for £273,849 Consols, £689,797 for £716,853 Reduced, £46,926 for £50,791 Old South Sea stock, £145,609 for £157,900 New South Sea Stock, £3892 for £4000 Three per Cent Annuities (1751), £14,849 for £15,664 Three per Cent. Annuities (1726), and £2,400,000 for Exchequer Bills.

The Liverpool Corn Speculators.—A letter from Liverpool, of Tuesday, says:—"Prices of corn and flour are giving way in right good earnest, and such of the speculators as are obliged to get out, find great difficulty in doing so Western Canal flour has been sold to-day at 38s. 6d.; Indian corn is dull at 38s.; and, altogether, the market is greatly lower. The stock of hoarded American barrel-flour is enormous in this port. Half a million barrels of flour are now stored in Liverpool, and not less than 300,000 quarters of corn, so the speculators have good cause for alarm. To-day's fall in flour is 2s. 6d. per barrel, and 4s on Indian corn.

London: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by William Little, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—Saturday, February 6, 1847.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

No. 250.—Vol. X.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 13, 1847. [Sixpence.

THE PRUSSIAN CONSTITUTION.

SOME three and thirty years ago, Frederick William, the late King of Prussia, with his armies shattered, his capital conquered and his crown in the dust, under the heavy pressure of that affliction which fell on all the Royalties of Europe, while the star of Napoleon was in its zenith, taking advantage of the national spirit of his people, threw himself upon their patriotism, and said, "Win me back my throne, and I will give you freedom and a Constitution." The Germans rose almost en masse; fought with an energy that cannot be inspired by the drill sergeant—fought, in fact, as a people, and restored the Monarchy. And from the moment that Frederick William felt himself tolerably firm again in his seat, with a treachery that could not be surpassed by a Bourbon, he forgot his promise, broke his Kingly word, and never thought of Charters or Constitutions but as things to be dreaded when forced upon Royalty, and, if asked for by the people, to be refused. He died, and made no sign of repentance for the breach of faith, leaving the legacy of his promise to his son; and since his accession there has always been a report and rumour of something immense being in preparation for the Prussian people. The Constitution was always coming; and, seeing that it never came, the most hopeful gave up hoping, and the most patient began to protest. Men wrote books in which it was claimed, and thereupon the writers were banished; poets wrote songs—once pensive, as the strains of Moore; latterly, fierce and bloody, as the lyrics of the Nation—and were exiled or pensioned, according to circumstances—but at all events put to silence; and when students over their 'beer sang the songs so written, with harmonies inspiring to hear and most portentous choruses, they were forthwith imprisoned. The Prussian Government had taught them all to sing, but could in no wise permit such a use of the faculty. So, between writers of books and poets and patriotic singers, the Prussian officials had an anxious time of it. Ever and anon, there appeared beyond the frontier, some work or poem, which, being instantly proscribed, was, of course, universally read, and the burden and theme of books, poems, and songs, were always—the Prussian Constitution. It was so much written and talked about, in fact, that it had become one of the standing bores of European politics—one of those subjects that never can be got rid of—that no amount of indignation can affect, and no quantity of learning make intelligible, such a subject as the Spanish Marriage is beginning to be. The Prussian Constitution has been under discussion for thirty years, and nobody believed anything in the shape of it would ever see the light; when, all at once, it burst upon the world, on the 3rd of this present month of February, 1847. As a phenomenon, it is worth a little examination.

"Some fine morning," says an acute German writer, "we shall be ordered to be free; and then we shall venture it." This liberty at the word of command, and freedom, "by permission of the authorities," is at present the only mode in which Germany can progress; not even the germ of a popular Government, or any means by which the mass of the community can act upon and influence the governing body, exist. Improvement must either come as a grant and favour from the supreme power, or be wrested from it by a national convulsion. As the power that can withhold altogether, can, of course, give as little as it chooses, it will surprise no one to hear that what is called the new Prussian Constitution is a mere mockery, judged by the standard that constitutional countries will apply to it. It will appear more valuable to the Germans; but, even to them, it will bring vexation and disappointment; and it is doubtful whether the irritation it will excite will not far outweigh the advantage of it; an excess of caution generally defeating itself.

The changes the Germans claim are as much social as political; thus open courts of justice, the confronting of accuser and accused, the viva voce examination of witnesses, and the publicity of all legal proceedings, are almost the first elements of social security and human justice; they are quite independent of political forms of Government. The chaos of Prussian jurisprudence, both in civil and criminal cases, with all its feudal characteristics, its processes strangely at variance with modern usages, the utter dependence of the Judges and officials on the Crown, weigh heavily on the people. An extensive legal reform would give more relief than even political changes; the community is fully prepared for it; while, cast loose into a greater political freedom, they would be, for a time, without the self-guidance which can only be developed by time and custom; and the want of it might not be without a degree of danger. Of all this mass of evil, the new Constitution does not touch a single item.

The Freedom of the Press, or, as Milton better terms it, "the liberty of unlicensed printing," is another great social right, the want of which is a continual affliction to a highly instructed people. The strict censorship is one of the greatest anomalies of Germany, and all that the Governments do for education without it is but a deception. It may be safely said that a perfect Freedom of the Press, which is only conversation in another form and on a greater scale, is better worth having, without any system of State Education at all, than the best of State teaching with a continual chaining up of discussion: the quiet it secures is but apparent; the stillness is not healthy; it is the repose of decay, in which principles and creeds rot and lose all their vigour. In what country has religion become so degraded as in the cradle of the Reformation? All that is not the coldest rationalism is perfect indifference, among the wealthy and educated; in the masses, the boasted enlightenment that is said to leave no village without its school, has not prevented the most astounding exhibition of credulity the world has seen since the Crusades—the pilgrimage to the "holy coat" at Treves. Nowhere are the destructive theories of the Communists and Socialists so widely spread as in Austria (the Gallician massacres in bloody proof), and Prussia. A free Press would have kept up a wholesome agitation on all disputed points, and creeds and doctrines attacked would have found zealous defenders; but the paternal Governments of the Continent forbid the antidote; while the poison filters through society in secret and undetected. There is more of the vital spirit of religion in America and England, with their Free Press and public discussions, than in the over-governed communities, where the censorship sits like an incubus on all men's thoughts, and allows no one "to speak the thing he will." The new Constitution changes nothing in this direction; and the nation that gave the invention of printing to the world has but a permissive use of it in any case; the exercise of its best and mightiest powers being altogether forbidden.

SEA-LION HUNT OFF CALLAO, COAST OF PERU.—FROM A SKETCH BY A CORRESPONDENT.

Having stated so much that this long-expected gift does not do, it is fitting perhaps to explain what it does; what is the purport and value of this production over which the spirit of an enlightened Government has sat brooding for more than a generation, and which is now drawn

> Mature and perfect from its dark retreat
> Of thirty years!

There are eight provincial Diets, or assemblies, in Prussia, the members of which are elected; but their powers have no resemblance whatever to those of the legislative bodies of constitutional countries; it is difficult to give an idea of their functions, they are so completely negative. They cannot originate any law, or refuse any tax: they can only deliberate on the measures proposed by the Crown, humbly offer "advice" upon them, which may or may not be taken, and "petition" when more than usually courageous; but the petition is negatived if there is only one vote against it; and if it passes, must be revised by the Commitee of the Diet, who are invariably the mere creatures of the Crown. The Diets have no veto upon anything, and with a general law that affects the whole kingdom they have nothing to do; they can only consider it so far as it touches the particular province, and then they can but advise and petition as before, both advice and petition being considered disrespectful; and, if pressed, little less than rebellion. All these Diets without powers, the King, by the new Constitution, calls together at Berlin in one assembly, to be called the United Diet of Prussia, sitting in two bodies, one formed of the princes of the blood, the nobles, princes, counts, and peers of the states and provinces; this will be a kind of House of Peers; the other body will consist of the representatives of the gentry, the towns, and boroughs; but as any number of cyphers brought together will not make a sum without at least a unit added to them, so one function is created that the thing might not be altogether purposeless; they will have a control over the creation of all new loans or fresh taxes, except under urgent circumstances, as those of war. In all other matters, they have only the "liberty of advising," as before. It is shrewdly suspected that, if the finances of Prussia had been in a sound state, no Constitution would ever have made its appearance. But the necessities of Kings have always driven them at last to get money somehow—and there are but two ways of doing it. One is to take it without asking, making the power of doing so the warrant for it; the other is to get the people themselves to be a party to the transaction. The day for the first and simpler process has passed away, and nothing is left but to try the second. But it will be seen that no more power is given to the popular representatives than is absolutely essential to the purpose. Properly used, however, even this slight hold of the great instrument, money, may be turned to good account.

The only fear is that the Institution thus created by Royal decree, having no hold upon the people at large, may be destroyed as easily as it was evoked. We have little faith in things that depend only on Royal signatures: real Constitutions are the gradual growth of ages. We do not see the consequence of a refusal on the part of the Diet to consent to a loan or allow a tax: can it not be reduced to its former insignificance, if at all unmanageable? We imagine so. But if, with time, it can make itself valuable, and worth defending—if it can gather round it any amount of popular feeling and enthusiasm then, trifling with it may become dangerous; and there is a possibility of its surviving to deal with more things than loans and taxes. But, at present, the Royal Frankenstein may look on his creation without the least dread: it is the tamest and feeblest of animated things. We involuntarily judge it by an English standard. To Germans, living under as perfect a despotism as ever existed, from the days of Nimrod down to those of Nicholas, it may have a far greater value.

SEA-LION HUNT BY THE OFFICERS OF HER MAJESTY'S SHIP "CALYPSO."

(SKETCHED AND DESCRIBED BY AN EYE-WITNESS.)

THE Calypso having, on a previous short cruise outside the Island of San Lorenzo (which forms the harbour of Callao), passed in the neighbourhood of a barren rock detached about three miles from the island, there were observed basking on its face an enormous number of Sea-Lions (Platyrhynchus leoninus) of great size, and most singular appearance. This unusual sight operated so powerfully upon the destructive propensities of the "gentlemen sportsmen" on board, that our worthy Captain was obliged to allow us to commence hostilities against these giants, who, although reported to be generally inoffensive, are allowed to be quite willing and able to defend themselves when provoked. Our chief having entered readily into our proposed amusement, the Calypso got under way on the afternoon of the 20th of November, and stood out to sea. After working to windward, during the night we found ourselves, about mid-day on the 21st, at the distance of a mile from our ground. Two boats were then lowered, and having been manned by eight officers and twenty blue-jackets and marines, selected as the crack shots of the ship, armed with muskets and bayonets, with a proper quantum of boarding pikes and tomahawks, in the probable event of our coming to close quarters with our antagonists, we shoved off. The boats were commanded by Lieutenant M., a hardy son of the heather, whose rifle has whilom signed the death-warrant of many an "antlered monarch" on his native hills. After a short row, we descried our chase in considerable number on a rock which sloped from a height about 80 feet gradually to the water. We approached them with caution and in perfect silence; and, having rounded a small point which hid us from their view, we suddenly pulled straight for the rock. Oh! moment of triumph! The animals there first appearing to comprehend their disagreeable position, rose simultaneously; and, roaring loudly, made a rush down the hill. After having given them a rattling volley, which told severely on the dense mass, we threw ourselves out of the boats—an operation attended with some difficulty, owing to the heavy surf; but which fortunately produced no worse result than a thorough drenching to most of us, and, alas! to our ammunition. Once on land, we applied ourselves to intercept the retreat of those who had not gained the water, now discoloured with the blood of the killed and wounded. Our boatswain had a narrow escape from a huge patriarch, who tried to roll him over; while one of the men, who was labouring to drag on shore a huge fellow who had "shuffled off his mortal coil" in the melee, was washed away with his prize, and could only save himself by relinquishing his hold on his prisoner. The island being now clear, we fired a few desultory shots at those we saw swimming round us, and re-embarked without accident, regaining the ship after a most exciting chase, and with the additional lack of harpooning a fine fellow from the boat. Upon our arrival on board, the spoil was skinned; the flesh and liver furnishing no unpalatable meal to many of the men. The scene of our exploit was covered with guano.

The landing has been faithfully sketched by a member of the Gun-room Mess.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

PARISIANA.

(From our own Correspondent.)

PARIS, Wednesday.

Although the Court is at present in slight mourning for the Austrian Arch-Duke, the Royal Family do not suspend their amusements. There has been, within the last two or three days, a performance of the Italian Opera at the Tuileries; the only difference being in the toilette of the ladies, who all wore white or grey: the opera selected was "L'Elisir d'Amore." The birthday of the young Duchess de Montpensier was celebrated at the Palace by a little Bal Costumé, on which occasion the graceful young Spaniard wore one of the charming costumes of her own country, that of an Andalusan Maja, just sent her from Madrid by her Royal sister. Her young husband was likewise dressed in a Spanish costume; while the Duke and Duchess of Aumale wore Italian dresses. The life of the party, however, was the Prince de Joinville, the most stirring and high-spirited of Louis Philippe's sons. He wore the costume of a Guerrier; its principal features being an immense cocked hat half concealed in, a long rainbow coloured feather, and enormous wide-mouthed boots. With his face smeared over in burnt cork fashion, and a long rifle in his hand, which he managed with great dexterity, he offered a perfect type of a Carnival costume, and greatly amused all the lookers-on.

Fancy balls are very numerous this year. In the general depression of society, this is the amusement which claims most favour. Your countrymen enter into them eagerly; and I know none of these entertainments which have surpassed in spirit or splendour that given the other day by the rich Englishman, Mr. G——, at which the whole society of the Chaussée d'Antin was present.

I have just heard of a singular instance of the influence of modern literature amongst us. As you well know, the name of the hero of the popular melodrama, "L'Auberge des Adrets," Robert Macaire, has passed into a proverb for hypocrisy and rogruery, and, as you likewise know, there have not been wanting those who have feigned to discover that the character was designed as an attack upon a certain august personage here. But as it may, it is certain that the name is in the worst odour, and, unfortunately, there is none more common amongst us. At this moment, there are more than fifty petitions lying in the hands of the official authorities, from different individuals, desiring permission to change this detested patronymic. As the ne plus ultra of ill-luck, however, a merchant who lives in the Rue Fugevin, bears the Christian name of Robert, in addition to the surname of Macaire; and, in the petition which he likewise sent in, he states, that if he is not allowed to adopt another cognomen, he will be obliged to give up the business which he has held for a long time, and which his father handed down to him. Both the name and the trade must have it on his conscience, to have reduced so many respectable individuals to be ashamed of the name they bear. A yet graver affair is one in which Alexandre Dumas is compromised. In one of his recent novels—"La Dame de Montsereau" he has introduced the character of one of the ancestors of the Marquis d'E. pinay Saint Sue, a man of high birth, who, naturally jealous of his family honour, has been grievously offended by the miserable part this celebrated writer has assigned to this personage in the novel, and has, consequently, brought an action for damages against M. Dumas on this score. The latter, however, is not the only French author who has taken strange liberties with the memory of distinct historical personages; and I have just heard that a member of the family of Sorgia was about to bring an action of 100,000 francs damages against Victor Hugo, for libelling the character of his ancestor, Lucrezia. Truly, as the system pursued by the modern French dramatists and novelists, of introducing assassinations, poisonings, and crimes of every description into each chapter of their works, every one will naturally feel grateful to that author his name nor his ancestry may be brought into notice by these gentlemen.

An amusing anecdote of Alexandre Dumas is now making the tour of the Parisian drawing-rooms. He was some time back in the habit of receiving his friends daily, at his villa of St. Germain, where he kept open house. One day his servant came to announce to him that there was no champagne left in the cellar. "Well," said Dumas, "you must send for more." "Yes, Sir," Paris, answered the man; "but meanwhile what is to be done, for the wine-merchant here insists upon being paid in advance?" "Here is the money, then," said his master; "go and order some." A few days after, however, the master found out that it was his own wine from his cellar that his servant was thus selling him in retail! "You rascal," said the novelist, "you have robbed me: I give you warning. But stay—you are a clever fellow—you can make your fortune when you sell me my own wine, remember you give me credit!" Of this story we will say, Se non è vera è ben trovata. M. Dumas has certainly the talent of making himself talked of. As an instance of its possession we may quote the name bestowed on the Bœuf Gras which is to parade this capital next Tuesday: it is called Monte Christo!

FRANCE

There is no political news of importance in the Paris papers. The Chamber of Deputies is still occupied in discussing the Address. The paragraph relating to the financial position of France has been amply debated by the Chambers, and the journals also devote several leading articles to it. The weather in France has been as severe as in England, and many of the roads were impassable, so that many mails from the country were due in Paris on Tuesday morning.

In the course of the debate on the Address on Thursday (last week), M. Thiers made a speech which cannot fail to excite great attention. The paragraph relative to the course pursued by the French Ministry in regard to the Spanish marriages, and entered into the subject at considerable length; but the part of his speech calculated to create the most interest here was that in which he referred to England. We subjoin it:

"The real alliance for France," said M. Thiers, "is that of England. It is said, there are rivalries between France and England. I say that this is not the case. There are no rivalries. No rivalries render an alliance between England and France impossible? No! and I am certain that if England was shown a great aim to be attained, she is determined to ask sacrifices unworthy of us. I cannot help saying that I am deeply afflicted by the policy which has been proposed in this tribune. You are, it is said, at variance with the Northern Courts and England, and you are thus reduced to isolation. I have heard on whom implicit faith can be placed who agitate questions which affect the happiness of humanity; but I avow that my sympathies are much more with the Whigs, and the repugnance which some seem to feel to them, is, I think, not founded with that for the Radicals. They object that in 1840 the Whigs were opposed to France. That accusation is ill-founded; and the proof is that, at the end of 1840, our Cabinet signed with those Whigs a treaty which testified, on the contrary, a great degree of confidence on the part of France. What a moment you have chosen to disturb the alliance with England! The moment when Cracow was the theatre of an attempt which you did not foresee, though all the world announced it. This is the moment which you have chosen to effect the union of the Whigs, and to render England discontented." M. Thiers concluded by saying—"I repeat I am for the English alliance; I do not seek for perfidy, but I am for the alliance of France with England on such matters and Royalty, and that is the reason I have told to-day to the nation and to Royalty the whole truth."

On the following day, M. Guizot replied to M. Thiers, and entered into an elaborate defence of the course which the French Government had adopted relative to the Spanish marriages. M. Guizot argued that Lord Aberdeen agreed with his views in his interview at Eu, and that he had been in concert with that nobleman. "I establish, then," said M. Guizot, "that our situation with Lord Aberdeen was as I have stated; and I may add that never was any mention made between Lord Aberdeen and myself of the Treaty of Utrecht; never was there a word spoken of any right; never did Lord Aberdeen make any objection to the marriage of the Duke de Montpensier with the Infanta. (Hear, hear.) Such was the situation of affairs when I left Paris for the Chateau d'Eu, in the month of July. Let me here be permitted to throw aside all idea of comparison between the Whigs and the Tories with respect to the policy that France ought to follow relative to England. These distinctions have lost their value in the present day. All parties in that country are equally devoted to her interests: all are equally animated by a friendly feeling towards France. To convince yourselves of this, you have only to glance over the debates of Parliament, examine the speeches of all the chiefs of party in England; from the Tories to the Radicals—from Lord George Bentinck to Mr. Roebuck all employ the same language, express the same desire for friendly relations and good intelligence between France and England. Nor do I forget that, in more difficult times, the Whigs were the true friends of France." M. Guizot went on to argue that France would have failed in her relations with Spain if she had, under the circumstances, refused the proposition of the Spanish Government, and that she would have thus thrown Spain under the influence of England. M. Guizot thus defended himself from the imputation of having acted dishonourably and perfidiously against the interests of the name of the King by some of the English papers:—"I now arrive at the question of honourable dealing. For my part, I have never accused the intentions or good faith of any one, but in discussing I have always assumed that there were errors and faults of conduct. I have always respected and observed this rule in every situation; the liberty and dignity of diplomatic relations and of parliamentary discussion depend on it. Whatever, therefore, may be the conduct observed towards me, or by whom, I shall always follow this course. I protest first of all against the introduction of a name which has been improperly employed at London in this discussion. Not more abroad than at home, nor more between two constitutional Governments than in each individually, ought that name to be mixed up in political discussions. To introduce it, to make use of it, is conduct deserving of the strongest censure. (Hear.) I shall, as I do at present, always protest against such a violation of constitutional rules, from whatever quarter it may proceed. (Movement.) I now enter into the question of good faith, and what is called perfidie, and in doing so I feel the necessity of laying before the Chamber the documents and the language of the Government. I speak not of documents concocted after the event has taken place, and for the purposes of defence, but of documents that passed during the conduct of the affair. The Chamber will see that everywhere—at London, at Paris, and in Spain—our proceedings have been upright and honourable, such as they ought to be between Governments that respect each other. (Here the Hon. Minister read a long despatch, written by himself, in which he expressed surprise at the reproach made by Lord Palmerston of failure of procédés, insisted on the facts which intimated on the part of the English Government, not a policy of cordial understanding, but an isolated one; and indicated that France might also have an isolated policy in Spain.) Such, he continued, was our conduct at London, departing in no respect from the consideration and good faith which the Government of Great Britain had a right to expect from the French Cabinet." The Minister next denied that M. de Bresson wrote to me that he had had to contend a whole day against Queen Christina. We were then in the right in saying that the two marriages would not be simultaneous, for we laboured to prevent them, and M. de Bresson was not present at the marriage. "When I informed Lord Normanby that the marriages were settled, he asked if they would both be concluded at the same time. I replied that they would not, and I was right in so replying, for at the moment at which I spoke not only was nothing as yet decided, but we were labouring at Madrid to prevent the simultaneousness of the two marriages. The Queen Mother insisted strongly on that point; but we opposed it, and M. de Bresson wrote to me that he had had to contend a whole day against Queen Christina. We were then in the right in saying that the two marriages would not be simultaneous, for we laboured to prevent them, and M. de Bresson was present at the marriage."

COURT AND HAUT TON.

RETURN OF THE COURT TO BUCKINGHAM PALACE.

The Queen and Prince Albert, accompanied by the Prince of Wales, Prince Alfred, the Princess Royal, the Princess Alice, the Princess Helena, and Count Alexander Mensdorff, left Windsor Castle on Tuesday, escorted by a party of the First Regiment of Life Guards, for the Slough Station of the Great Western Railway. The august party were conveyed from Slough to the Paddington Terminus by a special train, and from Paddington proceeded, in six carriages and four, to Buckingham Palace, escorted by a party of Light Dragoons. The Royal party arrived at the Palace at twenty minutes past four o'clock. Her Majesty and Prince Albert were received on their arrival by the Lord Chamberlain; the Treasurer of the Household; the Earl of Morton, Lord in Waiting; the Earl of Strafford; Viscount Canning, Groom in Waiting; and Captain Francis Seymour, Groom in Waiting to Prince Albert.

The Queen and Prince Albert took an airing on Wednesday, accompanied by the Prince of Wales and the Princess Royal, in a sledge, the Prince driving Lord John Russell had an audience of the Queen. Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent visited the Queen at Buckingham Palace, and partook of luncheon with her Majesty and her Royal Consort. Her Majesty had an evening party. The company consisted of the Countess of Jersey and Lady Charlotte Villiers, Earl Somers and the Ladies Caroline and Harriet Cocks, Lady Elizabeth Dawson, Mr. G. E. Anson, Lieutenant-Colonel the Hon. C. B. Phipps, Lord George Lennox, and Captain Francis Seymour.

ROYAL SLEDGE EXCURSION.—The roads in the vicinity of Windsor, in consequence of the heavy fall of snow, covering the ground to the depth of several inches, having been declared in excellent state for "sledging," the Royal Equipages the Prince of Wales, rode in the first sledge (to which were attached the pair of ponies trained expressly for that purpose, gaily caparisoned in their Russian bell-harness), driven by his Royal Highness Prince Albert. The second sledge, which was driven by Count Alexander Mensdorff, contained the Princess Royal and the Countess of Charlemont, who has succeeded the Marchioness of Douro as the Lady in Waiting to her Majesty. In the Russian droschky, which followed, driven by one of the Royal grooms in Russian costume, were the Hon. Miss Stanley, and the Hon. Miss Dawson. The Hon. Colonel Grey and the Hon. Captain Gordon, the Lords in Waiting to her Majesty and Prince Albert, and Mr. Myers, the Royal Highness's riding master, were in attendance on horseback.

LADY JOHN RUSSELL.—Lady John Russell has been seriously ill, but we state with great pleasure that her Ladyship is now out of danger, and continues gradually to improve in health.

ILLNESS OF SIR JOHN GLADSTONE, BART.—Some alarming accounts have appeared in the daily papers of the illness of Sir John Gladstone, Bart., at his seat in Scotland, but we are happy to learn that the extent of the malady has been much exaggerated.

PARTY AT LORD BROUGHAM'S.—Lord Brougham entertained the Marquis and Marchioness of Douro, the Marquis of Salisbury, the Marchioness of Alresbury, the Earl of Aberdeen, the Earl of Ripon, the Earl of Wilton, Lord and Lady Stanley, Lady Macé, the Hon. Mrs. Dawson Damer, and a select party, to dinner on Saturday last, at his residence, in Grafton-street.

CELEBRATION OF THE ANNIVERSARY OF HER MAJESTY'S WEDDING. The seventh anniversary of the union of Queen Victoria with his Royal Highness Prince Albert was celebrated at Windsor, on Wednesday, with the usual rejoicings. Several of the Royal tradesmen dined together in the afternoon, at the New Inn; and, in the evening, there was a public ball, in honour of the event, at the Town Hall, which was numerously attended; the stewards comprising J. T. Bedborough, Esq. (the Mayor); Colonel Reid, M.P.; Ralph Neville, Esq., M.P.; the Hon. Henry Legge, M.P.; Captain Bulkeley, 1st Life Guards; and several of her Majesty's tradesmen.

THE MARQUIS OF CLANRICARDE.—We regret to learn that the Marquis of Clanricarde is confined to his residence, on Carlton-house-terrace, by indisposition.

MR. ROBERT PEEL.—Mr. R. Peel, eldest son of Sir Robert Peel, has returned to Switzerland from a tour in Italy, and has been appointed Chargé d'Affaires at Berne, in the absence of Mr. Morier, the British Minister resident there.

FASHIONABLE ASSEMBLY.—The Marquis and Marchioness of Ailesbury entertained, at dinner, on Tuesday evening, his Excellency the American Ambassador and the Countess Dietrichstein, the Duke of Wellington, the Earl of Auckland and the Hon. Miss Eden, the Countess of Chesterfield, Count Potocki, Viscount and Viscountess Sydney, Lord and Lady Stanley, Viscount Duncannon, Hon. Colonel and Hon. Mrs. Anson, Hon. Colonel Montague, and Mr. Charles Greville. In the evening, a select party joined the circle.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

IMPORTANT POINTS CONNECTED WITH THE POWER OF EXECUTORS.

A case was tried on Tuesday, in the BAIL COURT, which excited some interest, but in which the prosecutors completely failed, both in law and fact. Mr. Justice Erle laid down some interesting points of law. The case was, The Queen v. Haynes and others

It was a prosecution against Mr. Joseph Bayley Haynes, charging him and several other persons with violently assembling together, and creating a riot in the parish of Little Stanmore, and unlawfully and indecently exposing the dead body of Joseph Bayley Haynes, and carrying it away from his house. There were other counts in the indictment, varying the mode of stating the charge. In all the counts the body was alleged to have been in the lawful custody and possession of the executors of the said J. B. Haynes.

The Attorney-General, in opening the case, said the prosecution had been instituted by the executors of the late Mr. Haynes, who formerly had been of St. Alban's Lodge, Edgware, and who died on the 19th of December, 1845. The principal defendant was his son, and others of them were members of his family. The deceased had for a number of years carried on the trade of a butcher. He died at an advanced age, and, during the latter part of his life, had been estranged from his family.

Several other persons were included in the indictment.

The facts were briefly these. The defendant made a will, in which he appointed Mr. Barton and Mr. Slater his executors, and he, among other things, directed that he should be buried at the Cemetery at Kensal-green. Notice of his death was forwarded to his son on the day when that event occurred, and on that very day this son went to the house where the body lay, accompanied by the defendant Phillips, when the effect and substance of the will of his father was briefly stated to him, and Mr. Barton, one of the executors, offered to accommodate him with a bed in the house that night if he wished it, and would promise to conduct himself with propriety. The offer was declined, and the defendant J. B. Haynes informed. The day before that, however, he expressed a wish to take his family into the room where the body lay, that they might take their last farewell of the deceased. This was permitted by the executors. The defendant J. B. Haynes went into the room accompanied by several other persons, who, in the most rude manner, took the corpse from the coffin and carried it forcibly down stairs, and a scene of riot and confusion ensued.

Mr. Barton, the attorney who prepared the codicils to the wills, and his brother, one of the executors, and other witnesses, were called; but the case for the prosecution was so weak that, when it was closed,

Mr. Justice Erle said he thought the indictment could not be sustained. The whole proceeding arose out of a claim on the part of a son to conduct the funeral of his father in a manner opposed to the wishes of his executors, who, however, had not, up to the present time, proved the will under which they claimed to act.

Sir Frederick Thesiger then addressed the Jury on the part of the defendants. He contended that whatever disturbance had taken place on the day in question was attributable entirely to the conduct of the executors. The will under which they claimed was a document the legality of which the defendant disputed, and which the executors had not yet ventured to prove that will The defendant found that his father, during the latter period of his life, had been surrounded by strangers, who had estranged him from his family, and, as his son, had done no more than endeavour to assert his just rights

Mr. Justice Erle, in summing up the evidence, said that that part of the indictment which charged the defendant with an indecent exposure of the body of the deceased could not be sustained, neither could the charge of riot The will of the deceased not having been proved, the executors had no greater right than the son of the deceased to decide in what manner the funeral should be conducted, and the interference of the defendants, therefore, did not render them liable to a prosecution like the present. The whole affair, after all, had reference only to the validity of a will, and which was disputed by the defendants Until the will of the deceased was proved, the house, being freehold property, belonged to the son, as heir-at-law

The Jury immediately acquitted all the defendants. The verdict was received with applause by a very crowded court.

RAILWAY LITIGATION

Another railway case, deserving of notice, was tried in the Court of COMMON PLEAS, on Wednesday, Barker v. Lyndon.

The claim was for the publication of several advertisements connected with the proposed North-Western Trunk Railway from Crewe to Gloucester. There was no proof that the defendant had attended any meetings, but he appeared to have received notice when and of the resolutions passed.

The Lord Chief Justice said that there were certain points which must be considered as settled with respect to railway liabilities, and these decisions must be considered as law until reversed, which he (the learned Judge) did not anticipate they ever would, and from which he himself did not see any ground for differing. First, then, it was settled law that an individual, by consenting to be on the provisional committee, did not thereby authorise the making of contracts so as to render him liable. Secondly, that an individual who proposes to take shares never issued, in a company never established, did not thereby give any authority to pledge his credit. By consenting, therefore, to be put on the provisional committee, and by accepting shares, the defendant in the present case did not render himself liable. Then, here, it did not appear that the provisional committee gave a single order. In this case, there was nothing to show that the defendant had authorised the pledging of his credit for the debt in question, therefore there must either be a verdict for the defendant or a nonsuit entered.

The plaintiff elected to have a verdict for the defendant, which was accordingly returned, and thereupon a bill of exceptions was tendered to the ruling of the Learned Judge.

THE BRAINTREE CHURCH-RATE CASE.

On Monday, Lord Denman gave judgment, in the Court of QUEEN'S BENCH, in this case, which was first brought before public attention in the year 1837. In that year, the parish church of Braintree fell into disrepair. A meeting of the parishioners was convened for the purpose of considering the matter of making a church-rate. The persons then assembled postponed the making of any rate for the period of twelve months. This postponement was considered equivalent to a refusal to make the rate. Eight days after this meeting had been held, the churchwardens, without any notice to the parishioners, of their own authority, made a rate, and afterwards attempted to enforce the payment of it by a suit in the Consistory Court against a Mr. Burder, for the subtraction of the rate

The question raised therefrom was as to the right of the minority of a vestry lawfully assembled for the purpose of making a church-rate, the necessity for which is not disputed, to make a reasonable rate if the majority refuse. Several of the Courts had been occupied with the matter, and the decision of the Court of Queen's Bench, now, was to the effect that the rate was well made

The Bishop of London sat upon the Bench during the delivery of the judgment

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MONDAY.

LOANS TO IRELAND.—Earl FITZWILLIAM moved for a return of all the sums of money advanced as loans by the Imperial Legislature to Ireland since the Union; specifying clearly in how far the conditions of such loans had been complied with. The noble Earl stated his object to be to disabuse the public mind of an idea that advances to Ireland were never repaid, his opinion being that no loans were ever more promptly repaid than those made to that country.—Lord BROUGHAM repeated, for a third time, his complaints of the influx of Irish paupers into Liverpool. A general conversation ensued about Irish distress.—Earl FITZWILLIAM asserted that we were now in a great crisis, and warned their Lordships to beware of neglecting the opportunity which it gave them. The Marquis of LANSDOWNE said that he should have no objection to the motion if his noble friend would so far amend it as to add the words "distinguishing all advances and repayments made since the establishment of the Board of Works." The motion, as amended, was agreed to. A conversation then arose respecting the charges on land in Ireland, and the House adjourned soon after six o'clock.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MONDAY.

FINANCIAL STATEMENT.—Lord J. RUSSELL gave notice that, on the 22nd inst., he should make a financial statement in Committee of Ways and Means.

THE DESTITUTE PERSONS (IRELAND) BILL.

On the motion that the House again resolve itself into Committee on this bill,

Mr. O'CONNELL drew a very lamentable picture of the condition of Ireland, and expressed his conviction that, unless immediate relief were afforded, 2 per cent. of the present population of Ireland would perish. They would perish of famine and disease, unless the House did something speedy and efficacious—not doled out in small sums—not in private and individual subscriptions, but by some great act of national consistency, calculated upon a broad and liberal scale. If this course were not pursued, Parliament was responsible for the loss of 25 per cent. of the population of Ireland. He assured the House most solemnly that he was not exaggerating; he only could establish all he said by many and many painful proofs, and the necessary result must be typhus fever, which in fact had broken out, and was desolating whole districts. If left alive only one in ten that it attacked. This fearful murder ere long would spread to the upper classes; the inhabitants of England would not escape its visitations, for it would be brought over by the miserable wretches who escaped from the other side of the Channel. The calamity would be scattered over the whole empire, and no man would be safe from it. He repeated that two millions of human beings would be destroyed, if relief were not suddenly and effectually afforded. The destruction of the potato crop had occasioned a positive annihilation of food, and the people were starving in shoals, in hundreds—ay, in thousands and millions. Parliament was bound, then, to act not only liberally but generously—to lend out the means of putting a stop to this terrible disaster. It was asserted that the Irish landlords did not do their duty. Several of them had done their duty others had not; and, considering the extraordinary exigency of the case, the plan was to enable Government with more real power, to apply to the purpose all the sums they deemed necessary. They ought instantly to carry out the mode of relief they thought necessary, responsible indeed to the House, but not fettered by the strict letter of the law. He wanted to see the House generously confiding in Ministers, let them be chosen from which side of the House they might. The facts, as he well knew, were more terrific than they had been yet stated—the necessity was more urgent. Mr. O'Connell concluded his appeal in behalf of Ireland, by saying, "Recollect how incumbered is the property of Ireland; how many of her estates are in Chancery, how many are in the hands of trustees. She is in your hands—she is in your power. If you don't save her, she can't save herself; and I solemnly call on you to recollect that I predict, with the sincerest conviction, that one-fourth of her population will perish unless you come to their relief." (Cheers from both sides.)

The discussion in regard to the miserable condition of Ireland was continued for some time, several hon. members throwing much blame upon the Irish landlords.

Sir D. NORREYS and Sir H. W. BARRON each defended them.

Lord J. RUSSELL deprecated such a desultory discussion as a great waste of time when it was of so much importance that they should proceed with a bill intended for the relief of Ireland in the Committee he had moved for. The hon. Baronet who had last spoken had said the cry against the Irish landlords was raised by the low cunning of the mendicant interests in the metropolis, who were anxious first to depress the value and then get possession of Irish estates. Now, it so happened that a number of gentlemen belonging to the mendicant interests in London, and who had no wish to buy Irish estates, had a meeting at which several of them subscribed no less than £1000 each for the relief of distress in Ireland, and had taken much trouble subsequently, after business hours, in receiving subscriptions from others, and in carrying on a correspondence with that country.

Mr. HAWES strongly censured the Irish landlords, and said they had done nothing but sit down and howl for English money.

At length the House went into Committee, and a long time was occupied in considering the clauses of the bill.

The bill passed through Committee.

The Distilling from Sugar Bill and the Brewing from Sugar Bill also went through Committee.

The Customs' Duties (Rum) Bill, he would move that the bill be referred to a Select Committee

The House adjourned at half-past twelve

HOUSE OF LORDS. TUESDAY.

THE COLLEGIATE CHURCH OF MANCHESTER

Lord STANLEY presented a petition from the churchwardens of Manchester, complaining that, while the rectorial revenues of the parish amounted to more than £3000 per annum, and, while they were received by the Dean and Fellows of the Collegiate Church at Manchester, they claimed to be exempt from residence, and altogether exempt from the cure of souls. This petition was not presented in any spirit of hostility to the Church; but their Lordships could not fail to see that such a state of things must be injurious to its best interests. He was surprised how the Dean and Fellows could reconcile it to their consciences to take these large sums, and leave 400,000 persons to the cure of souls, without even the best manner they might be able. The petition prayed that before the erection of a see of Manchester, provision should be made to secure the application of the whole of the income and revenues of the rectory to the effectual pastoral and ecclesiastical superintendence of the parish of Manchester

Lord BROUGHAM said that the evil could only be met by a legislative remedy.

The Marquis of LANSDOWN said a letter from the Dean, in which he asserted that the facts were incorrectly stated in the petition that the Dean and Chapter made no claim whatever. they only exercised a right which had descended to them

A conversation ensued upon some other subjects, but nothing of public interest arose, and the House adjourned till Thursday.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—TUESDAY.

THE NAVIGATION LAWS

Mr. RICARDO, after a brief review of the Navigation Laws, and the various reciprocity acts, intimated that the motion which he had that evening on the paper was not for a total repeal of the Navigation Laws, but for an inquiry into their operation by a Select Committee of the House. He had a right to demand this inquiry, for he was ready to prove these laws to be of the most mischievous tendency, as regarded trade, manufactures, shipping, and our colonies. He expected that the inquiry would be granted him by the courtesy of the House, considering that the last Committee which sat upon the subject was chiefly composed of gentlemen of the opposite party; and that that committee recommended that the subject should be further investigated, the lateness of the period at which the committee was appointed preventing it from terminating its investigation before the close of the session. In proportion as the Navigation Laws drove foreign vessels from our ports, did they circumscribe the consumption of our country, and limit the operations of the manufacturers. The honourable gentleman then instanced several cases in which the laws in question had operated injuriously and injuriously upon the carrying trade, with a view of showing that they could substitute no laws for the proper regulation of trade and commerce, so efficient as the natural laws which they contravened. The Navigation Laws were another more or less than protection to British shipping, which protection could only be secured to them by raising freights. The evils to which this gave rise were felt by the colonies as well as by the parent country; which latter former suffered also from the greater expense of seamen's instruction. Under existing circumstances, every principle of justice was set at defiance by interfering with the indirect trade of the colonies The exclusive colonial system, of which the Navigation Laws are a type, had lost Brazil to Portugal, and the United States to Great Britain, and had left only Java to Holland, and only Cuba to Spain. Gentlemen opposite might quote against him the proposition of Adam Smith, in reference to this subject; but he would anticipate that by stating that Adam Smith's argument in this respect contradicted his proposition. Admitting that our commercial marine was the nursery of the Royal Navy, it was impolitic and inexpedient to maintain a system which operated injuriously upon, by restricting, that marine. The Navigation Laws had only resulted in securing us the carrying trade of our own country; but many nations employed foreign vessels almost exclusively in their carrying trade—in which cases we were never employed. But British shipping could and would successfully compete with foreign tonnage in the ports of those countries if the protection were removed, which now benefited the shipowners only in our own ports. If the Committee for which he moved were granted him, he was prepared to prove that neither the British shipowner nor British seaman needed any such protection. Indeed, every relaxation of the Navigation Laws had operated favourably as regarded British shipping. Our foreign tonnage protection to shipping had not answered its purpose. The object sought to be attained by it would be accomplished by a thorough free trade principle.

Mr. M. GIBSON, on the part of the Government, recommended the House to agree to the motion. The resolution only asked for an inquiry, and it would be unconstitutional to the given committee any bias. Mr. Ricardo. The House would be continuing a train of useful inquiry, commenced in 1844, and continued in 1845, by appointing this Committee

Several hon. members delivered their opinions upon the subject, after which,

Sir R. PEEL was favourable to the appointment of the Committee. The right honourable Baronet said, "I think there can be no reason why there should not be an inquiry into the operation and effect of the Navigation Laws, or why there should not be an opportunity of ascertaining whether the maintenance of those laws exactly as they at present exist is really for the interest of British commerce, for the interest of British shipping, and, above all, whether it is essential to that consideration which is, and ought to be, paramount to all others.—whether or no the maintenance of those laws is necessary for securing the maritime supremacy of this country. I give my assent to this inquiry, not to give effect to the particular views of the honourable member; it is proposed by an individual member of Parliament, and assented to by the Government—but, being proposed by an individual member of Parliament, I apprehend that those who assent to the inquiry, in no respect are bound to the particular opinions of the hon. member (hear, hear); and I give my assent to this proposal upon the full understanding that it is to be a Committee, not to give effect to any peculiar preconceived notions, but to be a bond fide inquiry into all the bearings of this very important question. (Hear, hear.) It has been remarked in the course of this debate, that the Navigation Laws have endured for 150 years, and take their origin from the Protectorate. I understand the Navigation Laws to be much older than that period. I understand their origin to be almost simultaneous with the existence of a national military marine in this country; and that the Protectorate extended and incorporated the principle in the Navigation Law passed at that period. But whatever may be their antiquity, you have been compelled in this age to abandon, not from theoretical principles, but from necessity." The right hon. Baronet, having traced the periods when relaxations had been made in the Navigation Laws, concluded by giving his advice:—"Let us now (MARCH) examine maturely whether the recent change in your commercial laws does not render some change expedient in your Navigation Laws? But, the paramount consideration of your maritime defence ought not to be disregarded; and I hope that the Government will take care that the Committee is so constituted, and the inquiry so directed, that, come to what conclusion they may, the character of those who compose it, and the deliberate and dispassionate nature of the inquiry, will secure to their final judgment as much of authority in the country as the decision of any Committee can convey." (Hear, hear.)

Mr. HUDSON opposed the motion, being of opinion that any change in the existing state of matters would prove injurious to the British seaman.

Mr. HUTT and Mr. DISRAELI having addressed the House,

Lord J. RUSSELL said—"I think that it would be of great use to the House of Commons, and to the country, that a Committee should be appointed, and that all parties interested should be brought before that Committee, and permitted the liberty of stating their views. (Hear, hear.) It is true that the Government have had the many and great means of obtaining information, but I know of few means that are better for procuring the fullest and best information on any matter, than by the examination of persons deeply and intimately connected with that matter, before a Committee of the House of Commons, where they would be examined by persons holding different views, and advocating different bearings of the question. I think, therefore, that it is probable we may derive great advantages from the inquiries of the Committee of the House of Commons which my honourable friend proposes (Hear, hear.) Let us hear what the restrictions of which they complain are, and see what modifications are practicable, in order that the great shipping interest, which is one of the chief means of advancing the political greatness of this country, may be best promoted. (Hear, hear.) I do not myself agree in the arguments that would lead us back to a system of protection; but I do say that if we are to go on in the way of freedom, it is desirable that the benefits of freedom which are extended to other parties in the community, should be extended to those also who are peculiarly affected by these laws." (Hear, hear.)

Upon a division, the numbers were—

For the motion	.. ..	.. 155
Against it	.. ..	.. 61
Majority	.. ..	.. —94

PENALTIES UPON CATHOLICS.—Mr. WATSON obtained leave to bring in a bill, similar to that of last Session, for the further repeal of enactments imposing pains and penalties upon her Majesty's Roman Catholic subjects on account of their religion.

CORPORAL PUNISHMENTS IN THE NAVY.—A motion of Mr. Hume's for returns connected with the infliction of corporal punishments in the navy led to a rather warm discussion, in the course of which it appeared that there was a difference of opinion amongst the Lords of the Admiralty upon the subject, and eventually Mr. Hume withdrew his motion, in order to bring it forward hereafter, in a modified form.

The House adjourned at half-past twelve.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—WEDNESDAY.

THE FACTORIES BILL.

The House met to-day at twelve o'clock.

Mr. FIELDEN moved the second reading of the bill for limiting the hours of labour of young persons, from thirteen to eighteen years of age, in factories, to ten hours a day.

Mr. HUME strenuously objected to the bill, on the ground that the working classes ought to have the uncontrolled employment of their own time and industry. He therefore moved, as an amendment, that the bill be read a second time that day six months.

Mr. HOWARD seconded the amendment.

Sir G. GREY stated that this was an open question with the Government—a question on which each of its members might vote according to his own feelings. He contended that if this bill passed, there would be a most unequal distribution of labour, but he did not believe that the predictions of the opponents of the measure would be realised. He wished the hours of labour to be restricted, not so much with reference to health, as with reference to the training and relaxation of persons employed in factories. As to adults, there was no positive restriction on adult male labour in the bill, but practically the effect would be that the work of all males working in mills would be restricted to ten hours. He would, under these circumstances, vote for the second reading of the bill, but would propose some amendments in committee

A long debate ensued, which was ultimately adjourned to next Wednesday.

It being six o'clock, the Speaker adjourned the House without putting the question.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—THURSDAY.

The sitting to-day was a short one, and the House was principally occupied in the presentation of petitions, none of which presented any point of particular interest.

The Chelsea Pensioners Bill was read a third time and passed.

HOUSE OF COMMONS. -THURSDAY.

RAILWAY COMPANIES.—In answer to a question by Mr. Thornely, Mr. M. GIBSON said a bill was in preparation, and would shortly be laid on the table of the House, to enable railway and other public companies to wind up their accounts

IRELAND.

Mr. S. CRAWFORD, in a speech of considerable length, moved the following resolution: That it appears to this House, from the facts of various committees and commissions, that the system generally adopted in times past in the letting and management of landed property in Ireland, has been one of the main causes of the poverty and distressed state of that country, and the disordered state of its social relations; and that no measures can be effectual in producing a demand for labour, or improving the condition of the people, which shall not include such an amendment of the laws of landlord and tenant as shall give to the improving tenant in occupation a sufficient permanency of tenure, or else establish the tenant's right to claim by law full compensation for all beneficial outlay by the expenditure of his labour and capital on the premises in his occupation.

Sir J. Burrows, Mr. Tuite, Lord Castlereagh, and Col. Conolly, addressed the House, and

Mr. LABOUCHERE objected to such a question being dealt with by a general resolution; he stated that Government would shortly lay on the table a bill to regulate the relation of landlord and tenant in Ireland, and concluded by moving the previous question

Mr. S. CRAWFORD gave notice that he should bring in a bill himself on the subject.

In answer to a question from Mr. SMITH O'BRIEN,

Mr. LABOUCHERE said he should bring in the bill he referred to before Easter.

The motion was then withdrawn.

Mr. AGLIONBY moved for, and obtained leave to bring in a bill to amend the General Enclosure Act.

Leave was given to Mr. S. CRAWFORD to bring in a bill for the better securing of Irish Poor-rates

Mr. CORNELIUS O'BRIEN moved for certain returns relative to the conduct of Captain Wynn and other public officers employed by the Board of Works in connection with the presentments of various sessions in the county of Clare, and gave notice that on the production of those papers he would move they be referred to a select committee.

A long discussion arose, in the course of which Mr LABOUCHERE defended Captain Wynn, and eventually the returns were ordered

Mr SHAFTS moved his bill for regulating the proceedings of the Commissioners of Railways, and for amending the laws relating to Railways. The honourable gentleman went into a long and minute statement of the details of the measure, which principally affects the preliminary proceedings of railway companies in obtaining their acts, &c., and forms and constitutes the new Board of Railway Commissioners, created subsequent to the close of last session.

The bill was read a first time, and the House adjourned at eleven o'clock.

SKETCHES IN THE WEST OF IRELAND.—BY MR. JAMES MAHONY.

Uncoffin'd, unshrouded, his bleak corpse they bore,
From the spot where he died on the Cabin's wet floor,
To a hole which they dug in the garden close by;
Thus a brother hath died—thus a Christian must lie!

'Twas a horrible end and a harrowing tale,
To chill the strong heart—to strike revelry pale.
No disease o'er this Victim could mastery claim,
'Twas Famine alone mark'd his skeleton frame!

The bones of his Grandsire and Father too, rest
In the old Abbey-yard, by the holy rites blest.
Their last hours were sooth'd by affections fond cares,
Their last sighs were breath'd midst their Friends tearful prayers!

Unshriven, untended, this man pass'd away.
Ere Time streak'd one hair of his dark locks with gray,
His requiem the wild wind, and Hell's hoarse roar,
As its swollen waves dash on the rock-girded shore. C. C. T—.

FUNERAL AT SHEPPERTON LAKES.

The accounts from the Irish provincial papers continue to detail the unmitigated sufferings of the starving peasantry. Indeed, they are stated to be on the increase, notwithstanding the very great exertion of public bodies and individuals to assuage their pressure.

With the object of ascertaining the accuracy of the frightful statements received from the West, and of placing them in unexaggerated fidelity before our readers, a few days since, we commissioned our Artist, Mr. James Mahony, of Cork, to visit a seat of extreme suffering, viz., Skibbereen and its vicinity; and we now submit to our readers the graphic results of his journey, accompanied by such descriptive notes as he was enabled to collect whilst sketching the fearful incidents and desolate localities; premising merely, that our Artist must already have been somewhat familiar with such scenes of suffering in his own locality, (Cork), so that he cannot be supposed to have taken an extreme view of the greater misery at Skibbereen.

"I started from Cork, by the mail (says our informant), for Skibbereen and saw little until we came to Clonakilty, where the coach stopped for breakfast; and here, for the first time, the horrors of the poverty became visible, in the vast number of famished poor, who flocked around the coach to beg alms: amongst them was a woman carrying in her arms the corpse of a fine child, and making the most distressing appeal to the passengers for aid to enable her to purchase a coffin and bury her dear little baby. This horrible spectacle induced me to make some inquiry about her, when I learned from the people of the hotel that each day brings dozens of such applicants into the town. (See the Sketch.)

"After leaving Clonakilty, each step that we took westward brought fresh evidence of the truth of the reports of the misery, as we either met a funeral or a coffin at every hundred yards, until we approached the picturesque country of the Shepperton Lakes. (See the Sketch.) Here, from the decrease of numbers at the funerals, none having more than eight or ten attendants, and many only two or three.

"We next reached Skibbereen, a general view of which I send you from Clover Hill House, the residence of J. Macarthy Downing, Esq.; and, it being then late, I rested until Monday, when, with the valuable aid of Dr. D. Donovan, and his assistant, Mr. Crowley, I witnessed such scenes of misery and privation as I trust it may never be again my lot to look upon. Up to this morning, I, like a large portion, I fear, of the community, looked on the diaries of Dr. Donovan, as published in The Cork Southern Reporter, to be highly-coloured pictures, doubtless, intended for a good and humane purpose; but I can now, with perfect confidence, say that neither pen nor pencil ever could portray the misery and horror, at this moment, to be witnessed in Skibbereen. We first proceeded to Bridgetown, a portion of which is shown in the right hand distance of the sketch; and there I saw the dying, the living, and the dead, lying indiscriminately upon the same floor, without anything between them and the cold earth, save a few miserable rags upon them. To point to any particular house as a proof of this would be a waste of time, as all were in the same state; and, not a single house out of 500 could boast of being free from death and fever, though several could be pointed out with the dead lying close to the living for the space of three or four, even six days, without any effort being made to remove the bodies to a last resting place.

OLD CHAPEL-LANE, SKIBBEREEN.

"After leaving this abode of death, we proceeded to High-street, or Old Chapel-lane (See the Sketch), and there found one house, without door or window, filled with destitute people lying on the bare floor; and one, fine, tall, stout country lad, who had entered some hours previously to find shelter from the piercing cold, lay here dead amongst others likely soon to follow him. The appeals to the feelings and professional skill of my kind attendants here became truly heart-rending; and so distressed Dr. Donovan, that he begged me not to go into the house, and to avoid coming into contact with the people surrounding the doorway.

"We next proceeded to the Chapel-yard, to see the hut, of which Dr. Donovan gives the following graphic account in his diary:—

'On my return home, I remembered that I had yet a visit to pay; having in the morning received a ticket to see six members of one family, named Barrett, who had been turned out of the cabin in which they lodged, in the neighbourhood of Old Chapelyard; and who had struggled to this burying-ground, and literally entombed themselves in a small watch-house that was built for the shelter of those who were engaged in guarding against exhumation by the doctors, when more respect was paid to the dead than is at present the case. This shed is exactly seven feet long, by about six in breadth. By the side of the western wall is a long, newly-made grave; by either gable are two of shorter dimensions, which have been recently tenanted; and near the hole that serves as a doorway is the last resting-place of two or three children; in fact, this hut is surrounded by a rampart of human bones, which have accumulated to such a height that the threshold, which was originally on a level with the ground, is now two feet beneath it. In this horrible den, in the midst of a mass of human putrefaction, six individuals, males and females, labouring under most malignant fever, were huddled together, as closely as were the dead in the graves around.

'At the time (eleven o'clock at night) that I went to visit these poor sufferers, it was blowing a perfect hurricane, and such groans of roaring wind and rain I never remember to have heard.

'I was accompanied by my assistant, Crowley, and we took with us some bread, tea and sugar; on reaching this vault, I thrust my head through the hole of entrance, and had immediately to draw back, so intolerable was the effluvium; and, though rendered callous by a companionship for many years with disease and death, yet I was completely unnerved at the humble scene of suffering and misery that was presented to my view; six fellow creatures were almost buried alive in this filthy sepulchre. When they heard my voice, one called out, 'Is that the Priest?' another, 'Is that the Doctor?' The mother of the family begged in the most earnest manner that I would have them removed, or else that they would 'rot together;' and they all implored that we would give them drink. Mr. Crowley produced the tea and sugar, but they said it was of no use to them, as they had no fire or place to light it in, and that what they wanted was water; that they had put a jug under the droppings from the roof, but would not have drink enough for the night. The next day I got the consent of the Poor Law Guardians to have my patients removed from this abode of the dead to the fever hospital, and they are since improving."

WOMAN BEGGING AT CLONAKILTY.

HARRINGTON'S HUT.

SKETCHES IN THE WEST OF IRELAND.—BY MR. JAMES MAHONY.

"To complete my melancholy visit to this scene of horror, and to visit every corner of Skibbereen, next morning, accompanied by a Mr. Everett, whose knowledge of the country I found most useful, I started for Ballidichob, and learned upon the road that we should come to a hut or cabin in the parish of Aghadoe, on the property of Mr. Long, where four people had lain dead for six days; and, upon arriving at the hut, the abode of Tim Harrington, we found this to be true; for there lay the four bodies, and a fifth was passing to the same bourne. On hearing our voices, the sinking man made an effort to reach the door, and ask for drink or fire; he fell in the doorway; there, in all probability to lie; as the living cannot be prevailed to assist in the interments, for fear of taking the fever.

SKULL, FROM THE BALLIDICHOB.

"We next got to Skull, where, by the attention of Dr. Traill, vicar of the parish (and whose humanity at the present moment is beyond all praise), we witnessed almost indescribable in-door horrors. In the street, however, we had the best opportunity of judging of the condition of the people; for here, from three to five hundred women, with money in their hands, were seeking to buy food; whilst a few of the Government officers doled out Indian meal to them in their turn. One of the women told me she had been standing there since daybreak, seeking to get food for her family at home.

"This food, it appeared, was being doled out in miserable quantities, at 'famine prices,' to the neighbouring poor, from a stock lately arrived in a sloop, with a Government steamship to protect its cargo of 50 tons; whilst the population amounts to 27,000; so that you may calculate what were the feelings of the disappointed mass.

"In my way out of the town, I made the accompanying Sketch; and, here, again, I had an opportunity of witnessing the efforts of the Vicar's family to relieve the affliction around them; and we met his daughters returning from their work of charity in the poorest portion of the town.

"Having returned to Skibbereen, my next object was to seek out the truth of the following extract from Dr. Donovan's Diary, as published in the Cork Southern Reporter, of Jan. 26:—

"'A man of the name of Leahey died in the parish of Dromdaleague about a fortnight ago; his wife and two children remained in the house until the putrescent exhalations from the body drove them from their companionship with the dead; in a day or two after, some persons in passing the man's cabin, had their attention attracted by a loud snarling, and on entering, found the gnawed and mangled skeleton of Leahey contended for by hungry dogs.'"

"This, I need not tell you, I looked upon as designed for an effect; and so I started for Dromdaleague, to reach which we had to pass through the miserable parish of Cahera, where, unless something be done for the poor, and that quickly and effectively, the result will be awful."

Here the report must terminate for the present. Next week we shall complete our painfully interesting series of Illustrations.

SKIBBEREEN, FROM CLOVER-HILL.

THE HUT OR WATCH-HOUSE IN THE OLD CHAPEL YARD.

IRELAND.

THE PROGRESS OF STARVATION.

The Irish papers continue to record lamentable cases of starvation. The details are so similar that we do not think it necessary to repeat them.

At Bantry (Cork), on Tuesday week, there were held no less than fourteen inquests, the verdict in each being death by starvation.

The Cork Reporter of Saturday says—"The duty of publishing reports of inquests held on persons who have 'died by starvation' has now become so frequent, and such numbers are daily reaching us from every part of the county, that the limits of our space do not admit of their publication. Our reporter sends particulars of fifteen of such cases from Bantry yesterday, and mentions that twenty more had occurred during the week, but inquests could not be held, and we received this morning from Mallow reports of eleven inquests held by Mr. Richard Jones on persons who had died from want of food. Communications pour in from every district, a tithe of which we could not find room for, stating similar appalling facts."

The Sligo Champion reports sixteen inquests, in all of which the verdicts were "Deaths from starvation."

FOOD RIOTS IN CORK.—Yesterday week, the city of Cork was much disturbed by a body of food rioters, consisting of nearly 1000 persons. It was said that their first intention was to attack the workhouse, and seize on its store of provisions; they did not, however, make any attempt upon it, but proceeded to several of the bakers' shops, which they broke into and plundered. They were finally dispersed by a bayonet charge by the police. Many of the rioters were made prisoners. Upwards of a dozen were taken to the Police-office next morning, charged with breaking glass in the bakers' shops, and running off with the bread exposed for sale there. Some of them were sentenced to terms varying from a fortnight to a month's imprisonment. A small body of rioters, emboldened, perhaps, by the impunity with which they had escaped on Friday, made their appearance on Saturday morning in Shandon-street. They were all persons from the country, and they did not bear any of those marks of destitution which pleaded some excuse for the conduct of some of the rioters of Friday. Whilst proceeding down Shannon-street, they encountered a woman who was carrying a large basket of bread from Mr. W. Casey's bakery. They knocked the woman down, and quickly rifled the basket of its contents. Further up the street they came in contact with a man carrying a load of bread from the same establishment, who met with similar treatment at their hands. The rioters then marched off in triumph, each carrying a supply of bread sufficient for two or three days."

INCREASE OF FEVER.—The Central Board of Health for Ireland held their first meeting on Monday afternoon at the office of the Poor-law Commission, in the Custom-house, Dublin. The most afflicting accounts of the spread of "famine fever" were laid before the board from various parts of the country. It is a fact deserving of attention, that the mortality is greater in one town in Ulster than in any part of the south or west. In the workhouse of Lurgan, one of the principal seats of the linen manufacture in the county of Armagh, the deaths have increased to a most alarming extent. In the first week of January they amounted to thirty-five; but last week the deaths in the workhouse, containing less than 800 persons, amounted to ninety-five! The board have directed a medical officer to proceed to Lurgan, and report upon the state of the workhouse there. Another medical officer has been sent to Tullamore, King's County, where fever has increased to an alarming extent.

FORGERY ON THE BANK OF IRELAND.—On Saturday, at College-street Police-office, Dublin, Mr. Henry Lamaure, a well-known stockbroker, residing in College-green, was charged by Mr. Richard Clayton Brown Clayton, a gentleman possessing large property in Ireland and in England, with having fraudulently procured the transfer of £9000 stock into his (Mr. Lannaze's) own name, and for having made away with the same. Mr. Clayton's father died in 1845, leaving the stock. The defendant was his broker, and he told the prosecutor that the stock should be transferred to him (Mr. L.) before he could invest it in the name of Mr. Clayton. This was done, and then the defendant said he had invested it in the name of Mr. Clayton, who believed such to be the fact, as the interest was regularly paid up to the present time. A day or two since Mr. Clayton went to the bank, and found the money all gone. After the evidence was heard, the defendant was sent for trial, but allowed to stand out on bail

South New Potatoes.—Several fields of new potatoes, near Limerick, were examined last week, and found perfectly healthy.

Murder in Leitrim.—On the night of the 29th ult., an armed party of twelve or fourteen men broke into the house of John Duffy, a farmer, near Drumshanbo, and demanded arms. On being refused, they proceeded to search the house, when Duffy and his son attempted to prevent them. The ruffians assaulted both, and the son received so violent a blow on the side of the head that he died before morning. He was only 18 years of age. A verdict of "Wilful murder" was returned by the Coroner's Jury which investigated the case.

The Weather and the Corn Markets. Much snow has fallen in Ireland. The canals and smaller rivers are quite frozen over. The inland mails were all behind time at Dublin on Tuesday morning. The Cork mail, due at half-past three o'clock, at which hour it arrived by railway from Kildare, had not reached that town when the train was leaving for Dublin. The state of the weather affected the corn market, but not seriously. Wheat and barley on Tuesday fully supported Friday's prices, and oats were 1s. per barrel dearer.

Trial for Forgery.—The case of "The Queen, at the prosecution of the Trustees of the Charities of Joseph v. William Grace," which was removed by certiorari from the commissioner's Court, by Gunning, into the Queen's Bench, came on for trial, last week, before the Chief Justice. The prisoner, late High Sheriff of the city of Kilkenny, was indicted for forgery, with the intent to defraud the trustees of the charities of the late Mr. Evans, of Kilkenny; the charge was varied in different counts. A number of witnesses having been examined to sustain the prosecution, the jury brought in a verdict of "Guilty."

The Repeal Association. The meeting of this Association on Monday was very scantily attended. The Rent received only amounted to £29 9s. 6d. A letter was read from Mr. O'Connell, enclosing £5 10s., being the month's subscription of himself, his four sons, and 30 grandchildren, towards the insolvent exchequer of Conciliation Hall. The letter was chiefly devoted to a commentary upon the Government measures for Ireland. The following are the essential portions of it. Mr. O'Connell says,—"I am sheartily glad to inform you that my prospect of relief I mean of substantial and compre.ensive relief from Parliament is, in my judgment, daily diminishing. There is, to be sure, a great deal of sympathy and good will, and both in and out of the House; and generally, a very sincere desire that something efficient should be done to relieve the horrible destitution of the Irish people; but there are also many obstacles, and an unwillingness to place upon the British people the burdens absolutely necessary to give efficient relief to Irish misery. In short, there is great individual and personal sympathy for our national distress. There is abundant individual humanity and charity the noblest generosity is evinced by multitudes of the English. They are making large, very large, pecuniary sacrifices; and, as far as personal goodness and charity go, nothing can exceed the benevolence exhibited by many classes towards Ireland. I am afraid of not being able sufficiently to express my strong and lively sense of English humanity and generosity. If the exhibition of these qualities by individuals could save Ireland in her present misery, we should be saved. But I cannot conceal from myself, and I ought not to conceal from the Irish nation, that there is, alas, but little prospect of substantial relief on that—I will call it by its right name—enormously large scale which is absolutely necessary to prevent hundreds of thousands of the Irish people from perishing of famine and pestilence. The Government measures, as far as they go, are good, and their intention to relieve by these measures is apparent; but the measures themselves in a great degree fall short of sufficient magnitude. It is essentially necessary to have food in the utmost abundance poured in, so as to extinguish the famine prices which devour the people. I trust in God that my health will enable me to take that active part which I desire, on behalf of the famishing people."

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

Sunday, Feb. 14. Quinquagesima Sunday. Shrove Sunday. Valentine.
Monday, 15.—New Moon at 11h. 26m. a.m.
Tuesday, 16.—Shrove Tuesday.
Wednesday, 17.—Ash Wednesday.
Thursday, 18.—Cambridge Lent Term divides, at Noon.
Friday, 19.—The Sun enters Pisces.
Saturday, 20.—Jupiter souths at 6h. 22m. p.m., and sets 2h. 22m. after midnight.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE, FOR THE WEEK ENDING FEBRUARY 20.

Sunday		Monday		Tuesday		Wednesday		Thursday		Friday		Saturday
M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A
h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m
0 49	1 16	1 41	2 4	2 27	2 53	3 13	3 36	3 57	4 19	4 41	5 8	5 24	5 47

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"A Constant Reader" is mistaken, and is recommended to read the note at page 98.
"A Watchman," Holywell.—Will our Correspondent repeat his question?
"Thos. Jones."—You may shoot at a mark, or at "sparrows," or other small birds, without a license, but you must not commit a "trespass" in so doing. You may carry a gun without a game certificate, but the fact of your carrying a gun does not confer the privilege to enter another man's land.
"Alfred Paris." Members of the Jockey Club are in the habit of wearing the coat and button of the Club at Newmarket, and at Race Meetings generally. Members of Hunting Clubs, in like manner, wear their Club costume and button on occasions connected with the Chase.
"E. B.," Ratcliffe.—Irish.
"J. T. E."—"Instructions in Hawking," by the late Sir John Sebright, is a practical work.
", B." is thanked; but we cannot find room for the Lines.
"J. W."—We cannot but recommend our Correspondent to employ a Solicitor for the recovery of his female property in one of our colonies.
"J. C. S." suggests that some of our Public Institutions should, "for a fixed period," devote their receipts to the relief of the distressed Irish and Scotch. The Proprietors of some of our Theatres have already taken this benevolent step.—Another Correspondent, with equal charity, observes: "Lord John Russell sends £1,000,000 to Ireland," and asks, "What are the poor of Old England to do?"
"Puzzle," Somerton, is thanked for the Charade; but we have not room for such nuts.
"S. B." Ringsland, and "R. W."—We do not interfere in disputes at Cards.
"G. T. K." Ruddle—declined
"H. R." The "Metropolitan Magazine" bears the imprint of Messrs. Saunders and Otley, Conduit-street.
"Octavia H." is correct as to the period of Lord Morpeth's departure for the United States; but, we do not remember the length of his Lordship's visit.
"An Observer," Portsmouth.—The Sketch from Rhubroen is a too-female.
"M. L. S." Send Engravers' names and we will proof you.
"An Old Subscriber." The Lady's address is Stratton-street, Piccadilly.
"A. H." should advertise, with qualifications: his passion with his family is, however, disinclination to him.
"M. G." does not state whether the discovery is a recent one; if so, their contribution may be acceptable.
"Kappa."—The little work, "Punctuation Reduced to a System," will be found useful.
"R. R. R."—The cockle-shell or scallop was anciently worn in the hats of pilgrims, as the sign of having been a pilgrimage to St. James of Compostella, in Galicia, and not of a pilgrimage to the Holy Land. (See a capital paper on the subject, by Mr. Roach Smith, in the "Journal of the Archæological Association for October, 1845.")
"Inquirer" should obtain the interest of a Member of Parliament.
"A Constant Subscriber," near Norwich, is thanked for the hint; but the subject, we think, would only be attractive to a class.
"R. T.," to ensure the Friday's Markets, should order the latest edition of our Journal
"Laura Charlatte."—"The Stammerer's Guide"
"C. J. G." Bury.—"Taylor's Short-hand, improved by Harding."
"Z. Y." having obtained the data of the conviction, should address his inquiry to the Under Home Secretary of State.
"Z" Paulico. -Incorrect.
"An Old Subscriber."—"The beatiful poem of "Bubi; a Tale of the Sea," is by Bishop Mant.
"R. B.," Whitechapel.—No. 134 (in print), of the Illustrated London News contains Engravings of Shakspeare's Jug and Cave, with ample details
"F. P."—Decined. The question is a "no" but is not sufficiently facete.
"W. C. O." -We cannot speak as to the "Frugal Investment Association."
"Impromptur" is thanked for the hint.
"T. G." Church Gurley.—"Jarvis's Italian Confectioner," with plates, is a capital work. Soyer's new work on Cookery contains several first-rate novelties in Confectionery.
"C. W. B." Swadon Declined.
"Waldensis" is thanked for the drawing, which shall be engraved.
"Rusticus" will find a good account of the Electric Telegraph in the "Companion to the Almanac for 1843," pages 7 to 14. The recent improvements and applications in the Telegraph, subsequent to 1842, will be found in the "Year-books of Facts," 1844 to 1847.
"E. D."—We do not remember
"D. C." should watch the Report of the Registrar-General to ascertain the effect of acts re cold upon aged persons. He will be interested with Easton's column on "Human Longevity" in ——, age, &c. of 1712 persons who attained a century and upwards, from A.D. 66 to 1799.
"M. S. C." Liverpool.—The only work on which we have seen the dimensions of the London Theatres named, is "A Companion to the Theatres," now out of print. In this volume, the Italian Opera Pit is stated, (before staffs), to have held 900 persons; that was in 1809.
The Patent Mile Index.—We have received a letter from Mr. Marcus Davis, of Islington, stating that he is the first person who invented and patented a machine that was brought inside the vehicle, differing but slightly from Mr. Von Uster's, described in our Journal of last week.
"An Inhabitant of Kingsland" is recommended to address his statement to Mr. Mackinnon, M.P.: it would prove a good case in the event of the hon. gentleman again submitting to Parliament his "Smoke Nuisance" Bill.
"Knotty Ash" should avoid all lotteries. The No. may be obtained by order of any Bookseller
"Subs. ab Insulo" is thanked for the information.
"M.S." The novel of "The Exquisite," in 3 vols., is published at 31*s. 6d.: apply to any Bookseller*
"Optician," Hartlepool.—Apply to Mr. Van Voorst, 1, Paternoster-row.
"V. H. P." Bristol.—Monk's "English Counties" is a work of accredited worth, though not of very recent date.
"J. W. B."—See "Chatfield on the Darker Ayes."
"Tom's" questions, we must decline to reply to.
"S. E." should write again.
"Carrion Crow," Exeter. Mr. Waterton has not lately published any work upon Ornithology.
"Nettle." -See "The Language of Flowers," by Thomas Miller (just published.)
"G. T. F. S.," Cheltenham, is thanked for the "Predictions;" though we have not room to reprint them.
"W. S.," Ladgate Hill, informs us that the authoress of "Too Old Men's Tales" is a Mrs. March. Our Correspondent must be in error as to this being generally known, when the incognita is preserved by the Publishers of the work.
"Sisters." The 16*th Lancers arrived at Dorchesterd on or about the* 1*st January,* 1847; they are now at Canterbury, and are next for Hounslow, and London duty.
"J. F. G." The surname of Prince Albert's family is said to be "Burns."
"Tom Moore."—The lines by Lord Byron have been set to music, but there is room now for a good version.
"Bass-Chanter."—Any musical composer of eminence, would be too glad to accept of a good libretto for an original tragic opera. The arrangements of these affairs are now more in the hands of the great Music Publishers, than the individual risk of artists and managers.
"W. R. T." The original paternal coat in the seal sent us, is the first quartering. The impression is so unlatinical, we cannot determine to whom it belongs.
"An Enquirer."—It would be more courteous to prefix "Madame."
"L. S. L." The arms of William Shakspeare are engraved in "Burke's Heraldic Illustrations."
"A Constant Reader."—The heraldic terms are pronounced according to our English manner. From their great antiquity, they are considered in the same light as many of the old Norman-French expressions which frequently occur in legal phraseology.
"Coronensis." We will endeavour next week to supply the information desired
"C. C. S."—You must apply for a parochial marriage certificate to the parochial Minister.
"An Australian Settler," Glasgow. The information as to the manufacture of Best-root Sugar probably, next week.
"A. A. E." Next week.
"W. J. A" may purchase the play of "The Lady of Lyons" for a trifling sum.
"A Constant Reader" is recommended to forward the Clothes for the Irish Poor to the Office of the British Association, to their depôt, 137, Leadenhall street.
"G. B. H.," Everton, is thanked; but we have not room.
"A Subscriber."—The postage of a letter to New South Wales, (to be paid in advance), is 6*d. by private ship; and* 1*s. by packet.*
"A. B." Wigton, should obtain the interest of a Member of Parliament.
"C.," Jersey. An entire set of our Journal may be purchased in Volumes, bound, at 18*s. each; except Vol.* 1, 21*s.*
"Fairplay," Abington.—A Servant can legally demand a Character of his or her last Master or Mistress
"A Medical Pupil."—The Ether inhaled in Painless Operations is the Sulphuric.
"O. P."—Is our Correspondent duly licensed to sell Spirits and let Horses?
"W. L. G." should consult a Solicitor
"G. H. W."—Lord Byron's "Manfred" was dramatised some years since, we believe, at Covent Garden Theatre, during the brief management of Mr. Bunn.
"W. P.," Crossford.—It was the Monster Bell for York Minster that was exhibited at the Baker-street Bazaar.
"W. H. C." Probus.—We have not room for the Arithmetical Puzzle.
"F. Z.," Brecon. We cannot give advice in your case.
"Julius Alphonse."—There are about 200 horses kept at the Brewery of Messrs. Barclay, Perkins, and Company.
"The Wife of a Soldier" should apply at the Peninsular Steam Navigation Company's Office, St. Mary Axe.
"French-master" should consult one of the publications developing the System of Fourrier.
"S. S. B." should apply for advice to a Police Magistrate.

BOOKS, &c., RECEIVED DURING THE WEEK.

Nursery Rhymes, Tales, and Jingles.——Work-Table Magazine. February.——Dearnley on the Inefficient Administration of the Law.——Nelson's Statistics of Crime.——The Battle of Nibley Green.——Knight's Weekly Volume. VII. and VIII.——Mackenzie's Hand-book of Billiards.——History of Rome, by Miss Corner.

Music. Manual of Music.——The Book of Melody.——The Polka Waltzes. By H. G. Lake.——The Uxbridge Polka.

ANSWERS TO THE RIDDLES, IN "EVERY BODY'S COLUMN."

The Picture Axiom may be thus explained from the hieroglyphics, going by the sound rather than the spelling: "Die ones are fame mouse for row ten duity of corporation."

The Negro's enquiry of "What liquor is best for a cough?" may be answered by the opinion that "Spanish liquor is."

THE ILLUSTRATED NEW TESTAMENT.

On Friday next will be published, the

ILLUSTRATED NEW TESTAMENT,

With Engravings from Designs

BY KENNY MEADOWS.

Published at the Office of the Illustrated London News, 198, Strand

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 13, 1847.

The Debate of Monday evening was chiefly remarkable for some very direct speaking from English members on the conduct of Irish Landlords generally, and their opposition to a real Poor-Law particularly. The utter confusion into which properties and holdings appear to have fallen in Ireland produces scenes that, though capable of a very natural explanation, do not look well in their outward circumstances. The Government officers in Ireland report the names of noblemen and gentlemen as defaulters to the rates, in districts where the most intense misery prevails: the workhouses are actually unfed, while rich men refuse to pay their quota of the public burden. What is the defence of this cruel incongruity? The properties have got so entangled among lessors and part proprietors that no one can tell who is really liable for them, and thus those who are rated in the books positively refuse to pay. This is a grievous state of things; but the fault is rather with the law than individuals, or rather individuals are very much what the laws make them. It is not a desire to escape the outlay of money that induces this refusal, for the same individuals have kept the workhouses open for months with their own funds, while they would not pay a farthing to certain parts of the rates. Refusals of rates in cases of doubtful liability, are neither few nor rare in England; but the mass of real property in the country has long been definitely settled, and distinctly apportioned. The defective state of the laws relating to land is one of the evils that complicate the difficulty Ireland presents; and it is, perhaps, among the chief of them. But the remarks of Mr. Hastie and Sir Benjamin Hall, in the debate on Monday, were gall and wormwood to the Irish landed interest, who have hitherto been accustomed to hear very different language from the Legislature. There were no laws it would not pass at their request, and no abuse it would not defend for them; but the use they have made of these extraordinary powers having put plunged themselves (by their own confession) into inextricable debt and difficulty, and their dependents into the gulf of famine, obliging the Exchequer of England to come to the rescue of both, they now hear some very bitter accusations. A very severe account of their stewardship is exacted; and, though present assistance is afforded, it is accompanied by admonition, to which the spoiled children of the English Legislature, as the Irish Landlords have been, are not at all accustomed. It was received with great indignation; few things are more distasteful than censure and good advice.

The debate was, moreover, remarkable for a tilt, or passage of arms, between Mr. Roebuck and the Chancellor of the Exchequer, in which the former, with great difficulty, extracted a short "financial statement" of what we are spending—the pertinacity with which the information was insisted on, ruffling the dignity of the Minister excessively. The pursuit of knowledge under difficulties was never better exemplified than during the efforts made by Mr. Roebuck, to get something comprehensible in figures; but this is the result; in relief there has been expended, between September and January, £2,000,000 sterling; in the last month, £1,000,000 more; presentments have been accepted by the Treasury, to the amount of £2,500,000. "What further sum would be wanted it was impossible to say."

We are in the midst of a war expenditure, fighting famine with gold; but the "grim feature" is a bodiless foe, and hardly yields to material weapons. Just and equal laws—the fair responsibility of property, for the life at least of those who make it valuable—would do more against it than whole Exchequers.

Tuesday evening was occupied by a discussion on the Navigation Laws, raised by Mr. Ricardo, who moved for a Select Committee (which was granted) to inquire into their operation: he adduced some striking facts as to their inutility. As a system, they have been in continual decay, at least during the present century; we have been obliged to relax them in favour of one nation after another, by treaties of reciprocity and otherwise, and the results are not against us.

The systems once common to all nations, by which they each endeavoured to gain advantages at the expense of others, without rendering any in return, are dying out of themselves. The modern principle rather is that it is better to have rich communities to trade with than poor ones. For ages the British Parliament, on principle, endeavoured to keep down manufactures and trade in the Colonies of North America; and most fortunate is it for us that it wholly failed. As a rich and powerful State, America returns us more in every way than if she was the most obedient of settlements, bound to us by the red tape of Downing-street.

On Wednesday the Factory Bill was debated, it standing for the second reading. Nothing novel was elicited by the discussion in the shape of argument; but it was made more courageous in disposition to deal with the subject. It is proved that in a term of years, the hours of labour do not average ten hours a day, periods of dull demand compelling "short time." Why not, it is asked, spread the toil more equally over the year? To prophecies of danger and destruction to our trade, it is replied that such prophecies have always been made in the case of every limitation, and have as often failed; we go on improving against all theory and principle, just as men live on in complete contradiction to the rules of medicine, according to which they ought to have died long ago. The Government is divided in opinion on the measure, and it is left an "open question," each member of the Ministry acting on his individual opinions. The Premier and the Home Secretary are favourable to it; the Chancellor of the Exchequer and Mr. Labouchere oppose it. The debate was adjourned.

Lord George Bentinck's "comprehensive plan" for the improvement of Ireland might have been got rid of by an exercise of the Royal prerogative. It is a money bill; that is, it involves the issuing from the Treasury large sums of public money: no Government can make itself responsible for all the measures that might be proposed by individual Members, when they require draughts on the Exchequer, and consequent increase of taxation. So the Constitution imposes on the amateur improvers of their age the necessity of procuring the consent of the Crown, i.e. of the Ministry, before any vote can be taken on such a measure. As a matter of courtesy, the zealous legislator is allowed to introduce his bill, and explain it; but if the Government does not adopt it as its own, the "prerogative of the Crown" is put in force, and the act is quietly extinguished. At least such a course is open to the Ministry if it chooses; but the bolder step is generally preferred, of meeting the case on its merits, and discussing it like any other measure. Lord George Bentinck's plan is one of that class of measures that are "too good," that propose to do too much; and coupling it with his Lordship's sanguine speech, it is impossible to get rid of the impression that there is something Utopian about it. Yet thus much is practical enough; a Government could always, by passing its word as a security, dig a channel, as it were, into which capital would flow; and capital is want of in Ireland. The argument that money should always be left to find its own way to the best investments, fails woefully sometimes; English capital left to itself, has made most grievous mistakes, and rushed as if the great object were to get rid of it—into the most rotten schemes. The holders of great masses of money, the capitalists by profession, as they may be called, are astute enough, and make the "turn of the market" upon everything; they can mark the ebbs and flows of the golden tide that are invisible to the world at large. It is the possessors of small surplus capitals, anxious for better incomes than can be got from the public funds, who are always ready to be drawn away by the mania of the day. Knowledge of what they are embarking in is not to be found in one in ten of them. Nothing but the most entire ignorance could have blinded the thousands to the bubble schemes of 1825, of Mexican and Peruvian mine celebrity. A Government might fairly take on itself to direct this kind of capital into a new field, and this is what Lord G. Bentinck purposes to do. But he has begun on too large a scale, for the present juncture, at all events.

The debate on the second reading was to have been taken on Thursday evening, but political difficulties have intervened. At a meeting of the Liberal party on that day, Lord John Russell declared he should resign if Lord George Bentinck's scheme secured a majority. At this moment, an abrupt change would be most inconvenient, especially in Ireland; so it is understood that a sufficient number of Irish Members have determined to vote against the plan, as it will prevent any risk of a break-up of the Cabinet. Under these circumstances, the second reading is deferred.

RESTORATION OF THE CHAPEL ON THE BRIDGE, WAKEFIELD.

(To the Editor.)

Having seen, in the last Number of the Illustrated London News, a short account of the Chapel on Wakefield Bridge, I am induced to inform you that, in removing the rubbish from the ruin, preparatory to the restoration, portions of all the mouldings, I believe, have been found; so that it is hoped that the restored building will, in its exterior, exactly resemble the old Chapel, the materials of which, if not too much decayed, will be used

I am sorry to say that your Correspondent has led you into one mistake. Sufficient money has not yet been raised to complete the restoration, though this has been begun; the tracery in the north, south, and east windows, with the cornice over them, does not run up, and the work is progressing in a satisfactory manner, but must soon be discontinued, unless a further sum is subscribed. The estimated cost is £2000, exclusive of contingencies, and not half of that sum has been subscribed. If you can induce any of your friends to assist in completing this most interesting work you will confer a favour upon,

Sir, your Obedient Servant,

Swaledale, Wakefield, Feb. 8, 1847. Samuel Sharpe.

Departure of Don Miguel from Rome.—Don Miguel has secretly left Rome, and is supposed to have embarked for Portugal, where his presence now could not fail to have an important effect. There is also another rumour that Don Miguel has arrived in London. At present we cannot authenticate either of these reports.

Death of Mr. George Robins. We are sorry to announce the death of Mr. George Robins, which took place at Brighton, on Monday, after a long illness. Mr. Robins had honourably and successfully filled an exalted position in his profession for many years. Indeed, he began to wield the hammer before he had attained the age of nineteen, for, while attending a large sale in Yorkshire, he was unexpectedly called upon to act for his father, who, from indisposition, was unable to officiate. From that time to the present, during a period of fifty years, he enjoyed the uninterrupted good opinion of the public, and, perhaps, no man can boast of a more extraordinary catalogue of business—the most extensive estates in this country, and Scotland, and Ireland, as well as all parts of the globe, having passed through his hands. He leaves a widow and seven young children, whom his exertions have enabled him to provide for in an ample manner, and a large circle of friends, who will long mourn his irreparable loss. The poor have lost a kind friend, and society an excellent member. He was an exemplary husband, a kind and indulgent father, and a warm-hearted friend.

POSTSCRIPT.

HOUSE OF LORDS. FRIDAY.

Lord MONTEAGLE moved for some returns respecting a division of two baronies in Ireland, which motion was agreed to.

Some petitions were presented, and some miscellaneous business transacted, but nothing of interest took place; and the House adjourned about half-past six.

HOUSE OF COMMONS. FRIDAY.

DESTITUTE PERSONS (IRELAND) BILL.—Mr. LABOUCHERE moved the third reading of the Destitute Persons (Ireland) Bill, which, after a few words from different members, was agreed to, and the bill passed and sent to the House of Lords.

LORD GEORGE BENTINCK'S RAILWAYS (IRELAND) BILL.

On the order of the day being moved for the second reading of the Railways (Ireland) Bill,

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER rose and addressed the House. He trusted this important measure would be discussed without any party bias or party feeling. (Hear, hear.) If the measure proposed by the noble Lord (Lord G. Bentinck) was carried, her Majesty's Government could not hold themselves responsible to carry its provisions into effect. (Hear.) He certainly was surprised at the proposition of advancing a loan of sixteen millions to Ireland, for the construction of railways under the present circumstances of the country, but he was not surprised that the bill should be endorsed by the hon. member, the Lord Mayor of York (Mr. Hudson), who had such a deep interest in railways (hear, and laughter). He was willing and most anxious to assist, by every means in his power, to alleviate distress in Ireland, but he did not think the bill before the House was calculated to attain that desirable object. He must confess that he had no sanguine expectations of real benefit if the project of the noble Lord should be agreed to. (Hear.) The right hon. gentleman then read extracts from correspondence which he had received on the subject, some of which stated that any Government must be insane to agree to such a proposition as that made by the noble Lord. It appeared to him that the proposed bill was much more likely to promote the interests of destitute shareholders in railways now in progress in Ireland than the interests of the really destitute poor. (Hear.)

Mr. J. STEWART (member for Newark) censured the Government for holding out a threat of resignation in order to intimidate members from voting for this necessary measure.

Mr. F. BARING gave his opinion that it would be better to pass the measures for the immediate relief of Ireland, and to leave the present measure for future and calmer consideration. He should therefore now vote against the second reading.

Sir J. TYRRELL supported the bill.

Mr DUDLEY BROWNE said he would support the bill, if Lord G. Bentinck would explicitly state what his ulterior views were with regard to Ireland.

Lord BERNARD said he should support the bill, as, in his opinion, it was calculated to benefit the people of Ireland.

Mr. CHAPLIN could not agree to a proposition to give loans for the construction of railways in Ireland, as, if they were likely to be productive to the constructors, they would be carried into effect without the interference of the Government.

Sir C. NAPIER supported the bill.

Mr. HUDSON spoke at great length, and contended that a loan, or even a grant, of sixteen millions, as proposed by the bill, would be of infinite benefit to England, as well to Ireland. The hon. member concluded by saying that he had no interest to advance, that he was content with the crown which he wore, and the throne upon which he sat, as Railway King. (Much laughter, and cheers.)

Mr. GOULBURN opposed the bill.

The debate was then adjourned. The House sat till past midnight.

HER MAJESTY'S LEVEE.—The Queen held a Levee yesterday, at St. James's Palace, which was very numerously and brilliantly attended. The Foreign Ambassadors, Cabinet Ministers, and Great Officers of the Household, arrived early at the Palace. The carriages and liveries of the servants were of the most splendid description. Her Majesty, accompanied by her Illustrious Consort, and attended by the Lords and Ladies in Waiting, left Buckingham Palace for St. James's shortly before two o'clock, escorted by a detachment of the Life Guards. As the Royal procession passed through the Park, her Majesty and Prince Albert were loudly cheered by those assembled.

DEATH OF THE DUKE OF NORTHUMBERLAND.—We regret to have to state that his Grace the Duke of Northumberland died on Thursday, at his seat, Alnwick Castle, Northumberland, in the 62nd year of his age. His Grace had been for some time labouring under an attack of influenza; but no dangerous consequences were apprehended by his medical attendants. On Thursday morning, his valet entered the bed-room at his usual hour in the morning, when he thought the noble Duke was asleep; but it was subsequently ascertained that it was the sleep of death. His Grace succeeded to the Dukedom at the death of his father, in 1817.

A COLD NIGHT.—At Mitcham, in Surrey, on Thursday night last, the Thermometer stood at 9 degrees of Fahrenheit, almost unprecedented at this advanced period of the year. It was certainly the coldest night of the season. A correspondent at Blackheath says:—"The thermometer, this morning, indicated a temperature of 26 degrees below freezing; being the greatest degree of cold during the last two years."

LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

FRANCE.

The Paris papers of Wednesday publish the report of the operations of the Bank of France for the last year. It represents the Bank as having had to struggle with immense difficulties, owing to the failure of the harvest, and the exportation of specie. This report created great uneasiness in financial circles; and at the Bourse, there was a great tendency to a fall. Various rumours were circulated on Tuesday and Wednesday in Paris, as to the unpleasant condition of the official relations between the hotel of Foreign Affairs and the British Embassy. It was said that, in consequence of the offensive character of M. Guizot's observations in the Chamber, all personal communication between Lord Normanby and that Minister was suspended, and that official communications were to take place only in writing. It was also stated that Lord Normanby was about to leave for London, to communicate personally, as was supposed, with the Foreign Office, on the present state of the official relations in Paris.

ARRIVAL FROM THE UNITED STATES.

The packet ship Queen of the West has brought New York papers to the 23rd ult. The latest news is utterly unimportant. Nothing decisive had arrived from Mexico, but extensive preparations for defence had been made by the United States troops along the line of occupation, in consequence of a reported advance of Santa Anna, who, it was alleged, had left his station at San Luis de Potosi, at the head of a body of 15,000 cavalry. His march was to attack Monterey. General Worth, who received the information, first [illegible] despatched expresses to Generals Taylor, Wool, and Butler. The [illegible] Chief was on his march from Monterey to Victoria, and immediately [illegible] wards the former city. Having waited there three days without receiving any confirmatory intelligence, he again took up his line of march for Victoria. Meanwhile, General Wool called in all his outposts around Parras, and at the head of his division, 3000 strong, set out for Saltillo, which he expected to reach on the 23d. General Butler, with his division, had already arrived there. The other bodies were on the march. Several conflicting rumours were rife in the American camp. By some it was alleged that Santa Anna had left Potosi and was in full march; others stated that his designs were different.

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES, &c.

OXFORD.

The Bishop of Oxford has just appointed the Rev. E. M. Goulburn, of Merton College, his Examining Chaplain. Mr. Goulburn is one of the leaders of the Anti-Tractarian party.

Feb. 11.

In a Convocation holden this morning, the Rev. R. Muckleston, M.A., Fellow and Tutor of Worcester College, was appointed Public Examiner in Literis Humanioribus.

In a Congregation holden immediately afterwards, the following degrees were conferred, viz.:—M.A., G. Bradley, Fell. Univ.; Rev. J. R. Hill, Univ.; Rev. J. Randolph, Brasen.; Rev. E. Wesk, Fell. St. John's; Rev. J. B. Hayley, Worc. J. Brandwaite, Taberder of Queen's; Rev. J. Lovicu, Wadham; C. B. Teesdale, Chr. Ch.—B.A.: S. M. Mackay, Worc.; J. L. Morris, Worc.; R. K. Cornish, Exhibitioner of Corp. Christi; R. Dimock, St. John's.

CAMBRIDGE. Feb. 6.

Mr. Charles Broderick Scott, of Trinity College, has been just awarded the Latin Alcæus prize.

The Rev. Robert John Bulmer, M.A., of St. John's College, has been appointed second master of the Kepler Grammar-school, Houghton-le-Spring.

John William Donaldson, B.A., of St. Peter's College, has been elected fourth master of St. Peter's School, York.

Robert Thwaytes, B.A., of Christ's College, has been appointed professor of mathematics and natural philosophy at Hoogly College, India.

William Westall, B.A., of Queen's College, has been appointed assistant master of Leamington College.

Feb. 10.

At a Congregation held to-day, the following degrees were conferred:—

Masters of Arts. Rev Carter William Daking Moore, St. John's College; William Carter, King's College.

The Bishop of Oxford, on Thursday, consecrated a new church at Tubney, near Oxford, dedicating it to St. Lawren.

CORN ROT AT ANCONA.—A letter from Rome, of the 23d ult., says:—"In the district of Cesena, province of Forlì, on the 18th Jan., deplorable excesses were committed on the occasion of the embarkation of Corn for Ancona. The people of the country not only plundered the corn, but also the magazines in the neighbourhood. The owners and the inhabitants of Cesena took up arms and attacked the plunders; two of whom were killed and several wounded. The armed force arrived, but the riot could not be suppressed until many of the peasants were arrested. The Pope has ordered prayers to be put up for three days on occasion of the famine in Ireland."

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

IMPROVEMENTS AT LAMBETH PALACE.—A number of workmen are now busily employed in making extensive improvements in the frontage of the ancient palace of Lambeth. The whole of the long footpath called Bishop's-walk, from Stangate to the upper side of the Palace, is undergoing considerable improvement, and when completed will afford great convenience to the public.

FALL OF THE GEORGE INN, LONG-ACRE.—The entire portion of the George Inn, Long-acre, opposite Bow-street, fell to the ground on Tuesday. The building was of considerable antiquity, dating its origin as far back as the middle of the seventeenth century, when it was erected as an hostelry for a first-rate hostelry. Some years since, the ranges of bed-rooms in the yard were converted into dwelling houses and livery stables; the adjoining houses extending to Endell-street, formerly Bear-street, have been lately pulled down, their site being required by the Commissioners of Woods and Forests, for the contemplated improvements in that neighbourhood, so that the gable end was left without any support, and being, as in most old buildings, principally composed of wood and lath and plaster, gave way, carrying with it the greater portion of the roof, which, in its descent, broke through all the floors, destroying every article of furniture. Happily no person of any injury was sustained by any individual. Had the accident occurred in the evening, the loss of life must have been fearful, as the Grand Lodge of England of the Order of Odd Fellows would have held their weekly meeting in one of the rooms. One of the tenements had a very narrow escape; she had but a short time previous been engaged making the bed which were destroyed.

CURRIER'S HOSPITAL.—The public suppers at this institution, which take place annually on eight Sunday evenings, terminating with Easter-Day, will commence to-morrow.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE, LONDON.—The Council have instituted a Professorship of the Mechanical Principles of Engineering, and appointed Mr. Easton Hodgkinson to the chair. The Flaherty Scholarship in Mathematics has been awarded to Mr. William Tool. To Mr. Robert Baldwin Hayward, who was so nearly equal to Mr. Yool that the Examiners recommended a division of the Scholarship, the Council voted a gold medal, with an expression of regret that circumstances did not admit of their bestowing two Scholarships. Examiners: Robert Leslie Ellis, A.M., of Trinity College, Cambridge, for the Council; and Professor De Morgan and Professor Potter. The Flaherty Scholarship in Classics has been awarded to Mr. Henry Gladdish Rosher. Examiners: G. S. Venables, Esq., of Jesus College, Cambridge, A.M., for the Council; and Professors Newman and Malden. The £40 prize for general proficiency as a student in medicine and surgery has been awarded to Mr. William Henry Ransom.

THE NATIONAL GALLERY.—At a meeting of the trustees of the National Gallery, held on Monday last, a report was received from Mr. Eastlake, R.A., the keeper of the National Gallery, relative to the operations which had been undertaken for cleansing the pictures deposited therein. This report had been prepared, in the absence of a minute made at a previous meeting of the trustees, on the 25th of January, and embodied a variety of testimonials and of documents in justification of the course that had been pursued by the keeper and his assistants. After hearing the report, &c., read, the meeting passed a resolution, "That in the opinion of the trustees, the report so made by Mr. Eastlake is entirely satisfactory, and justifies the confidence which they have reposed in his judgment, in respect of the treatment of the pictures in the National Gallery."

GRATIS INK-LANE RAGGED SCHOOL.—A public meeting of the friends of this charity was held on Wednesday evening. Mr. Benjamin Bond Cabbell, M.P., presided. The secretary read the report, by which it appeared that the charity has been in existence six years, during which period 500 children have received the benefits accruing from the instruction imparted, and that at the present moment 170 boys and girls are receiving education by this institution. W. J. Maxwell, Esq., moved the first resolution, that the report be received, and that a fresh committee for the year ensuing be appointed. Mr. Payne, in a humourous address, seconded the resolution. He rendered a somewhat novel elucidation of the titles "M.P." and "F.R.S.": the former, as in the person of the Honourable Chairman, signified "Mindful of the Poor," the other he should wish at all times to interpret as "Friend of Ragged Schools."

NIGHT SHELTER FOR THE HOMELESS POOR.—On Wednesday, the Committee of the above Association made a Report of the number of unfortunate individuals who have, since the opening, the 14th December last, availed themselves of the Association as shelter from the inclemency of the weather. In the central asylum, in Playhouse-yard, St. Luke's, 47 men, women, and children have been admitted; in the eastern asylum, in Glasshouse street, East Smithfield, 3511; and in the western asylum, Upper Ogle-street, Marylebone, 3967, making a total of 12,194. The number of rations distributed during the same period amounted to 131,138. The number admitted nightly on the average is 1206, and during the present inclement weather hundreds cannot be received.

TAKING THE VEIL.—On Wednesday morning, two ladies, Miss Jones, of St. John's Wood, and Miss Colgrave, of Bryanstone-square, received "the white veil," and the religious habit of our blessed Lady of Mercy," at the Catholic Church, Bermondsey. The ceremony was performed by the Right Rev. Dr. Griffiths, Roman Catholic Bishop of London, assisted by the Rev. Messrs O'Dwyer, Buler, Coyne, and other priests. The postulants, habited in white, were introduced to the Bishop at the foot of the altar by the Principal of the Sisters of Mercy, and having, in answer to a catechetical examination, expressed their readiness to give up the world and all worldly things, and to devote themselves entirely and unreservedly to the study and the practice of religion, they were invested with the veil by the officiating prelate. The ceremony, which was conducted for the most part in Latin, was of an imposing character, several pieces of sacred music, appropriate to the occasion, being performed on the organ.

DELAY AT THE POST-OFFICE FROM THE SNOW.—At noon, on Wednesday, no less than 119 mail bags had been detained by the snow storm, a greater number than has been known for some years to have been delayed by the weather.

CITY OF LONDON GENERAL PENSION SOCIETY.—The Duke of Cambridge has commanded that the festival of this charity should take place on the 31st of May, when his Royal Highness will preside. The Right Hon. Baron Rothschild has consented. Upwards of 70 merchants and others have already joined the stewardship, and by the period of the announcement of the list it is anticipated it will be the largest of the season. Lord Ashburton is president of the society this year, and 110 vice presidents adorn the publications issued by the society.

ACCIDENTS AND OFFENCES.

MURDER IN NORTHUMBERLAND.—A frightful murder was committed last Sunday evening at Newbrough, in the southern division of the county of Northumberland, about four miles from Hexham. It appears that there had been a christening that day, and after the parties had been at church, they repaired to an inn in the village of Newbrough, to partake of some refreshment. While there, a man of the name of Welsh, who is a labourer in a quarry in the neighbourhood, insulted some of the women of the christening party, and used language which called for the interference of the father of the child, a person of the name of Proud. When Proud and his party left the house, Welsh followed, and went in the same direction, and some wrangling took place between the parties on the road. They had not, however, proceeded far, when Welsh went up to Proud, seized him by the head, and, pulling it back, cut his throat with a knife so severely, that the unfortunate victim died almost immediately. After committing the horrid deed, Welsh ran off, and called at the same public-house as the party had been at, where he called for a pot of whiskey, and having drunk it he stated to the mistress of the house that it was the last time she would see him. He then left, and hastened to the Fourstones Station, on the Newcastle and Carlisle Railway. On reaching there, he returned to the hotel, and was a corpse in less than an hour. Disease of the heart was the immediate cause of death. Deceased was thirty-five years of age, remarkably sober, and, in every respect, a quiet, abstemious man. He died in the Commercial-room, in the presence of Mr. Dallimore and two other travellers.

A TRANSPARENT TRICK.—On Saturday last, a gentleman, in appearance, called at Mr. Edmunds's shop, in Lowndes-street, Belgrave-square, and ordered a pair of gloves and two satin scarfs, value 35s. The gloves (value 2s.) he took with him, and ordered the scarfs to be sent to 49, Belgrave-square, and all should be paid for; but, on taking them as directed, no such person resided there.

FATAL ACCIDENT ON THE CROYDON ATMOSPHERIC RAILWAY.—Owing to the snow on Sunday getting into the atmospheric tube, the various trains for effect were delayed, and it was necessary that a pilot engine should be sent from London to the Croydon station, to clear the line, almost crushing him to pieces. The unfortunate man was named Thomas Smith.

SUDDEN DEATH IN THE STREETS.—On Wednesday evening Mr. Wm. Payne held an inquest at the Cross Keys, Gracechurch-street, on the body of Mr. Henry Jeffry Topping, aged forty, a clerk to Mr. Gatiskill, the distiller, of Bermondsey-street. The deceased, on Tuesday morning, whilst passing through Gracechurch-street, was observed to stagger and fall opposite the shop of Mr. Cerlin, the tobacconist. He was carried into the house, and was seen by Mr. Eoy, the surgeon, but he died shortly afterwards, from an affection of the heart. Verdict, "Natural Death."

FIRE NEAR FITZROY-SQUARE.—Between six and seven, on Wednesday morning, a fire burst forth upon the cabinet and bedstead manufactory, belonging to Messrs. Bailes, situate at No. 33, Charlotte-street, Fitzroy-square. The premises were at the rear of the private dwelling, and were adjoined by the spacious timber yard of Mr. Oliver, in John-street, and by numerous houses in Pitt street. Whilst the firemen were trying to subdue the flames the roof and part of the outer wall fell, and the flames then shot into Mr. Oliver's mahogany loft, setting fire to the building, and also to a number of pieces of valuable cabinet wood. It was past nine o'clock before they succeeded in extinguishing them, and not until Messrs. Bailes's manufactory was burned down, the whole of the valuable stock in trade and men's working tools destroyed, the timber in the loft of Mr. Oliver's premises considerably damaged by fire, and the building itself much burnt.

THE WEATHER.

THE past week has been remarkable, during the former part for the continuance of dull and gloomy weather, and during the latter, for the severity with which the frost has again set in. The following are the particulars each day. Thursday, February 4, was misty and dull all the morning, fine, but cloudy afternoon, the average temperature was 35°. Friday was cloudy and dull, a thin rain was falling at night, with nocturnal rising temperature; its average temperature was 35°. Saturday was an extremely dull day, with an unusual high temperature, its average being 45°; after midnight the sky became free from cloud, and the temperature declined to 30° by six o'clock on Sunday morning. Sunday was misty, snow was falling in small quantities all the day; its average temperature was 29°, being 16° less than that of the day previous. Monday snow was falling for twelve hours, and in the evening it measured eight inches in depth on the level; the highest temperature this day was only 30°, and the average of the whole day was 23½, being about 18° below that of the season. Tuesday was a fine clear day, but excessively cold; in the morning about six o'clock the reading of the thermometer was as low as 16½°; at 9 A.M., the reading was 19½°; at 10h A.M. it was 20°; at 11h A.M., it was 20½°, at half-past twelve it was 25°, and it rose to 29°; which was the highest point reached during the day; and it afterwards decline to 22° before midnight; its average temperature was less than 23°. Wednesday was a fine day; at about six A.M. the reading of the thermometer was as low as 15°, being the lowest point I have seen this winter of the temperature of the air at the height of four feet above the ground; the thermometer being protected from the effects of radiation; the previous instances this winter which have been nearly as low, are the following:—In 1846, December 14th, at 7h A.M. the reading was 15½°; on December 15th, at 7h A.M., it was 18½°, and on the 31st of December, it was at 7h A.M., 16°, and these have been the lowest points this winter. The average temperature of Wednesday was 26°.

The following are thermometrical readings taken each day:—

Day.	A.M. 7h. 30m.	P.M. 3 30	P.M. 7h 30m.	During the Day. Highest.	Lowest
Feb. 4	30°	34°	33½°	34°	30°
Feb. 5	31½	36	36	39	31
Feb. 6	43	45	45	49	41
Feb. 7	31½	33½	34	35½	31
Feb. 8	19	30	27	30	17
Feb. 9	16½	20	20	20	16½
Feb. 10	19½	27½	26	29	15

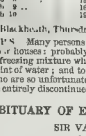
Blackheath, Thursday, Feb. 11, 1847. J. G.

P.S. Many persons are in the habit of mixing salt with the snow opposite to their houses; probably, such persons are not aware that, by so doing, they form a freezing mixture which causes the temperature to sink, 5 deg. below the freezing point of water; and to this low temperature the feet of poor persons are subjected who are so unfortunate as to have to pass over such places. The practice should be entirely discontinued.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED

SIR VALENTINE BLAKE, BART., OF MENLO.

RECENT accounts from Ireland announce the death of this gentleman the member for the town of Galway in the present Parliament. Sir Valentine, who was born 23rd June, 1780, married first, in 1803, Eliza, eldest daughter of Joseph Donellan, Esq., of Killah; and secondly, in 1843, Julia Sophia, daughter of the late Robert Macdonnell, Esq., M.D. By the latter he leaves Valentine-Charles, and by the former two elder sons, Thomas and John Francis. The family of which Sir Valentine was the representative, is one of the oldest in Connaught, having been established in the sister kingdom by Richard Blake, alias Caddell, who accompanied Prince John to Ireland in 1185, and obtained large grants of land in the counties of Galway, Mayo, and Clare. Valentine Blake, Mayor of Galway in 1611, obtained a patent of Baronetcy in 1622; and his descendant, Sir Walter, the sixth Baronet, was the first Catholic gentleman of distinction that joined the standard of the Prince of Orange.



LADY WELBY.

WILHELMINA, Lady Welby, wife of Sir William Earle Welby, Bart., of Denton Hall, Lincolnshire, died at Denton, on the 4th instant, in the 75th year of her age.

Her Ladyship was only daughter and heiress of William Hey, Esq., Governor of Barbadoes. Her marriage took place in 1792, and the issue of it consisted of three sons and seven daughters. Of the former, the eldest, Glynne Earle Welby, Esq., sits in Parliament for Grantham. Of the latter, four are married, viz., Wilhelmina, wife of the Rev. F. Browning, Prebendary of Salisbury; Penelope, late wife of Clinton J. Fynes Clinton, Esq., M.P.; Katharine, wife of the Rev. T. Welby Northmore, of Clapton; and Elizabeth, of Thomas James Ireland, Esq., of Owsden Hall, Suffolk.

THE VENERABLE JOHN OLDERSHAW, B.D., ARCHDEACON OF NORFOLK.

THIS beloved and respected Divine, whose death, at the advanced age of ninety-two, occurred on the 31st ult., was born at Leicester, in 1754, the son of an eminent surgeon of that town; and derived descent from highly respectable ancestors, long possessed of considerable property and influence at Loughborough, where their monuments may still be seen in the parish church. After receiving the rudiments of learning at the Grammar School of Oakham, the subject of this notice entered at Emanuel College, Cambridge, and was the Senior Wrangler of his year, although among the competitors for that honourable distinction was the celebrated Gilbert Wakefield. About this time, Mr. Oldershaw became private tutor to Mr. Manners Sutton, afterwards Archbishop of Canterbury, and thus laid the foundation of his future preferment. Shortly after he was elected a Fellow of his College; and in 1792, on Mr. Sutton's consecration as Bishop of Norwich, received the appointment of Examining Chaplain to his Lordship, for the duties of which office his acquirements and vast judgment, as well as his theological and classical attainments, eminently qualified him.

In 1797 he was presented to the Archdeaconry of Norfolk, and soon after nominated to the Rectory of Readenhall cum Harlestone. From the remarks accompanying the notice of his death, evidently written by one who well knew the deceased Archdeacon, we derive the following estimate of his character:—"No one was ever more sincerely, strongly, and conscientiously attached to the Constitution of his country and its established religion, and that after the fullest and most careful investigation of their claims upon us, by a powerful and well-informed mind; and whenever he conceived either to be in danger, he was ready, as an active and judicious magistrate, a zealous and dignified governor in the Church, a private clergyman in his parish, or an influential member of society, to stand forward fearlessly in its defence. He was ever ready to advance, both by his purse and his personal services, whatever he conceived would promote the cause of Christianity, or relieve the wants of the needy and distressed. He was also given to hospitality, and delighted to see his friends happy around him; and he was able to contribute largely to their information and amusement, by the fund of accurate and varied knowledge stored in his intercourse with the leading intellectual characters of his day."

Archdeacon Oldershaw married Anne, daughter of Sir John Hynde Cotton, Bart., of Madingley, near Cambridge, and became a widower in 1829.

WILLIAM BURRELL, ESQ., OF BROOME-PARK.

THIS gentleman, an acting Justice of the Peace for Northumberland during forty-six years, and a Deputy-Lieutenant for more than fifty, died on the 1st inst. at Chattan Vicarage, aged seventy-three. In 1806 he inherited the family estates at the death of his father, Bryan Burrell, Esq., and in 1811 served as High Sheriff of his native county. By Eleanor his wife, eldest daughter of Matthew Foster, Esq., of Bolton House, he leaves two sons, Bryan, late Captain 4th Dragoon Guards, and Matthew, in holy orders, both magistrates for Northumberland.

The Burrells are of very ancient date upon the borders of England and Scotland, particularly in that district formerly known by the name of the East Marches; and may be traced, as resident at Berwick-on-Tweed, so early as the year 1250.

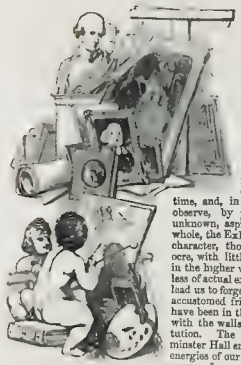
THE PROMISE AT EU.—There is current in Paris a pun upon the proverb that "promettre et tenir sont deux," which well marks the French estimate of Guizot's position. It is now "promettre et tenir ne sont pas d'Eu!"

A NEW COMET.—On Saturday evening last, a few minutes after nine o'clock, Mr. Hind discovered a telescopic comet in Cephens. The comet is a faint nebulosity, with a slight condensation in the centre, though no positive nucleus is visible.

ST MARYLEBONE BANK FOR SAVINGS.—The 17th Annual General Meeting of the Institution was held on Thursday, when it appeared the progress of this bank continues to be of a very favourable description, no less than 2399 new deposits having been made in the last year.

THE BRITISH INSTITUTION.

FRUIT.—PAINTED BY LANCE.



THE opening of the first Exhibition of the season is always an event looked forward to with interest by the patrons and followers of Art; and this year the interest has been enhanced by a certain novelty and freshness imparted to the Exhibition by the decision of the Directors. Many of the contributions, by the new regulation in force, are exhibited for the first time, and, in several instances, we observe, by young, and, hitherto, unknown, aspirants. Viewed as a whole, the Exhibition is of a pleasing character, though somewhat mediocre, with little of superior promise, in the higher walks of Art, and still less of actual execution, which would lead us to forget the absence of those accustomed friends whose works we have been in the habit of associating with the walls of the British Institution. The great effort at Westminster Hall engrosses, it is said, the energies of our elder artists, and the young, from whom better things had been expected, are painting themselves down to the Art-Union distribution of prizes of £10. We had been led to look for a very different result. Harsh critics upon Art talk of taste becoming diluted the more it is diffused, and our Exhibitions justify, not unfrequently, a decision so severe. Four hundred pictures, it is said, have been returned by the Directors of the Institution, "from want of room;" and of the 543 selected for Exhibition (only 149 more than were refused), some fifty or sixty (we wish we could have enlarged the number) are all that will add to the reputation of the English School. Yet there are fine, very fine, things in the present Exhibition, and the collection is certainly one of more than average merit. The preponderance of landscapes gives an agreeable tone to the Exhibition itself, while it affords a pleasing belief that there is an innate feeling amongst our numerous painters for depicting those charming tranquil home scenes, those "green delights" of hill, and vale, and tree, and stream, so peculiarly the characteristic of an English landscape. Critics upon Art adopt different principles, not of criticism alone, but of the manner of proceeding in their criticisms. We ourselves have varied at times the plan of our procedure, occasionally allowing rank, and age, and position, to claim a precedence that is due to them; now and then the excellence of the several works, giving the best picture the first position in our notice, and not unfrequently adopting the order of the catalogue, much the simplest principle, we conceive, to the reader who has seen the Exhibition, and one, moreover, which we shall return to on the present occasion.

We may observe, for the benefit of such of our Colonial and Continental readers who have never had the opportunity of visiting the British Institution, that the Exhibition is in three rooms—North, Middle, and South—and that the best pictures are invariably placed, on account of the light, in the room to the north; and in this room it is that the numbers begin.

NORTH ROOM.

2. "Highland Children at the Door of a Bothy." W. Simson. A clever little picture; all Highland health and character.

3. "The Lovers' Walk." F. Danby, A.R.A. A moonlight scene on a bridge—a kind of Romeo and Juliet affair, as a lady who was standing by on the day of the private view, was heard to call it—not, we are inclined to think, inaptly. The colouring is strange—somewhat unearthly, indeed—but the composition certainly effective. By Mr. Danby's kind permission, we have been enabled to present our readers with a very clever Engraving of this attractive picture.

6. "The Holy Well." F. Goodall. Small in size, and unpretending, but full of truth and beauty. In front of a stone cross, at which an aged pilgrim is represented, leaning on his stick, in an air of thoughtful devotion, flows the well of holy water; and on one side a child is seen drinking from the closed hands of her youthful mother; and, on the other side, a girl of twenty, all simplicity and prettiness, tasting of the waters from the same simple cup—her own fair hand. In the distance is a ruined Abbey. Mr. Goodall has kindly and liberally acceded to our request that an Engraving might be made for the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS of this sweet and admirable little picture.

12. "A Forest Lane." J. Stark. Worthy of notice, though possessing all the known peculiarities of the artist, whose trees are always denuded of foliage.

22. "Interior a Highland Cottage." W. Simson. A companion picture to No. 2, by the same artist, and equally excellent.

23. "Irish Courtship." F. Goodall. A well told story, and full of humour. The characters are well defined, and the execution careful. The gay earnestness of the lover, the delight of the girl, the quiet wonder of the boy in the foreground, and the arch looks of the children in the left of the composition, defy description. The colouring is rather brown, but the execution careful, and the accessories well chosen.

30. "Market Place at Coutances, Normandy." D. Roberts, R.A. An interesting reminiscence of travel, and warmer in tone than is usual with David Roberts. The foreground somewhat too grey.

31. "An Old Mill Pond." S. R. Percy. An agreeable landscape, but the foliage heavy, and wanting finish.

39. "'An Israelite Indeed.'" W. Etty, R.A. Vigorous in colour, but certainly too black.

40. "Female Head." Mrs. Carpenter. Head of a girl of fourteen—beautifully felt and rendered.

53. "Spring time." J. Inskipp. Somewhat unworthy of Mr. Inskipp's well-earned reputation.

54. "Shallow Streams." T. Creswick, A.R.A. One of the best landscapes in the Exhibition, and very true to nature, but somewhat cold in colour, and the water wanting in transparency.

55. "The Approaching Footstep." Frank Stone. A clever, nicely-painted picture, but not equal to some of Mr. Stone's former works. How is it that when we look on a picture by this agreeable artist we cannot divest ourselves of the idea that we have seen it before? Mr. Stone can afford to acknowledge the justice of our question by throwing off the trifling mannerism of a conventional beauty and frippery of dress, and relying on the higher qualities which he unquestionably possesses.

66. "Morning." J. Sant. A poetic personification, and rather pretty.

67. "Wild Mountain Scene, Autumnal Cloudy Weather." H. Bright. A faithful transcript of nature. The mist gathering over the mountains, and the approaching obscuration of the lovely scene, are finely conceived and executed. This, some critics have said, is the finest landscape in the Exhibition. Nor can we dissent from such a decision. The feeling throughout is essentially English.

72. "Dorothea Bathing her Feet. T. M. Joy. Colder in colour than Mr. Joy usually is, and the face of Dorothea wanting in ideal beauty.

83. "The celebrated Oak in Polstead Park, Essex." F. R. Lee, R.A. Mr. Lee would seem to entertain a particular objection to breaking up his foregrounds: why, we are at a loss to conceive.

89. "The Fronde Riots." J. Gilbert. A well-told story, from the life of Louis XIV., worthy of Northcote or Smirke. Mr. Gilbert has evidently improved of late, both in design and execution. The story he has chosen on the present occasion is related thus:—"A report being raised that the Queen was about to follow the obnoxious Cardinal with her son, a new outbreak was the consequence. In order to appease the malcontents, it became necessary for Anne of Austria to admit some of the citizens into her chamber, to satisfy them that the King was still there. Several of the populace were accordingly admitted, when, drawing the bed-curtains, she proved that the alarm created was unfounded, by showing them the young King asleep." The Queen is represented possessed of proper dignity and confidence, and the rioter in the foreground (with the dagger) is very ably conceived and drawn.

NEWSPAPER

THE BRITISH INSTITUTION.

THE LOVER'S WALK.—PAINTED BY DANBY.

106. "Epstein Castle, in the Taurus Mountains." G. C. Stanfield. A clever picture by the son of Clarkson Stanfield. No. 584 is by the same artist.

115. "Vesuvius and Bay of Naples." E. W. Cooke. Too blue and green. Mr. Cooke has lost his fine feeling for English skies (may we add, for skies to be seen in nature?) since his recent visit to Italy.

116. "Interior of a Welsh Cottage, near Conway." E. A. Goodall. A small picture, very carefully executed.

137. "Martello Tower, at Mentone, near Monaco." E. W. Cooke. Too yellow.

146. "A Straw Yard." J. F. Herring. Extremely excellent in manipulation and mechanical execution, but wanting in the sentiment which Edwin Landseer throws into his commonest productions. The pigs are very bad—the horses extremely excellent. Mr. Herring has a still better picture in the present Exhibition.

149. "Fruit." G. Lance. Exquisite: but the flowers and leaves are hardly equal to the fruit.

150. "Rizpah Watching the Dead Sons of Saul." J. C. Hook. The picture of the greatest pretension in the Exhibition, and clever; but why select a subject from which we turn with distaste?

168. "An Old Avenue." F. R. Lee, R.A. Although the distant part of the avenue is charming, the monotonous cold green of the foreground is particularly displeasing. The sun never gives a warmth in Mr. Lee's hands.

169. "Drumossie Moor, the Battle Field of Culloden." W. Simson. Interesting as the scene of the last battle fought in Britain. The landscape is almost poetical, from the desolate air which Mr. Simson has cast over the whole composition, both of sky and earth.

180. "The Cottage Under the Hill." F. R. Lee, R.A. The best of Mr. Lee's productions in the present Collection.

184. "Fruit." G. Lance. Admirable; and the subject of the Engraving in our present Paper. The fruit, draperies, gold-work, vases, &c., all perfection. Nothing can be more masterly than the execution of this picture.

206. "A Magdalen Reading." W. Etty, R.A. So beautiful in colour, that we could wish the throat had been somewhat cleaner and clearer, and the eyes defined, instead of dotted in.

MIDDLE ROOM

244. "Gulf of Salerno, and Mountains of Paestum, from Amalfi." E. W. Cooke. Better and truer in colour than Mr. Cooke's other works in the present Exhibition.

[illegible]. "The Frugal Meal." J. F. Herring. Three horses' heads—admirable in point of execution, and the nearest approach to Edward Landseer's excellence that has yet been made by an artist in this country.

THE FRONDE RIOTS.—PAINTED BY J. GILBERT.

268. "An Interior." H. Van Hove. Wonderful in point of expressive imitation, but almost a comic from De Hooghe. But to imitate De Hooghe well is no common excellence.

269. "Reposing after Bathing." W. Etty, R.A. Purer than usual in colour, and with all the excellences and defects of Mr. Etty's matter and manner.

270. "Village Church. H. J. Boddington. Thoroughly English and altogether a pleasing picture. In Mr. Lee's manner, they will purchase Lee's ...

271. "An Old Water-Mill, at Iffley, Oxfordshire." H. Bright. Admirable, indeed; broadly treated, and full of truth and beauty.

272. "The Meeting of Amy Robsart and the Earl of Leicester." Mrs. J. Robert-on. The accessories are well-painted, but the figures are only still life.

273. "The Campagna, Rome." W. Linton. Hung too high, but poetically conceived and rendered.

SOUTH ROOM

427. "The Marble Mountains (Carrara." E. W. Cooke. Another of Mr. Cooke's Italian eccentricities—the sky, blue, green, pink, and a mixture of all three together.

Here we must break off for the present—reserving our remaining notices for another occasion and another visit.

COUNTRY NEWS

THE SNOW-STORM IN THE COUNTRY.

The provincial papers, and letters from the country, teem with notices of the violence of the snow-storm, which seems to have been felt all over the country. Nearly all the lines of railway have been blocked up, so as to seriously impede the progress of the trains, and the roads, in many districts, are described as quite impassable. The traffic on the Brighton Railway was very much impeded and actually stopped for several hours. During the first four or five hours of the fall the trains passed with little difficulty, but after that time the line became almost impassable in some districts, especially near Balcombe, where the drifts from the hills into the cuttings were exceedingly great. So great was the fall at Balcombe that at ten o'clock on Monday night the station was almost buried in snow. The first train which was stopped was the five o'clock express, with a number of passengers, among whom were Captain Hotham, Mr. Rowland Hill, &c. On arriving at the other side of the Three Bridges, a station twenty-... from London, the fall of snow was so thick as to prevent the engine-driver from seeing the length of the train, and shortly afterwards it was brought to a stand-still. ... and guards got down, and with shovels proceeded to clear the snow off the rails to some distance in advance; but this was of trifling avail, as the wheels of the engines and carriages soon became blocked with ice and snow. There being no prospect of a passage being made through the mass, as the snow was still falling heavily, and had partly put out the fires, the passengers alighted the carriages and returned to the Three Bridges Station. Here they remained during the night, and on the morning they returned to London. The exertions during the night to effect a passage met with the same result, one end of Balcombe tunnel being filled up with the drift. ... At seven hour four powerful engines arrived from town, accompanied by the company's engineer, Mr. Hood, and these, firmly coupled, started at a rattling rate in the hope of cutting through the snow. This proved a failure, for they soon became a fixture, and the snow penetrating the fire boxes, the fires were quite extinguished and the engines rendered useless. An express was then sent back to London, for the whole staff of excavators the company could muster in due course of time a large array of "navvies" arrived, with spades and pickaxes, and were immediately put to work. At four o'clock on Tuesday afternoon the down line was sufficiently cleared to allow the passage of trains. The half-past four o'clock train on Tuesday afternoon from Brighton was the first to pass through the cutting, and the five o'clock express train from town succeeded in getting through.

On the South Western line, all the trains were more or less behind time. ... said to have gone to a stand still near the Andover Road Station, the passengers remaining in the carriages all night—those in the second and third-class carriages being half frozen. Both the up and down lines, however, are now open.

Much delay has been caused on the Great Western Railway, by a heavy fall of snow and rain, to the extent of upwards of ... between Bristol and Keynsham. The engine was detached from the train, and sent on with several labourers to clear the line of the snow. Although the distance between these two stations is not more than six miles, it was not performed in less than four hours, the whole of the time being occupied in cutting a way through the snow; this having been accomplished, the engine then returned, and proceeded onwards with the train.

A Bristol letter, of Monday, says—"We have been visited this day by the heaviest snow storm that has fallen to the lot of this locality since the year 1814. The snow lies generally at a depth of eighteen inches and two feet, and in places where it has drifted, it is often three and four feet deep. ... The Maidstone Gazette of Tuesday states that the 3.30 down train did not reach that town till 9.15, above three hours after time, the snow offering such an impediment, that the train, several times obliged to put on extra steam, came to a stand-still. Between Paddock Wood and Yalding the train was compelled to wait for the express to assist it, and soon after passing Wateringbury, the locomotive broke down, and further delay was caused detaching it from the train, being then propelled by the express engine alone, but was unable to reach the Maidstone station nearer than the ticket platform.

On Tuesday, the heavy snow through the Eastern Counties caused much inconvenience. On Monday night, the fall was so heavy, that several trains were much delayed, the mail from London being an hour behind time at Chelmsford and Colchester, but afterwards, the rails being cleared, they were pretty regular.

The weather in the Midland Counties has been very cold. The snow storm on Monday and Monday night, it appears, was very severe, the snow falling nearly all day, with a south west wind and partial thaw; but about ten at night, the wind shifted to the north, with an intense frost. The South Western ... much impeded, and the night down train was twenty hours reaching Gosport. Snow and ice thickly cover the ground in the neighbourhood, where there has not been so much for these many years past.

The accounts from the North are also severe. At Liverpool, there was an exceedingly heavy fall of snow on Sunday night, and during the greater part of Monday. On Monday evening there was a sharp breeze, and frost having set in, the footpaths were rendered almost impassable. Tuesday was remarkable for two uncommon sights in the town, occasioned by the snow—that of the horse ... first was that a sledge, drawn by one horse, was driven rapidly; and the other, that the West Derby omnibus was drawn ... The appearance of the sledge excited much amusement amongst the thousands who witnessed it as it passed along.

At Manchester, on Monday night, more snow fell, and the lowest point indicated by the thermometer was 20 degrees. On Tuesday morning, it was as low as 18 degrees, and the frost continued during the day.

PROPOSED CORN EXCHANGE AT BIRMINGHAM. Several influential gentlemen connected with the Corn trade, in Birmingham, have determined on erecting an Exchange for the transaction of their business. The site selected is immediately behind the St. George's coach-office in High-street, and runs towards the ... between Carr's-lane and Castle-street. The ground proposed to be ... a narrow strip of land, measuring 706 square yards. The plans and drawings have been prepared, and the building will consist of a commodious hall ... by 40 feet wide, lighted by a semicircular roof, surmounted by a lantern extending the whole length of the hall.

FIRE IN NORWICH. On Saturday night, the anti-friction grease manufactory of Messrs. Kitchen and Lockett, near the Foundry Bridge Wharf, Norwich, was destroyed by fire. How the fire originated is not ascertained, but suspicions are entertained that it was occasioned by incendiaries.

BATHING EXTRAORDINARY AT BRIDPORT. —An itinerant preacher of the Baptist persuasion visited Bridport lately, and, it appears, succeeded in gaining proselytes. On Sunday night, about eleven o'clock, he dipped seven adults (several of whom were females) in the open river, at Allington. The weather on the occasion was intensely cold, of which the parties gave evident proof on their being safely landed.

MURDER AT RUNCORN, CHESHIRE. Last Saturday, a man named Richard Edwards, a carpenter, at Runcorn, killed his ... The circumstances, as ... man given to drink, had been taddling all that day, and ... Betty Edwards, who ... as having been a quiet, peaceable woman, had sent one of her children to receive what wages were due to him. About four o'clock in the afternoon, Edwards came home, and wanted to get some money; but his wife declined to give him any, as all that she had received was due to the provision shop. Edwards immediately began to abuse and beat her, in the presence of her children; he took her by the hair of her head, and attempted to throw her out of doors; and then he struck her several times about the head and neck, knocked her down, and kicked her most severely. ... son, who is an apprentice, interfered on behalf of his mother, but was obliged to desist, in consequence of the threats of his father; but he ran out to fetch the neighbours in, who found her on the floor, quite dead, so that she had literally been beaten to death. Edwards came home, and awarded

OUR MAGAZINE COLUMN FOR FEBRUARY.

ACCESSION OF HENRY VI.

Henry the Sixth was not out of his long frocks when he came to the throne, for he had not yet completed the ninth month of his little existence. Though he succeeded peaceably to the crown, he was in arms from the first hour of his reign: and though he was not born literally with a silver spoon in his mouth, he had one thrust on his accession to the throne, for he was being fed at the very moment that the news of his father's death was announced in the Royal nursery. It is easy to conceive the interesting proceedings that took place on its being proclaimed, that the child, instead of having to be fed, had become the king of England. A clean bib was instantly brought, and he was apostrophised as a little "Kingsey Pingsey" a "Monarchy Ponarchy!" and was addressed by many other of those titles of affectionate loyalty, which are to be found nowhere but in the nursery dialect.—Comic History of England.

LOSS OF THE ROAD.

What is the road now, and its merry incidents of life? Is there no Chelsea or Greenwich for the old genteel pensioners of the coach-office? I wonder where they, those good fellows?. Is old Weller alive or dead? and the waiters, yea, and the inns at which they waited, and the cold-rounds-of-beef inside, and the stunned ostler, with his blue nose and clinking pail, where is he, and where is his generation? To those great geniuses now in petticoats, who shall write novels for the beloved reader's children, these men and things will be as much legend and history as Punch, or Cock Robin, or Jack Sheppard. For them stage-coaches will have become romances, a team of four bays as fabulous as Bucephalus or Black Bess. Ah, how their seats shone, as the stable-men pulled their clothes off, and away they went—ah, how their bits shook, as with smoking sides at the stage's end they demurely walked away into the inn-yard. Alas! we shall never hear the horn sing at midnight, or see the pike-gates fly open any more.—Vanity Fair.

THE VIOLET.

A bank of violets beneath,
With moss and trees o'ergrown:
Quick as my grateful heart's warm springs,
That home which is thine own.

From one sweet flow'ret's hidden breast
A richer perfume's thrown:
That breathing flow'ret fondest my gaze;
It trembles to be known.

"Sweet Flower," I cry, "and can there be
When would disturb thy rest?
I would not take thee from thy home
To wear thee on my breast!

"But I would stretch me here to view
Thy lidded beauty bloom;
Or here would I dwell among the flowers,
And here should be my tomb!"
Douglas Jerrold's Shilling Magazine.

RECOLLECTIONS OF THE LATE BISHOP OF NORWICH, BY ONE OF HIS DAUGHTERS.

Among the many gifts of his high intellect, he had a most extraordinarily retentive memory, and could repeat and quote, upon all apt occasions, Pope, Gray, Dryden, Boattie, and other poets of the same age and school. Shakspeare he knew nearly by heart—I mean all the most admired plays and approved passages and applied them in conversation frequently; and it was one of the most delightful parts of the intercourse which his friends held with him, that they might rely upon his taste, and learn continually to prize all that was really beautiful, for he stored up only what was lovely and admirable, casting far away the dross, and never allowing his memory to be contaminated by the frivolous or the base, however captivating a form it might assume. In quoting largely from Shakspeare, my father frequently regretted the deprivation to which, as a Bishop, he was obliged to submit, of the favourite recreation of his younger days —the theatre: I mean the theatre as it was in the days of Garrick, with whom he had been personally acquainted, and on whose great genius he often expatiated. He would almost weep (and it was this moistened eye—this choking utterance, the effect of refined emotion, that gave to his conversation half its charm) when he repeated those words, "I gave you all!" spoken by Garrick in his most celebrated part, King Lear, and he would add that a whole world appeared to be concentrated in those few words; a volume could not have caused so great a sensation; the most dead and awful silence succeeded, interrupted only by stifled sobs; so powerful was the effect, that many ladies were carried out fainting—every heart was electrified, and the acutest bosoms were overcome with emotion.—Bentley's Miscellany.

AN INCIDENT AT MALMAISON.

Some years after the death of the Empress Josephine, the writer visited La Malmaison. It was less a palace-like abode than a country residence, of which any private individual might have been proud. The furniture and arrangement of the house were still exactly in the same order as when she had inhabited it; her very sleeping room remained unstirred. As he gazed upon the bed upon which she had breathed her last, a startled but suddenly rushed forth from behind the curtains, and described its loud eccentric flight all around the chamber. The incident was a trivial one, and yet conveyed to the mind a singularly effective image of desolation and extinguished grandeur!—Dolman's Magazine.

GENIUS AND IMAGINATION.

It is well to remember that genius and imagination and invention are not peculiar in their essence to men like Homer, Milton, Michael Angelo, Hogarth, John Banyan, or Turner. No one man has any faculty which any other man has not at least the rudiment of, and it is this that renders it possible for a great genius to make known any of his thoughts, his peculiar thoughts, to any and to all of men; and what we would wish to impress on our readers is, that they, every one of them, have some imagination, some fancy, some relish for and longing after the beautiful, the tranquil, the clear; they had the first two in childhood, they have them still in old age, and, it is to be hoped, cheered and enlightened by the others; and their exercise, in this, as in all cognate things, will increase, and rouse into conscious action and enjoyment, even the minutest of either. The people among whom and from whom Shakspeare rose, are capable, so to speak, or may be made, capable of Shakspeare. There is a passage in "Much Ado About Nothing," which, as an example, may give us more insight into the mode of working of the imaginative faculty, than all our philosophising and analysis. It seems to us to let out with the unconsciousness and simplicity of a child, the secret mechanism, if we may so speak, of the greatest creative mind our world has ever seen. In itself, it has no recondite meaning, it answers fully its own sweet purpose, and was, we dare say, intended by its author for that alone. We are not believers, like some folks, in the omniscience of even Shakspeare. But, like many things that he and other wise men, and many simple children say, it has a hidden universal meaning, which it is quite lawful to bring out of it, and which may be enjoyed in the fullest without any wrong to its own original beauty and fitness. A description is not one less beautiful that it illustrates in its structure the mighty power that holds the world together, and by which the most ancient heavens are fresh and strong. Here is the passage. The Friar, speaking of Claudio, hearing that Hero "died upon his word," says:—

> The idea of her life shall sweetly creep
> Into his study of imagination,
> And every lovely organ of her life
> Shall come apparelled in more precious habit—
> More moving delicate, and full of life,
> Into the eye and prospect of his soul,
> Than when she lived indeed.

North Britain Review.

A LONDON COURT.

The court was a great place for children; and fine weather brought them out like flies, so thickly that it was wonderful to think where they got to when it was wet. They were a race of pigmies constantly at war with mankind: and upsetting the power of strangers by countless machines calculated to set one's limbs and figure all invaders of their domains. They had iron hoops, which tied the legs of passengers in hopeless knots and threw them down; and numquite-like wheels that flew in their faces; and horrid bits of wood, sharp at each end, which on being struck went in unintended directions and stuck in the eyes of the traveller. They also kicked bits of tile and oyster-shells against the legs, when performing their wars on a shallow-cut diagonal system of encampment; and would rush round corners in large bodies, meeting him whenever he approached, driving his elbows through windows, and his feet irrevocably between area gratings. They all had the same hair, and never were late for school on the mornings when the window of which the same three ages in the neighbourhood grocer's, who always had oysters out of season as big as cheese-plates; and never sold anything but rhubarb and rattling walnuts—at least in the vegetable line; for otherwise the owner dealt in pale cakes of facetious devices: horses, fashionable ladies, and wheelbarrows which were so stale that they cut like pumice stone, and would have been cruel things to devour in bed. There were also tall tumblers covered with old tea-pot lids, full of hazy bull's-eyes and small barley-sugar poles of peppermint; and a corner was appropriated to feeble tops, unsupervised balls, hatchment-like kites, that could not by any possibility be made to fly, but when started whirled round and round, and then shattered against the ground; and the evil-spirited shuttlecocks before alluded to, which, like the Australian crooked missiles, never went where they were intended, but lodged over shop-windows, and darted down areas, and flew over walls, and vanished down pump-holes, and in fact brought woe with them wherever they went.—Christopher Tadpole, by Albert Smith.

HOOD'S "SONG OF A SHIRT"

What is the sour which lands Hood awake one morning and find himself famous? Its great merit is its truth. Hood sits down beside the poor seamstress, as beside a sister, counts her tears, her stitches, her bones—too transparent by far through the yellow skin and thin, though degraded, face of a woman still; and, rising up, swears by Him that liveth for ever and ever, that he will make her wrongs and wretchedness known to the limits of the country and of the years. And, hark! how in that crushed, tuneless voice, moaning under its burden of sorrow, now shrunk down to the whispers of weakness, and now shuddering up into the laughter of despair, all Britain listens for a moment and for no longer—listens, insists, and does little or nothing. It was much that one shrill voice should rise and reverberate above that world of wild confused wailings, which are the true "cries of London" but, alas! that it has gone—as song, politics, love, and all else have gone—to swell the article in the Times, and to be quietly noted for its effect. Not altogether in vain indeed, was it sounded, if it have comforted one lonely heart, if it have bedewed with tears one arid eye, and saved to even one sufferer a pang of a kind which Shakspeare only saw in part, when he spoke of the "proud man's contumely;" the contumely of a proud, imperious, fashionable, hard-hearted woman! one that was a woman, but, rest her soul, she's dead."—Tait's Edinburgh Magazine.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS

"G. J."—We agree with you in your strictures upon the Indian Problem, but it is certainly both elegant and remarkable. Your Problem may be solved in three moves.

"J. A."—The King cannot move into check, as he would if played to Kt's 6th. See the Laws.

"Harry Hotspur." It is not customary to warn the Queen of danger by saying "check," in this country.

"Rusticus."—For quietude and comfort, try a game at Smith's spacious salons, "The Shades," in Leicester-square.

"J. J. L." Hull Amateur Chess Club.—The Laws you mention, as revised in 1842 by the London Chess Club, are the best for your adoption. As for books on the game, get the seven Volumes of the "Chess-Player's Chronicle" (a library in themselves); Lewis's and Walker's last works; and the Berlin and Legane Chess Magazines.

"C. O. H. C."—Your position was not thought exactly suitable for publication; but we shall be glad to see some future attempts.

"J. C." Your second letter came to hand only this week, or the other, as you request, would have been answered.

"Carolus."—Problem No. 157 is perfectly correct, and as beautiful as true. No play on Black's part can avert the mate at the fourth move.

"C. P."—You must have sent a wrong description of the pieces in your Problem of six moves. The solution says—"1. R takes B," and there is no Bishop to take. A little more care in these matters would save us an immensity of trouble.

"E. T. M." We have not yet seen the curious illustrations mentioned; but have just received a very novel and remarkable education of the progress Chess is making in society—viz., a packet of Shirts! the patterns of the several Chess Pieces! What next?

"W. H. C."—Very acceptable always. They shall be duly examined forthwith.

"T. W."—You may have two or more Queens at once.

"Tyro." We cannot say whether Mr. Horwitz is disposed to give instruction in "Blindfold" or ordinary Chess: but you may easily ascertain, by addressing a note to him, at Reid's Grand Divan.

Solutions by "G. A. H.," "E. B.," "H. Hotspur," "Sopraccita," "R. S. C.," "J. O. H.," "T. C. O.," "R. K. S.," "W. H. C.," "A. T.," Bridgnorth; and "N. A. S.," are correct

 Any Amateur desirous of playing a Game of Chess by Correspondence, may meet an opponent by addressing "Cato," Post-office, Dockhead, London.

SOLUTION TO PROBLEM, No. 159.

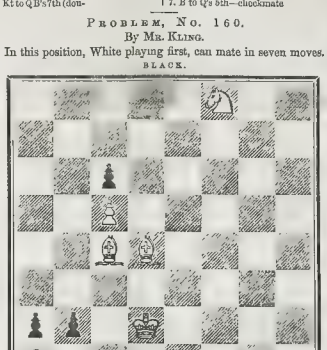
WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. Kt to Q B's 7th (dis ch)	K takes Kt	ble ch)	K to Q's 6th
2. Kt to Q's 5th (ch)	K to Q's 3rd (best)	5. Kt to K's 8th (ch)	R takes Kt (best)
3 Q to K's 6th (ch)	Q takes Q	6. P takes R becoming a Kt (ch)	K to Q B's 3rd
4. Kt to Q B's 7th (dou-		7. B to Q's 5th—checkmate

PROBLEM, No. 160.

By MR. KLING.

In this position, White playing first, can mate in seven moves.

BLACK.



WHITE.

SMART GAME BETWEEN THE HON. SECRETARY OF THE LONDON CHESS CLUB, MR. G. P——, AND AN AMATEUR,

The former giving his Q's Rook, which the reader must, therefore, remove from the Board.

WHITE (Mr. G. P.)	BLACK (Mr. R.)	WHITE (Mr. G. P.)	BLACK (Mr. R.)
1. K P two	K P two	13. Q B Q one	Q P one
2. K B P two	P takes P	14. Q takes P	K B to K R 3rd
3. K Kt to B 3rd	K Kt P two	15. Q to K 4th (ch)	K to B sq
4. K B to Q B 4th	K Kt P one	16. B takes B (ch)	Kt takes B
5. Q Kt to B 3rd	P takes Kt (a)	17. Castles	Q B to R 6th
6. Q takes P	Q to K R 5th (b)	18. P takes Q P	Kt takes R
7. K Kt P one	Q to K B 3rd	19 Q to K 7th (ch)	K to Kt sq
8. Kt to Q 5th	Q to her B 3rd	20. Q to K Kt 4th (ch)	K to B sq
9. K B to Q Kt 5th	Q to her B 4th (d)	21. Q takes Kt (ch)	K to his sq
	(c)	22. Q to K 3rd (ch)	K to Q 2nd
10 Q B P two	Q R P one	23. Q to K 7th (ch)	K to B sq
11. Q P two	Q takes Kt (e)	24. Q takes Q B P
12. K P takes Q	P takes B	Mate.

(a) An example of the brilliant "Muzio" Gambit is a rarity in modern chess circles, and but a few years back it was a rage with every one.

(b) This check will not serve Black's game

(c) A good move, as also would Q to her B 3rd have been.

(d) Taking the B would evidently be ruinous, on account of Kt to Q B 7th (ch).

(e) Having already a Rook in hand, this is not altogether so desperate as it looks.

GAME LATELY PLAYED BETWEEN MESSRS. Z. (A CELEBRATED POLISH PLAYER) AND HARRWITZ.

WHITE (Mr. Z.)	BLACK (Mr. Harrwitz.)	WHITE (Mr. Z.)	BLACK (Mr. Harrwitz.)
1. K P two	K P two	18. K Kt to K 3rd	Q Kt to K 5 4th
2. K Kt to B 3rd	Q Kt to B 3rd	19. R to R sq	Q to Q B 2nd (e)
3. Q P two	P takes P	20. K Kt to 4th 4th	Kt takes B (ch)
4. K B to Q B 4th	K B to Q B 4th	21. K B P takes Kt	R to K R 4th
5. Castles (a)	Q P one	22. Q R to Q sq	Q R to Q sq
6. Q B P one	P takes P	23. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
7. Kt takes P	K Kt to B 3rd	24. P takes R (f)	R takes R
8. Q B to K Kt 5th	K R P one	25. Q Kt to R 4th	R to K B sq
9. B to R 4th	K Kt P two	26. R to Q (ch)	K to Q B sq
10. B to K Kt 3rd	Q B to K 3rd	27. Kt takes B (ch)	P takes Kt
11. B takes B	P takes B	28. Q to K 3rd	Q B P one
12. Q to Q Kt 3rd	Q to Q B sq	29. Q Kt P two	kt to K B 3rd
13. K P one (b)	Q P takes P	30. Kt takes R P	Kt to Q 4th
14. Kt takes P	Q Kt to Q 5th	31. Q to K 2nd (g)	Kt to Q B 6th
15. Q to Q B 4th (c)	B to Q Kt 3rd	32. Q to K Kt 4th	Kt takes R
16. Q to R 4th (ch)	Q B P one	33. Q takes Kt	Q to K B 3rd
17. Kt to K Kt 6th (d)	K R to Kt	White Resigns.

(a) This is not so good a move as Q B P one sq.

(b) The proper s p.

(c) White has now a capital game.

(d) With such a position there should be no feeble, time-losing moves of this description. He ought to have attacked the Kt with his Q R, and thus have brought another powerful auxiliary into action.

(e) A move that few would dare to venture, but nevertheless an extremely good one.

(f) Kt takes K R P we believe better.

(g) A fine, masterly

CHESS ENIGMAS.

(HITHERTO UNPUBLISHED.)

No. 115.—By R. S. C.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
K at his Kt sq	K at Q B 6th	Kt K to Kt 3rd	Kt at K R 5th
R at Q 8th	Q at K B 2nd	Ps at Q 2nd Q R 2nd and 4th	P's at K 2nd, Q B's 6th, Q Kt 5th, and Q Rs 3rd
R at Q R 7th	Ps at K Kt 4th and 5th
B at K R 8th	P at K Kt 3rd

White playing first can mate in four moves.

No. 116.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
K at Q R 4th	K at Q B's 5th	Kt at Q B's 3rd
R at Q Kt 8th		P at Q B 2nd
B at Q 2nd		White to play and mate in four moves.

No. 117.—By F. C.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
K at Q Kt 3rd	K at Q R 4th	Ps at K its 2nd, K Kt 7th, Q B 5th, and Q R 4th
B at Q B 6th	Ps at Q R 3rd and K B 5th

In this position White engages to checkmate his opponent in four moves without claiming a Queen for his advanced Pawn.

EPITOME OF NEWS.—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

It is stated in the Paris papers that the opening of the Havre and Rouen Railway will take place next month.

Letters from Algiers say, that in consequence of financial embarrassments and the severity of the weather, much distress prevailed among the poorer classes. With the view of alleviating their wants, public subscriptions have been opened among the merchants and the military Melvina F. de Saumarez, the young French woman sentenced to ten years' transportation at the late Hampshire Sessions, for the robbery at Farnham, has been removed to the Millbank Penitentiary.

An original painting, by Michael Angelo, has been bequeathed to Oxford University by Mr. Fairholme, of Berwickshire, with a direction that it be placed in the new University Galleries, where are now deposited a large collection of original drawings by Michael Angelo and Raffaele, formerly collected by Sir Thomas Lawrence, and recently purchased by a subscription, to which the present Earl of Eldon generously contributed £2000.

We learn from Berlin that the King of Prussia, taking into consideration the existing scarcity, has suspended all the court balls and entertainments for the winter; but, in order that trade should not thereby suffer, he has commanded three grand subscription balls to be given at the Theatre Royal, the produce of which is to be distributed among the poor of the city; he has also sent to the magistrates 10,000 dollars, the sum which the court balls would have cost, to be distributed also among the poor.

The Infanta Don Juan, second son of Don Carlos, was married on the 2nd inst., at Modena, to the Archduchess Beatrix, sister of the Duchess de Bordeaux

On the 23rd of January a Constitution for Prussia was signed and sealed by his Majesty Friedrich Wilhelm the Fourth, and by the Princes of the Blood Royal of Prussia. The houses of Parliament are to represent the nation. The first, or upper house, is to consist of Princes of the Blood Royal, and of other Princes of non-reigning houses, whose seats are to be heritable; together with such persons as his Majesty may please to nominate, whether noble or otherwise. The second, or lower house, is to consist of elected members of the nobility, inferior nobility, and of members elected by cities, &c.

A letter from Rome dated Jan. 28, says:—"Richard Cobden has just arrived here from Genoa. Gibson has just received an intimation from her Majesty (through Lady Canning) that he may wait for public exhibition, next May, the truly graceful and classic statue of our Queen, which we here cannot sufficiently admire. The Duke of Devonshire has just come back here from Naples; our subscription here for the poor Irish amounts already to more than £2000."

According to advices from Odessa the wheat market was maintained with much firmness, but business, in consequence of the high demands of holders, had been limited.

The Augsburg Gazette of the 1st contains advices from Athens to Jan. 19. The Chamber of Deputies was occupied with different bills, as the budget was still in the hands of the commission. Col. Spiro Milian, who had obtained a leave of congé to proceed to Naples, was at Corfu, and held in his hands the threads of a conspiracy, the aim of which was a well organised armed descent into the north-west provinces.

From Amsterdam we learn that in consequence of the expected admission of Sugar into the breweries in this country, and also the very much reduced stocks of the refiners in Holland, the price of Sugar had considerably advanced, and the sales were only limited by the quantity offering

The papers from Stuttgard allude to a project, which is said to be favourably received by the interested Governments, for connecting the German States by railway with the Mediterranean. If the plan can be realised, the expectation seems to be entertained that it will, in a commercial point of view, prove of great benefit to the Southern German States.

A Correspondent at Alexandria, whose letter is dated Jan. 24, says:—"The speculations in grain of all sorts continue with increased ardour. Freights have risen to an extraordinary height, and shipowners are, at all events, benefiting largely. The last rate of freight paid here for grain for England was seventeen shillings per quarter—rather an advance on 6s. 6d. per quarter, which was the usual rate six months since. Seventy-one vessels with cargoes loaded and sailed between the 24th of December and the 17th January. The very high prices for wheat and Indian corn which have been recently obtained in England and Ireland, have caused such extensive orders to be sent out to Egypt and other places, that there can be no doubt enormous supplies will be poured into the United Kingdom, and that within two months the supply will greatly exceed any possible demand."

It may be interesting to the creditors of the former Republic of Columbia to notice the fact of a treaty of amity and commerce having been signed between New Grenada and Ecuador.

The letters and papers by the West India Mail, which arrived on Monday, are of a satisfactory character, the weather having been favourable in most of the islands. On the south side of Jamaica the heavy falls of rain, and it was expected that they would do much good. In fact, it is estimated that the benefit to the planters from this seasonable weather would be no less than £300,000 to £40,000

A reply has been received from the Home-office regretting the inconvenience to which Liverpool is subjected, and expressing a hope that the measures proposed to Parliament, if adopted, will diminish the influx of Irish poor.

Prince Felix of Schwarzenburg, according to accounts from Vienna, lies dangerously ill in that city. The Princess Maria, consort of the late Archduke Palatin, has arrived in the Austrian capital, en route for Gratz, where the Princess's family purpose residing for the future.

A decree has just been issued by the King of Naples, prohibiting the exportation of Indian corn and other articles.

Great distress prevails in Calabria, at Messina, and other parts of Sicily, and fears are entertained that want will cause the poorer orders to proceed to violence. The corn crop has been destroyed by inundations, and famine is now impending.

The following is the route taken by Lieut. Waghorn's Courier, when conveying the Indian expresses from Egypt to England:—From Alexandria to Trieste; Trieste to Innspruck, across the Brenner; Innspruck to Kempten; Kempten to Ulm; Ulm to Stuttgardt; Stuttgardt to Manheim; Manheim to Cologne; Cologne to Ostend; Ostend to Dover; Dover to London.

We learn from Berlin, that on the 30th ult. the Queen of Prussia was attacked with a catarrh, attended with fever, which increased for three days with great violence, but in the night of the 2nd inst. her Majesty obtained some rest, and on the 5th was much better.

The cholera has broken out along the shores of the Red Sea. The towns of Mecca, Medina, and Jedda, have suffered very considerably from this scourge, and it is much apprehended that it will soon visit Egypt. The hadjis, or Mahometan Pilgrims, seem to have suffered most. A sanatory cordon has been established at Suez.

Letters from Wurtemburg of the 3d state that the inhabitants of that city were enjoying perfect health, and on Sunday last the mercury being steadily up, at 4 or 5 degrees above zero Reaumur (from 41 to 44 Fahrenheit).

The Augsburg Gazette confirms the statement that the abolition of the slave market at Constantinople has been resolved upon.

The number of the week ending 29th inst. the number of persons passing between England and France at the undermentioned ports, was—Boulogne, 760; Calais, 161: total, 921.

A meeting has been held at Calcutta in honour of the memory of the late Dwarkanath Tagore: and it has been resolved to raise a fund, to be called the "Dwarkanath Endowment Fund," for enabling Hindoo youths to complete their education at University College, London.

Baron Pasquier, son, first surgeon of the King of the French, inspector-surgeon and grand chamberlain of the Hospital of the Army, and Commander of the Legion of Honour, died on Saturday last, after a long illness, in his 74th year.

On Wednesday, by order of his Royal Highness Prince Albert, as head ranger of Windsor Forest, a large quantity of venison was distributed to the poor of the parishes in the vicinity of the Castle.

According to accounts from Rome, 25th ult., the inundations have so completely destroyed all the produce of the lands in Calabria, that great apprehensions of serious riots from the distress these visitations have occasioned are entertained in that country as well as at Messina.

The establishment of Baths and Washhouses is about to be taken into consideration by the Town Council of Bristol.

Two of the journals of the French Legitimist party in Paris, the Union and the Echo Français, have ceased to appear. They have merged into the Quotidienne, which appeared on Sunday under the new title of L'Union Monarchique.

There is a man named William Thompson, residing in Penrith, of the good old age of 98 years, who remembers the first stage-coach that ever passed through that town, and on Sunday last the same venerable personage witnessed the last mail-coach pass through that once great thoroughfare.

The Total Abstinence Society of Liverpool adopted a new plan of obtaining an audience for their lectures on Tuesday. Having offered soup tickets to the poor who should attend. By this means a goodly audience assembled to hear the advantages to be derived from total abstinence, and at the close of the speeches 433 soup tickets were distributed

Notice has been received at the Inspector-General of Railways' Office, that the last portion of the Brighton and Hastings line is finished, and will be opened for passenger traffic on the 1st of March.

A supplement to the London Gazette of Tuesday, contains a copy of bankers' returns, with the names, residences, and occupations of the proprietors of the National Provincial Bank of England, and of the Westminster Bank. A great number of ladies figure as bankers on the list, there being not less than two hundred "spinsters," without one-fourth that number of "widows."

We are happy to state that, according to the latest accounts from Madras, Lieut.-Col. Sir Walter Scott, whose serious illness was announced some time since, had so far recovered as to be able to remove from Bangalore. He may be shortly expected in England, on leave.

THE BRITISH MUSEUM.

EGYPTIAN ROOM.

We are happy to state that the noble edifice for the conservation of our "National Museum" is nearly completed; little remains of the grand central portico for construction; and all the rooms at present contemplated, save two or three, are in course of finishing. There re-is yet to be provided a saloon for the Townley Collection, and the floor above. The present entrance to the Gallery of Antiquities is down a temporary staircase; and, to the left of the passage to the Gallery, a beautiful room is being built, or rather finished, for the reception of the Xanthian Marbles; and, from its present appearance, this apartment promises to be a fine specimen of architectural and sculptural appropriateness.

Our Illustrations show two of the new rooms in the upper floor of the western wing—the Egyptian Room, and the Etruscan Room; and a specimen of the contents of the intervening Bronze Room. The SHIELD.

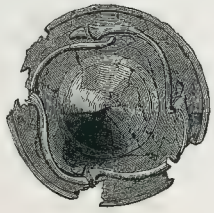
HORSE-BIT.

Western portion of the Museum, it will be recollected, is devoted, both above and below, to Ancient Sculpture and Antiquities generally.

THE EGYPTIAN ROOM,

Is the first apartment to the right of the Great Staircase leading to the Ethnographical Room. It has cases ranged on each side, filled with Egyptian deities, sacred animals, statues, household furniture, and other large objects; besides vases, lamps, bowls, cups, agricultural implements, boxes, baskets, spoons, and bricks, tools, musical instruments, playthings, &c.; in short, a variety of most interesting illustrations of the industrial arts and domestic life of the Egyptians—all especially attractive, and so devoid of the mysticism usually attached to the antiquities of Egypt, as to render this Room one of the most frequented in the Museum.

But here, as everywhere else, last of all comes death; and the floor of the room is mostly occupied with plate-glass cases of mummies, and various emblems of the painted pageantry to which mortals have fondly clung in all ages of the world. Here are coffins, sepulchral cones, and other ornaments, scarabæi, amulets, &c. Above the cases are bronzes; casts of sculptures from temples, models of obelisks, &c. The casts illustrate the heroic life of Egypt, just as the contents of the cases illustrate the social life. This room has usually crowds of visitors; and, when we remember that Egypt was the cradle of civilisation, we shall not be surprised at its relics being so popular.



SHIELD.

Next in the suite is

THE BRONZE ROOM.

The upright cases in the centre contain Greek and Roman bronze figures; other bronzes are ranged in the side cases. The Collection is as yet but partly arranged.

HAMMER-HEAD.

We have here engraved a few specimens of a recent purchase by the Museum, consisting of various bronze articles found some years since in the Polden Hills. They are designated beneath the Illustrations, and are part of a deposit of armour and bronze ornaments supposed to have belonged to a British Chieftain, during the period of the occupation of the Island by the Romans. These relics were bought for the Museum, for £150, at a sale at Bridgewater. In all probability, these remains will ultimately be placed in the room to be devoted exclusively to British Antiquities, towards which several valuable contributions are already promised.

THE ETRUSCAN ROOM,

the third in the suite, contains a collection of vases discovered in Italy, and known by the names of Etruscan, Græco-Italian, or painted. They are of various epochs and styles. They are arranged in side and central cases, chronologically, and according to the localities in which they are found. Above the side cases are painted fac similes, by S. Campanari, of the walls of an Etruscan tomb, representing dances, athletic games; a large vase, and persons at an entertainment. Another fac simile shows an entertainment, with the mode of serving wine, male and female dancers, and a curiously chequered ceiling. And a third set of paintings portrays a female paying the last offices to an old man stretched out on a bier; men drinking and dancing, playing on the double flute, &c. In short, this room presents very many phases of Etruscan life; and the adoption of the forms of Etruscan art in various vessels of our every-day use, must render these specimens at the Museum fit objects of public curiosity.

SHIELD.

ETRUSCAN ROOM.

TORQUE.

The Liverpool Chess Club.—About 50 members of the Liverpool Chess Club dined together in that town yesterday week, A. Mongredien, Esq., in the chair. After the accustomed loyal toasts, the Chairman dwelt upon the pleasures and advantages of Chess playing, and proposed "Continued Prosperity to the Liverpool Chess Club," which toast was received with great enthusiasm. "The London Chess Club, and the health of Mr. Perigal" was next given, and was acknowledged by that gentleman. Mr. Tindal Atkinson, after speaking of Chess in eloquent terms, remarked that there was one quality for which the Anglo-Saxon race was particularly famed, and that was the quality of perseverance. At the battle of Waterloo the greatest warrior of his age said of the English, "They never know when they are beaten." The Napoleon of Chess in France had not the opportunity of saying this with respect to Mr. Staunton; and, without any disparagement to M. St. Amant, he would say that, through Mr Staunton, England had manifested her intellectual superiority, as under Wellington the English people had manifested their physical superiority and powers of endurance. (Cheers.) He would propose "The health of Mr. Staunton, and success to The Chess Player's Chronicle." (Drunk with the usual honours, and with the most enthusiastic applause.) Mr. Duguid, the Vice-President, proposed "The health of M. St. Amant, and success to The Palamede." The Chairman acknowledged the compliment paid to Mr. Staunton and M. St. Amant, and read letters from three gentlemen apologising for their unavoidable absence, and expressive of the pleasure it would have given them to attend the annual festival of the Liverpool Chess Club. Mr. Staunton, in his note, pledged himself that no engagements whatever of a private nature should prevent his attendance upon the next occasion. (This announcement was received with great cheering.) The health of Mr. Spreckley was then proposed and acknowledged. Several other toasts were given, and the festivities, of which the above is a mere outline, were prolonged to a very late hour.

MISS JULIA BENNETT. MR. SELBY. MR. BUCKSTONE MRS. GLOVER. MR. FARREN.

SCENE FROM THE NEW COMEDY OF "THE SCHOOL FOR SCHEMING," AT THE HAYMARKET THEATRE.

NOOKS AND CORNERS OF OLD ENGLAND.

"KING CHARLES THE SECOND'S HOUSE," AT WORCESTER

THIS is a curious old timbered house, situated in the Corn Market, at Worcester, where, preceding the memorable battle of 1651, King Charles the Second resided; and whither, after the unfortunate issue of that battle, the King retreated with Lord Wilmot. He was closely pursued by Colonel Corbet, but effected his escape at the back door of the house, just as his pursuer entered it. The person who inhabited the house at the time is said to have been Mr. R. Durant. The room in which the King slept was in the front of the house. Over the entrance the following inscription was placed: "LOVE GOD. [W. B. 1577. R. D.] HONOR THE KING." The date over the door, most probably, marks the year of the erection, at which time it is said to have belonged to William Berkeley. Judge Berkeley was born in it, July 26, 1584. R. Durant was, most probably, the person who put up at least part of the inscription, "Honor the King," in allusion to the entertainment and protection he himself had afforded to his Sovereign. We quote the substance of these details from Mr. Britton's very interesting Picturesque Antiquities of Cities.

"CHARLES THE SECOND'S HOUSE," WORCESTER.

We might, in the present piece, perhaps award the chief praise, as regards its performance, to Mademoiselle Clarisse: as Pauline, she went far beyond anything she has yet done in London. The part is an exceedingly difficult one to create—the struggles between the pride of position and principle requiring a nice discrimination to represent them properly. Nothing could be more impressive than her acting throughout: at one point, especially, a burst of self-reproach at silently witnessing the treatment to which Fabien is subjected, in her presence, was rewarded with the loudest applause. M. Lemaitre's delineation of the slave was most powerful. His acting in the third act, where he detains Pauline on the sea shore, until the tide rises around them, and then wrings from her the declaration of her love for him, exceeded in intensity almost everything that he has before done—always excepting his prison scene with Marguerite in the grand "Tour de Neele." And in the seventh act, his madness was a delineation as perfect and truthful, almost to exciting a feeling of pain, as the marvellous representation in "La Dame de St. Tropez," of the man gradually sinking under the effects of poison. The vague recollection of the rising waters, and the circumstances connected with the scene, produced a remarkable sensation amongst the audience. The piece was nicely mounted: and the production, altogether, highly successful.

HAYMARKET.

On Tuesday evening we attended another representation of Mr. Bourcicault's new comedy, "The School for Scheming," and were pleased to find that nothing could possibly go better with a large audience than it did from beginning to end. Unsparing curtailments, as we recommended in our notice last week, have been made; the actors have warmed into their parts, and become perfect in their by-play; and the epigrammatic dialogue is brought very close. The result is that the piece never flags for a single instant. We hear, moreover, that great alterations are still being made, and that on Monday evening next, the comedy will be played in its improved form. The third act has been cut down to exactly one-half: the long soliloquies and letters have been omitted or condensed; fresh dialogue has been written in, and new terminations made to the different acts. We believe this course to be a novel one as regards a comedy; but we do not see why such a plan should not be followed, wherever it is practicable, quite as readily as revising a new edition of a book, or altering any part of a new dwelling that may be found, upon experience, to be inconvenient.

In its improved form, "The School for Scheming" will prove an attraction. Our contemporaries have been almost unanimous in attributing the questionable reception of its first representation to length, and some carelessness of construction. These altered, we have no doubt that it will go on until Easter, and achieve a run of some forty nights.

DRURY-LANE.

A new danseuse has appeared at this theatre, and she will, we expect, become as great a favourite with the public as Fuoco, Fabbri, or any other of the late Terpsichorean stars. Mademoiselle Marietta Baderna is said, by the bills, to come from Milan, where she has been dancing at La Scala. She is very young, and very pretty: two great advantages for a dancer; and she has, moreover, an expressive, winning manner, and an easy activity in her style which is exceedingly pleasing. The ballet in which she appeared is called "The Pretty Sicilian." In itself it is not a very important affair; but it served as the vehicle for a succession of effective dances and graceful groupings, which—arranged by a new ballet-master, M Blasis—were frequently applauded. We expect that Mdlle. Baderna will achieve far greater triumphs than she has yet done. From the slightness of her figure, she at times appears to want determination in her dance [illegible]; and a little incertitude in one or two of her pas seemed to show that she had yet scarcely acquired unshaken confidence in herself. But there was nothing to find fault with, beyond what a very little time and experience will rectify. On the same occasion, a M Croce made his first appearance, and was received with much approbation; he is a vigorous dancer, but elegant and light withal, and came also from La Scala. Indeed, Italy appears now to be the country from which our first dancers are to be imported.

It is to be regretted that the liberality of proprietors, manager, and performers, in throwing open the theatre for the benefit of the starving Scotch and Irish, was not responded to by the public. The house was unusually empty a circumstance which may be in a great measure attributed to the extreme severity of the weather at the beginning of the week.

OLYMPIC.

A Mr. Bayntun Holt, an amateur, as we hear, whom we spoke of some time ago, has been performing at this house; but has not succeeded in creating any

DRURY LANE THEATRE.

SCENE FROM DONIZETTI'S "FAVORITE."

OUR Artist has sketched the last scene from this opera, representing the return of Ferdinand (Mr. Travers) to the convent, and the dying appeal of Leonora (Miss Romer) for his pardon.

THE THEATRES.

FRENCH PLAYS

The performances of M. Frederic Lemaitre and Mademoiselle Clarisse still continue to draw crowded and elegant audiences to Mr. Mitchell's theatre. Since we last wrote, he has appeared in "Le Docteur Noir"—a drama in seven acts, by M. Anicet-Bourgeois, which was produced at the Porte-St.-Martin Theatre, in Paris, last July, and made a very great hit. Since that time, one or two translations have been brought out at our minor theatres. A version, if we mistake not, has been for some time playing at the Victoria Theatre; but none of them made any particular sensation; principally, we conceive, from the impossibility of finding, on our boards, so gifted an actor as M. Lemaitre to sustain the principal character, which calls for immense power. The drama is not entitled to rank amongst the first of its class: it has one or two effective situations—the rising of the tide, in the third act, and the divided representation of the rooms and cachots of the Bastille, being the most prominent points: but, as we have hinted, take away M Lemaitre and Mademoiselle Clarisse, and it would be a somewhat wearying affair, in itself. The same endeavour is made in the plot to enlist the feelings of the audience in favour of a slave, as in the "Chevalier de St. George," from which the story of the "Bondman," now performing at Drury Lane, is taken. The heroine, Pauline de la Reynerie is beloved by Fabien, a slave who possesses great skill in surgery, from which he derives his name of The Black Doctor. In spite of Pauline's noble birth, they are privately married; and the miseries resulting from the union, terminate, eventually, in Fabien's madness and death.

SCENE FROM THE OPERA OF "THE FAVORITE," AT DRURY-LANE THEATRE.—MISS ROMER AND MR. TRAVERS.

great effect. He has been followed by Mr. J. R. Scott, of whom we also gave a opinion, when that gentleman was at the Princess'. The undecided state of th Bills do not impress us with any great notions of the prosperity of this unfortu nate theatre, or with any exuberance of hope for the "support of the legitimate drama," which appears to be in a more declining state, everywhere, than ever

SURREY.

Mr. E. Stirling is an author whose productions are peculiarly acceptable to an audience at the Surrey Theatre. He understands that style of construction mos likely to suit their tastes; and we find in all his pieces a careful succession of hair breadth incidents, a vivid contrast of low comedy and melodramatic dramatis personæ; and a plot sufficiently full of interest to fix the attention of transpontine audiences, without being so opposed to the "every day" reasoner of the eye, rather than development of character or plan by dialogue such a style is his new drama of "Ruby Rattler, or the Progress of a Scamp," which has proved a hit at the Surrey, and is now enjoying the third week of its existence. We have some recollection of a novel bearing the same name; but, as no allusion is made to it in the bills, and we have not read the work, we cannot say whether the present piece is adapted from the book, or is an original prod uction. However, that is of little consequence; a successful piece has been produced, and the play-going population of the districts assemble in great numbers, and applaud accordingly. The cast comprises all the members of the Surrey company; and the scene of action, which passes from one part of the globe to its antipodes affords plenty of scope for variety of incident and effects.

A dramatic version of one of the thousand and one Christmas books—"The Yule Log"—is about to be produced at the OLYMPIC theatre.

Mr. White's new play of "Foundal Times," will be brought out at SADLER'S WELLS, on Thursday evening.

M. Frederick Lemaitre will, before his departure, appear as Jacques Ferrand in "Les Mysteres de Paris," at the LYCEUM theatre.

A new drama is in rehearsal at the PRINCESS', and Mr. Dance's new burlesque will be produced in a week at the LYCEUM.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

THE present has been one of the most eccentric seasons in the annals of woodcraft. According to brother Jonathan, "Where there is no thermometer, it gets as cold as it likes." Something must have damaged the supply of the weather, for the severities of the sky influences towards the close of the autumn; for no sooner did it cease to be too hot for out-of-door amusements, than it became too cold. November went out with the climate of Madeira, and December came in with the temperature of Siberia. That is to say, with reference to the weather averages: in some cases these variations were partial for while they were hunting in one part of a parish, they were skating in another. Thus, while the Atherstone were cultivating Diana with great éclat, the Pytchley were as fast frozen up as the Baltic: and while at Melton they contrived to put in some of the best days upon record, at Leamington they had nothing for it but to jump their carts over the dinner tables and out of the first floor windows, to keep them in practice. However, one man's meat is another man's poison; and whatever may have been its offences, this has been a glorious occasion for the lovers of skating. Imagine the turn it must have given such philanthropists as Tilbury. Conceive the velvet that a dealer was reclining on, whose customers were paying him a hundred pounds a month for the privilege of keeping one of his mansions, and fancy the feelings of his boys.

A friend, about the period of the holydays, thus wrote from Northamptonshire —"The country is covered with a glittering counterpoan of some inches, and it froze as it fell. It persevered for two whole days, and then came a regular old-fashioned Christmas day, a fashion I would rather not see repeated, as long as I have a horse in my stable. The last month's sport is thus easily summed up:— two days one good, the other bad. As to wishing my one here a happy New Year, it never enters my head: the only men who can really appreciate the compliments of the season are the dealers." So far from promising an improvement, the present week opened with a strode from bad to worse. Not only was there an end of all field sports, but the fields themselves had disappeared under fathoms of snow: in the words of Leigh Hunt "it was winter thorough." There could not have been a more characteristic proof of the hopelessness of the case, than the look of gratitude with which your "imprisoned hunter" welcomed you when you adjourned to smoke a cigar in his loose box. Hapless quadruped! he had had all manner of sport: the food he had not left him a run, even in imagination: "his force of fancy could no further go" . . . .

Those who sought asylum in town turned for comfort to Tattersall's, where they found as palatable as cold comfort. In contemplation of the wilderness of acceptances for the Chester Cup, speculation was without a path—without even an oasis in this desert. It will be sometime before volunteers will muster for such a forlorn hope as backing favourites to run in which they couldn't come to the post if they would. The betters round are as plentiful as blackberries, and about the same in value, probably; but they can't get on. No one finds—a—a thing; and, until the first blow of the murder is struck, no will be. The sensible rubs applies to all the events under quotation in the roomy market. The derby has naturally been crippled by the position of Van Tromp, aided by the advance of Epirote; the pair having been backed at about an average of 3 to 1 against them against the field, wild odds, my masters! But the ladies have helped to give way. So soon as Jack Frost does so likewise, there will be more moves on arrows.

TATTERSALL'S.

MONDAY.—A very flat market on all the Spring events, and but little doing on the Derby; that little, however, was so far important that it drove Epirote back three points and gave promotion to Planet, Gientilt, and Conyngham. Two or three heavy bets were laid on the Oaks, but no material change was effected on the prices.

NEWMARKET HANDICAP.
16 to 1 against Queen of Tyne	25 to 1 against Mosaique (5) | 30 to 1 against Sir Martin (5)

METROPOLITAN HANDICAP.
15 to 1 against Jenny Wren (5)	17 to 1 against Bonnet (5) | 20 to 1 against Mesanoe (5)

TWO THOUSAND GUINEAS STAKE
4 to 1 against Planet	5 to 1 against Conyngham (5) | 7 to 1 against Conyngham (5)
1000 to 100 agst Liberator and Bedlam (5)	70 to 40 agst Gientilt and Planet (5)

CHESTER CUP
20 to 1 agst Mendicant	30 to 1 against Intrepid (5)	50 to 1 against Fitzallen
24 to 1 — The Lamb	30 to 1 — Bourton (5)	66 to 1 — Jonathan Wild
25 to 1 — The Flirth	30 to 1 — Duke of Richmond (5)	100 to 1 — Mr Tatton Sykes (1)
40 to 1 — Duke of Richmond	30 to 1 — Golden Bee	50 to 1 — Master Downe
(5)	30 to 1 — Lonsdale	50 to 1 — The Premier (5)
40 to 1 — Mickey Free	30 to 1 — Moonlight	2000 to 10 — Robin Hurus

DERBY
13 to 2 agst J. Day's lot	33 to 1 agst Red Hart	40 to 1 agst Wanton
13 to 2 — Van Tromp (5)	33 to 1 — Sister to Cobweb colt	45 to 1 — Christopher
12 to 1 — Planet	40 to 1 — Lonsdale	50 to 1 — Will o' the Wisp
12 to 1 — Epirote	40 to 1 — Mosaique (5)	50 to 1 — Tantivy
18 to 1 — Gientilt	40 to 1 — Horse of Chase (5)	66 to 1 — Limestone (5)
30 to 1 — Conyngham	40 to 1 — Frolic	66 to 1 — Black Dwarf (5)

500 to 100 agst Kent's lot (5)	66 to 1 agst Signet (late Galvanic Rag) (5)
2300 to 100 — Liberator and Bedlam (5)	2000 even between Epirote and Planet (5)

OAKS
8 to 1 agst Farmer's Daughter (5)	8 to 1 agst Clementina | 20 to 1 agst Norissa
	20 to 1 — Ellerdale (5) | 20 to 1 — Nettles (5)
2000 to 1000 on Farmer's Daughter agst Norissa (5)	1000 to 500 on Clementina agst Norissa (5)

THURSDAY.—Another heavy day, and nothing worth special notice except the advance of Princess Alice for the Chester Cup, and a reaction in favour of Epirote for the Derby: the former having been backed freely at 40 to 1, with a subsequent improvement of ten points; and the latter at 12 and 13 to 1, for about £500

NEWMARKET HANDICAP
100 to 6 agst Sir Martin (5)	25 to 1 agst Humdrum (5) | 30 to 1 agst Dalcet (5)

METROPOLITAN HANDICAP.
15 to 1 against Lady Sarah (5)	15 to 1 against Pink Bonnet (5)

TWO THOUSAND GUINEAS STAKES
6 to 4 agst Kent's lot (5)	5 to 1 agst Conyngham (5)

CHESTER CUP.
25 to 1 agst Mendicant	33 to 1 agst Amber	50 to 1 agst Intrepid
25 to 1 — The Lamb (5)	33 to 1 — Bedlam	50 to 1 — Bourton (5)
30 to 1 — The Flirth	40 to 1 — Duke of Richmond	50 to 1 — Mr Tatton Sykes
30 to 1 — Camera Obscura	45 to 1 — Mickey Free	66 to 1 — Fitzallen

DERBY
15 to 2 agst Van Tromp	33 to 1 agst Red Hart	50 to 1 agst Will o' the Wisp
12 to 1 — Epirote (5)	40 to 1 — Lonsdale	50 to 1 — Bedlam
14 to 1 — Planet (5)	40 to 1 — Horse of Chase (5)	66 to 1 — Limestone (5)
30 to 1 — Gientilt	50 to 1 — Frolicette	66 to 1 — Black Dwarf (5)
30 to 1 — Conyngham

900 to 150 against Epirote and Planet.
Offers to take 5 to 1 about Kent's lot.

OAKS
8 to 1 agst Farmer's Daughter (5)	8 to 1 agst Clementina	20 to 1 agst Ellerdale (5)
	16 to 1 — Miami (5)	20 to 1 — Nettles (5)

THE FRENCH STEEPLE CHASE.—Nominations for the Great French Steeple Chase; weights to be published on the 6th of March, and forfeits to be declared on the 12th:—Marquis of Clanricarde's Cheviot, 5 y., 11 st.; Mr. Ward's Maid of Llangollen; Lord Strathmore's Switcher, 6 yrs., Mr. G. Watson's Lager, aged; Mr Vovers' Little Tommy, aged; Mr. H. Chillingworth's Campbine; Mr. Cooper's Avoca; Mr. Lambden's Placemen; Mr. Lambden's Albert, aged; Mr. Campbell's Christopher North; Mr. J. Pearce's Jack, aged; Captain D'Arcy's Culverthorpe, aged; Mr. Preston's Brunette, aged; Mr. Preston's Frederick, 6 yrs; Mr. Jones's Lottery, aged; Mr. Gladstone's Lucifer, 6 yrs; Mr. Oldacre's Maid Bet, Major Rawdon's Cruiskeen, Mr. Fellowes's Golden Eagle, Mr. Wilkinson's Mr. Wiggins, Mr. Gordon's Bob, Mr. Hodgson's Ragman; Mr. Wellesley's Gayhurst, 6 yrs; Mr. Sanders's Mr. Sandy, aged; Mr. Stanley's Matchless; Lord Clifton's Lotz; Mr. P. P. Rolt's Peter Simple; Mr. J. Mason's as Sabina (late Albert); Hon. R. Lawley as Red Lancer; Major Darell as Cecy, 7 yrs; Mr. Rogers's Vin Rouge; Mr. Lambden's Albert, Viscount Valentia's Lottery, 5 yrs; Mr Albert Ricardo's The Orphan (h b), aged; Mr. A. Dixon's Conservative; Mr. O. Higgins's Pioneer, aged; Mr. A. Anderson's Grenadier; Mr. Quartermain's Linkboy (h b), 6 yrs; Mr. Oldacre's Lucifer, 6 yrs; Mr. Oldacre's b g by Bachelor (h b), 5 yrs; Mr. R. Phillips's Vietress, aged; Sir R. W. Bulkeley's as b g by Tom Brown, out of a half-bred hunting mare, 6 yrs; Major M. Martin ns Little John; Mr. C. S. Cowper as The Roarer; Lord Exmouth as Walter Gay; Lord A. Fitzclarence as Little Ben (late Little John); Count Potocki as Hypolito, 5 yrs; Mr. J. Livingstone's Commodore; Mr. A. Aumont's Nous Flo; Mr. S. Drake's Indian Prince; Mr. S. Drake's Aurungzebe; Mr. S. 's The Witch; Baron N. de Rothschild's Black. The above includes the Paris entries.

THE SNOW-STORM.

The Snow-Storm swept from the mountains high,
On the wings of the furious blast;
The eagle recoil'd from his red grey eye,
And the wolf yell'd aloud as he past.
He call'd to the Alps, and the avalanche rush'd
From "the mountain of terror,"
Shrieking,
And the fisherman's cot like a reed is crush'd,
And into the wild lake borne.

The Snow-Storm scowls on St. Bernard's brow,
And blocks up the traveller's path:
Ah! vain is all courage and hardihood now,
Against the Snow-Hurricane's wrath!
'Neath the snow has he sunk, but the merciful monk
With his faithful dogs are out:
The danger is braved, and the voyager saved,
'Mid the elements' terrible rout.

The Snow-Storm loud upon Eylau' plain,
'Mid a tempest of shot and shell;
While the heart's-blood of myriads dyed the ingued, like rain,
The shuddering hill and hill
But the Snow King came down in his furious might,
And pierced the half-blind hosts—
Suspended the shock of the wolfish fight
Of the Carnage with "dogs" beasts.

Call not the snow Nature's winding sheet
'Tis a mantle protecting her breast,
Which shelters the sap of the germinating wheat
To flourish on Ceres' crest.
With the best of all blessings are evil mingled,
And thus must it be with the snow
Then drive on hoar King, from the mountain side,
To cherish the fields below.

L.

MUNIFICENT BEQUESTS TO THE BIBLE AND MISSIONARY SOCIETIES. The sum of £12,000 is vested in various religious institutions under the will of the late Mr. John Williamson, of High Wycombe, Bucks, who died on the 24th of December last, and such bequests are payable on the decease of his widow. The testator has given as a reason for disposing of so large a portion of his property he ultimately applies to the extension of Christianity in heathenish countries, that viewed the great cause of the Gospel as of paramount importance, having in his own experience enjoyed its influence, without which life would have been a burden, though surrounded with its outward comforts: and with Christian love as gratitude to the Great Giver, it was his bounden duty to extend that blessing to others; and it was his firm belief these institutions, by the help of God, are the means of bringing these blessings to an extent commensurate with the object, we might otherwise, for ought we know, continue in hopeless debasement and darkness. With these feelings he considered that the bulk of his property could not be better applied than to those purposes—having made provision for those we have claims of kindred upon him.

PRESENTATION OF PLATE.—This day, a splendid testimonial will be presents to the Rev. Thomas Salmon, Rector of St. Botolph Without, Bishopsgate, at a Dinner of the Parishioners, at the London Tavern, Mr. Alderman Cope land in the chair. The testimonial consists of a Silver Tea and Coffee Service Tea-Kettle, Two Salvers, Tea Chest, and a literary Tiffany of from the fine finished by subscription in the above Parish. The plate, which is very superb, has been manufactured by Messrs. Metcalf and Hopgood, Bishopsgate-street.

NAVAL EXPENDITURE.—A copy of the account of the naval receipts and expenditure for the year ended March 31, 1846, has been laid before Parliament whence it appears that the gross total receipts amounted to the sum of £7,169,083 and the gross total expenditure to the same amount, £7,169,083, the expenditure provided for of £185,280. The conveyance of troops entailed an expense of £160,419; the convict service, of £84,885; and the Post-office (Contract Packet Service), of £35,171

THE MARKETS.

COAL EXCHANGE, Friday.—[illegible] per market this week—sootwise and by land carriage] 9 arrivals of [illegible] coal have come on sale in every day, and we had a tolerable quantity on offer this morning. All kinds moved off readily, at an advance on Monday's quotations of from 1s to 2s per quarter. In foreign wheat—the supply of which on offer was small—a very brisk demand was experienced, prices realising an advance of from 1s to 2s per quarter. Fine malting barley was scarce, and was readily taken off at full prices. All other kinds were quite as dear. Malt was held for higher rates, which the brewers were by no means reluctant to give, consequently, comparatively little was doing in it. Oats, beans, peas, and flour remained without any material change.

ARRIVALS.—English.—Wheat, 3486 quarters; barley, 1893; malt, 3870; oats, 1120; Irish Wheat [illegible]; ——; barley, ——; oats, 1000; Foreign—Wheat, 7,01[illegible] quarters; barley, 1140 quarters; oats, 600; Flour, 2200 sacks and [illegible].

Mincing-lane, Friday.—Sugar and Kaur, no[illegible] 20s to 27s; ditto white, 74s to 84s; Norfolk and Suffolk, 66s to 74s; ditto white 74s to 79s; yellow, 48s to 58s; grinding barley, 45s to 48s; Skilling, 36s to 37s; malting ditto, 40s to 50s; Lincoln and Norfolk malt, 76s to 79s; brown ditto, 74s to 78s. Kingston and Ware, 72s to 80s. Oatmeal, 20s to 24s. Linseed, Mediterranean and London cloth seed, 34s to 36s; potato ditto, 42s to 43s; Youghal and Cork, black, 8s to 8s; ditto white, 36s to 40s; Lee Sound, 40s to 42s; ditto cake, 7l. 10s. Rapeseed, every quality, 52s to 54s; mangle ditto 50s to 54s; white, 50s to 52s. Beans, 36s to 40s, per quarter. Town-made flour, 60s to 65s. Suffolk, 55s to 58s; Essex and Yorkshire, 52s to 54s; American, 50s to 52s per barrel. Wheat, —4 to —4; Dantzig, red, 75s to 77s; ditto white, 76s to 79s per quarter. In Bond.—Barley, —s to —s; Mait, —s to —s; Rye, —s to —s; Beans, 35s to 36s; Peas, —s to —s per quarter. Flour, American, 40s to 42s. Baltic, —s to —s per barrel.

The Great Marlow Corn Exchange was opened for the selling fresh, at full prices Otherwise, the demand is in a sluggish state, at unaltered quotations.

Liverpool, Kingston, Salthe, Saturday, 30s to 34s; Mediterranean and Odessa, 32s to 34s. Rapeseed, 39s to 43s per quarter. Coriander, 18s to 19s per cwt. Brown Muscovado sugars, 37s; white ditto, 38s to 39s. Tares, 4s 6d to 5s 6d per bushel. English Tonnage, 437 qrs 2Bs per last; Foreign, 1,[illegible] qrs 2Bs per last. Wheat, 67s 2d to 71s 2d; ditto, foreign, 52s 10s to 61s 6s per 1000, Rapeseed cakes, 5l 15s to 6l 17s per ton. Canary, 57s to 59s per quarter. English Clover-seed, rod, —s to —s; white, —s to —s; Foreign, —s to —s; extra, —s to —s. Foreign, red,—s to —s, extra, —s; white, —s to —s; extra, —s per cwt. Bread.—The price of the 4lb. loaf has not changed, and is from 10d to 10½d.—Seconds' ditto, 8d to 9d per 4lb loaf.

Imperial Weekly Average.—Wheat, 70s 10d; barley, 35s 9d; oats, 23s 0d; rye, 55s 9d; beans 54s 3d, peas 57s 8d

The Gas Worker Average.—Wheat, 70s 2d; barley, 35s 9d; oats, 30s 2d; rye, 51s 1d; beans 55s 9d peas, 55s 9d.

Hops.—The market is steady, and last week's prices are well supported.

Meat.—Most kinds are in good request, but we can notice no improvement in value.

Provisions.—The best qualities of foreign butter are in good request, at full prices; but all other kinds command very little attention. Prime bacon sells at 58s to 59s; and middling, 54s to 56s per cwt. Irish butter is firm, at late rates. Carlow, landed, 88s to 96s; Cork, 90s to 98s, Limerick, 80s to 94s; Waterford, 76s to 86s per cwt. Carlow, 90s to 96s; Cork, 90s to 98s, Limerick, 80s to 94s; Waterford, 76s to 86s per cwt. For future delivery no sales have taken place. English butter is unchanged in value. Dorset, 104s to 116s; middling, 92s to 98s per cwt; fresh, 12s to 13s per dozen lbs. Bacon is the turn lower prime small Waterford, 58s; ditto middling, 54s per cwt. American and Canadian hams are very dull of sale, at 50s to 52s per cwt. Lard declining in value. Hams dull. Prime Waterford, 70s to 76s per cwt. American pork steady at late rates. Irish, 70s to 76s per barrel.

Tallow.—This article is in slow request, at barely late rates. P.Y.C., on the spot, 50s to 50s 3d per cwt

Coals Friday.—Ord's Redheugh, 17s; Tanfield Moor, 20s, Eden Main, 21s 9d; Hetton, 21s 6d; Russell's Hetton, 22s 9d; Gordon, 23s; Lambton, 23s; and Stewart's, 23s per ton

Wool, Friday.—We have no change whatever to report in the Bradford market. Scarcely any inquiry is made, and the market is in a state of stagnation. Sussex pockets, 5½ to 6d per lb; Weald of Kent ditto, 5½ to 6d per lb; Kent and East Kent ditto, 7d to 7½ per lb; Essex ditto, 6d to 6½ per cwt.

Smithfield (Friday).—We had a very moderate supply of beasts on sale here to-day, owing to which and the prevailing cold weather, the best trade was steady, and Monday's quotations were well supported. From Holland, we received 78 beasts, and 800 sheep, and from Scotland, 160 horned and polled Scots, nearly the whole of which found buyers. With sheep, we to scarcely supplied, while the mutt n trade was firm, at late rates. The sale for calves was steady, at full prices, with a moderate number offering. Pigs were dull, and 4s per score lower. Milch cows were very dull, at from £16 to £18 each, including their calves.

Per 8lb to sink the offal—Coarse and inferior beasts, 3s 4d to 3s 6d; second quality ditto, 3s 8d to 3s 10d; prime large oxen, 4s 0d to 4s 2d; prime Scots, 4s 4d to 4s 6d; coarse and inferior sheep, 3s 6d to 3s 10d; second quality ditto, 4s 0d to 4s 2d; prime coarse-woolled ditto, 4s 4d to 4s 6d; prime Southdown ditto, 4s 8d to 5s; large calves, 4s 0d to 4s 2d; prime small ditto, 4s 6d to 4s 8d; large hogs, 3s 8d to 4s 0d, neat small porkers 4s 8d to 5s 0d. Suckling calves, 21s to 28s; and quarter old store pigs, 16s to 19s each.

Beasts, 6410; sheep, 18,360; calves, 120; pigs, 290

Newgate and Leadenhall Friday.—Only a limited we e supply of fat cattle on sale to-day. For 8lb by the carcase—Inferior beef, 2s 6d to 3s 8; middling ditto, 3s 10d to 4s 0d, prime large ditto, 4s 2d to 4s 4; prime small ditto, 4s 6d to 4s 8d; large pork, 3s 6d to 4s 0d, infe ior mutton, 3s 4d to 3s 8d; middling ditto, 3s 8d to 3s 10d; prime ditto, 4s 0d to 4s 4d; veal, 4s 4d to 5s 0d; small pork, 4s 8d to 4s 10d.

ROBT HERBERT.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

There has been an increased demand for money during the week, which has had the effect of assimilating more closely the prices of money in the market with the Bank rate. No scarcity of money exists, but increased care is taken in scrutinizing the security offered for advances, which are generally limited to short periods.

The English Funds opened heavily on Monday, from the combined effects of political news from France, and the announcement of an increased demand for money on the Discount Market. Consols opened at 90¼ to 91, and declined to 90 ⅞, which was the closing price for money. On Tuesday, a further decline to 90¼ ⅜ occurred. On Wednesday, the market remained unvaried during Wednesday. The weekly meeting of the Directors of the Bank of England was regarded with some anxiety on Thursday, but no change was made in the rate of interest. This relief is only a momentary expedient [illegible] A large sale for Money Account of Consols [illegible] A slight rally has since improved quotations a shade. Exchequer Bills have rather advanced this week, although the extreme scarcity of an increased demand for money on the Discount Market. Consols opened at 90¼ to 91, and declined to 90 ⅞, which was the closing price for money. On Tuesday, a further decline to 90¼ ⅜ occurred. On Wednesday, the market remained unvaried during Wednesday. The weekly meeting of the Directors of the Bank of England was regarded with some anxiety on Thursday, but no change was made in the rate of interest. This relief is only a momentary expedient [illegible] A large sale for Money Account of Consols [illegible] A slight rally has since improved quotations a shade. Exchequer Bills have rather advanced this week, although the extreme scarcity of an increased demand for money on the Discount Market. Bank Stock is also firmer. The slight difference that exists between the price of Reduced Three per Cents and Consols, serves to show the scarcity of the latter Stock. On Tuesday, the Quarter Sum, the prices of both Stocks were the same, yielding a profit of nearly one per cent, by exchanging Consols for Reduced. This has since taken place to some extent, and the different prices are fairly adjusted. At the close of business the Market was flat. The following list contains the closing prices: Bank Stock, 179 to 180; 3 per Cent. Reduced Consols, 90⅜; New Three-and-a-Quarter per Cent., 99⅛; Long Annuities, 9 5-16; 3 per Cents, 1847, 9 5-16; India Bonds, 10; Consols for Account, 90⅜; Exchequer Bills, 9.

The state of the Consol Market affected the Foreign Securities, causing a general tendency to decline. There has, consequently, been scarcely a fluctuation worthy of record during the week. Brazilian, on Monday, quoted 80¼, and has since receded to 80. Mexican, for the Account, was 22¾; the arrival of the West India Mail, without any remittance towards the dividend, has, however, caused a decline, and the closing price is 21½. Portuguese, on Monday, was 3½. The decision of the Portuguese Government to pay the future dividends, without deducting the decimal or twenty per cent. income-tax, and to repay, as soon as the financial state of the country will permit, the amount already deducted, is given much satisfaction. No great improvement in price, however, has resulted, the closing quotation being 36, Spanish Five per Cents. have been scarcely dealt in. A slight advance in the (previously nominal) price was marked on Wednesday. At present, the Five per Cents are at 24¾ to ¾ (nominally):

Passives, . . Three per Cents 41 ; Dutch Two-and-a-Half per Cents close at 58 to ⅝; Four per Cents (Certificates), 99¾

Shares have been generally heavy during the week, but the jobbers being, with few exceptions, bears, and the public not having commenced selling to any extent, prices have not materially yielded. The Eastern Counties Company have declared a dividend of 10s. per share. This is a advance upon the last dividend. The account is in progress of settlement, but proves an unimportant affair from the limited business transacted, and the trifling fluctuations. A tendency to decline is the prevailing feature of the market, as the following prices of the lines last dealt in will evidence. Aberdeen, 22¼; Ambergate, Nottingham, Boston, and Eastern Junction, 7; Birmingham and Oxford Junction, 13; Birmingham, Wolverhampton, and Dudley, 10; Birmingham, Lancaster, and Carlisle Junction, 4; Buckinghamshire, 2; Caledonian, 26¾; Direct Northern Scrip, 2¾; Direct Western, 21¾; Ditto, New, 20¾; Ditto, York Extension, 4¾; East Lancashire, 16; Ditto, New, 6¾; Ditto, ditto, New Scrip, 2¾; East Lincolnshire, 6¾; Edinburgh and Glasgow, 7¾; Ely and Huntingdon, 13¾; Great Northern (London and York Rogd), 24¾; Great North of England New, 20¾; Ditto New, 37; Great Western, 154¾; Ditto Quarter Shares, 19; Ditto New, 8¾; Leeds and Bradford, 80¾; Leeds and Thirsk New, 3; Liverpool, Manchester, and Newcastle Junction, 2; London and Blackwall, 8; Ditto New No. 2, 1¾ pm.; Ditto Extension, 5; London, Brighton, and Southern Coast, 55; Ditto Quarter Shares, Eighths, 12; London and North-Western, 194¾; Ditto Quarters, 21; Ditto, ditto, New Shares, 14; Ditto Thirds, 18; Ditto, £40 Shares, M. & B., 72; Ditto, Seventh, W & B (A), 11¾; Oxford, Witney, and Cheltenham, 12; Ditto Tenths, 5¾; Ditto Tenths, 4¾; London and South Western Scrip, 2¾; Lynn and Ely, 21¾; Manchester and Leeds, Fifths, 10¾; Manchester, Buxton, and Matlock, 1 pm.; Ditto, New, 1¾; Ditto, New, 8¾; Newcastle and Berwick, 31¾; North British, 34¾; Ditto Extension, 1¾; Ditto Thirds, 3¾; North Staffordshire, 13; North Western, 25¾; Reading, Guildford, and Reigate, 3¾; Scottish Midland, 3¾; Shrewsbury and Birmingham, 4¾; Ditto Class B, 1¾; Shrewsbury and Hereford, 1¾; Shropshire Union Railway and Canal, 3¾; Eastern and Dover, New (ten at £20), 28; Ditto New (do. £15), 4¾; South Wales, 7; South Yorkshire, Doncaster, and Goole, 1¾; Trent Valley and Midland Junction, 4 pm.; Wind. ermere, and South Western, 2¾; York and Newcastle, New, 11¾; Ditto, Fifths, 8¾; York and North Midland, 90; Ditto, Selby, 89¾; Ditto Extension, 17¾; Ditto, Preference, 11¾; Ditto East and West Riding Extension, 21¾; Boulogne and Amiens, 14; Dutch Rhenish, 4¾; Namur and Liege, 3¾; Northern of France, 12; Orleans and Bordeaux, 7.

SATURDAY MORNING.—Consols declined yesterday, at one period quoting only 90¼ for Money. An improvement took place in the late quotations at 90¼ to ⅜ for Money, and 90¾ ⅞ for Time. In the Foreign Market, Mexican receded to 21¾, shares did not vary, the Settlement absorbing the attention of the dealers. It was a light Account, and passed off without difficulty.

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 9.

BANKRUPTS.

W. BLENKARN, Stoke-upon-Trent, [illegible] builder. T. S. BUTTIFANT, Norwich, haberdasher. J. [illegible], Bristol, grocer. J. HODGSON, Watford, innkeeper. M. CRINER, Lambeth, saddler. W. GROSSMITH, Portsmouth, baker. J. HAINES, Chipping Barnet, victualler. J. HITCHCOCK, Poppin's-court, Fleet-street, printer. G. HOLE, Newton, Somersetshire, coal-merchant. J. H. PAYNE, High-street, Camberwell, bear-retailer. J. SPENCER, Scotston, Nottinghamshire, surveyor-man. T. SPRATT, Sloane-terrace, Chelsea, coachmaker. S. THOMPSON, Liverpool, hatter

SCOTCH SEQUESTRATIONS.

G. BRIDGES, North Berwick, builder. D. FORBES, Invergordon, innkeeper. T. GARDNER, Glasgow, builder. R. TEMPLETON, W. TEMPLETON, J. M'MILLAN, and M. MITCHELL, Dramore, Campbeltown, distillers

FRIDAY, FEB. 12

WHITEHALL, FEB. 11

The Queen has been pleased to present the Rev. William Corson to the church and parish of Girvan, in the presbytery and county of Ayr, vacant by the death of the Rev Peter M'Master.

WHITEHALL, FEB. 12

The Queen has been pleased to appoint Mr. John William Leach, as Consul at Swansea for the Republic of Chili.

WAR OFFICE, FEB. 12

1st Dragoon Guards: P. W. Yorke to be Cornet, vice de Rhodes. 6th Cornet T. Heywood to be Lieutenant, vice Hundy. Ensign T. G. C. Gwyn to be Cornet, vice Heywood

6th Dragoons: Cornet Sidney Medley, M.D., to be Surgeon, vice W. Mulligan, M.D.

4th Light Dragoons: Assistant-Surgeon J. Hall, M.D., to be Assistant-Surgeon, vice Stewart

2nd or Grenadier Foot Guards. Lieut.-Col. A. H. Gordon to be Captain and Lieutenant-Colonel, vice the Hon. A. E. Fraser; Lieut. and Capt. A. Cox to be Captain and Lieutenant-Colonel, vice Gordon; Ensign and Lieut. J. Hodgson to be Lieutenant and Captain, vice Cox; Ensign W. H. Cameron to be Ensign and Lieutenant, vice Stuart

3rd Foot: Brevet Major Charles Hunter to be Major, vice Mellish. Lieut.-Col. H. Dundas to be Lieut.-Col., vice R. Airey, Brevet Lieut.-Col. W. Fawcett to be Major, vice Dundas; Capt. J. Hamilton Gordon to be Major, vice Fawcett; Lieut. and Adjutant and Captain, vice Cox; Ensign W. H. Cameron to be Lieutenant, vice Stuart

4th Foot: Brevet Major H. Bruce to be Major, vice Wyatt. 9th Lieut.-Col. H. Dundas to be Lieut.-Col., vice R. Airey, Brevet Lieut.-Col. W. Fawcett to be Major, vice Dundas; Capt J. Hamilton Gordon to be Major, vice Fawcett; Lieut. and Adjutant and Captain, vice Cox; Ensign W. H. Cameron to be Lieutenant, vice Stuart

9th Foot: Brevet Major H. Bruce to be Major, vice Wyatt. 10th Lieut.-Col. H. Dundas to be Lieut.-Col., vice R. Airey, Brevet Lieut.-Col. W. Fawcett to be Major, vice Dundas; Capt J. Hamilton Gordon to be Major, vice Fawcett; Lieut. and Adjutant and Captain, vice Cox; Ensign W. H. Cameron to be Lieutenant, vice Stuart

13th Foot: Brevet Major H. Bruce to be Major, vice Wyatt. 40th Lieut.-Col. H. Dundas to be Lieut.-Col., vice R. Airey, Brevet Lieut.-Col. W. Fawcett to be Major, vice Dundas; Capt J. Hamilton Gordon to be Major, vice Fawcett; Lieut. and Adjutant and Captain, vice Cox; Ensign W. H. Cameron to be Lieutenant, vice Stuart

Royal Regiment of Horse Guards: Major-General Sir Edward Blakeney, K.C.B., to be Lieutenant-General, vice Sir Hussey Vivian, G.C.B. 4th Light Dragoons: Major-General Sir Hussey Vivian, G.C.B., to be Lieutenant-General, vice Sir Edward Blakeney, K.C.B. 3rd Foot: Major-General Sir Edward Blakeney, K.C.B., to be Lieutenant-General, vice Sir Hussey Vivian, G.C.B. 9th Foot: Major-General Sir Hussey Vivian, G.C.B., to be Lieutenant-General, vice Sir Edward Blakeney, K.C.B. 13th Foot: Major-General Sir Edward Blakeney, K.C.B., to be Lieutenant-General, vice Sir Hussey Vivian, G.C.B.

Royal Malta Fencible Regiment.—Lieut. S. Gatt to be Captain, vice V. Bonavia; Ensign L. Bonavia to be Lieutenant, vice Gatt. Ensign J. Anderson to be Adjutant, vice Bonavia.

UNATTACHED.—Major H. Burdon to be Lieutenant-Colonel

HOSPITAL STAFF.—Assistant-Surgeon J. Mitchell, M.D., to be Staff Surgeon of Second Class, vice Stephen; A. G. Gibb to be Assistant-Surgeon to the Forces, vice Newton W. N. Boyce to be Assistant-Surgeon to the Forces, vice Twedie

COMMISSARIAT STAFF.—Lieut.-Col. A. D. Gordon from the Army, Brevet Lieut. C. W. Fawcett to be Colonel in the Army

Lieut. H. Brevet Capt. A. Dudley to be Fort Major at Inverness or Fort George vice Capt. A. Fraser.

COMMISSIONS SIGNED BY LORDS-LIEUTENANT

Yorkshire Hussar Regiment of West Riding Yeomanry Cavalry.—T. B. Preston to be Cornet, Regiment of North-Lincolnshire Militia (Yeomanry Corps).—Lieut. J. Watchorn to be Captain, vice W. B. Callander; Lieut. W. E. Ramsay to be Captain, vice the Right Hon. Charles Anderson Pelham; Ensign J. Deane to be Lieutenant, vice Watchorn; J. Deane, Assistant-Surgeon to the Regiment, vice Campbell, M.D., resigned; Surgeon J. Watchorn to be Lieutenant, vice J. Watchorn; Cornet W. S. Walker to be Lieutenant, vice A. Thompson; Ensign G. S. Montgomery, Bart., to be Cornet, vice Walker; J. W. Drummond to be Lieutenant, vice Dewar. Assistant-Surgeon J. Scott to be Surgeon, vice J. Craig, M.D.; T. Peacock, M.D., to be Assistant-Surgeon vice Hurt.

BANKRUPTCY SUPERSEDED

J. MOORE, Camden Town, builder

BANKRUPTS.

E. MORGAN, Oxford-street, shawl manufacturer. J. CLARKE, Great Castle street Regent-street, publisher. T. GILBERT, Bishopsgate-street, cheesemonger. F. HATCH, Stoke-sanare, Clerkenwell, linen-plaire worker. A. HOSLEY, Birchanhall, Cheshire. [illegible] G. D. PAYNE, Saville-row, Regent-street, tailor. J. ROUSE, Exeter, plumber. J. [illegible] Manchester, commission agent. T. HOPKINS, Carmarthenshire, innkeeper. J. BROMLY, Great Bromley, Essex, dealer in cattle. R. CRAIG and W. RAWLINGS, Maidenhead, King's-arms, timber merchants. J. LOVETT and G. LOVETT, Sarsaden-marsh, Cambridge-heath, Hackney, builders. R. V. FURLONG, Cambray, Cheltenham, wine merchant.

BIRTHS

At Walmer, the wife of C. H. Baker, Esq., Commander, Royal Navy, of a daughter.—At Monkton Hewtery, Surry, the wife of the Rev. W. C. Coffin, M.A., of a son.—In New Cavendish-street, Mrs. Lionel Booth, of a daughter.—At Harkaford, near Marlow, the Viscountess Strangford, of a daughter.—At Bath, the wife of Captain H

ETHIOPIAN SERENADERS. —ST. JAMES'S THEATRE. The celebrated ETHIOPIAN SERENADERS, PELL, HARRINGTON, WHITE STANWOOD and GERMON, will, in consequence of the Triumphant Success and Unparalleled Attractions of these Performances, have the honour of continuing their INIMITABLE ENTERTAINMENTS at the above Theatre, every Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday. Doors open at Eight o'Clock, and the Entertainment commences at Half-past Eight. The Public will be given of their next DAY PERFORMANCE. The Programme on each occasion will be selected from their most popular pieces, including several New Songs and Melodies. Stage Box, 7s.; Pit, 3s.; Amphitheatre, 2s. Private Boxes, Stalls and places may be secured at Mr. Mitchell's Royal Library, 33, Old Bond-street, and at the Box office of the Theatre which is open daily from Eleven till Five o'Clock.

LOVE'S ENTERTAINMENTS.—TENTH YEAR IN LONDON. VENTRILOQUISM EXTRAORDINARY, CROSBY HALL, Bishopsgate-street. On WEDNESDAY Next, Feb 17, and WEDNESDAY, Feb. 24, Mr. LOVE will present, for the first time here, a POLYPHONIC ENTERTAINMENT on a Novel Construction, with New and Appropriate Metallive Costumes and Accessories not hitherto produced, entitled A CHIP. MAS PARTY IN THE OLDEN TIME. LOVE will represent, visibly and invisibly, the Host and Hostess, Guests and Servants. With other Entertainments, including several New Songs and Melodies. Doors Open at Eight. Doors Open half an hour earlier. First Class Seats, 3s.; Gallery, 1s.

On MONDAY, Feb. 15, Mr. LOVE will give an ENTERTAINMENT at the LITERARY INSTITUTION, WOOLWICH; on FRIDAY, Feb. 19, at the LITERARY INSTITUTION, BLACKHEATH; and on TUESDAY, March 2, at the MANOR ROOMS, SURREY NEW-INGTON.

SACRED CONCERTS, CROSBY HALL, BISHOPSGATE-STREET.—The fourth of the fifth series of Sacred Concerts, given at Crosby Hall under the sole direction of Miss Mounsey, took place on Wednesday. From the selection in memoria are the 'Ancient Concerts of the East,' and, as wise men are found in that quarter, they are always treated in the judiciously-arranged programmes with such a selection as the most fastidious taste must admire.—Illustrated London News, June 20, 1846. The FIFTH CONCERT of this Series will take place on Friday, the 19th instant. Principal Vocalists, Miss Dolby, Mrs. Bostock, Mr. Hobbs, and Mr. Francis, with a full Band and Chorus. Conductor, Mr. Willy. Subscription will be received at the Rooms of Handel, Haydn, Beethoven, Bryce, Bach Rent, Mori Lonsdale, Bishop, &c. &c. Miss Mounsey will preside at the Organ. To commence at Half-past Seven. Tickets, 2s. 6d. each.

WEIPPERT'S SOIREES DANSANTES, PRINCESS'S CONCERT ROOMS, MONDAY, FEBRUARY 15th, and Every Monday.—A Subscriber of Two Guineas is entitled to a Double Transferable Ticket for Six Nights, and the subscription can commence on any Monday. The Palace Band consists of the same Artistes as attend the Lady's Stable Balls and Almack's. Conductor, Mr. Weippert. Leaders, Signor Zerbini; concert-à-pistoles, Mr. Handley; cymbalists, M. Prosper; M. C.; Mr. Corrie, Commences at Ten o'Clock. Tickets, Seven Shillings each, at Weippert's Quadrille Office, 24, Soho-square.

WALHALLA, late Miss Linwood's Gallery, Leicester-square.—Under the Patronage of the Nobility and Gentry, and Several Distinguished Members of the Royal Academy. MADAME WARTON'S UNEQUALLED TABLEAUX VIVANS with increased attraction. Madame WARTON will appear, by particular desire, in her much admired personation of INNOCENCE, and in the NORMAN PEASANTS, and a Series of Tableaux, every morning and evening during the week. The Public Press has unanimously declared the Exhibition to be unequalled. A Series of Pantomimes are in active preparation, and will shortly be produced. Each Tableau accompanied by Descriptive Music, by a Band of Select Performers, conducted by Herr Redl. The Arrangements will commence every Evening at Half-past 8. Stalls, 3s.; Reserved Seats, 2s.; Promenade, 1s. Juveniles to the Stalls and Reserved Seats, Half-Price.

HALL OF ROME, Great Windmill-street, Haymarket.—The original TABLEAUX VIVANS and POSES PLASTIQUES.—The Proprietor begs leave to inform the Public, Country, and the Public in general, that the Establishment has been re-opened, and the most extensive alterations made therein, with Stalls and Reserved Seats fitted up in a manner unsurpassed, the whole being elegantly carpeted throughout. The Tableaux at this Establishment are of the most splendid description, and the largest ever offered to the Public, the words of the songs, 60 feet in length, being thrown upon the Curtain. The Performances commences every afternoon at Three o'Clock precisely, and at Half-past Eight in the Evening. Stalls, 2s. 6d.; Boxes, 2s.; Pit, 1s.

FANCY FAIR.

UNDER THE IMMEDIATE PATRONAGE OF HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN.

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent. The Right Hon. the Countess of Jersey.
Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Cambridge. The Right Hon. the Countess of Wemyss.
Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester. The Right Hon. the Countess of Hardwicke
Her Grace the Duchess of Sutherland. The Right Hon. the Countess of Carnarvon.
Her Grace the Duchess of Marlborough. The Right Hon. the Countess of Wilton.
The Right Hon. the Countess of Mexborough. The Hon. Mrs. Bligh.
&c. &c. &c.

Will be held, at the House and Grounds of the Institution, HAVERSTOCK HILL, HAMPSTEAD-ROAD, on the 8th, 10th, 11th, and 12th Days of MAY, 1847, a BAZAAR, for the Sale of Fancy and Useful Articles, in aid of the erection of the New Chapel of the ORPHAN WORKING SCHOOL,

REMOVING FROM THE CITY ROAD.

This Institution is open to Orphans from all parts of the Kingdom, and of every religious denomination, between the ages of seven and eleven years. They remain until they are properly educated and clothed, and placed out as servants or apprentices. The Charity was instituted in 1758 for 20 boys a-year; it has now 130 children of both sexes, who are educated, clothed, and wholly maintained. The appeal for funds, and the success of the sale, will depend upon the extent and increase of the Standing now erecting, where 240 children will be provided for.

The Committee will be happy to receive Donations of Ladies as will undertake to assist in this important object, when circulars shall be sent to them.

Contributions of Useful and Ornamental Articles, Money for the Poor, Paintings, Drawings, Music, Prints, Books, Autographs, Minerals, Shells, Flowers, Fruit, Botanical Specimens, Rich Jewellery, Gold and Silver Articles, Antiques, Curiosities, &c. are respectfully requested to Mr. JOSEPH SOUL, Right articles of manufactured goods, with pecuniary aid, forwarded to Mr. JOSEPH SOUL, the Secretary, at the Office, 32, Poultry, by whom they will be acknowledged.

Manufacturers are invited to send any new and novel articles of British manufacture for exhibition, as such opportunities for display may occur. Their kindness in this Benevolent Cause will be thankfully received.

The next half-yearly Election will take place in April. Petitions must be sent in before the 30th inst. Forms may be had at the Offices of the Charity, 19, Gresham-street, near the Bank of England.

Just published, price 2s. 6d.,

THE CORRELATION of PHYSICAL FORCES.

By W. R. GROVE, Esq., M.A., F.R.S.,
Professor of Experimental Philosophy in the London Institution.

COINS of the ANCIENT ROMAN EMPERORS: History of the Succession of the Ancient Roman Emperors, with the Prices of their Coins, bearing Portraits, their Dates and Mottoes, is just published by P. WHELAN, Dealer in Ancient Coins, 46, Strand, London. Vol. IV. post, 8vo. cloth, Catalogue, 14s.

POLKA JACKETS.—Now Ready, price 6d., in highly Ornamental Wrapper, and beautifully Illustrated, the Second Edition of MRS. SAVAGE'S POLKA JACKET BOOK in KNITTING and CROCHET; with many other Useful Receipts.—London: ACKERMANN and Co.; the principal Berlin Warehouses, and all Booksellers, and Fancy Repositories; or of the Authoress, Wimbledon. By Post, 8d.

N.B. Wanted a Situation for an Experienced Assistant in the Trade.

Just Published, with plates, 8vo., 7s.,

THE UNITY of the EPISCOPATE CONSIDERED, in Reply to the Work of the Rev. T. W. Allies, M.A., entitled, "The Church of England Cleared from the Charge of Schism, upon Testimonies of Councils and Fathers of the First Centuries." By EDWARD HEALY THOMPSON, M.A., Author of "Remarks on Certain Anglican Theories."

"Episcopalians must set cujus a singulis pars tenetur."—St. Cyprian.

THOMAS HODGSON, 92, Fleet-street, and 5, Paternoster-row; Dublin, and Derby.

The Art of Health, Happiness, and Long Life, in Two Volumes, 1s. each; by post, in stamps, 1s. 6d. each.

WHAT to EAT, DRINK, and AVOID; (with Diet Tables for all Complaints.) HOW TO BE HAPPY: on Ruglness, Expedience, and Mental Government.—By ROBT JAS. CULVERWELL, M.D. M.R.C.S., L.S.A., &c.—Strand: WOOD, 246, Strand; and 27, Ave Maria-lane. Of whom may be had, Dr. Culverwell's Lectures.

JULLIEN'S ALBUM for 1847.—In consequence of the extraordinary sale of this splendid work (which has been pronounced by the unanimous voice of the public press of the United Kingdom, "the best and most perfect work of the kind ever published, and the great number of persons who have been unable to obtain copies, M. JULLIEN has been induced to publish a Sixth Edition, with extensive Additions and Corrections. The Edition contains near 50 pieces of the newest and most favourite Vocal and Instrumental Music, including all the Novelties to be introduced during the forthcoming season.—M. JULLIEN, 214, Regent-street. The price of Jullien's Album is 21s. In boards, if purchased separately, would cost near £6.—Royal Musical Conservatory, 214, Regent-street.

ETHIOPIAN SONGS, with Words. Genuine Edition. All of the Negro Songs, as sung by the Serenaders, at the Polygraphic Hall, are published in THE PIANISTA, for FEBRUARY, No. 37, price 2s.; p.p., 36 stamps. They comprise 12 of the most Popular, viz.:—Mary Blane, Lucy Neal, Buffalo Gals, Old Joe, Sich a Gal as Sally Long, Over the River, Oh Dan Tucker, &c. &c. They were all given as Polkas for dancing in No. 7, p.p. 36 stamps. All orders for these numbers of THE PIANISTA should be immediate, as the demand is great. Pianists Office, 67, Paternoster-row.

Just Published, Price 2s. 6d.,

DRY AND WET BULB THERMOMETERS. Description, Theory, Directions for using for Meteorological Purposes, particularly when the temperature is below the freezing-point; also in Regular or the Temperature and Humidity of the Air in the Sick Chamber, in Rooms where Numbers are in Connection, &c. &c. &c. With Tables, showing by inspection the Elastic Force of Vapour, or the quantity of water then mixed with the air; the weight of Vapour in a cubic foot of Air, the additional quantity required to saturate it, and the degree of Dew Point, &c. &c. &c. for every reading of the Thermometers between 10 deg. and 90 deg. With an accurate Engraving of the Instruments. By JAMES GLAISHER, Esq., of the Royal Observatory, Greenwich.

MR. COLBURN'S NEW PUBLICATIONS
AND NEW WORKS, IN 3 VOLS. POST 8VO.,

THE STORY OF LILLY DAWSON.
BY THE AUTHOR OF "SUSAN HOPLEY."
II.
ADVENTURES of the CONNAUGHT RANGERS in the Peninsula and the South of France, from 1809 to 1814. By Sir W. GRATTAN, Esq., Late Lieutenant, Connaught Rangers.
III.
TEMPTATION AND ATONEMENT. By MRS. GORE. 3 vols. (Now Ready.)
IV.
REVELATIONS OF PORTUGAL. An OVERLAND JOURNEY TO LISBON at the Close of 1846; with a Picture of the Actual State of SPAIN and PORTUGAL. By T. M. HUGHES, Esq. 2 vols. small 8vo. (Now Ready.)
V.
THIERS' HISTORY of the CONSULATE and EMPIRE. The only authorized English Edition. Translated, by D. FORBES CAMPBELL, Esq. 6 Volumes, small 8vo. Price 30s. 6d.
LEA CONSULATE, Publisher.

VALUABLE BOOKS.—R. SAYWELL'S CATALOGUE for 1847. Part I. of Important and Interesting Works in the various Branches of English Literature, at very reduced prices, may be had, gratis, on application, or will, on receipt of two postage stamps, be forwarded, prepaid, to any address.—187, High Holborn.

W. A. SCRIPPS and SON, GENERAL NEWSPAPER AGENTS, beg to inform such of their customers as now receive the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, and the public in general, that they have adopted the suggestion of the proprietors of that Paper, and that, in future, the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS will be forwarded from their Office in accordance with the directions so recommended, carefully enclosed in Large Envelopes, to prevent damage.—Orders for the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, and all other London, Provincial, and Foreign Newspapers, will receive the most punctual attention. Advertisements received for insertion.

18, South Molton-street, Bond-street.—London, Jan. 14th.

ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS IMPROVED ENVELOPE.—WOODWARD, CASTLE, and LAMB, London Newspaper and Advertising Agents, 7, Ball-head-court, Newgate-street, having made use of the above Envelope with success, at suggestion by the Proprietors of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, some months since and it having been manufactured by another house, they have to state that all copies of that Paper forwarded through them, will be supplied in the same manner as to prevent damage. They also receive orders for all the London Newspapers, which will be punctually to be supplied with the punctuality for which their house has been so long distinguished.

BOOKS FOR SCHOOLS AND FAMILIES.

PARKER'S CATALOGUE of BOOKS in all Branches of Education, including those produced under the Sanction of the Committee of Council on Education, and the Publications of the Committee of General Literature and Education, appointed by the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, will be sent, free of postage, on application to the Publisher. WEST STRAND, LONDON, February, 1847.

FIELD'S CHEAP BOOK ESTABLISHMENT, 65, Quadrant, corner of Air-street [illegible] BOOKS, [illegible] Sets, are selected from a stock of upwards of 20,000 volumes. Catalogue, Part I. (Theology), 140 octavo pages, 2 vols., half morocco, £2 2s.; published £4 10s.; Evenings at Haddon Hall, by the Reverend Caleb Colton, 12s. 6d.; published £1 11s. 6d.; Gallery of Beauty, 21s.; published £2 12s. 6d.; Finden's Tableaux, 3 splendid folio volumes, £4 4s.; published £10 10s.; The British Poets, 6 vols., with superb coloured plates, £1 12s.; published £4 14s.; Fraser's Travels, two vols in one, 5s.; published 28s.; Mrs. Bell's Irish Sketches, illustrated by Maclise, 12s. 6d.; published 24s.; The Three Tours of Dr. Syntax, 3 vols., with 80 coloured plates, by Rowlandson, 16s. 6d.; published 31s.; The Standard Novels, comprising the best works of Bulwer, James, Hook, &c. &c., 1s. 6d., 2s. 6d., published 2s. 6d. Catalogues gratis and Postage free.

BEARD'S COLOURED PHOTOGRAPHIC PORTRAITS, at 24, PARLIAMENT-STREET, WESTMINSTER:
85, KING WILLIAM-STREET, CITY; and the
ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION, REGENT-STREET.

"A great improvement has been effected by the Patentee."—The Times

ELEGANT PICTURE-FRAMES, &c. — "JEPHTHA'S DAUGHTER." WM. FOLLIT, 63, Fleet-street, has displayed chastely ornamented frames, for this beautiful Engraving, at a cost hitherto unattempted. Subscribers who have not received the Print, are solicited to forward their orders to receive the same by W. FOLLIT, which will ensure good impressions. Priced sheets of superb Look [illegible]—FOLLIT'S Old-established Economic Carving and Gilding Establishment, 63, Fleet-street.

FENDERS and FIRE-IRONS. — The best-selected Stock of Fenders, Fire-irons, Dish Covers, Tea Trays, Tea Urns, and every Article in Furnishing Ironmongery, may be inspected at S. and J. SLACK'S Warehouse, 336, Strand [illegible] articles is marked in plain figures, at prices 30 per Cent. under other houses, for Cash. The Public are invited to call and compare the present Establishment with that of Twenty Years ago.

CORK LEGS.—W. R. GROSSMITH'S PATENT ACTION [illegible] enable all who have lost a leg to walk with ease and comfort. They are much lighter and considerably less expensive than the old style. Ladies and Gentlemen can fit them with perfect safety. They are suited to nature in shape and movement, and the spinal and other deformities occasioned by the use of crutches and the common pin legs) are entirely prevented.—Manufactory, Leg and Eye Manufactory, 173, Fleet-street.—Established 1760.

PRESERVATIVE TOOTH PASTE.—The effect is truly astonishing upon Discoloured Teeth, Diseased Gums, and Offensive Breath. The Proprietor has been induced to offer the above to the publicat the earnest solicitation of numerous patients, who have found the benefit of its use.—Prepared and Sold by the Proprietor Mr. HOLLANDS, Surgeon-Dentist, 52, Rupert-street, Haymarket, and by respectable Chemists in town and country.—A Liberal Allowance to Agents.—Only 1s. per Box.

THE attention of Ladies is respectfully requested to the NORWICH COTTON COMPANY'S (J. L. BARBER and CO.'S) 3 and 6 Card Sewing Knitting, and Netting Cotton; as being of the most beautiful texture of any yet produced. It is wound on reels in 100, 200, and 300 yards; and can be had at all the most respectable [illegible] Haberdashers; and wholesale only of the Agent in London, Mr. W. [illegible] Cheapside.

THE TOILET of BEAUTY furnishes unanswerable proofs of the high estimation in which ROWLAND'S KALYDOR is held by the beautiful portion of the community, and deservedly so. This elegant preparation comprehends the preservation of the complexion, both from the effects of cutaneous malady and the operation of variable atmospheres, by refreshing its delicacy, and sustaining the slightest tinge of carnation which is adorned. "ROBT SHAW, London," is in white letters on the Government Stamp, with the whole name is genuine. Price 4s. 6d., 8s. 6d., 16s., and 24s. Sold by all Perfumers and Medicine Vendors.

PATRONISED BY THE NOBILITY.

STAFFORD PENLEY'S EAU DE CARMES, a most fragrant, grateful, and delicious Perfume for the Toilet, the Bath, Room, and the Chamber of the Invalid, composed of the choicest extracts from the rarest exotics. In the East Indies they have been noted for the last fifty years. Arney's Rhone Mange and Jelly, Paul De Vere's Fermeza, Hardy's Fairinecure Pomade, Dr. Kidd's, 167, New Bond-street, Upper Albion-street, Regent's Park, near the Colosseum and Zoological gardens.

THE MINISTER'S STATEMENT having entirely set at rest the question of tea duties, the EAST INDIA TEA COMPANY point out to Dealers and others who have refrained from increasing their stocks, whilst there was the most remote probability of a reduction, that the present very low prices offer every inducement to purchase freely. Useful Black Congou Tea, 2s. 8d., 3s., 3s. 4d., 3s. 8d., 4s., and 4s. 8d. per lb. 10d. Coffees, 9d., 1s., 1s. 2d., and 1s. 8d.—Offices, 9, Great St. Helen's Churchyard

TEAS at WHOLESALE PRICES, 2, BUCKLERSBURY

CHEAPSIDE.
Good Useful Breakfast Tea	..	..	3s. 6d. to 3s. 4d.
Fine Do. Pekoe Flavoured	..	..	3s. 8d. .. 4s. 0d.
Rich Pekoe Souchong	..	..	4s. 0d. .. 4s. 8d.
Good Useful Green	..	..	3s. 4d. .. 3s. 8d.
Fine Imperial Gunpowder	..	..	4s. 4d.
Superfine Do. Hyson	..	..	5s. 0d.
Finest Gunpowder	..	..	5s. 4d.

Six pounds of the above delivered free of carriage to any part of England.
MANSELL and CO., Wholesale Tea Dealers, 2, Bucklersbury, Cheapside

WINDOW BLINDS.—TYLOR and PACE, General Window Blind Manufacturers, 3, Queen-street, three doors from Cheapside.

Venetian Blinds per square foot	..	..	0s. 8d.
Holland Roller Blinds	..	..	0 6
Hol and Spring Ditto	..	..	0 8
Union Roller Blinds	..	..	0 4
Perforated Zinc Blinds, in mah gany frames	..	..	0 10
Canvas Wire Ditto	ditto	..	1 10
Durable Blinds of Striped Cloth	..	..	1 9

Transparent Blinds, each 12s., 18s., 24s., 30s., 42s., and upwards.
Detailed lists of prices forwarded on application, post free.

GREAT SALE at GEORGE SMITH'S, 32, Ludgate-hill (late Randall and Bridges').—The progress of GEORGE SMITH'S NEW SYSTEM of BUSINESS renders it imperative that EXTENSIVE ALTERATIONS and ADDITIONS be immediately made to his premises. To prevent the unavoidable damage in removing by the operations of DEMOLISHING and REBUILDING, he is compelled to submit to the ruinous loss of a SELLING OFF, by immediate payment, at prices much less than the present cost, which will vary from 25 to 50 PER CENT; and, in making this statement, George Smith begs to impress an additional fact upon the Ladies, that, whilst they obtain a saving of from 25 to 50 per cent, ONE HALF the purchase they must remember that IT IS NOT UPON OLD STOCK their economy is exercised, but upon fresh new goods, the whole of which have been manufactured within a very few months. Commend upon the quality of which these goods is unnecessary; they are well known by the public to consist in every variety of moderate and useful Silks, Velvets, Satins, Ribbons, Mantles, Shawls, Dresses, Lace, Hosiery, Gloves, Haberdashery, Millinery, Baby Linen, and Infants' Wardrobes, at a reduction of from 25 to 50 PER CENT; and, in making this statement, George Smith begs to impress an additional fact upon the Ladies, that, whilst they obtain a saving of from 25 to 50 per cent, they must remember that IT IS NOT UPON OLD STOCK their economy is exercised, but upon fresh new goods, the whole of which have been manufactured within a very few months. Commend upon the quality of

AUSTRIAN RAILWAY CARRIAGE.—(THIRD CLASS.)

THIRD-CLASS CARRIAGE ON THE PRAGUE AND VIENNA RAILWAY.

No idea to be drawn from our own third-class carriages can be formed of the originality of these conveyances, and the admirable ease and liberty which reign in their internal administration. A wide path, broken by a slender iron pillar, like those which do the duty of supporting the roof, separates it into two portions, filled with little seats, each of which, with its vis-a-vis, accommodates its five or six inmates; but it must not be imagined for one moment that the greater part of the motley group congregated in the carriage adhere pertinaciously to any one seat. Like the conductor, who now lolls, in his fur jacket, at the door, and now, with his short meerschaum, ranges through the apartment, chatting indiscriminately with the passengers, who are, for the moment, in every sense of the word, his subjects—and subjects, too, whom, in some cases, he would not hesitate to rule with a rod of iron—variety seems to be a necessity with them. Now, the two old Bohemians murmuring their jokes to each other in their native tongue, are talking bad German to the Croat, who talks worse, or questioning—for never was there a better hand at a question than a real Bohemian peasant—the Polish Jew, in the furred robe and cap, with the magnificent silken beard, which was shorn a few months after, at his Russian Majesty's order. They put the question in Bohemian, and are answered in Polish—for the two principal Sclavonic tongues do not differ so much from their root, the Bohemian, as English does from the dialect of the north, or from pure Yorkshire. The Tyrolian is now courting, in bad German, the market-girls, who are beautiful, as every woman under forty in that garden of Bohemia is; and is anon asking the soldier for light to his pipe of the Italian in the corner, in bad Piedmontese. And at every pause—and the pauses are half-hours and hours at all the stations—the sellers of brant-wein, and sausages, beer, and cognac, and pastry, and sandwiches, and coffee—bright little children, with yellow hair, and blue eyes, and naked feet—come wandering through the carriages; and the jolly Austrian eats and drinks at every place, as if it were his only enjoyment; while the poor Croat envies, and the Tyrolian wonders, and the Jew laughs in his sleeve, at his tireless appetite.

RELICS DESTROYED IN THE RECENT FIRE AT EASTON LODGE.

One of the almost invariable consequences of the destruction of a fine old English mansion by fire is the sweeping away of a number of the relics of the ingenuity of past ages, which, as memorials of art, are more interesting than the mansion itself. The possessors of these "ancestral homes" are usually collectors of antiquities; and it is easy to explain their taste for such pursuits by the associations which residence in such antique piles would prompt and foster. Thus, Viscount Maynard, the noble owner of Easton Lodge (engraved in our Journal of last week), is one of the most distinguished Fellows of the Society of Antiquaries; and, his Lordship had assembled at Easton a valuable collection of relics of the Roman civilization of Britain, in part the results of his Lordship's own discoveries at Bartlow Hills, on the borders of Cambridgeshire, several years since. These hills, we should explain, are four pyramidal elevations, which are supposed to cover the remains of those slain in the battle between Canute and Edmund Ironside, at Assingdune, or Ashdon, in 1016; in which, as it is expressed in the "Anglo-Saxon Chronicle," "all the nobility of England were undone. The greater part of these relics were, we understand, destroyed or irreparably injured in the recent conflagration at Easton Lodge; and, we are persuaded that any attempt to rescue these fine specimens of ancient art from popular oblivion will be interesting to our readers. We have, therefore, availed ourselves of the Sketches of an Active Fellow of the Society of Antiquaries, made a few weeks since, to illustrate a few of these treasurable relics.

FOLDING CHAIR, &C.

A Folding Chair (No. 1,) resembles a camp stool, and has bronze ornaments, which appear to have been covered with leather. It had originally four crooked feet, fixed to the extremities of cross pieces of iron, joined by a common axis: one side bar of the seat does not extend like the others, from end to end, but is disjointed in the centre, so as to leave an open space, each portion supported by a bracket and terminating in a boss, and a straight bar of iron serves to strengthen the legs on each side below. Twisted round the iron, here and there, but chiefly at the angles, are pieces of what appears to be leather. This chair was found folded up, lying in a horizontal position. In this Illustration also is shown a square wide-mouthed, greenish-coloured glass urn, with reeded handle. It measures seven inches and quarter square, 11¼ inches up to the shoulder, and is altogether 15¼ inches high, and the lip is 5¼ inches diameter. This urn was full to the brim of burnt human bones, white and dry. Notwithstanding the thickness of the glass, it received a fracture in the course of excavation, which caused it to fall to pieces on being removed, and it has been with difficulty put together so as to show its size

BRONZE VASE.

In this groupe also is represented a Bronze Lamp, with a bold acanthus leaf to form the handle, rising at the back: it stands three inches high, and with the handle is seven inches and a quarter high, eight three-quarters long, and weighs 11½ ounces. The lamp, which has no external covering, is filled with some deposit in a solid body cracked in places, and the wick still remains in the mouth.

Next is a Bronze Vase (No. 2,) is of very elegant form, having a chased figured pattern round the neck, with a series of inverted cones, every alternate one being silver, inlaid. The handle is crowned with a sphynx, resting the fore-feet on the necks of two birds, with long beaks; and it is terminated gracefully below with a bull's head, in relief, bound with fillets. This vessel, which is of excellent metal, is eight inches in height to the lip, and ten to the top of the handle; diameter three inches, and weight thirty-one ounces.

A Bronze Spherical Vessel (No. 3), with a rectangular handle, having an indentation in the lip within for the support of some instrument. This singularly beautiful Vase is 3½ inches to the top of the lip, and 5 inches 9-10th to the top of the handle; diameter of the body is 4⅝ inches, and the weight 25 ounces 10 pennyweights. It is enamelled throughout, in green, red, and blue, with foliage, tendrils, and bands; the colours retaining much of their original freshness. When discovered, this vessel was so much covered with a green incrustation, that the enamel was not in the least perceptible.

Specimens of Roman Sepulchral Relics (No. 4) discovered in one of the greater barrows at Bartlow, in the parish of Ashdon, in Essex, by Lord Maynard, in April, 1835. These were deposited in a wooden chest that had fallen in, and which occupied a hollow space, discovered by an excavation in the largest barrow. The chest, when entire, was a parallelogram; its longest side lying N.E. and S.W., and was 4 feet 2 inches long, 3 feet 8½ inches wide, and 2 feet deep. Some parts of the wood, which seemed to be oak, were four inches thick.

ENAMELLED VASE.

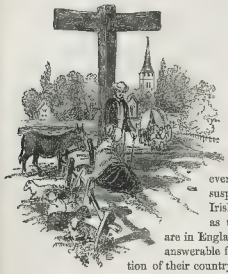
THE ACT FOR THE RECOVERY OF SMALL DEBTS.—A supplement to the London Gazette of last Saturday contains two Orders in Council for carrying into effect the Act of last session, "for the more easy Recovery of Small Debts and Demands in England." By the first order, all courts for the recovery of small debts or demands under any previous acts are to be abolished on the 13th of March next, with the exception of the County Court of Middlesex, one small debt court at Bath, two at Bristol, one at Liverpool, and one at Sheffield, which are from that time to be held as county courts under the late act. The second order declares that, on the 15th of March next, the act of last session shall be put in force in every county of England and Wales, and that the whole of these counties (including all counties of cities, &c., therein contained) shall, for the purposes of the act, be divided into districts specified in the order. We have already stated that the classification of the districts will be made upon the principle adopted by the Registrars of Births, Deaths, and Marriages.

London: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, 198, Strand aforesaid.—SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 13, 1847.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 251.—Vol. X.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 20, 1847. [Sixpence.

INVESTMENTS AND ENTERPRISE.



THE scheme of the Protectionist Leader, for the regeneration of Ireland, is crushed; it met with no support in the money market, incredulous of profits on Irish investments; and among the mass of the community, recent events have awakened a suspicion and dislike of the Irish landowners, who, as the only ruling class, are in England believed to be more answerable for the wretched condition of their country, than they themselves imagine. The great argument in favour of the bill, that it would improve the land of Ireland to the amount of twenty-three millions sterling, had but little influence here; indeed, it rather told against it than otherwise. Why should the credit of England be pledged to add to Irish rent-rolls? The answer was not satisfactory. It was said of one of the Roman Emperors, that had he never ruled, men would have always believed in his great capacity for ruling; but experience undeceived them. Had Lord George Bentinck never brought forward his great and comprehensive plan, he might have been thought to have the materials of a statesman in him; the zealous party leader would have been a minister in posse. But it is easier to excite wonder than win confidence; and when it came to a question of details and practice, the plan broke down; perhaps there was never witnessed a more signal parliamentary failure. As the discussion proceeded, it seemed to meet with less and less support; and the debate of Monday prepared the public for its rejection. It was lost on Tuesday by a majority of 214. As it was proposed as a measure of relief, the arguments that proved the outlay on unskilled or rough labour, such as cuttings and embankments, to be the least portion of the expence of a railroad, and others of a similar practical character were, perhaps, the most telling. The financial question, and the general policy of Government advances, which were dealt with by Sir Robert Peel, can be brought against such plans at all times; and of these something remains to be said.

The Debate has done a great deal of incidental and indirect good in drawing attention to the resources of Ireland, as well as to its miseries. The effect of the discussions on the "Relief" Bills of Lord John Russell is depressing almost to the verge of despair; but the Bentinck debate has, at least, informed the world that there is a brighter side to the picture, though darkened over for the present. It is almost impossible that the anomalies in the condition of Ireland can much longer continue in the face of proofs that money and labour alone are wanted to open up sources of wealth as certainly as the same two powers have brought forth the same elements from lands and regions much less favoured by nature. But the rock must be smitten before the strength-giving waters will gush forth. The rod of gold held by the hand of Toil can work changes as mighty as the wand of any enchanter in song or fable. The strong hand of labour is stretched forth in vain if the great talisman, wealth, is wanting. Why is it withheld? It is very usual to say that no undertaking will succeed in Ireland; but we doubt if all the experiments have been fully or fairly tried. It is certain that capitalists who have proposed to embark money in profitable enterprises have met many difficulties which they have not to encounter in England. But not a few of the obstacles come less from the people at large, who are but too happy to get work when fair dealing and fair pay go with it, than from the holders of property. As a body it appears in a thousand ways that the curse of need and embarrassment is upon them: they are obliged to screw and extort the utmost farthing that can be got in any possible way from anybody; the needy man in the false position of a wealthy one cannot exhibit the qualities of independence. Has no enterprise ever been stopped at the very outset by the extravagant demands of the proprietors of land? Or has it never been thwarted by the complicated interests that are involved in the land in Ireland? Here is a whole field of inquiry opened, not yet sufficiently explored. Sir Robert Peel touched on the point on Tuesday night.

The embarrassments of the proprietors in Ireland, the competition for land, the intricate holdings, and the extraordinary powers with which the law has armed the landlords, are all unfavourable to the development of the "live and let live" principle, which is the soul of all enterprise. Labour may be oppressed and ground down, even to the crushing it out of existence; for men being born, must live, and purchase life at any price. But the yoke of necessity, that presses whole nations into serfdom—and the Irish cotter is as much a serf as the Russian peasant, with the difference that he is worse fed—cannot be applied to money, to masses of capital. As if conscious of its power and value, it brooks no unfair treatment, and flies from all lands where men or laws place obstacles in its way, to where it can make better terms. Overridden by middlemen, mortgages, debts, and embarrassments, Irish land has not been able to make such a treaty with English money as to induce it to cross the Channel, and drain, build, mine, and fish, though profit is to be made from all these operations. The state of property there has as much to do with the absence of capital, as the disposition of the people; their mistrust, suspicion, and a disbelief in the real intention of any person to benefit them, can be removed by time and a little management; that has been proved by others besides Lord George Hill at Gweedore.

Still, the great question of the want of capital in Ireland remains;

H. M. NEW FRIGATE "THETIS."—DRAWN BY MR. N. M. CONDY.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

why does it not go there? Ignorance of the country, or, what is worse, perverted knowledge of it, are, perhaps, still more injurious in their effects than the unsatisfactory state of property. The Irish Channel has been a cause of misery to both countries. Ireland is rarely a foreign nation to England, and one of those of which we know least. The best works on it have been written by Frenchmen and Germans; while the Englishman, who, like Ulysses,

> Has become a name
> For always roaming with a hungry heart

over the face of the whole world, generally takes his ideas of Ireland from newspapers, tourists, and the debates. Thus, there is much that we do not know at all, and more that we know wrongly; and, on these impressions, as a people, we act or, rather, refrain from acting—and send our capital forth to every nation of the earth, except the portion of our own Empire that lies at our door.

The strongest argument in favour of a Government holding out some direct encouragement to speculation in Ireland is that, in private hands, capital is not always so wisely used as may be supposed. It has its prejudices and aversions, as well as its panics and mania; and the prejudice that withholds it so obstinately from one field is often as unreasonable as the mania that sends it rushing blindly into another. Now, in no case, can capital be worse than lost; and has England lost no capital in investments far more unsafe than the most Irish speculation that ever was hatched? Mexican gold and Peruvian silver has sucked down, into the unreturning gulf of mining speculation, capital that, spent in the search for less brilliant metals, or in coal beds, or quarries, or fisheries, in Ireland, would have returned a fair profit, with the advantage, at least, of being spent under the control of the owners.

Here is an element that is too often left out of the calculation of private enterprise; but, like an unseen star, it may exercise a terrible "disturbing influence," where no allowance is made for it. Private enterprise is a magnificent thing, when it succeeds; but it is not always guided with perfect judgment. The very essence of speculation is risk; still it is a pity that so much capital goes into fields where loss is almost a certainty. Private enterprise and millions to make the railroads and canals of the American States, in the shape of loans—sum that have been repudiated, the payment of others has been resumed, and partially and slowly some of the money may be got back again; but how much ruin has been wrought in the meanwhile? Money embarked in foreign State loans is committed to all the accidents of politics and State difficulties, in which experience proves that the foreign creditor has the worst of every chance. He has no actual security for his property, no power of compelling payment. At the present moment, the Turkish Dutiess of Monaco are by all kinds of pledges and engagements set apart and reserved, to pay the English bondholders, but Santa Anna takes them to defray the expenses of the war, and the creditors go unpaid. What remedy have they? None but the Christian virtues of faith and patience, both admirable as a moral discipline, but in money matters highly inconvenient. Take another instance; immense sums of English capital are invested in French and Belgian Railroads; the shares are held by hundreds in the country, as the present state of things, to put it mildly, testifies. Can any one tell what they would be worth in a political convulsion? What would another Directory, or Convention, another Robespierre or Napoleon do with the revenues of these lines, if there was a chance of seizing and appropriating them? Can we believe there would be the slightest scruple about it? It may be said the English holder could sell out; perhaps he might; but if it had to be done suddenly, and under the pressure of alarm, every sale would be at a loss; there is not enough of the spirit of Cassel-count across the Channel to take every advantage of such a crisis. A wholesale confiscation of English share property, in case of a war, is quite possible, and we are not sure whether at such a time it would not be a popular measure. Peace might bring about a settlement; but let the Danish claims, and the case of Baudi Bode, and Lafarge, and others, tell how slowly peace repairs injuries and speculations of war. There is another contingency to which capital invested in Continental Railroads is liable, which has not yet attracted much attention, as far as we could ascertain that we have heard of in many quarters. They want the best means of communication in the world—the absolute necessity of battles, as things, roads, and bridges always have been, and will be, more or less over all. It does not require much military science to see that less expensive and more portable means of transit than railroads will be found in future wars. Indeed, the Duke of Wellington, in one of his last speeches in the House of Lords, alluded to a fact that has contributed the most generous subjects to that Canada—the readiness to meet at a moment's notice the possessors of his own carriages, if [illegible] instead of a line in the possession of a hostile army, or with miles of it laid in ruins, "black with the miners' blast?" While sending out our millions, it is well perhaps to reflect a little on what may be remote possibilities.

It is for these reasons we think it would be worth while to inquire if there are not small roads for private enterprise within our own Empire, where the certainty is not only that the capital and energy of the country are the better employed. It is for these reasons that the money and industries of Ireland, are worth more attention than they have yet received from English capitalists; there is one Fishery Company, for instance, paying 20 per cent! The Government should not engage in them, for it is a bad trader; Commerce is not its function; but it might do enough to guide money into profitable channels, with an eye to [illegible] and [illegible] means. I have proved the [illegible] simply by the [illegible] and make a [illegible] the [illegible] Lord George Bentinck's speech, at the present state of Ireland, and [illegible] the want of the best means of [illegible] Lord George Bentinck's speech, at the present state of Ireland, and [illegible] the want of the best means of [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS Monday

THE BISHOPS.—Earl FITZWILLIAM presented a petition from a clergyman named Jordan, in Oxfordshire, praying that the number of Bishops might be increased to fifty-two; and, in order that they might be enabled to attend sedulously to their episcopal duties, he prayed that they might be relieved of their legislative functions in the House of Lords. The Marquis of LANSDOWNE said that he had laid on the table a commission from her Majesty, directing an inquiry to be instituted into the state of the Bishoprics throughout the kingdom.

The Distilling from Sugar Bill was read a second time.

DESTITUTE PERSONS (IRELAND) BILL.

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE moved the second reading of this bill, and gave a brief description of the objects proposed by it.

A debate ensued, but no serious opposition to the bill was manifested, and the bill having been read a second time, the House adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—Monday

THE WELLINGTON STATUE.—In answer to some questions from Mr. C. BERKELEY, Lord MORPETH said, I have received an intimation from the Sub-Committee of the Wellington Statue, that they have given directions to the sculptor to remove the remaining portion of the scaffolding which obstructs the view from Piccadilly, on the north side. (A laugh.) The Sub-Committee express an opinion that sufficiently fair view of the statue can now be obtained at present (" Hear, hear, and laughter) to enable the Government and the public to form a correct judgment as to the merits of the position of the statue. We certainly thought that a sufficiently fair view of the statue had already been obtained, but that is a question which we must leave to the decision of the Sub-Committee and the sculptor. The Sub-Committee stated at the same time that if, upon the removal of the remaining portion of the scaffolding, the opinion of the Government should still continue adverse to the statue continuing on its present site, they will, of course, hold themselves bound to defray the expense of the removal of the scaffolding. I think it unwise to incur fresh expense in connection with this affair; but as the Sub-Committee undertake the removal of the scaffolding on their own accounts, I do not feel called upon to object to it. It is the opinion of the Government that, upon the whole, the best site for the statue is the centre arch of Waterloo-place, where the light will be most advantageous to it.—Mr. MACKINNON observed to a statue found in Pompeii over an arch, and in a similar attitude.—Lord MORPETH remarked that was not in the most palmy days when Pompeii flourished, and statues were there subject to rather violent methods of displacement.

ADJOURNED DEBATE ON LORD GEORGE BENTINCK'S BILL.

The debate on this bill was resumed by

The Marquis of GRANBY, who regretted that it should have been opposed by the Government. The great evil of Ireland was that population increased in a greater ratio than capital, and the consequence was a great want of employment. Diminish the population they could not—they must, therefore, take means to increase the capital, and this could be effected in no way more slightly than by adopting this bill, the necessary funds for carrying out which could be easily realised without any derangement to the finances of the country. He hoped the bill would be certainly supported by the House, as one calculated as well to give temporary relief as to afford permanent improvement in the condition of Ireland.

Mr. W. BROWN and Mr. MURE opposed the bill. The latter honourable member designated it an extensive system of encouragement to gambling sanctioned by the State.

Mr. Alderman THOMPSON could not see how those same members of the Government who supported Lord Morpeth's scheme in 1839, for the appropriation of £5,000,000 to Irish railways, could object to the principle of Lord G. Bentinck's measure. The Chancellor of the Exchequer would, before many days, be obliged to raise money in some shape, and £4,000,000 to carry out the bill before the House could not form so great an addition as to create any alarming difficulty. No increased taxation would be the consequence of this bill; the Government would only lend its name, and if the Board of Railway Commissioners used due discretion, no doubt could exist of the goodness of the security. If what he had heard of the East India Company was true, viz., that they were about to make a loan of four and a half millions to encourage railways in India, upon what ground would they refuse one to Ireland? If it were just and right to promote railway enterprise in India, had not the people of Ireland a greater claim than the people of India?

The bill was opposed by Mr. F. French, Mr. Corry, Sir W. Clay, Mr. F. Shaw, and Sir W. Molesworth, and supported by Mr. Newdegate and Mr. J. O'Connell.

Mr. HUME remarked in severe terms upon the course adopted by Mr. Shaw. In opposing a bill which was declared to be not brought forward in opposition to the Government, but as ancillary to the measures proposed by her Majesty's Ministers. The right hon. gentleman was thus deserting his own party to support a Government to which he was opposed against a measure which all his feelings told him was a right one. The hon. gentleman then proceeded to contend against the objection that capital was wanting, and argued that a special commission of a railway, whereas his informant meant that only the number would be permanently employed after the railway was constructed. He combated the idea that the interest would create a financial difficulty, by referring to what had been done in France and Belgium, where the State, by the encouragement of railway enterprise, had added vastly to the wealth and the resources of both nations. Mr. Disraeli, in a speech of great eloquence and statistical accuracy, concluded by saying he recollected a member of that House, before he (Mr. Disraeli) had the honour of a seat in it, who was a humorist, and was so perplexed with Ireland and Irish questions that he wished Ireland under sea. Without having recourse to this diluvian process, he thought the present measure would give a new tone to the social condition of Ireland. He did not think that this was a case in which an Irish Whig would receive his sanction to such a measure, than which no man, political agitator or Repealer, had ever ventured to propose one half so comprehensive or a quarter so practical. He could only, then, think that, whatever might be the result, even should the bill fail—though we are sure not to be free from the noble pang of political disappointment—still we shall be exempt from the bitterness of personal mortification; though we may fail, we shall, at least, have failed in carrying a measure which no one can contend was conceived in the spirit of faction or matured by the scheming craft of calculating ambition a measure brought forward in good faith, and one that would have served a great object, even though it did not mean to do injury to a Government, but which did aspire to benefit a nation.

Much cheering followed Mr. Disraeli's speech

The debate was then again adjourned, and the House itself broke up about half past twelve.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—Tuesday.

BREWING AND DISTILLING FROM SUGAR.—The Earl of CLARENDON moved the second reading of the Brewing from Sugar and the Distilling from Sugar Bills.

—Lord STANLEY objected strongly to the making the temporary deficiency the pretence for a permanent and pernicious practice like this. He should, on the motion to go into Committee, be would move that both bills be referred to a Select Committee. The bills were read a second time, and ordered to be committed on Friday

The Destitute Persons Bill passed through Committee; and the House adjourned till Thursday.

HOUSE OF COMMONS. Tuesday.

THE CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER AND THE IRISH RAILWAYS The CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER entered into some explanations of the calculations he had made on a former occasion, in which he differed from those of Mr. Disraeli in his speech of the preceding night. Mr. Disraeli, he said, was entirely mistaken as to the individuals from whom he (the Chancellor of the Exchequer) had received information respecting the carrying a measure which no one can contend was conceived in the spirit of faction or matured by the scheming craft of calculating ambition a measure brought forward in good faith, and one that would have served a great object, even though it did not mean to do injury to a Government, but which did aspire to benefit a nation.

Much cheering followed Mr. Disraeli's speech

The debate was then again adjourned, and the House itself broke up about half past twelve.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—Tuesday.

BREWING AND DISTILLING FROM SUGAR.—The Earl of CLARENDON moved the second reading of the Brewing from Sugar and the Distilling from Sugar Bills.

—Lord STANLEY objected strongly to the making the temporary deficiency the pretence for a permanent and pernicious practice like this. He should, on the motion to go into Committee, he would move that both bills be referred to a Select Committee. The bills were read a second time, and ordered to be committed on Friday

The Destitute Persons Bill passed through Committee; and the House adjourned till Thursday.

HOUSE OF COMMONS. Tuesday.

THE CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER AND THE IRISH RAILWAYS The CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER entered into some explanations of the calculations he had made on a former occasion, in which he differed from those of Mr. Disraeli in his speech of the preceding night. Mr. Disraeli, he said, was entirely mistaken as to the individuals from whom he (the Chancellor of the Exchequer) had received information respecting the expense in connection with the bill adopting this bill, the necessary funds for carrying out which could be easily realised without any derangement to the finances of the country. He hoped the bill would be certainly supported by the House, as one calculated as well to give temporary relief as to afford permanent improvement in the condition of Ireland.

Mr. W. BROWN and Mr. MURE opposed the bill. The latter honourable member designated it an extensive system of encouragement to gambling sanctioned by the State.

Mr. Alderman THOMPSON could not see how those same members of the Government who supported Lord Morpeth's scheme in 1839, for the appropriation of £5,000,000 to Irish railways, could object to the principle of Lord G. Bentinck's measure. The Chancellor of the Exchequer would, before many days, be obliged to raise money in some shape, and £4,000,000 to carry out the bill before the House could not form so great an addition as to create any alarming difficulty. No increased taxation would be the consequence of this bill; the Government would only lend its name, and if the Board of Railway Commissioners used due discretion, no doubt could exist of the goodness of the security. If what he had heard of the East India Company was true, viz., that they were about to make a loan of four and a half millions to encourage railways in India, upon what ground would they refuse one to Ireland? If it were just and right to promote railway enterprise in India, had not the people of Ireland a greater claim than the people of India?

The bill was opposed by Mr. F. French, Mr. Corry, Sir W. Clay, Mr. F. Shaw, and Sir W. Molesworth, and supported by Mr. Newdegate and Mr. J. O'Connell.

Mr. HUME remarked in severe terms upon the course adopted by Mr. Shaw. In opposing a bill which was declared to be not brought forward in opposition to the Government, but as ancillary to the measures proposed by her Majesty's Ministers. The right hon. gentleman was thus deserting his own party to support a Government to which he was opposed against a measure which all his feelings told him was a right one. The hon. gentleman then proceeded to contend against the objection that capital was wanting, and argued that a special commission of a railway, whereas his informant meant that only the number would be permanently employed after the railway was constructed. He combated the idea that the interest would create a financial difficulty, by referring to what had been done in France and Belgium, where the State, by the encouragement of railway enterprise, had added vastly to the wealth and the resources of both nations. Mr. Disraeli, in a speech of great eloquence and statistical accuracy, concluded by saying he recollected a member of that House, before he (Mr. Disraeli) had the honour of a seat in it, who was a humorist, and was so perplexed with Ireland and Irish questions that he wished Ireland under sea. Without having recourse to this diluvian process, he thought the present measure would give a new tone to the social condition of Ireland. He did not think that this was a case in which an Irish Whig would receive his sanction to such a measure, than which no man, political agitator or Repealer, had ever ventured to propose one half so comprehensive or a quarter so practical. He could only, then, think that, whatever might be the result, even should we fail—though we are sure not to be free from the noble pang of political disappointment—still we shall be exempt from the bitterness of personal mortification; though we may fail, we shall, at least, have failed in

SKETCHES IN THE WEST OF IRELAND.—BY MR. JAMES MAHONY.

BOY AND GIRL AT CAHERA.

THE VILLAGE OF MIENIES.

We resume from our Journal of last week our Artist's Sketches of Scenes and Incidents from the distressed district of Skibbereen, and its neighbourhood; premising that our main object in the publication of this Series of Illustrations is to direct public sympathy to the suffering poor of these localities, a result that must, inevitably, follow the right appreciation of their extent and severity.

We left our Artist, last week, on the road to Dromdaleague, to inquire into the horrible circumstances of Leahey's death.

The first Sketch is taken on the road, at Cahers, of a famished boy and girl turning up the ground to seek for a potato to appease their hunger. "Not far from the spot where I made this sketch," says Mr. M., "and less than fifty perches from the high road, is another of the many sepulchres above ground, where six dead bodies had lain for twelve days, without the least chance of interment, owing to their being so far from the town. After leaving this fearful spot, we soon reached Dromdaleague, where I called upon the Rev. J. Creedon, and inquired of him as to the fate of Leahey. 'Not only do I know the statement to be true,' replied the reverend gentleman, 'but also prepared the man for death, and am ready to accompany you to the spot.' We, accordingly, started; and, within half an hour's drive, reached the village of Mainies, where the house of Leahey is situated, and of which I send you a sketch. Whilst making this, I learned from Mr. Creedon, and one of the villagers, that not only was the account of Leahey's house in the Diary true, but the case was even more disgusting than there stated; and, horrifying as it was, the man's mother, who found the dogs about him, after having first lain him across the few remaining sparks of fire upon the floor, went out to beg as much as would purchase a coffin to bury him in."

MULLINS'S HUT, AT SCULL.

"Having heard much of the wants of Dunmanway, I proceeded thither, and am delighted to say that this large and thriving town (of which I send you a sketch, taken from the bridge on the Cork road) seems to be the barrier to the dreadful want further west. Not, at the same time, but that much want does exist here, though nothing beyond what may be expected upon land where nature is not bountiful. The worst feature presenting itself, at this moment, all through the West, is the entire abandonment of agricultural occupation; and, during my entire excursion from Clonakilty round to Dunmanway, not more than ten or a dozen fields seemed to have been prepared for the spring; and the answer of all those to whom I addressed myself on the subject was, that if they put down, they did not know who would reap; and that, in case the crops were sown, the poor famished wretches would be there to eat them up long before they had time to grow.

"Again, all sympathy between the living and the dead seems completely out of the question; and the revolting practice will, doubtless, go on until it works its own remedy. I certainly saw from 150 to 180 funerals of victims to the want of food, the whole number attended by not more than 60 persons; and so hardened are the men regularly employed in the removal of the dead from the workhouse, that I saw one of them, with four coffins in a car, driving to the churchyard, sitting upon one of the said coffins, and smoking with much apparent enjoyment. The people also say that whoever escapes the fever is sure of falling sick on the road (the Public Works), as they are, in many instances, compelled to walk from three to six miles, and sometimes a greater distance, to work, and back again in the evening, without partaking of a morsel of food. Added to this, they are, in a great number of instances, standing in bogs and wet places, which so affects them, that many of the poor fellows have been known to drop down at their work."

ENTRANCE TO DUNMANWAY, FROM THE BRIDGE ON THE CORK ROAD.

SKETCHES IN THE WEST OF IRELAND.—BY MR. JAMES MAHONY.

BALLYDEHOB, FROM THE SKIBBEREEN ROAD.

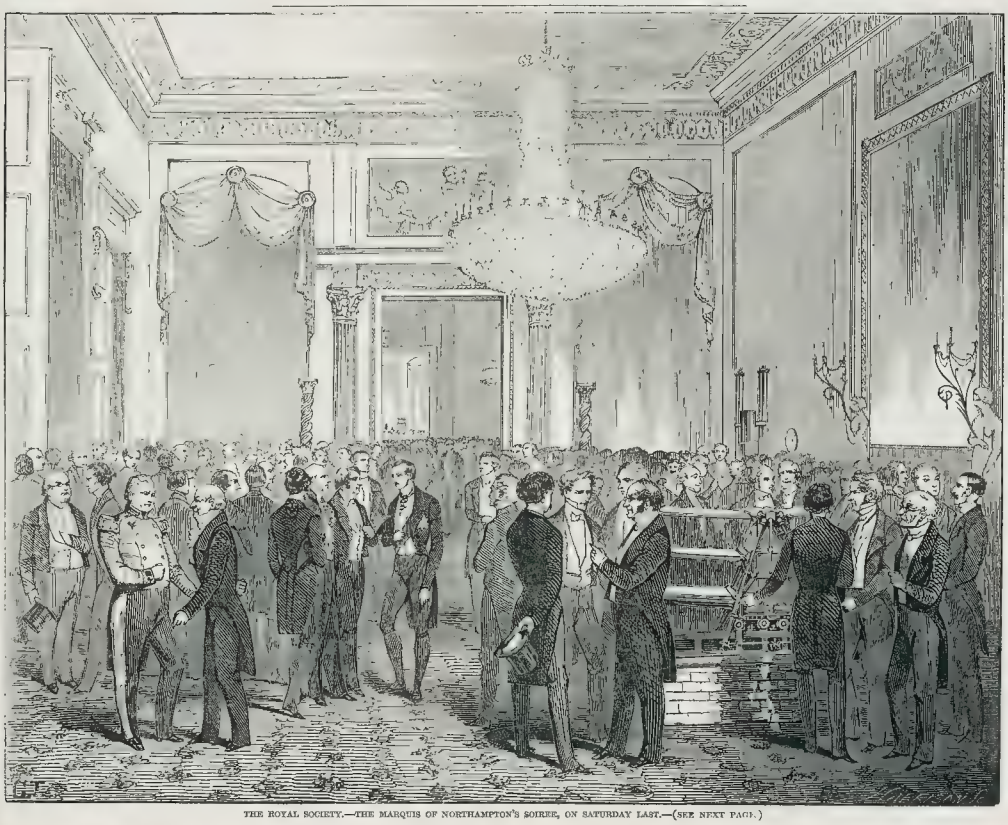
We must here revert to Ballydehob, on the Skibbereen road, which our Artist has sketched, showing Mount Gabriel in the distance. Here he was told by the Rev. Mr. Triphook that the destitution was of so frightful a nature that such persons as could command five pounds were leaving the town, to avoid the contagion of fever, as well as the afflicting scene of persons dropping around them daily; and the informant added that the town was more than five times fuller of people from the surrounding country than it had accommodation for.

A specimen of the in-door horrors of Scull may be seen in the annexed sketch of the hut of a poor man named Mullins, who lay dying in a corner upon a heap of straw, supplied by the Relief Committee, whilst his three wretched children crouched over a few embers of turf, as if to raise the last remaining spark of life. This poor man, it appears, had buried his wife some five days previously, and was, in all probability, on the eve of joining her, when he was found out by the untiring efforts of the Vicar, who, for a few short days, saved him from that which no kindness could ultimately avert. Our Artist us assures that the dimensions of the hut do not exceed ten feet square; adding that, to make the sketch, he was compelled to stand up to his ancles in the dirt and filth upon the floor.

"I have thus," observes Mr. M., "been lengthy in my details in order that you may be as well informed upon the subject as I can enable you to be; and, bearing in mind the horrifying scenes that I have just witnessed, I entreat you to do the best you can for so much suffering humanity; as this visit to the West will, I trust, assist in making this affliction known to the charitable public."



THE ROYAL SOCIETY.—THE MARQUIS OF NORTHAMPTON'S SOIREE, ON SATURDAY LAST.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

THE ROYAL SOCIETY.—THE MARQUIS OF NORTHAMPTON'S CONVERSAZIONE.

On Saturday the Marquis of Northampton, as President of the Royal Society, gave the first of its series of soirées for the season, at his Lordship's mansion, on the Terrace, Piccadilly. The occasion was a very brilliant one: the arrivals of visitors continuing from nine till past eleven o'clock. The attendance of distinguished Fellows of the Society was more than usually numerous; and there was, also, present a very large assemblage of gentlemen of eminence, in science, the arts, and literature, but unconnected with the Royal Society.

The elegant suite of drawing-rooms was thrown open for the occasion; and a few models and specimens of art were exhibited. In the first room we noticed some copies from antique sculpture in copper, by the electro-galvanic process of Mr. Cox; some new photographic results by M. Claudet; and an assumed C. Fagio, rich in gracefulness and harmonious colouring.

In the smaller room was a pair of exquisite twisted mosaic columns, with beautifully sculptured white marble bases and capitals. In the larger or bow saloon, one of Hutchinson's Spirometers, for measuring the capacity of the lungs, excited considerable interest. Upon a table towards the centre of the room, were exhibited the model of an invention for preventing Collision on Railways; a specimen of a marine boring animal preserved by Mr. Goadby's new process; and a Graduated Dose Inhaler for the administration of Æther for Fauces-Equivalent purposes: the latter, from its novelty and simplicity, proved very attractive.

In this room, also, was a working model of Little's Double-Action Printing Machine, producing from 10,000 to 12,000 impressions per hour: it was kept in operation throughout the evening, and drew crowds of visitors.

His Royal Highness Prince Albert honoured the noble President with a visit, arriving from Buckingham Palace shortly before eleven o'clock, attended by Lord George Lennox and the Hon Captain Gordon. The Prince was welcomed in the vestibule by the noble host; by whom his Royal Highness was conducted through the saloons. The Prince inspected the several models and works of art, and evinced great interest in the Double-Action Printing-Machine, by addressing several inquiries to the Inventor.

His Royal Highness retired at a quarter before twelve o'clock; and soon after, the general company separated. There could not have been present fewer than 400 guests.

Among the distinguished company was his Royal Highness the Conde de Monthonlit, attended by Colonel Merry

His Excellency the American Minister, his Excellency the Hanoverian Minister, Le Excellency the Dutch Minister, Baron Brunnow, Baron Keller, Chevalier Ribiero, and Chevalier Hebenstreit, were among the members of the corps diplomatique present. The general company included the Duke of St. Albans, the Earl of Sheffield, the Earl of Lincoln, Earl Fitzwilliam, Earl [illegible], Viscount Sandon, Viscount Milton, Viscount Bury, Lord Beaumont, Lord Campbell, Lord [illegible]ford, Lord Ashley, Lord Prudhoe, Lord Clements, Lord Dudley Stuart, Hon Mr Ashley, Sir Moses Montefiore, Sir Gilbert Wilson, Sir William Symonds, Sir Stratford Canning, Sir Richard Westmacott, Sir Roderick Murchison, Sir John Hall, Sir Francis Head, Sir George Cayley, Sir Augustus Foster, Sir Howard Douglas, Sir George Grey, Sir Robert Harry Inglis, Sir Denis Le Marchant, Sir Gerard Le Marchant [illegible], Sir Charles Clarke, Sir Charles Lemon, Sir John Guest, Sir [illegible], Sir Charles Young, Sir Charles Sedgwick [illegible], Sir [illegible], Sir John Ross, Sir Henry Ellis, Sir James Pellowes, the Lord Chief Justice Wilde, [illegible], the Dean of Westminster, the Right Hon. E. Ellice, M.P. Mr Hawes [illegible], Mr [illegible], Mr [illegible], M.P., Mr. Wyse, M.P. [illegible], Mr [illegible], Mr [illegible], Mr [illegible], Mr [illegible], Major-General Colebv, C.B. Jackson, Col. Maclean, Col. [illegible], Col. Sir [illegible], Col. S. Stanhope, Major Moore, Major Caulley, Capt. Belcher, Capt. [illegible], Prof. Willis, Prof Owen, Prof. Wheatstone, Prof. [illegible], Prof. Johnston, Prof. Ball, Prof Sully, Prof Goodwin, Rev. Dr Stebbing, Dr Owen Rees, Dr. Hooker, Dr. Neville, Dr Todd, Mr. Odyuhum, Dr. Falconer, Mr. Bell, Dr. Lyon, Dr. Lloyd, Dr. Jones, Dr. Carpenter, Dr. Hoffner, Dr. Roppell, Dr. Tweedie, Dr. Paris, Dr. Pereira, Dr. Webster, Dr. Colyer, Dr. Grant, Dr. Ogilvie, Dr. Miller, Dr. Hanley, Dr. Hawkes, Dr. Billing, Dr. Clendinning, Dr. Alderson, Dr. Baird, Dr. Bassett Hawkins, Dr. Copland, Dr. T. Thompson, Dr. Robinson, Dr. Holland, Rev. B. Hawkins, Rev. G. Prichard, Rev. D. Laing, Rev. H. [illegible]-Coke, Rev. J. Barlow, Rev. H. Bonham, Rev. H. Sullivan, Mr. Turner, R.A.; Mr. E. Landseer, R.A., Mr. R. Redgrave, R.A.; Mr. J. P. Knight, R.A.; Mr. C. R. Leslie, R.A.; Mr. Roberts, R.A.; Mr. Pickersgill, R.A.; Mr. Shee, Mr. Samuel Rogers, Mr. [illegible], Mr. Babbage, Mr. James Walker, Mr. Hemming (Treasurer of the Royal Society), Mr. Tyson, Mr. Tite, Mr. Hardwicke, Mr. Brodrick, Mr. Lassleer, Mr. Jennings, Mr. [illegible], Mr. Wrightson, Mr. Kater, Mr. Byres, Mr. Sebastolet, Mr. Rogerson, Mr. Claudet, Mr. [illegible], Mr. Wilkinson, Mr. J. Wilford, Mr. G. Rowe, Mr. Olivier, Mr. Wallich, Mr. [illegible], Mr. Godwin, Mr. Gunliver, Mr. Beverley, Mr. Harris, Mr. R. Hardy, Mr. J. Walsh, Mr. [illegible], Mr. H. Fisher, Mr. J. Rennie, Mr. G. Maudsley, Mr. Bunney, Mr. R. Chevenix, Mr. W. Dillon, Mr. J. W. Gilbert, Mr. J. H. Martin, Mr. E. Wilson, Mr. A. Simons, Mr. Amy, Mr. [illegible], Mr. J. Whitaker, Mr. J. S. Little, Mr. Hooker, Mr. J. Torpenlow, Mr. Aymon, Mr. W. H. Barfield, Mr. A. W. Tooke, Mr. A. Sims, Mr. R. Brandon, Mr. H. Roberts, Mr. R. Hunter, Mr. P. S. Archibald, Mr. Gaskell, Mr. J. A. Beaufoy, Mr. H. Ibbetson, Mr. Underhay, Mr. W. Tooke, Mr. W. Rothery, Mr. L. Cooke, Mr. C. D. Archibald, Mr. J. Y. Ascroan, Mr. A. J. Skene, accompanying Mr. Skinner, the blind traveller, Mr. Gassiot, Mr. Sylvester, Mr. LaDove Foster, Mr. W. Bowman, Mr. Quain, Mr. J. Timbs, Mr. Albert Smith, Mr. W. Little, Mr. Foster, Mr. W. Hawkins, Mr. Buckingham, Mr. Lemon, Mr. Hudson, Mr. P. M. Johnson, Mr. Willich, Mr. Dickinson, Mr. G. Bean, Mr. Wadsworth, Mr. Sharman, Mr. Godby, Mr. Scharf, Mr. Hamilton Hart, Mr. Gould, Mr. Sykes, Mr. J. Irwin, Mr. Jerdan, Mr. W. P. Wood, Mr. Gallenga, Mr. Powell, Mr. G. G. Gorman, Mr. Gravatt, Mr. Middleton, Mr. O'Dougall, Mr. Mulder, Mr. Fairlie, Mr. Arnott, Mr. Bowring, Mr. Ayrton, Mr. J. Wallis, Mr. G. Wallis, Mr. Ward, Mr. J. Moore, Mr. C. Pattison, Mr. Wollaston Hasler, Mr. W. Slater, Mr. G. Morgan, Mr. Pepys, Mr. G. Lovell, Mr. Ward, Mr. Bunnett, Mr. Bewsey, Mr. Bennett, Mr. Bennett, Mr. Morton, Mr. Vardon, Mr. F. S. Dutton, Mr. G. H. Thomas, Mr. T. Twiss, Mr. T. Butler, Mr. W. Tegg.

The noble President will hold his next conversazione on this day week.

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES, &c.

OXFORD Feb. 16.

At a meeting of the electors (pointed under the will of the late John Ireland, D.D., Dean of Westminster), to elect a Professor of Exegesis of Holy Scripture, to be holden this day, the Rev. Edward Hawkins, D.D., Provost of Oriel, was chosen to be the first Professor.

CAMBRIDGE. Feb. 16.

THE CHANCELLORSHIP.—The two great rival Colleges, Trinity and St. John's, are, so far, at issue on the question. It has been seriously mooted amongst several members of the former to put the Marquis of Northampton in nomination, with Sir Earl Powis in the favourable with the latter, and it is absolutely in the field. It is generally understood, however, throughout the other Colleges, that the friends of both these noble Lords will make no further canvass in either case, as soon as the general feeling of the University shall be ascertained to be in favour of his Royal Highness Prince Albert; and that it is likely to be so, there seems very little reason to doubt at this moment. An address to his Royal Highness has been prepared, soliciting him to allow his name to be proposed to the Senate for election to the office.

Feb. 17.

THE CHANCELLORSHIP.—The general opinion in the University is that Prince Albert will accept the proffered honour. The following announcement has just been issued:—"St Catherine's Hall Lodge, Feb. 16. Notice is hereby given, that there will be a Congregation on Thursday, the 25th instant, at nine o'clock, for the election of a Chancellor of this University. H. Philpott, Vice-Chancellor. The bell rings at nine."

At the congregation held to-day the following degrees were conferred: B. A. Edward [illegible] O. Bridgman, Trinity College; Allen Treevlyan Cooper, Trinity College; Rob. Eaton, Trinity College; Jas. [illegible] Hall, St. John's College; Thomas Matthew Goodall, St. John's College; Rev. Thomas Hall, St. John's College; Seymour Edward Majr, Queen's College; John B. Seamon, Queen's College; Arthur Henry Pelle Trewman, Queen's College; Charles William Henry Humphrey Sidney, Sidney College; Edward Cumming Jones, Caius College; Horatio Nelson Ward, Pembroke College; Henry Sadler, Christ's College; Thomas Burne, Magdalene College.

IRELAND.

THE PROGRESS OF FAMINE.—Great destitution still prevails in the county of Cork. The Cork Reporter, of Thursday week, contains the condensed evidence on eleven inquests in the town of Mallow. On the preceding Monday, there were forty-four corpses in one of the workhouses of the city; and, on the Wednesday following, one hundred interments took place. Four hundred is stated to be the weekly mortality of two unions—Skibbereen and Bantry. Another Cork paper publishes a return, showing more than 300 deaths in the workhouse of that city. Last week, there were 164 deaths in the house. The Mayo Clarigeon contains a letter dated Riverstown, Feb. 8, which says—"We have just seen one of the Coroners—Alexander Harvey, Esq., although he knocked up three horses, he was only able to hold five inquests yesterday; he will resume his awful duties to-day. There were 40 dead bodies in the district of Maugharve, kept waiting for the Coroner. Half a dozen inquisition deaths were reported in one evening."

MURDER IN THE COUNTY CORK. The house of a man named Fox, situate in Coolmaltane, within three miles of Charleville, in the county Cork, was attacked and broken into on Saturday night, and the occupier, Fox, who, it is supposed, resisted the entry of the miscreants, was shot dead. The motives which could have influenced them in their attack have not transpired

PROSPECT MURDER IN CARLOW.—Last Sunday week, about eleven o'clock in the forenoon, a dreadful murder was committed at Cranagh, in the barony of St. Mullins. It appears that the victim of this savage deed was a respectable farmer, named John Kelly, who was unmarried, and reported to be wealthy. On the morning, while his servant was engaged in his dairy, a person who resided in the neighbourhood, named Heleban, while Kelly was alone, entered the house and murdered him by repeated blows of a shovel on the head. The murderer then deliberately ransacked the house in search of money, which he successful or not does not appear; after which he stripped the dead body of his victim of his clothes while Kelly wore, and went to a neighbouring stream, took off his own clothes and dressed himself in those worn by the murdered man, and escaped across the adjoining bog. The clothes of the murdered were found on the same day in the stream. An inquest was held on the body, and, after hearing the evidence of several witnesses, a verdict of "Wilful Murder" was returned against Heleban.

THE REPEAL RENT. The Rent is rapidly declining. On Monday it was announced, at the meeting of the Repeal Association, that the Rent for the previous week was only £17 4s. 2d., of which sum £11 came from Liverpool.

NELSON'S FIGHTING SWORD. On Thursday, at the Greenwich Police Court, a person named Kinsey, formerly chief officer of the Town Hall, Borough, attended before Mr. Traill for the purpose of making a declaration that a sword which he produced, in an old tattered seabbard, was the identical one which the gallant hero held in his hand at the time of his being mortally wounded on board the Victory at the battle of Trafalgar.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, Feb. 21.—Quadragesima Sunday.—First Sunday in Lent.
MONDAY, 22.—The Moon enters her first quarter at 3h. 59m., a.m.
TUESDAY, 23. Length of day, 10h. 26m.: day increased 9h. 41m. since the Shortest Day
WEDNESDAY, 24. St Matthias.—Duke of Cambridge born, 1774.
THURSDAY, 25. The Moon souths at 0h. before 10, p.m.
FRIDAY, 26. Jupiter souths at 5h. 0m., p.m., and sets at 2h. 5m. after midnight.
SATURDAY, 27. No high tide during Friday afternoon.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE, FOR THE WEEK ENDING FEBRUARY 27

Sunday		Monday		Tuesday		Wednesday		Thursday		Friday		Saturday
M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.
h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m
6 9	6 30	6 55	7 18	7 49	8 30	9 3	9 45	10 35	11 5	11 49	⁂	0 34	0 50

⁂ No high tide during Friday afternoon.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"An Admirer" "Mdlle. Lucile Grahn . . . . . Sweden. See the illustrated Memoir of the graceful Danseuse in No. 149 of our Journal.

"Estelle" "is recommended to apply to one of the London Publishers of Novels, whose address may be seen by his advertisements.

"B. W."—"If the watch be unmounted to one of the metropolitan police magistrates, it will, doubtless, be properly disposed of in cases of immediate and pressing necessity."

"Emmeline."—"All diphthongs are long; every letter in "Semiramide" is pronounced, and the accent is on the third syllable. We do not know the Pope's text

"Alphabet" may obtain our Journal in the large wrapper of the Agents who have advertised it, and, doubtless, of Agents generally, if his wish be rightly explained. The first part of our Correspondent's letter reminds us of sugar and wormwood; we do not see how his suggestion can be carried out with advantage to the public

"A Reader."—Sealing-wax is recommended to send a perfect impression of the coin picked up on Seaford Bay, to a Medallist, as Mr. Webster, 17, Great Russell-street, Covent Garden

"A . . . A."—The Sketch, though in itself very rare there

"L . . . . . "—The Sketch [illegible] is not Penny

"P . . . . . "—[illegible] mention of the statement in our Journal of Feb. 6, as to Pregnancy being a Punishment for a Felony, which he maintains is incorrect; a Payment being due when the Policy comes into operation, namely, the day the Party is assured.

"G. L. M. Milverton, and "W. L. J." should order the latest edition of our Journal

"J. H." (Translation)—Declined.

"M. R."—The direction, as thanked for the Sketch, the engraving of which would not illustrate the object, though the communication may be otherwise useful.

"A Never-failing Reader." "Hints on Etiquette," published by Longmans and Co

"A. W. C."—"The height of the Statue of Nelson, on the Column, in Trafalgar-square, is 17 feet from the bottom of the plinth to the crown of the hat. The height of the Column, &c., without the Statue, is 156 feet; lower diameter of shaft, 10 feet. The pedestal was granted in 1839

"J. C. C." Horton, is thanked; but we have not room for the Lines.

"A Native of Skibbereen" is assured of the truth and fidelity of Mr. Mahony's Sketches

"C. C. C." and "Cob." Honeymy is a sort of Pudding prepared with the Meal of Indian Corn. (See "The Indian Meal Book.")

"W. H." Bath.—The profit would be Cent. per Cent.

"W. B." Clapham.—The cost would be about £25.

"H. C. T." The invention will, probably, be worth registration, the expense of which is but trifling

"P. J." Leicester.—We can determine only by specimens

"V. V."—"The "Metropolitan Magazine" has been discontinued some time.

"J. G. B." Guernsey.—Apply to Messrs. Wiley and Putnam, Waterloo-place, Pall Mall.

"A Subscriber."—We do not know any Mesmeric Practitioner.

*"J. K

against physical obstacles that will not yield to the bayonet. There is, also, an amazing deal of candour about General Taylor; he does not know himself how he took Monterey, nor can he imagine why the Mexicans evacuated it, for, with very little effort, he says it might have "laughed his sicge to scorn." But he knows his own weakness, which, perhaps, the Mexicans did not. Mutual mistakes have often decided battles and campaigns; and accident has so much to do with military success, that some writers deny there is such a thing as an art of war at all. The town once capitulated, the commander of which assured his enemy he should never have done so but all his powder was spent; the other, equally frank, told him he should not have granted him terms had he had a shot left! General Taylor is almost equally unreserved as to his difficulties.

POSTSCRIPT.

HOUSE OF LORDS FRIDAY.

Petitions were presented on different subjects, and some returns were ordered.

BREWING FROM SUGAR BILL.

The Earl of CLARENDON moved that the House should resolve into Committee of the whole House, to consider this measure, the nature of which he explained.

Lord STANLEY stated some objections to the measure; one of which was that it would injure grown sugar. He did not, however, intend to make any serious opposition; but he should prefer that the bill should be referred to a Select Committee up stairs, in order that their Lordships might know upon what data they were proceeding. The noble Lord moved an amendment to that effect.

Earl GREY denied that this bill would have a tendency to encourage slave grown sugar, and entered into some details, to show the advantages which would arise from it.

After some discussion, the House divided upon Lord Stanley's amendment, which was rejected by 35 to 27.

The bill then passed through Committee, as did also the Distilling from Sugar Bill. The reports were received upon both bills, which were ordered to be read a third time on Monday; and the House adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS. FRIDAY.

The City of London Small Debts Bill was read a second time

LOANS TO IRELAND.—Mr Hume drew the attention of the House on behalf of Mr. Roebuck, that he should on an early day bring forward a resolution to the effect that it would be unjust and impolitic to advance loans of money to Ireland, unless there was a scheme of general taxation adopted in that country

THE BUDGET.—Lord J. RUSSELL gave notice that, on Monday next, the Chancellor of the Exchequer would make his financial statement.

LABOURING POOR (IRELAND) BILL.

The order of the day for going into Committee on the Labouring Poor (Ireland) Bill, having been read, on the question that the Speaker do leave the chair,

Mr D. BROWNE at considerable length addressed the House on the distressed state of the county of Mayo.

Mr. [illegible] Sir B. Hall, Sir W. Verner, Mr. Labouchere, Mr. Roebuck, and Mr [illegible]ttan having addressed the House upon the state of Ireland,

Lord J. RUSSELL rose, and stated that the Government had done all in its power to mitigate the calamity impending over Ireland, but there was a conspiracy among the labourers in Mayo not to till the land. This made the prospect more gloomy. He hoped the landed interest would assist the Government in its desire to make property contribute to the relief of destitution. He should shortly introduce a measure having that object

In the course of a discussion which ensued, Mr. ROEBUCK made some reflections upon the Irish landlords, to which Mr Grattan made an angry reply.

The House at length went into Committee, and was occupied during the remainder of the night in discussing the various clauses of the bill.

THE FAMINE IN IRELAND

Our last accounts from Ireland give some additional details, of painful interest, in reference to the famine. The Mayo Constitution has the following account of the progress of starvation in the west

"In the neighbourhood of Newport, on Sunday morning last, a poor man, named Malloy, was found on the road-side. His emaciated frame betokened that his death was the result of want. He was a native of Burrishoole

"On Friday (last week), a poor man died at Deradda, near Newport, of actual hunger, unable to follow in rapid succession.

"On Saturday, a poor man was also found expiring from exhaustion at Roosken, and, notwithstanding relief being brought, the poor man died, food having come too late!

"In the neighbourhood of Breaffy, near Mayo, the following deaths have occurred from starvation and disease:—Michael M'Nally, of Reenoon, on the 8th; Patrick Gallagher, of Carrowbeg, on the 9th; Mary Gavan, wife of James Gavan, of Ballyshawn, on the 8th; his wife, on the 10th. All these cases proceeded from dysentery and exhaustion.

"On Sunday, the 7th instant, Mr Atkinson, Coroner, held an inquest on the body of Patrick Maughan, at Coonanarrow. The deceased has left a family, who are in the most indigent state. The Jury's verdict was, 'Death by starvation.'

"In this village there is not a family that do not appear likely to fall victims to famine.

"On the same day, on the body of James Brislane, at Kilcrimmin. The deceased was put on public works a few days previous to his death, and was discharging, on Saturday evening, to the office of the pay-clerk, but, being very weak from want of food, he fell on the way, and was found dead next morning. Verdict, 'Death by starvation.'

"On Monday, the 8th, on the body of Pat Howley, at Saltfield. The deceased was employed on the public works, and was found lying on the road, where he had fallen, by a person passing by; was carried to the nearest habitation, he died shortly after. Verdict, 'Death by starvation.'

"On the same day, on the body of William Sheridan, at Cloonta. The deceased was seen in a great state of destitution, going from one village to another, he fell into a small rivulet which he attempted to cross, and, from his debility, was unable to extricate himself! Verdict, 'Death by drowning, but attributed to starvation.'

"This Coroner states that there were twelve more inquests reported in his district, but which, from indisposition, he has been unable to attend.

"During the past week, Mr. O'Grady, Coroner, held inquests on the following persons:—Anne Philbin, Pat Hannon, Francis Gannon, Jordan Morrisroe, Anne Teatum, Patrick Carey, Thomas Costello, Constantine Muller, John Malloy, Bridget Malloy. In each of these cases the verdict returned was—'Death from starvation.'—Mr. O'Grady, the Coroner, states that he has held no less than twenty-two inquests, in cases of death from extreme destitution and starvation, in the baronies of Costello and Gallen, since the 1st of January last."

THE HORRORS OF STARVATION IN IRELAND.

Commander Caffin, the captain of the steam-sloop Scourge, on the south coast of Ireland, has written a letter to a friend, dated February 15, in which he gives a most distressing and graphic account of the scenes he witnessed in the course of his duty in discharging a cargo of meal at Scull. After stating that three-fourths of the inhabitants carry a tale of woe in their countenances, and are reduced to mere skeletons, and the residue, in what he saw while going through the parish with the rector, Dr. Traill. He says

"Famine exists to a fearful degree with all its horrors. Fever has sprung up. Consequent upon the wretched state of the people are the sad body, and diarrhœa, upon the want of nourishment, are everywhere to be found. Dr. Traill's parish is 12 miles in extent, containing about 18,000 souls, with not more than half-a-dozen gentlemen in the whole of it. He drove me about two or six miles; but we commenced our visits before leaving the village, and in no house that I entered was there not to be found the dead or dying. In particularising two or three, they may be taken as the features of the whole. There was no picking or choosing, but we took them just as they came

"The first which I shall mention was a cabin, rather above the ordinary ones in appearance, and contained, as were three young women, and one young man, and three children, all crouched over a fire—pictures of misery. Dr. Traill asked after the father, upon which one of the girls opened a door leading into another cabin, and there were the father and mother in bed; this the father the most wretched picture of starvation possible to conceive, a skeleton with life, his power of speech gone; the mother but a little better—her cries for mercy and food were heart-rending. It was sheer destitution that had brought them to this. They had been well to do in the world, with their cow, and few sheep, and potato ground. Their crops failed, and their cattle were stolen; although, anticipating this, they had taken their cow and sheep into the cabin with them every night, but they were stolen in the daytime. The son had received the rent, and carried his bed. a day, but this would not keep the family and he, from work and insufficiency of food, is laid up, and will soon be as bad as his father. They had nothing to eat in the house, and I could see no hope for any one of them

"In another cabin we went into, a mother and her daughter were there—the daughter emaciated and lying against the wall—the mother naked upon some straw on the ground, with a rag over her—a most distressing object of misery She writhed about, and bared her limbs in order to show her state of nudity. She had wasted away until nothing but the skin covered the bones—she cannot have survived to this time.

"Another bed I entered had, indeed, the appearance of wretchedness without, but its inside was misery! Dr. Traill, on putting his head inside the hole which answered for a door, said, "Well, Phila, how is your mother to-day?" he having been with her the day before, and was replied to, "Oh, sir, is it you? Mother is dead!" and there, fearful reality, was the daughter, a skeleton herself, crouched and crying over the lifeless body of her mother, which was on the floor, cramped up as she had died, with her petticoat and her cloak about her, but the side of a dismembers of peat. In the next cabin were three young children belonging to the daughter, whose husband had run away from her, all pictures of death. The poor creature said she did not know what to do with the corpse—she had no means of getting it removed, and she was too exhausted to remove it herself: this cabin was about three miles from the rectory. In another cabin, the door of which was stopped with dung, was a poor woman whom we had taken by surprise, as she roused up evidently much astonished. She burst into tears upon seeing the doctor, and said she had not been enabled to sleep since the corpse of the woman had lain in her bed This was a poor creature, who was passing this miserable cabin, and asked the old woman to allow her to rest herself for a few moments, when she had laid down, but never rose up again; she died in an hour or so from sheer exhaustion. The body had remained in this hovel of six feet square with the poor old woman for four days, and she could not get strength to remove it."

The letter proceeds:

"I could in this manner take you through the thirty or more cottages we visited; but they, without exception, were all alike—the dead and the dying in each, and I could not witness the trouble and heartrending scenes were I to mention the lamentations and bitter cryings of each of these poor creatures on the threshold of death. Never in my life have I seen such wholesale misery, nor could I have thought it so complete."

THE VACANT ORDER OF THE GARTER.—We understand that the Queen has decided that the Garter, vacant by the decease of the late Duke of Northumberland, shall be conferred upon his Grace the Duke of Bedford.

THE NEW BISHOPS.—The four bishoprics to be created, according to the proposition of Lord John Russell, will be conferred on the Hon. and Rev. Montague Villiers, M.A., Rector of St. George's, Bloomsbury; the Rev. Thomas Dale, M.A., Vicar of St. Pancras, and Canon Residentiary of St. Paul's; the Rev. J. Slade, M.A., Canon of Chester, and Vicar of Bolton-le-Moors; and the Rev. Benjamin Parsons Symons, D.D., Warden of Wadham College, Oxford, and Vice-Chancellor of the University.

ELECTION OF CHANCELLOR OF THE UNIVERSITY OF CAMBRIDGE.—A very numerous meeting of Members of the Senate, comprising most of the Heads, Professors, and resident Fellows in the University, was held yesterday, in the Combination Room of Trinity College, at which resolutions were passed unanimously, [illegible] the election of his Royal Highness Prince Albert, as Chancellor of the University, and a Committee of Members from each of the Colleges appointed to [illegible] the resolution into effect

RAILWAY ELECTIONS.—We hear that the Solicitor-General was returned on Saturday by a majority of seven over the Repeal Candidate.

THE HEREFORD STEEPLE CHASE.—This steeple chase took place on Thursday, and was won by Mr Tilbury's Profligate, Bradley beating Tunworth, Little Tommy, and eight others. An excellent race, won by half a length. Little Tommy was beat for second place in the post. Brunette did not start.

DEATH OF MR. CHARLES HOOTON.—We are sorry to find, from the report of an inquest in the Nottingham Review, that Mr. Charles Hooton, known as the author of "Silberry Thurland," "Colin Clink," &c., died in that town this week, from taking an over-dose of morphia (four grains) Mr. Hooton was in his 36th year, and unmarried. He went to Texas a few years since, where he contracted the jungle fever, which renewed its attack on him each winter. It was to counteract its effects he resorted to opium and morphia

DEATH OF MR. J. J. STOCKDALE.—Mr. John Joseph Stockdale died on Tuesday last, at Bushey, Herts, in his 71st year. Mr. Stockdale at one time occupied a considerable share of public attention. When connected with the bookselling trade, he published the "Memoirs of Harriett Wilson," and, in consequence of the alleged libels it contained, he appeared in person in the Court of Queen's Bench to defend himself. On one occasion, while so engaged, after having very adroitly put forward the points in his favour, he appealed to Lord Denman to protect him, on account of his ignorance of the law The learned Judge, however, told him he thought he went on very well, a remark which excited much laughter. Mr. Stockdale was connected with The True Briton newspaper, of which Lord Kenyon was the proprietor. It will be recollected that the "Privilege Question," as regards the House of Commons, arose out of a publication of Mr. Stockdale

ATROCIOUS MURDER IN IRELAND.—An atrocious murder was perpetrated on the night of the 11th inst., about four miles to the west of Louisburgh, County Mayo. It appears that two sisters, named Mary and Honor Gibbons, lived near a brother of theirs named James Gibbons. Mary went on that day to Louisburgh to purchase provisions, but did not return; in her absence the house was burned, as well as the body of her unfortunate sister. Mr. Walshe and the Coroner arrived there; and, after two day's inquiry, Mr. Walshe and the police found bid in James Gibbons's house a large quantity of the unfortunate woman's property; it was also discovered that he sold at daybreak the feather-bed on which she lay the night she was murdered. Gibbons was found to be somewhat burned, and there was evidence from two of his relatives against him. The Jury unanimously returned a verdict of "Wilful Murder" against him. He has been fully committed. It was with difficulty that the police saved him from being struck by the stones which the country people flung at him. The woman's right leg and arm were burned to a cinder.

LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

TURKEY

Our letters from Constantinople mention that a serious fire occurred there on the night of the 30th of January. It commenced at Pera, close by the Italian Opera-house, and having spread both to the right and left, about eighty houses were consumed before it was extinguished. The English embassy was at one time in very great danger, all the houses, for a large space in front of it, having become a prey to the flames. The Opera-house, and the line of building connected with it towards the Palace, were also quickly burnt down; but an Armenian church of stone stopped the fire there; his vehicle, on the other hand, and saved the embassy on that side. Letters from Mosul state that cholera had ravaged the city and neighbourhood to such an extent as to carry off no fewer than 3000 persons.

ACCIDENTS AND OFFENCES.

DEATH WHILE EATING.—On Monday afternoon an inquest was held before Mr. W. Walton, at the Canteen, in the Tower, on the body of John Hayes, aged forty years, a fide-waiter in her Majesty's Customs. The deceased was on duty on board the Emerald, a foreign vessel, lying off the Tower. On the previous Friday afternoon he was eating some beef at his dinner, on board the vessel, when a piece of the meat lodged in his throat, and before assistance could be procured, he was suffocated. Verdict, "Accidental death."

A BANK CLERK ROBBED.—The robbery of no less a sum than £7000 in Bank of England notes was, on Tuesday, about one o'clock, effected in the vicinity of the Royal Exchange. A clerk in the service of Strahan, Paul, and Bates, bankers, in the Strand, had been collecting in the course of the morning at several of the City banks, and was on his way from Messrs. Barnett and Co's., to Messrs. William and Co's., in Finch Lane, when he missed his case, containing the above amount in notes, which he had left in his coat pocket. It was raining at the time, and, during the confusion that existed in that crowded neighbourhood, some one had managed to extract the case and get clear off. On the clerk discovering his loss, he instantly repaired to the Marston-house, and gave information to the Foresters, who in a short time succeeded in obtaining an accurate list of the notes and their numbers. The notes are stopped at the Bank, and a reward of £500 has been offered for their restitution.

FATAL ACCIDENT ON THE NEWCASTLE-UPON TYNE AND NORTH SHIELDS RAILWAY.—Last Sunday evening a young gentleman named Robson, son of Mr Hobson, draper, Dean-street, Newcastle-upon Tyne, arrived at the Howdon station just as the train for Newcastle was leaving, and, in making an attempt to enter it, fell or slipped, and several of the carriages passed over him. He was taken to Newcastle, but expired before arriving there.

FATAL OCCURRENCE AT CAMDEN-TOWN.—On Tuesday, Mr. G.J. Mills held an inquiry at the University College Hospital, on the body of Edward Franklin, who, together with several other persons, was buried by the falling of a dust heap, under the following circumstances: Edward Brown, a dustman in the employ of Mr. Richardson, dust contractor, said that about seven o'clock that morning he and the deceased, together with twelve or fourteen other persons, were engaged in sifting under a dust-heap about twenty feet high, when, suddenly, the upper part of the heap gave way, and the whole of the persons were buried more or less under the mass. Some were fortunate enough to extricate themselves, and every exertion was used to rescue their companions, three or four of whom were only recovered just in time to save their lives. The deceased, being at the same nearest the heap, was covered with an immense mass, that, upon being conveyed to University College Hospital, he was pronounced dead. Some of the other sufferers were also taken to the Hospital, and have since recovered after their admission. The witnesses state that the fall resulted from the recentness of the upper portion of the heap, consequent on the recent thaw. The Jury returned a verdict of Accidental death."

FATAL ACCIDENT ON THE SOUTH-EASTERN RAILWAY.—On Monday evening a frightful occurrence took place on this line, by which an old man, named John Seal, upwards of ninety years of age, met his death. The engine-driver of the train, which leaves Dover at a quarter past three o'clock, after passing Tenterhurst Station, saw a man walking between the two lines of rails, in the direction of Edenbridge. He was then more than a mile in advance, and as the train approached, the driver sounded the steam whistle. He apparently took no notice of it, and continued walking between the lines until the engine reached him within forty yards, when he stepped on the line on which he was travelling. The driver instantly shut off the steam, and the fireman applied the break, the whistle going all the time, but it was impossible to save the man's life, for, in a few seconds, he was struck down, and the entire train passed over him. In the course of the night the body was identified to be that of John Seal, residing in the village of Four Elms, in the parish of Braxted, a few miles from Edenbridge. He was not employed on the line.

SOUP FOR THE POOR.—M. Soyer specially recommends the following economical receipts for cheap and wholesome soup: Receipt, No. 1: Put one ounce of dripping into a saucepan (capable of holding two gallons of water), with a quarter of a pound of leg of beef, cut into square pieces, and two middling-sized onions, peeled and sliced. Then set the saucepan over a coal fire, and stir the contents round for a few minutes with a wooden (or iron) spoon, until fried lightly brown. Add, cut into small pieces, the peeling of two turnips washed, fifteen green leaves or tops of celery, and the green part of two leeks; stir the whole over the fire for another ten minutes: then add half a pound of flour, and half a pound of pearl barley, two gallons of water, with three ounces of salt, and a quarter of an ounce of brown sugar; stir occasionally until boiling, and allow it to simmer for three hours (this soup will keep several days, and the cost will be three farthings per quart in London, but less in the country. Receipt No. 2: This can be made cheaper, and in less time. Proceed as Receipt No. 1 (as regards the fat, meat, onions, and other vegetables), but add one quart of water upon the whole, which boil twenty minutes, stirring now and then to prevent burning; or set it by the side of the fire, and add one pound of maize, mix well together, and fill the stewpan with six quarts of water; season as above; let it simmer one hour, skim lightly, and it is then ready for use.

MUSIC.

DRURY-LANE THEATRE

Owing to the sudden indisposition of Miss Romer, no notice of which was communicated to the Manager until a few minutes prior to the hour of commencement, Mr Wallace's anxiously-expected opera of "Matilda of Hungary" was not produced on Monday night. A serious riot was the result of the disappointment, the house being crowded to excess

Seven o'clock had long passed before Mr Bunn, accompanied by Mr Wallace, appeared on the stage, to explain the reasons of the delay. Nothing could be more neat and appropriate than the Director's address. He displayed the certificates of Miss Romer's medical adviser, and appealed to the audience, as he intended to be just, that they should be generous

To a proposition to play Wallace's overture immediate assent was given, and it was tremendously cheered, mixed, however, with cries for the return of the money.

After half an hour's waiting, Mr. Harley came forward to announce that Balfe's opera of "The Bondman" would be given, with Miss Messent as the substitute for Miss Romer, in Madame Gerome.

A pithy, addressing Mr. Harley, asked, as the onus of the disappointment had been thrown on the vocalist by Mr. Bunn, whether she had been in the theatre at all that day. Mr. Harley replied, on his honour as a gentleman, that Miss Romer was present at the rehearsal, and had left the theatre, between four and five o'clock, with the positive intention of attending to her duties in the evening. For the first two acts of "The Bondman" the uproar was tremendous, and looked as though it had an organised opposition, as money was certainly tendered to the [illegible] contents, or the option of having tickets for the first night of "Matilda." At the third act the storm was lulled, and Miss Messent was deservedly applauded and called for. She played the part without a rehearsal, having under-studies it volunteered [illegible] reason to know it is not the manager's fault that all operatical [illegible] are not under-studied. It is the foolish vanity and dignity of the leading artists which stand in the way of this excellent arrangement. One prima donna considers it derogatory to understudy the part of another, and thus the theatre suffers seriously, and, eventually, of course, the artiste, for Mr Bunn closed his theatre after Monday's mishap, with the resolve not to open it again until either Miss Romer was well or Miss Rainforth is "up" to the part of Matilda. It is now announced for Monday next.

CONCERTS OF THE WEEK.

On Monday, the Choral Harmonists gave Mendelssohn's "Walpurgis Night," at the Hanover Tavern. Mr. G Marshall gave a practical lecture on the art of singing at the Music Hall in Store-street. Mr. Toplif gave a lecture on the human voice, at the London Mechanics' Institute, for the benefit of the distressed Scotch and Irish. Mr. Tavernor gave his second vocal and dramatic illustration from Shakspeare's plays, at Crosby Hall, aided by Miss P. Horton, Miss H. Groom, and Mr. J. D. Collet.

On Tuesday, the Second Concert of Classical Instrumental Music was given at Mr. Johnson's Assembly Rooms, Doctors' Commons. The scheme opened with Fesca's Quartett in D, Op. 34, by Messrs. H. Blagrove, Webb, Weslake, and Hancock. Onslow's Quintet, No. 17, in D Minor, Op. 44, with Mr. G. Severn as double-bass, was finely executed, the adagio being encored. Mr. Webb, who is but a youth, distinguished himself in the first violin part of Mozart's Quartet, No. 5, in C, Op 10. Beethoven's Quartett, No 3, in C, Op. 18, was the concluding gem. Mr. Love, the Polyphonist, commenced his popular entertainment at Crosby Hall, on Wednesday

On Thursday evening, a selection of Sacred Music was performed by the Sacred Harmonic Society, at Exeter Hall. After Handel's "Esther" overture, the Coronation Anthem, "The King shall Rejoice," was given; Mrs. Sunderland, Mr. George, who has a beautiful high tenor voice, Mr. Manvers, and Mr. Phillips, singing the quartet, "Exceeding Glad shall He be." The "Alla Trinita" quartet, ascribed to Palestrina, introduced by Sir Henry Bishop to the Ancient Concerts, was sung by Mrs. Sunderland, Miss Dolby, Mr. Manvers, and Mr. Phillips, and was encored. Mozart's popular, and we may say operatical, Mass No. 12, came next in rotation, and was smoothly executed. The "Benedictus" was sung by Mrs. Sunderland, Miss Dolby, Mr. Manvers, and Mr. H. Phillips. The fine chorus, "Et Resurrexit," went well; as did the "Dona nobis pacem." Every bar in this Mass may be traced in Mozart's operas. In the second part, the "Quotgnen Te Deum," with Mr. Perry's brass, was adequately sustained; we have admired the effects of this grand work more at St. Paul's, at the Anniversary Festival of the Sons of the Clergy, than at Exeter Hall.

Mr. Lindsay Sloper commenced on Thursday night at the Beethoven Rooms, 76, Harley-street, a series of Soirées of classical pianoforte music. The programme comprised Mozart's Fantasia for two performers on one pianoforte, played by Benedict and Lindsay Sloper; a selection from Handel's "Suites de Pièces, which, we presume will be in the hands of every amateur of the piano; Beethoven's Sonata No. 2, op. 20; Mendelssohn's Prelude in A flat major from op. 35, and lastly in Czerny's Grand Duo in E flat, op. 79 for piano (Mr. Soyer), violin (Mr. Willy), and violoncello (Mr Ronsselet). The room was filled with amateurs and well-known artists. Mr. Sloper is a classical performer, with a sound style, and a nimble finger; in fancy, perhaps, he is deficient. Miss Dolby sang a quaint Sicilienne, "Ogni pena," by Pergolesi, and a song, "The Fairy's Reproach," by Mr. Sloper, in the Mendelssohnian school, charmingly. She was encored in the latter. To compliment Mr. Sloper on a very excellent selection, and a pon its brevity. There were just two hours of delightful entertainment.

MUSICAL CHIT CHAT.

On Monday Mr. Dando's Third Quartett Concert at Crosby Hall. On Tuesday, Mr Sternidale Bennett's Performance of Classical Pianoforte Music at the Hanover-square Rooms. On Wednesday, Madame Dulcken's Third Soirée Musicale. On Thursday, the Sacred Harmonic Society. Madame Anna Bishop is about to appear in Balfe's opera of "The Four Brothers Aymon," at the Princess' Theatre. Her brother, Mr. Travers, is studying a part in an opera never before heard in this country, for Drury-Lane Theatre. At a meeting of the Sub-Committee, Sir George Smart in the chair, on Thursday evening, most satisfactory communications were read from the members of the profession, respecting the Concert on March 17, on behalf of Mr Bishop's Widow and Children. Mr. Anderson, Peanute to her Majesty, and the teacher of the Princess Royal, has consented to play with Mr. Benedict a Duo for two pianofortes; and Mr. Sternidale Bennett, Mr. Santon, and Mr. Lindsay play one Beethoven's Trios. Costa will conduct a Symphony and Overture played by the Philharmonic Orchestra: Madame Caradori Allan, Miss Dolby, Miss Birch, Madame Macfarren, Messrs. Allen, Hobbs, Lockey, Phillips, and every eminent vocalist not previously engaged, have tendered their valuable services, and the Concert will be under distinguished patronage. Tickets may be obtained at the leading music publishers, or of Mr. T. Chappell, the Hon. Treasurer, of Bond-street.

A grand Scottish Concert will take place at the Hanover-square Rooms next Thursday, for the relief of the distressed Highlanders, under the immediate patronage of the Queen. The programme comprises the names of the most eminent artistes, vocal and instrumental, and in the course of the evening "Auld Lang Syne" will be sung by the principals with a chorus of seventy voices. Mr. Willy is to lead, and Mr. T. German Reid will conduct.

COURT AND HAUT TON.

THE COURT AT BUCKINGHAM PALACE.

Last Saturday afternoon, the Queen held a Court at Buckingham Palace. The Earl Spencer, Earl of Hardwicke, Earl of Lincoln, Lord Portman, the Right Hon. Sir James Graham, Bart., and the Keeper of her Majesty's Privy Purse, were introduced by Lord Campbell, the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, to her Majesty, and took the oaths as Members of the Council of the Duchy of Lancaster.

On Sunday morning, the Queen and Prince Albert, her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, the Ladies and Gentlemen in Waiting, and the Domestic Household, attended Divine service in the Private Chapel at Buckingham Palace

The Royal dinner party, on Tuesday, at Buckingham Palace, included her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, Count Alexander Mensdorff, Lady Fanny Howard, Baroness de Speth, and Captain Francis Seymour.

On Wednesday, the Queen and Prince Albert, accompanied by Count Alexander Mensdorff, took an airing in an open carriage and four. His Royal Highness Prince Albert afterwards rode out on horseback, accompanied by Count Alexander Mensdorff, and attended by the Hon Captain Gordon. The Royal Family took their accustomed walks and rides, in the Royal gardens of Buckingham Palace.

THE DUKE OF WELLINGTON'S PARTIES.—The Duke of Wellington will not give any dinner parties at Apsley House till after Easter. Lord and Lady Charles Wellesley have arrived at the noble and gallant Duke's.

ILLNESS OF EARL DUCIE.—We regret to learn that Earl Ducie is confined to his residence by indisposition.

GENERAL KALERGI.—On Wednesday, the superb sword, subscribed for some time since by the Greeks resident in London, was presented to General Kalergi. It is a magnificent work of art, by Smith, of Duke-street; and we intend engraving it in our next number.

THE FISHMONGERS' AND POULTERERS' INSTITUTION will celebrate their Eleventh Anniversary by a dinner at the London Tavern, on Wednesday next; when a special appeal will be made in aid of the funds for the Asylum, now in course of erection, at Wood Green, near Tottenham.

MR. COLLINS, R.A.—We regret to record the death of this distinguished Artist, which took place on Wednesday, at his residence, Devonport-street, Hyde-park Gardens. Mr. Collins was in his 63rd year. A characteristic portrait of him, with a brief memoir, will be found in No. 158 of our Journal.

COLLEGE OF PRECEPTORS.—The Marquis of Northampton has accepted the office of Patron of this Institution

WILL OF MR. HOARE THE BANKER.—The late Samuel Hoare, Esq., banker of Lombard-street, has left personal property valued at £120,000. His estates and freeholds at Norfolk and Hampstead, he has devised to his eldest surviving son, John Gurney Hoare; bequeathing to him also all the effects at his residences at Hampstead and Cromer, and the carriages, horses, cattle, and live stock, for his absolute use. All other estates, freehold, copyhold, and leasehold, to go with the personal estate, and be divided among his younger children, and the children of his deceased son Samuel, who take their parent's share. To his son, the Rev. Edward Hoare, he leaves an additional bequest of £5000, and a contingent interest in the residue. To all his servants, mourning, and pecuniary legacies according to length of service

THE BRITISH INSTITUTION.

SECOND NOTICE.

Mr. F. Goodall, though he has made very little progress in his art within the last two years, is yet young, and one from whom we have reason to expect works of a still higher excellence in conception and execution. He has many merits: he always manages to tell his story well—he paints with deliberation and care, and looks on nature for himself. If he has not advanced, he has as certainly not gone back. Let him give his days and nights to Wilkie—consider the means which he took to attain that excellence which is still unrivalled in this country—the admirable composition he observed in all his pictures—the inimitable character, story, colour, incident, and circumstance, down to the commonest accessory introduced. There is nothing to let in Wilkie's pictures—nothing put in for the sake of filling up—nothing but what assists the story. This, also, was Hogarth's excellence—and, in some degree, it is Mr. Mulready's as well. Patient seeking alone will find it—thinking gives it—not accident. We have Engraved Mr. Goodall's "Holy Well," announced in our last.

Mr. F. Stone is always a pleasing painter; and his "Approaching Footstep," in the present Exhibition, a more than average specimen of his powers. People unacquainted with the works of Mr. F. Stone—or rather people not so well acquainted with his works as critics are, or profess to be—stand before this picture for a considerable time, and always leave it with a pleased look and a word of approbation. Critics exclaim that they have seen it before—because, apparently, Mr. Stone has an ideal beauty of his own, who sits, or stands, or sleeps, or smiles, or looks unutterable things, for all his females:

> Once I beheld the fairest of her kind,
> And still the sweet idea charms my mind;
> True she was dumb; for Nature gav'd so long
> Pleas'd with her work, that she forgot her tongue;
> But, smiling, said, she still shall gain the prize;
> I only have transferred it to her eyes:
> Such are thy pictures, Kneller.

Such are thy pictures, Stone! In the picture in the present Exhibition the face is pretty, the expression pleasing, the incident agreeable, and the execution careful

Another artist of promise is Mr. A. Johnston. He is fond of pastoral scenes, and has painted several incidents in Allan Ramsay's "Gentle Shepherd," with a keen appreciation of that charming pastoral. In No. 286—the picture we hope to engrave in a subsequent number—he is somewhat brick-dusty in colour, but Nature—which, if not everything, as somebody said it was, goes at least a great way towards it. The Shepherd, however, seems hardly to realise Sir Philip Sydney's charming description of a shepherd, in "The Arcadia," who "piped as if he never would grow old."

There is not much room at the British Institution for the exhibition of works in the sister art of Sculpture. But yet there are several specimens exhibited, and one or two, moreover, that call for commendation. Mr. W. C. Marshall, A.R.A, who dedicates his talents with great zeal and equal success to the poetic portion of his art, has a clever little statuette in marble, entitled "Leander." We think we observe something faulty about the expression of the face, but this may wear off with a further acquaintance. Mr. P. Park, we are glad to remark, is less exaggerated than heretofore; his "Impartiality," a group in marble (No. 546), is a better specimen of his abilities than we have seen for some time. Mr. Lillans is also clever: "A Poetic Head," No. 558, we have, however, seen before. The name of another sculptor, Mr. Felix M. Miller, will be new to many of our readers, but his "Group of Orphans," engraved in our present number, will help him forward in his calling and with all who admire what is simple and graceful, and touching in art. In the catalogue it bears the following epigraph:

> Who that bears
> A human bosom, hath not often felt
> How dear are all those ties that bind our race
> In gentleness together, and, how sweet
> Their force, let Fortune's wayward hand the while
> Be kind or cruel.
>
> Akenside.

We have made, since the publication of our former criticism, a fourth visit to the Gallery of the British Institution. We have left, it would seem, very little unnoticed—in any way deserving of notice. We must except, however, a picture rom St. Mathew, by Mr. O'Neil—"Mary Magdalen and the other Mary sitting over against the Sepulchre"—in which there is an expression of subdued grief not to be found in any other work in the present Exhibition. Mr. O'Neil is apt to repeat his mode of expressing the same intensity of sorrow, but he has here, to our thinking, got rid of a certain mannerism, and eclipsed in the expression portrayed in one head all his former efforts.

MARBLE GROUP.—ORPHANS.—BY FELIX M. MILLER.

COUNTRY NEWS.

Representation of Reading.—The Berkshire Chronicle says:—"It is with extreme regret that we now announce that the hopes which we may say were universally and confidently entertained by the inhabitants of this borough that Mr. Walter, of Bearwood, would be their representative at the approaching election, are at an end. That gentleman is now lying dangerously ill, and whatever may be the termination of his illness—which we sincerely hope will be favourable—he has directed it to be made publicly known that he has formed a firm determination to retire wholly from public life."

Reduction of the Duty on Tea.—A meeting of bankers, merchants, and other inhabitants of Manchester, was held at the Town-hall, on Tuesday, the Mayor of Manchester presiding, for the purpose of considering "the urgent necessity for a large reduction of the present high duty on tea." A memorial to Government, embodying the sentiments of the meeting, was unanimously adopted.

Proposed Malt-Tax Meeting at Peterborough.—At the request of a deputation from the Peterborough Farmers' Club, Earl Fitzwilliam has called a meeting, to be held at the Town Hall, Peterborough, on Wednesday next, to consider and agree upon a petition for the repeal of the Malt-Tax. His Lordship is of opinion that the deficiency in the revenue arising from the removal of that impost should be supplied by a property tax. He is decidedly opposed to an Income-Tax.

Deaths in the Snow.—The provincial papers received during the week contain accounts of the deaths of several persons during the storm. In many parts the drifts were more than five or six feet in depth. On Thursday (last week), as some persons were passing up Brentry-hill, in the neighbourhood of Westbury-on-Trym, and within two miles of Bristol, they discovered the body of an aged man, an agricultural labourer, residing in the neighbourhood, nearly buried in the snow. The body was quite cold and stiff, and he had evidently been dead for some hours. A loaf of bread was found under his arm, from which it is conjectured that on the previous night he must have been making his way up the hill, and having been probably overcome with fatigue, and lost his way, the unfortunate man sank in the snow, and perished from the inclemency of the weather.

Distress in Manchester.—Distress and privation press very heavily on the working classes in Manchester. The streets are crowded with paupers, most of them Irish, who have travelled to Manchester from Liverpool, in the hope either of obtaining employment, or sharing with others from the public bounty of the town. A soup-kitchen has been established, from which are distributed daily some 6000 quarts of nutritious soup, with 1000 loaves of bread. It is remarkable that of the recipients of this charity, 9-10ths are Irish people. The operative classes employed in the mills and manufactories (most of whom are working short time) seem to shrink from an application for charity, and prefer existence on the limited means derived from their labour. In the midst of so much want and misery, it is gratifying to observe that not the slightest evidence of insubordination has shown itself. The working people generally seem to be of opinion that the distress from which they are now suffering has proceeded from no cause over which the Government has had control.

Floods at Wisbech.—In consequence of the rapid thaw, accompanied by rain, the river Thames, both above and below Windsor-bridge, has overflowed its banks in all directions, thousands of acres being entirely under water.

Riot at Leicester.—A riot occurred at Leicester, on Tuesday last, between the police and a large body of persons assembled to continue a rude sport enjoyed on Shrove Tuesday in that town from time immemorial. It has been the custom to hold what was denominated a "Rotheram Fair," on a large open piece of ground, called the Newark, the spectators of which ordinarily amounted to many thousands. An arena was formed, and men, grotesquely attired, and called Whipping Toms, with long and fearful-looking whips, entered, displaying their dexterity in using the instrument upon those who had the foolhardiness to contest with them, and he who exhibited the greatest skill in escaping the lash with a shinny stick, was rewarded by the applause of, and a collection among the spectators, the money being shared among the whippers and the whipped. This exhibition having latterly been productive of much tumult and disorder, the Magistrates of the borough resolved to suppress it, and for this purpose framed a bye-law, enacting it an offence, punishable by a fine of £5, for any person to appear with a whip, cudgel, or instruments of that nature, on Shrove Tuesday, at the place above-mentioned, and several whippers were informed three weeks ago of the determination on the part of the authorities to carry out rigidly this provision. This being known to the inhabitants, curiosity was felt to see whether any opposition on the part of the whippers would be offered, and on Tuesday last several thousands assembled on the spot. The police mustered in considerable force, and were assaulted with sticks and pelted with brickbats. The riot was ended by the capture and conveyance to gaol of "two vans full of prisoners," escorted by upwards of one hundred and fifty constables.

THE HOLY WELL.—PAINTED BY F. GOODALL

RE-OPENING OF HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.

SIGNOR GARDONI.

SIGNOR GARDONI was born at Parma, in 1821. He studied at the Conservatoire there. His master was Signor Decesari. He made his début at Viadana, a small town near Parma, in Roberto Devereux. He was then engaged by Signor Ronzani for four years. He then appeared at Turin, at the Sutera Theatre, in Ricci's opera, "I due Sergenti." He remained only during the carnival season, at Turin, and then he went to Berlin, where he had great success in "Lucrezia Borgia," "Belisario," and "L'Elisir d'Amore." He remained a year and four months at Berlin, where he became a great favourite. Before he left Berlin, he passed a fortnight at the Palace, at Sreltz, where he sang in "Lucrezia Borgia," for the Duke of Sreltz, who made him many handsome presents. He then appeared at Brescia, and afterwards at Milan, where he sang in "Linda da Chamounix."

SIGNOR GARDONI

Mons. Leon Pilet, the director of the Grand Opera, Paris, having heard him, at this period, wished to engage him for the Académie Royale. Sig Gardoni offered Sig. Merelli, director of La Scala, at Milan, a sum of money to break his engagement, as he had still to remain two years (Sig. Merelli having previously purchased his engagement from Ronzani). Merelli refused, and it was then that Mons. Leon Pilet conceived the idea to send to Milan a professor of singing, Mr. Ditchs, to carry off the young tenor. Sig. Gardoni, in order to facilitate his escape, was disguised as the servant of Mr. Ditchs. Unhappily, arrived at the frontier at Piedmont, the professor's passport not being en regle, master and valet were both arrested, and were re-conducted in their post-chaise by the gens d'armes to Santa Margherita, at Milan. The Professor was retained in prison for twenty-four days, and Signor Gardoni was only one day and night in durance vile. The next day he was obliged to sing at La Scala, in "Linda da Chamounix;" when the public cried out with enthusiasm, "ben tornato! ben tornato!" Four days afterwards, he was given up to the conductor of the malle poste for Vienna, where he went to sing with Tadolini, for the spring season. Monsieur Leon Pilet, seeing his first attempt fail, beseeched Donizetti to treat with Merelli. Donizetti at length obtained Gardoni's engagement for thirty thousand francs, and made his débût at the Grand Opera, Paris, in 1845, in Medermeyer's opera, "Marie Stuart;" the part of Rothwell being written expressly for him.

His second appearance was in "The Favorita," a rôle that did him much honour, as he had to contend with the souvenirs of the celebrated Duprez. He subsequently performed in "Robert Le Diable," and had great success in Balfe's charming opera "L'Etoile de Seville," besides several other operas.

Certain difficulties having arisen between Sig. Gardoni and M. Leon Pilet, the young tenor resolved to leave the Grand Opera, and payed a fine of sixty thousand francs. A short time previous to his departure from Paris, M. Vatel, Director of the Italian Opera, requested him to sing a few nights, to which he assented, and appeared in "L'Elisir d' Amore," with triumphant success. Sig. Gardoni's departure was much regretted by the Parisians, as his pronunciation of the French language was perfect, combined with all his other advantages.

SIGNOR SUPERCHI.

ANTONIO SUPERCHI, son of the late Paole Superchi and Gaetana his wife, a lady of the Manghi family, was born at Parma in 1817. His father was a Magistrate in his native city, who was employed in the same capacity under the French Empire. Young Superchi's musical talents were early developed; and from his boyhood, by that natural instinct which is so common among his countrymen, he delighted his friends by singing the favourite airs that were popular at that period. His father, however, intended him for the legal profession, and in compliance with his desire the young singer attended a regular course of study at the University.

After the death of his father, Antonio applied himself with redoubled ardour to his favourite pursuit, and, after two years' study under the renowned professors, Tartagnani and De Cesaris, in his native city, he made his débût at Venice, with Madame Persiani. He was subsequently engaged at the principal Italian theatres, but chiefly at Florence, Rome, Palermo, and Turin, and again at Venice, where Verdi wrote for him the part of Charles V., in the opera "Ernani." He was then engaged for Spain, where he was two years primo baritono at Barcelona, and where he performed in more than twenty-four of the most popular operas of Bellini, Donizetti, Rossini, Verdi, Ricci, Coppola, &c. &c. His love for his native country induced him to re-visit Italy in the course of last year, where Mr. Lumley invited him to grace with his presence the boards of Her Majesty's Theatre.

The operas in which parts have been written expressly for Sig Superchi, besides "Ernani," are Facini's "Maria d'Inghilterra," Mandanici's "Maria degli Albizzi," Ricci's "Amante di Richiamo," and six others.

SIGNOR SUPERCHI.

THE THEATRES.

HER MAJESTY'S.

Most auspicious were the circumstances under which her Majesty's Theatre opened its portals on Tuesday night. The house was very full, and amongst the audience we again recognised with pleasure the faces of its old-established votaries, all eager for the result of the first night's trial, and few, perhaps, anticipating that it would be in all respects so favourable. Donizetti's "La Favorita" was the opera selected for the commencement of the season. The spirited libretto, the dramatic character of the music, and the charming morceaux which are interspersed here and there through this opera, are important elements of success; but, nevertheless, it is yet more to the admirable manner in which it is performed here, and in which it is mounted at this theatre, which will give it the popularity it seems destined to enjoy.

The most important event of the evening was the débût of Gardoni, the new tenor. Excessive was the interest it excited, and we rejoice that we can welcome, in this young artist, a great and important acquisition to our Anglo-Italian stage. He is very young, and gifted with a voice delightfully sweet, pure, and flexible, which is, at times, most touching in its timbre: his style is excellent: he has a pure taste, and his action is alternately pathetic and energetic, and, besides this, one of his greatest charms is that air of youth and ingenuousness which persuades the spectators that he is actually moved by the feelings he expresses. All these qualities render Gardoni a delightful singer, and one who, no doubt, will become a great favourite, while he has, besides, the advantage of youth, so that he will daily make still further advance in his art. Let us add, in addition, that he possesses that qualification which, if not essential, yet greatly adds to the effect of dramatic performance—good looks.

Superchi, the new baritone, is a decidedly valuable addition to the troupe of this establishment. He possesses a fine full voice, much taste and expression, and an excellent style; the only fault that we could find with him on Tuesday being an occasional harshness of tone, but, with regard to him, as also to the other artists, we must observe that the music of "La Favorita," in some parts delicious, in many others is, in our opinion, anything but favourable to the developments of the voice or the resources of a singer, and it is probable that, neither in respect to Gardoni or Superchi, have we heard the full extent of what they can accomplish. We are confirmed in this idea by Superchi's charming performance of the "Pour tant d'amour," that exquisite romance already so well known in English society, and amongst English amateurs. Here what we fancied the defects of his voice vanished, and he sang this aria with a taste and feeling which procured it a rapturous and most well deserved encore. He was warmly applauded throughout, and experienced a most favourable reception. Bouché, the new basso, has a fine, full-toned voice, of a peculiar and uncommon quality, and bids fair likewise to become a favourite.

One of the things which struck us most forcibly at the performance of "La Favorita," was the wonderful improvement of Sanchioli. While this artist retains the brilliant voice and execution for which, in some operas last year, such as "Nino," for example, she was so remarkable, all the faults and peculiarities of her style are softened down in a manner which would be hardly credited. These arose at that time from the exuberance of energy and life—running often to waste, and to unprofitable excess. Study and practice seem to have taught her to prune away whatever was superfluous; there are now none of those sudden bursts and sinking of the voice, except when they really add to the effect of the music of which she was so fond. She has more self-command, more repose; and her voice appears now under perfect control. Her singing has none of those extravagant gestures, none of that excess of energy, which then deteriorated so greatly from its effect; and yet she has moments of passion and fire, in which she awakens an answering chord of sympathy in the breast of all her listeners. She was admirable throughout, but in the last scene especially so; and even the Pregbera with a deep and quiet pathos, and a delicacy of tone, which astonished all who heard it; while in the subsequent duet with Gardoni, her well remembered brilliant notes came forth with an eclat and effect that called forth the loudest applause. We must observe, en passant, that this duet is one of the gems of the opera; and in the death scene, which concludes it, Sanchioli was truly touching. In another point, that of costume, her improvement seems to have kept pace with what she achieved in other matters. With the exception of her bridal dress, which was not well selected, her costume was tasteful and rich, and she looked better than we ever saw her before.

There was another point in which the performances of Tuesday was deserving of the highest praise—namely, with regard to the choruses. As many or nearly all of those who composed this important corps were new performers, it is perfectly astonishing what has been achieved with them. It is not only the ensemble with which they sing, but the characterè and the expression which they give to the music which delighted us. One chorus especially, that peculiar and highly dramatic one, where the noblemen of the Court are whispering indignantly together concerning Fernando's ignominious marriage was given with electrical effect. Each member of the chorus acted as well as sang his part, and all seemed to enter into it with a spirit which does the highest credit to Mr. Balfe, who, we understand, has been indefatigable in drilling them to the work; and those who know what hard labour this is, will agree that the warm reception given to this able musician was fully deserved. All went admirably; the orchestra is exceedingly full and brilliant, and the performances of the overture, which was enthusiastically encored, showed that we have lost nothing by the changes which have been effected. But of these details, and of others—such as the scenery, which is excellent—we will speak more fully another time. On an opening night there is so much to observe, that, even with the most unremitting attention, the critic can only seize the more salient points of a performance, especially when there is so much of novelty as on this occasion. After the opera, the National Anthem was sung, and the usual splendid effect of the whole house produced. Sanchioli took one of the solo parts, with fine effect. Her full round voice is peculiarly adapted to the rendering of the music of this grave and majestic character.

We subjoin the plot of "La Favorita." The scene passes in the kingdom of Castile in 1340. Leonora de Guzman, celebrated for her wit and beauty, was loved by Alfonso XI., King of Castile, of whom she became the favourite. The ascendancy which she acquired over the Monarch became so great that he resolved to repudiate his wife. The Pope interferes, and menaces the King with excommunication if he persists in his project. In the meantime, the Moors threaten the kingdom of Castile. Alfonso hastens to meet and give them battle; the result is a decisive victory, owing chiefly to Fernando, a youthful captain of his army. Fernando, formerly a novice in the Convent of Santiago de Compostella, has seen and loved Leonora, of whose name and rank he is ignorant. Carried away by his passion he has quitted the convent, obtained, by the favour of Leonora, a brevet of captain, and by his valour the triumph of the King's army. Overwhelmed already by the favours of his Sovereign, he asks of him the hand of the noble object of his affection; and the King, who has discovered the love of Leonora for Fernando, determines on the sacrifice of his own sentiments and gives his consent to the marriage. The favourite informs her lover, by letter, of her relation with Alfonso. Unfortunately, her confidant, Inez, is unable to fulfil her commission, and the marriage is accomplished. After the ceremony, Fernando perceives that the eyes of all are turned away from him or exhibit marks of contempt. He imperiously demands the cause, and is informed that he has wedded the mistress of the King. Fernando, indignant, utters imprecations on his bride, throws his knightly sword at Alfonso's feet, abdicates his recently acquired titles, and, heartbroken, returns to the convent to take the vows. Leonora, in despair, determines, before she dies, to see him once more and obtain his pardon. Habited as a novice she penetrates the convent, is recognised by Fernando, whose love returns at her sight, and who proposes that they fly together. It is too late; Leonora expires at her lover's feet—but pardoned and happy.

The ballet presented us another series of novelties almost too long to notice in detail. Two new danseuses, and two new dancers, appearing in a ballet likewise new, afford much food for curiosity and observation, and we are obliged to dismiss them for the time with a few words only. Mdlle. Rosati, the heroine of the ballet, is young and very handsome. Her dark eyes sparkle with fire and intelligence, her countenance varies with every change of the expression, her movements are most graceful, and perfectly vivacious and impassioned, and her peculiar style of person and air renders her slower pas above all highly affective.

SCENE FROM THE NEW BALLET OF "CORALIA," AT HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.

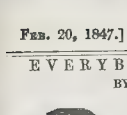
The other fair débûtante is Marie Taglioni, another scion of that race of choregraphic geniuses whose name she bears. She is very young; her face, and, in fact, her whole person, are piquante and original. Her countenance is full of character and intelligence; and, as a dancer, she is light, agile, graceful, and, at the same time, possessed of remarkable power of muscle. Her reception was most favourable, and every one we believe regretted that she did not appear for a longer time on the scene. M. Paul Taglioni is a dancer of considerable merit, as far as we could judge the other night. M. D'Orsi is another new dancer, who was much applauded, but of these artists more when we have had another opportunity of judging of them. We now subjoin the plot of the ballet, which is taken from that most exquisite of German tales Undine, and which adheres far more closely to the original than the "Undine" in which we have so often seen La Cerito, the name, in that instance, being almost the only point of similitude.

Sir Hulderbrand of Ringstetten (M. Paul Taglioni) is victor at a tournament given by the Grand Duke, and attracts the attention of the Prince's adopted daughter, Bertha (Madame Petit Stephan). She presents him with a magic scarf, but requires him, in return, to enter the "Enchanted Forest." Sir Hulderbrand obeys, and takes the road to the forest. Troxendtus, a potent spirit of the waters, directs the Knight towards the hut of a poor fisherman. The latter receives him hospitably, and the Knight here finds the adopted daughter of the fisherman, the lovely Coralha, who is at once fascinated by the youthful Knight. Coralha, a water-nymph in place of Troxendtus, and though [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] restraint, and bounds out of the cottage. A storm arising, the Fisherman and the Knight set forth to seek her, and she is found by the latter reposing on a bed of leaves, in the middle of a lake. By the aid of Bertha's scarf, he draws her to shore. Their mutual love is avowed, and their union takes place. Meanwhile, the Fisherman and his wife discover in the proud Bertha their long lost daughter; and when she passionately refuses to dwell with them, or treat them as her parents, Coralha compassionately offers her an asylum at the castle of Sir Hulderbrand. [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] obtains re-possession of the magical scarf; and Coralha, overwhelmed with grief, tears off her wedding ring, and returns to her Naïad existence, while the avenging Troxendtus drags Sir Hulderbrand to destruction.

In this ballet we must briefly notice the last scene, as a display of the scene painter's art, and one of the triumphs of the composition. The dance of the Naïads in the moonlight by the lake in the grand finale to Undine is truly exquisite. Nothing can be more ideal than the whole scene. The moonlight sheds over it a [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] a dream than a living reality. M. P. Taglioni here carried into execution the real object and design as an art, which, in proportion as it approaches too near reality, [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

EVERYBODY'S COLUMN.

BY ALBERT SMITH.



THE SNOW.

ONE of our very distant readers, who live at the antipodes and elsewhere, but like to hear of our topics, may be interested at knowing that, last week, THE SNOW was the all-important subject of conversation.

Coming in February, at the genial festival of St. Valentine, it astonished many folks. We must confess we were not amazed. Our seasons have long been so eccentric in their weather, that we should not stare to see people sailing here, without their hats, in the open air, on New Year's Day; or find them in July, crouching before a blazing fire, or walking out in heavy coats, comforters, and fur gloves. It used to be different, we know; and the difference suggests this original

BALLAD.

I remember, I remember,
Ere my childhood fitted by,
We got snow-balls in December,
And hot dog-days in July.
Now they come, I don't know how, love,
And what's more, I don't much care;
But, as Wright would say, months now, love,
Are not "as they used to were."
I remember, I remember, &c.

Then the bowers, then the flowers,
Had of every plant a crop;
And you always got Spring flowers
Without Marv Johnson's shop
Buds to-night, buds to-night, love,

Adorn your bouquet rare,
But they cost a sovereign bright, love,
Which I've hardly got to spare.
I remember, I remember, &c.

I was merry, I was merry,
When an old acquaintance came,
Just to take a glass of sherry,
Before cobblers had a name.
Now we're ice, love; now we're ice, love,
All that Wenham Lake can spare;
But it's dearer at the price, love,
Than our own old pond blocks were.
I remember, I remember, &c.

We had despatched one of our most intelligent artists to make sketches of the various scenes to which the storm gave rise; but his fingers got so exceedingly cold, he was perfectly unable to hold his pencil when he arrived at them. We have, therefore, drawn the following illustrations from memory, and have added to them a new song called

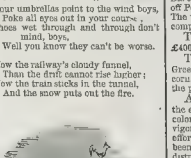
THE STORM

Come to bore us, dunning tailor,
List ye seamen, near the Strand;
Hear a man, who's no great sailor,
Sing the dangers of the land.

From mizzling snow-flakes first in motion,
Which but make you blink your eyes,
To the draft, of which no notion
Can be learned now high 'twill rise.
Your umbrellas point to the wind boys,
Poke all eyes out in your course;
Shoes wet through and through don't mind, boys,
Well you know they can't be worse.

THE TOWN AS IT APPEARED LAST WEEK

Now the railway's cloudy funnel,
Than the draft cannot rise higher;
Now the train sticks in the tunnel,
And the snow puts out the fire.

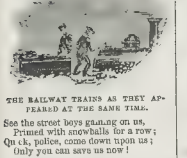


THE COUNTRY AS IT APPEARED, ALSO LAST WEEK.

Hark! the waterman loud bawling,
"Now! fust cab!" Wade to the stand;
In your nervous friend be hauling,
Ere you meet the snow-ball band.

Now the weather-glass is sinking,
And the cold is not to vew
Where's the danger now, or shrinking?
None! the snow's all drowned in thaw!

Now you tumble cruck your braces—
Set your palcot lend whit snow.
Luff, boy, luff, don't make wry faces,
But, all smiling, rise and go.



THE RAILWAY TRAINS AS THEY APPEARED AT THE SAME TIME.

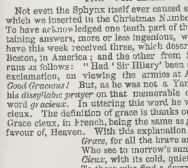
TERRIBLE CONDITION OF THE RAILWAY CAPTIVES ON THE NIGHT OF THE STORM.

See the street boys gazing on us,
Primed with snowballs by a row;
Quick, then, come down upon us;
Only you can save us now!

Now, all you to down beds creeping,
Safely lock'd your room within,
Think the misery of sleeping
Fifty at a one-bed inn!

PICTORIAL AXIOM.

For the amusement of those who have learned "French without a master," or been a fortnight at Boulogne, at any time, we put forward this French enigma, premising that it conveys an invitation to a meal, with the state of the inviter's appetite



P
AG
A

But for those who have not been enabled to avail themselves of the above advantages, we ask the question of

WHAT OCCUPATION OF THE LABOURING CLASSES DO THESE PERSONS FOLLOW?

THE "SIR HILARY" CHARADE AGAIN.

Not even the Sphynx itself ever caused so much turmoil as the above riddle, which we inserted in the Christmas Number of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS. To have acknowledged one tenth part of the communications we received, containing answers, more or less ingenious, would have filled our paper. But we have this week received three, which deserve notice. One of these comes from Boston, in America; and the other from Stuttgard, in Germany. The former runs as follows: "Had 'Sir Hilary' been a Yankee, and lived in our times, his exclamation, on viewing the armies at Agincourt, would probably have been, Good Gracious! But, as he was not a Yankee, and was, moreover, in France, his disyllabic prayer on that memorable occasion was, no doubt, the French word gracieux. In uttering this word he would use the two syllables grace and cieux. The definition of grace is thanks or favour; and that cieux is Heaven. Grace cieux, in French, being the same as grace à dieu, meaning thanks to, or the favour of, Heaven. With this explanation I solve the riddle thus—

Grace, for all the brave and proud,
Who see to morrow's sun;
Cieux, with its cold, quiet cloud,
To those who find a dewy shroud
Before the day be done;
Grace Cieux, for those, whose bright blue eyes,
Weep when a warrior nobly dies."

The second has it so—

He prayed for the survivors proud
A yes, their deeds to tell,
And Sion, with its type, the cloud,
For those who won a dewy shroud,
And, fighting, nobly fell.
A pension for the widow'd fair
Who mourns the brave that perished there. C. C. B.

The third is, however, the most valuable. We stated that the charade was not written by Walter Scott, as we had first believed, but by Mr. Winthrop Fread: and, to the courtesy of that gentleman's uncle, we owe the following explanation, which will, we trust, allow the weary brains of our ingenious readers to repose a little

"The charade was written by Winthrop, and he received applications without number for the solution, which he considered a bad one himself it long Good Night! His poems will, I believe, be published in the spring. Sir Walter Scott handsomely declared that he had never written a charade so pretty."

EPITOME OF NEWS.—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

The abolition of the triennial festival of "Montem," the origin of which is supposed to be coeval with the foundation of Eton College itself, has been at length officially announced.

On Sunday last, a woman named Jane Culliford, of Yeovil Marsh, aged 107 years, was buried at Mudford, at her own request, and in the same grave which received her first husband's remains in 1785

A vessel, which has arrived from Nantes, has brought, among a variety of articles of French production, 400 casks of vinegar, the manufacture of that country

The remains of the Empress Mathilda, lately found in the ancient Abbey of Bec, in Normandy, are about to be transported to the Cathedral of Rouen. The French Government intends to take this as an occasion for raising a monument to King Richard in the Cathedral, to which that valorous Prince he queathed his Lion Heart.

The Whitehaven and Maryport Junction Railway was opened on Monday for passenger traffic. The line will be opened for passenger traffic on the 1st of March.

The Cologne Gazette publishes a long correspondence from Berlin' on the state of the relations of England and of France with Spain. It says that Germany ought to take advantage of this moment to renew the amicable connections which existed between Germany and Spain, and which were advantageous to the commerce and manufacture of both countries.

The Wymondham Branch of the Norfolk Railway was opened on Monday for passenger traffic.

The section of the French Central Railway from Orleans to Bourges will be opened on the 1st of July next, and as far as Chateauroux in the following October.

A Berlin journal announces that the greatest part of the merchants of Cracow have given notice to their correspondents that they are unable to fulfil their engagements, and that they can only offer five per cent! Should this information be true, the Houses in Dresden, and Hamburg, will suffer severely

Captain Dillon, whose voyages and adventures among the natives of the islands in the Pacific are familiar to every reader, and who discovered and brought to France the remnants of the Astrolabe, the sole relics of the unfortunate La Perouse and his companions, died rather suddenly at Paris, last week

The American papers mention the loss of an emigrant vessel, the Creole, on the coast of Cuba, when upwards of 50 persons perished. Among them were the commander Captain Cayal, the cook, eighteen females, twenty children under twelve years of age; the others were male emigrants. The captain could have saved himself, but he refused to leave the wreck until the emigrants had been rescued

The Jamaica Dispatch gives an account of the loss of the Berean, Indiaman, with 340 Coolies on board, from Madras She ran on a reef off Port Morant Harbour, on the 10th Jan., through the negligence of the pilot. The whole of the Coolies were got on shore in safety; but the vessel itself was a complete wreck

The late Mr. Byng's estate has been valued for probate duty at £400,000.

The Courrier de Marseilles states, that on Wednesday week, the Greek ship Socrates, bearing the Russian flag, and laden with 5000 hectolitres of corn, was wrecked on the rocks near the fort Saint Jean, and within 100 yards of the port of Marseilles

Accounts have been received from Auckland, New Zealand, to the end of October. The native chief Heki, who formerly disturbed the northern colony, continues quiet, and appears likely to remain so. In the south the vigorous measures of Governor Grey have completely suppressed the rebellious efforts of Rangahiea, whose brother was taken prisoner in Cook's Straits, and has been executed, after an investigation which proved his participation in the late disturbances on the river Hutt.

The General Diet of Prussia has been convoked for the 11th of April, when the Session will be opened at Berlin by the King in person.

The weather in Canada has been very cold, the thermometer at Quebec, on the 22nd ult., being 13 degrees below zero of Fahrenheit. The cold extended to South Carolina, the Ohio, and the great lakes, and sleighing extended to Baltimore

A letter from Lugano of the 9th inst. states that some divisions of Austrian troops had arrived on the Swiss frontier, but that no uneasiness was felt on the subject; and the report that the Government had had an intention of convoking an extraordinary sitting of the Grand Council in consequence was contradicted.

The latest bulletin of the health of the Empress of Russia is dated Feb 11, when the symptoms of the disease were slowly but steadily abating It is supposed that her Majesty will soon proceed to the Crimea, or to the chateau of Prince de Woronzow, near Odessa

Mr. O'Connell has of late been much indisposed. His illness is said to arise from an affection of the heart, which his friends fear is likely to prove fatal, and it appears that he has some such presentiment himself, for his constant exclamation after conversation with any of his old intimates is, "Pray for me, pray for me."

On the night of the 28th January a great fire broke out in Boston (United States) by which a hundred buildings were destroyed. The fire first began in the bowling saloon attached to the Neptune house in Haverhill street, and owing to a strong westerly wind the conflagration spread with alarming speed from street to street. The fire was got under after much exertion on the morning of the 30th. The amount of damage is not stated.

We are sorry to hear that much distress exists amongst the Spitalfields weavers. They have prepared a memorial to her Majesty, imploring some remedia. means to render them independent of public charity.

The last New York letters state that the spring trade had opened much earlier than usual this year; that the sales of English cotton and woollen goods already made were very extensive, and at highly remunerating prices; and that there was every prospect of an unusually large business this season Equal activity prevails in the demand for English iron

The mercantile community of Liverpool has been deprived of an important member, by the death of Mr. Stephen Garr, the resident partner of Messrs Baring Brothers and Co., Liverpool branch. This gentleman has been rapidly carried off by a violent attack of typhus fever, and his loss has excited much sympathy.

During the week ending the 14th instant, the number of persons passing between England and France at the under-mentioned places was—At Boulogne, 573; at Calais, 242; total, 815.

A new omnibus trick has lately been practised. The conductor will take his sixpence, and the departing passenger will have walked some distance, when the fellow runs after him, and twisting a bad sixpence between his fingers, asks whether "he knows what he has given him." Of course the annoyed individual gives another; but must be very ingenious indeed, if he is to be had in the same way twice

The health of Mdlle. Rachel has been for some time in a very precarious state: she has just had another relapse, and she will not be able to appear at the Théâtre Français till the beginning of next month

A letter from Kœnigsberg, in Prussia, says, that according to a recent prohibition foreign merchants, making purchases of corn in Russia, could not export it to Prussia by the land frontier, such exportation being only allowed to take place on a declaration of Russian merchants of the first class. This prohibition gave rise to a false rumour that the Russian Government had entirely forbidden the exportation of wheat.

An association has been formed at Besançon (France) to purchase corn to be resold at cost price to the industrious and indigent classes It has collected a fund of 200,000 francs, and commenced operations by procuring a quantity of flour from a market at a short distance, and thus, having provided for the first necessity, will now go and make its bargains at the ports to which foreign corn is brought.

By official returns the traffic receipts upon the state railways in Belgium, for the month of December last, amounted to 1,091,285f. 15c.; the receipts of the corresponding month, in 1845, were 875,897f. 17c.; showing an increase, in the month of December, 1846, over the corresponding month in 1845, of 121,674f. 98c

Accounts have been received of the death of Admiral Quernel, at Toulon, after a short illness. He entered the service in 1811, and was lately in command of the Inflexible man-of-war in the Mediterranean

A letter of the 2nd of December, from Dschoddah, in Arabia, says: "[illegible] has been seen at the port, among the pilgrims to Mecca, [illegible] CERTAIN DEATH, but the exact number is not known. On the day on which the multitude of pilgrims—about sixty thousand in number—proceeded to make the usual religious sacrifices in the valley of Mina, the pestilence broke out among them. At first, there were only some isolated cases, but at length it became general, and 20,000 deaths occurred."

On Wednesday morning the American line-of-packet ship Sir Robert Peel, was hauled out of the London Docks with upwards of 100 emigrants on board, principally small farmers, who intend settling in the United States. The Sir Robert Peel also took out a valuable cargo of British manufactured goods, including 100 tons of tin

The Hibernia, Boston steamer, brought a box addressed to her Majesty the Queen. It was entered in the bill of entry as "one box, contents unknown, for her Majesty the Queen." It was said to contain a quantity of illustrated and other American publications, intended as a present to her Majesty

The tide in the river, on Tuesday, was higher than on any previous occasion since the 31st of December, 1845

THE WEATHER.

THE temperature during the week ending Feb. 17, has been remarkable for its great departure from the average of the season, it having been, during the first three days, greatly below, and, during the last four days, considerably above, the average, causing the difference of the readings of a thermometer to amount to 45°. The following are the particulars of each day: Thursday, Feb. 11, was a fine day, followed by a cloudless night; its average temperature was 26½°; it was excessively cold; at midnight, the reading of the thermometer was 21°, and it continued to decline till about six A.M. of Friday, at which time the reading was only 6°, being 26° below the freezing point: this is the lowest reading that has occurred since that very remarkable day, the particulars of which are fully published in your Journal of Feb. 15, 1845 No 146. By referring to your paper of this date, it will be found that, on the 12th February, 1845, at about seven o'clock in the morning, the reading of the thermometer was 12° below zero; and it is very remarkable that these two extreme low readings should be separated by two years, wanting but one hour. The subsequent readings of Feb. 12, 1845, will be found in your paper of that date. I now proceed to those of the 12th of Feb. of this year At 7h. A.M., it was 10°; at 7h. 30m., it was 10½°; at 8h., it was 11°; at 9h. A.M., it was 12°; at 9h. 45m., it was 14°; at 10h. A.M., it was 16°; at 10h. 45m., it was 24½°; it afterwards rose to 33½°, which was the highest point reached during the day. The average temperature of this day was 14½°, being about 15° below the average of the season; nevertheless, it was a fine day

Saturday was a cold day; the temperature during the morning was remarkable, the reading of the thermometer between 6h. A.M., and 11h. A.M. was 20°, without the slightest variation during this interval; it then rose to 33½°, and then sank to 31° by 7 P.M., and from this time a total change took place in the weather; the wind changed to S.W.; the thermometer reading at 11h. P.M. was 29°; at midnight it was 32°, and a rapid thaw set in. On Sunday rain was falling nearly all day, the temperature rose to 42°; its average temperature was 42°, being no less than 18° higher than it was the preceding day All Sunday night the temperature was 44°, and by Monday morning very nearly every trace of the preceding week's hard frost was completely obliterated. Monday was a tolerably fine day, a strong wind was blowing from the S.W.; the temperature rose to 52½; its average temperature was 48°, being about 16° above the average for the day, and 28° higher than that of the 12th day. Tuesday was fine during the early part of the day, but rain, with hail, fell after 1h. P.M.; and it was a bad day; its average temperature was 41°. Wednesday was a fine day, the sky generally cloudy; its average temperature was 43°. The average temperature of the period between Feb. 8th and Feb. 13th, was 24½°, being 14° below that of the season. From the preceding account, it will be seen that this week has exhibited, in a remarkable degree, the great changes of weather to which this island is liable, within very limited periods of time

The following are thermometrical readings each day:

Day.	A.M. 7h. 30m.	P.M. 3 30	Rain fell	Degrees of the Day Highest	Lowest
Feb. 11	28½°	36°	24½°	36°	21°
Feb. 12	10½	32	21	33½	6
Feb. 13	29	33½	21	33½	17
Feb. 14	41½	45	15	45	41
Feb. 15	45	52	44	52½	44
Feb. 16	41	50	47	50	35
Feb. 17	47	52½	49½	55	41

Blackheath, Thursday, Feb. 18, 1847. J. G.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED.

VICE-ADMIRAL YOUNG.

WILLIAM YOUNG, Esq., Vice-Admiral of the Blue, who died on the 11th instant, at his residence, Denmark Hill, derived from an ancient Scottish family, being seventh in direct male descent from Sir John Young, of Leny, N.B., Chamberlain to Mary, Queen of Scots, in 1561. He entered the Royal Navy in 1777, and, at the period of his decease, had nearly completed seventy years of service. He was a Lieutenant of the Fox frigate (Captain the Hon. Thomas Windsor) when she fought and captured the Santa Catalina, a Spanish frigate of superior force, off the Havannah, in 1783. His conduct at the evacuation of St. Domingo drew forth the warm encomiums of Brigadier-General Sir Thomas Maitland, and is mentioned in the General's public despatches, in the London Gazette of 28th June, 1798. At the landing of the British troops, under Sir Ralph Abercrombie, in Egypt, in 1801, he filled the important post of Captain of the Fleet; and the ability with which he performed its duties on that memorable occasion stand recorded in Brenton's "Naval History." From 1805 to 1830 he was employed as Principal Agent for Transports on the river Thames.

His dates of promotion were as follow: Lieutenant, February, 1781; Commander, July, 1798; Post Captain, April, 1802; Rear-Admiral, January, 1837; and Vice-Admiral, November, 1846.

PROFESSOR NAPIER.

MR. MACVEY NAPIER, Professor of Conveyancing in the University of Edinburgh, and Principal Clerk of Session, died, deeply regretted, on the 11th inst. He had lectured to his class so lately as the preceding Monday, and, though afterwards indisposed, his death was unexpected.

The contributions to literature of the learned gentleman were of the most important kind. As Editor of the Edinburgh Review, he held a distinguished position among the critics of the day; and, for the last ten years, devoted much time and considerable erudition to superintending the "Encyclopædia Britannica;" the seventh edition of which great work was produced entirely under his direction.

DR. FELLOWES.

ROBERT FELLOWES, LL.D., was the grandson of Robert Fellowes, Esq., of Shottesham Hall, Norfolk. The learned and distinguished Doctor was educated at Oriel College, Oxford, and was ordained a Minister of the Church of England in 1795. He, however, afterwards abandoned the tenets of that church, and finally adopted the opinions he set forth in one of his latest works, published in 1836, and entitled "Religion of the Universe." These tenets he maintained, in the presence of his friends, on his dying bed. Dr. Fellowes was the intimate friend of Dr. Parr, and Mr. Baron Mazeres; the latter bequeathed to him £200,000.

In the establishment and fortunes of the London University (now University College) Dr. Fellowes took the most lively interest: he presented to that institution a sum to purchase two annual gold medals, which are to be given to the greatest proficients each year in clinical medicine. Dr. Elliotson, the professor of that department, is to have the decision of these prizes as long as he retains the professorship.

Dr. Fellowes espoused warmly the side of Queen Caroline at the momentous period of her trial: he it was who composed the answers she made to the numerous addresses tendered to her. The doctor was, for six years, editor of the British Critic, and the author of many works on religious topics. He has just terminated a green and intellectual old age, his death occurring recently in his 77th year.

HUGH, THIRD DUKE OF NORTHUMBERLAND.

IN the brilliant roll of our English noblesse there is no name more illustrious than that of Percy interwoven as it is with the most stirring events, and the most glorious achievements of our national history. The first of the family in England was William de Percy, Lord of Percy, near Villedieu, who accompanied the Conqueror from Normandy, and obtained for his services at Hastings a barony of thirty knights' fees. This feudal chieftain, distinguished amongst his contemporaries by the sobriquet of Algernons (William with the Whiskers), whence his descendants have constantly borne the name of Algernon, died a Crusader, at Mountjoy, near Jerusalem, the celebrated eminence whence the Pilgrims of the Cross first viewed the Holy City His Lordship's great granddaughter, and eventual heiress, Agnes de Percy, married Josceline of Louvaine, on condition that he assumed her surname; and from this alliance derived the Percys of Alnwick, the renowned Earls of Northumberland, a race of nobles remarkable alike for personal distinction and suffering. From the time of their great ancestor, Hotspur, the hero of Chevy Chase, to that of Queen Elizabeth, when Henry, eighth Earl of Northumberland, died a prisoner in the Tower, there was scarcely one inheritor of the title who did not fall either in battle or by the executioner's axe. Our brief limits permit but this slight glance at the illustrious genealogy of Percy. Suffice it to add, that its eventual heiress, the Lady Elizabeth Percy, became the wife of Charles Seymour, the proud Duke of Somerset, and had by him no less than thirteen children; the eldest surviving of whom, Algernon, Duke of Somerset, was created Earl of Northumberland in 1749, with remainder to Sir Hugh Smithson, Bart., who had married his Grace's daughter, the Lady Elizabeth Seymour, and who, in due course, succeeded to the title, obtaining, at the same time, an Act of Parliament to allow himself and his Countess to assume the surname of Percy. His Lordship was advanced to a Dukedom in 1766, and died in 1786, leaving a son Hugh, second Duke, father (by Francis Julia, his wife, daughter of Peter Burrell, Esq.) of the nobleman whose death we record.

SHIELD OF THE DUKES OF NORTHUMBERLAND.

THE LATE DUKE OF NORTHUMBERLAND.

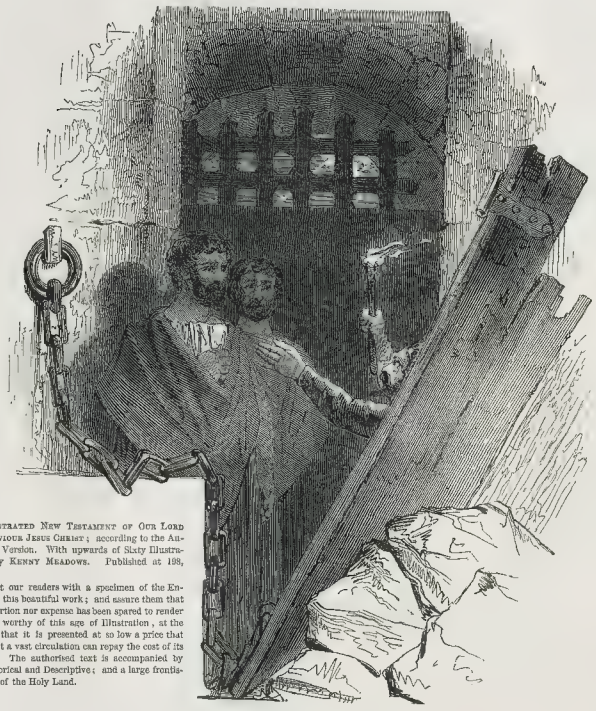
Hugh, third Duke of Northumberland, was born 17th April, 1785, and, consequently, had not completed his 62nd year. At a very early age, when Earl Percy, he graduated at St. John's College, Cambridge, and, in 1809, took his degree of LL.D. He entered Parliament as member for the town of Buckingham, and subsequently sat for Westminster and Northumberland. In 1825 his Grace was appointed Ambassador Extraordinary to the Court of France on the occasion of the Coronation of Charles X., and defrayed, from his private purse, the whole expenses of the Embassy, including, as it did, more magnificent array than that displayed by the representatives of the Imperial Crowns of Russia and Austria. The amount of the Duke's disbursements may be estimated from the fact that Parliament voted a sum of £10,000 to purchase a diamond hilted sword, as a present to his Grace. In 1829 he succeeded the Marquis of Anglesey as Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, and held his Court at Dublin with great splendour until the retirement of his party in the following year. His Grace of Northumberland married 29th April, 1817, Charlotte Florentia, second daughter of Edward, first Earl of Powis, but has left no child, his honours devolving on his only brother, Algernon, Lord Prudhoe.

We append a picturesque view of Alnwick Castle, the principal seat of the Northumberland family, and one of the most magnificent specimens in the kingdom of an old baronial residence. It stands upon a fine elevation, north-west of the town of Alnwick; the beautiful grounds, which are five miles long, are watered by the Aln, and contain the remains of two ancient Abbeys. The Castle is of freestone, and, as well as the recent repairs and ornaments, is in the Gothic style, and in excellent taste. It has a very splendid interior; and a chapel with an exquisitely-painted window, and illuminated ceiling.

We understand that the remains of the late Duke will be removed to Northumberland House, the London mansion of the family; there lie in state for two days; and be interred in Percy Chapel, Westminster Abbey, the mausoleum of this ancient house.

ILLUSTRATED LITERATURE.



PAUL AND SILAS IN PRISON.

THE ILLUSTRATED NEW TESTAMENT OF OUR LORD AND SAVIOUR JESUS CHRIST; according to the Authorised Version. With upwards of Sixty Illustrations, by KENNY MEADOWS. Published at 198, Strand.

We present our readers with a specimen of the Engravings in this beautiful work; and assure them that neither exertion nor expense has been spared to render the volume worthy of this age of Illustration, at the same time that it is presented at so low a price that nothing but a vast circulation can repay the cost of its production. The authorised text is accompanied by Notes, Historical and Descriptive; and a large frontispiece View of the Holy Land.

ALNWICK CASTLE, THE PRINCIPAL SEAT OF THE LATE DUKE OF NORTHUMBERLAND.

PRIZE ALMOND TUMBLERS.

FANCY BANTAMS AND PIGEONS.

The two Societies for the cultivation of the above objects held their annual meetings, at the Gray's Inn Coffee-house; the former on the 9th, and the latter on the 10th of February; when the prizes were adjudged as follows, viz.:—

Bantams
- First Prizes. Golden Cock, Do. Hen, Silver Cock, Do. Hen
- Second Prizes. Golden Cock, Do. Hen

Almond Tumblers
- First Prizes. Cock, Hen
- Second Prizes Cock, Hen
- Sweepstakes Cock, Hen

The amount of judgment and perseverance through which the beautiful varieties of the Fancy Bantam have been produced can only be appreciated by means of a comparison between the bird in its primitive state, and such a specimen, perfect in all such required points of weight, feather, tail and carriage, as constitute the pride and consummation of the intelligent fancier's labours

The process which has effected such a striking change will next demand some enquiry from the uninitiated but curious observer.

The common Bantam fowl, originally introduced from Java, is known to most persons, as a diminutive tenant of the poultry yard, rough-legged, and with a plumage chiefly composed of black and red, with some variety of brown or mottled grey. In the fancy bird, two distinct varieties are recognised, viz., the gold and the silver feather. In the former, the web is required to be of a clear, golden yellow, each feather having a distinct black edge, of a horse-shoe form, covering the flight and body. The tail feathers must not be edged, but tipped only, with a black crescent. The figure on the left hand of the accompanying Engraving represents a Golden Cock.

In the silver variety, the same edges and tips must appear upon a ground of pure silvery white. The figure in the centre of the Engraving is a Silver Cock, and facing the cock is the representation of a Silver Hen The figures thus represented are portraits of prize birds of the present year. The other requisites apply to both varieties, viz., belaced comb, i.e., the comb is required to terminate laterally in a well-formed point, and clean legs, entirely bare from the knee downwards

These requisites constitute the standard of a prize Bantam, providing that the weight does not exceed, in the cock, twenty-two ounces, and in the hen, eighteen ounces

The various operations which have conduced to the above standard would require more than our allotted space to describe; they might, however, furnish matter for curious investigation, and a minute detail of the process would supply a desideratum in the scanty portion of literature which addresses itself to the fancy breeder

The first important change in the Bantam feather was effected by a mixture of the Polish fowl, which bird was brought from Paris, about the year 1826, by the late Sir John Sebright. The spangled plumage obtained by this means was much prized at the time, but subsequent efforts have greatly enhanced the beauty of the feather, by transforming the spot or spangle into the perfect black edge. However, the achievement of the improved feather was not without the accompaniment of some serious drawbacks, especially with respect to weight. The intermixture of the gigantic proportions of the Polish fowl required to be sedulously counteracted, and several generations of birds were bred in transition before the required weight was re-established, and the objectionable tuft or top-knot, which was likewise derived from the Polish fowl, could be corrected.

Another peculiarity requisite for a prize Bantam, viz., the absence of hackle feathers, was obtained from the Chester fowl.

Over and above the standard already described, the Fancy Bantam is admired when he exhibits a free and manly carriage; he should plant his feet well, and the tail should not droop or draggle, but rise with a slight, but handsome curve.

Fine specimens of the Fancy Bantam are by no means common; and they are prized accordingly. The prize birds are put up to auction among the members of the club, the owner being allowed one bidding; and the sum of fifty pounds and one sailing, i.e., one shilling over the bidding of the proprietor, has been the purchase money for three fowls.

At the Show, the pretensions of the feathered candidates are recognised as follow:—The judges begin by selecting the most inferior bird, and throw out in succession, until only such remain as are considered eligible to compete for the prizes These are adjudged by the owners of rejected fowls. This equitable adjustment being made, and the Show concluded, the members then partake of a dinner, worthy of being set before gentlemen of cultivated taste and nice discernment, such as grace the Bantam Club.

* There is an occasional prize for a half-breed Cock and Hen; the birds showing the requisite qualities of colour, &c., but being over weight.

The Columbarian Club takes cognizance of the Almond Tumbler only. This scarce and beautiful species is produced from the Common Tumbler by means of judicious pairing, so as to sort the feather. The standard authorised by the Columbarian Club is as follows:—three colours, viz., black, white, and yellow, in the nine first feathers of each wing, and twelve in the tail; head round; beak small and straight; and a white ring around the pupil of the eyes. The bird must be small and stand low. With respect to the hen, a satisfactory standard has not yet been obtained. The aforesaid three colours, well developed, would constitute a standard; but at present, the hen is judged by head and beak, and by the negative purity implied by the absence of objectionable colours in the feather. The first prize Almond at the recent Show, represented on the left of the front group in the Engraving, exhibited a remarkably small beak, slightly depressed. This handsome bird, when placed in a separate cage for the artists observation, exhibited the ungracious airs of a spoiled beauty fretting, and ruffling its plumage, and finally settling into obstinate sulks

The Almond Tumbler improves with each moult, the richness of the plumage increasing until the decline of life, after which, splashed mottled, and other inferior appearances tend to obscure its beauty This species will bear breeding in and in better than any other; the diminution of size, which is the result, being considered to increase the value of the bird. A black variety of the same species, called Kites, are useful in breeding, to supply a deficiency in colour. The eye and beak of the Kite are susceptible of great perfection, and the bird shows much grace and beauty in shape and carriage.

It is remarkable in the round-headed Pigeons, among which the Almond Tumbler is conspicuous, that they have no sense of locality; and are, in consequence, easily lost. A phrenologist might account for this deficiency by a manipulation of the organ, which is to be found nearly over the ridge of the eye. In the Carrier, a striking contrast to the above species is perceived, both in form and other qualities. The well-known faculty possessed by this bird of traversing space with unerring precision, has been the subject of many anecdotes. The Carrier is considered to fly at the rate of about sixty miles an hour. The late Sir John Sebright gave six pairs of these birds to a gentleman, who took them to Antwerp, where he bred from them during three years. After this period, intelligence was received that the birds would be flighted on a certain morning at six precisely The first Carrier arrived at twelve on the same day; and before six in the evening, the whole twelve birds had returned to their former haunt in London.

PRIZE BANTAMS.—1. GOLDEN HEN. 2. GOLDEN COCK. 3. SILVER COCK. 4. SILVER HEN.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

A COCKNEY COURSING

As she skimm'd along
Her flying feet unbathed on dew-drops hung—Partly from DRYDEN'S Virgil.

In a very few days the season for hunting the hare will close; but her persecution hath a longer date. Alas! poor pass of the valley and the hill, wherefore hast thou not nine lives, like thy sister of the rug and the fireside? By night the snare, by day the gun, perpetually compass thy fleeting existence; while, for a long moiety of the year, the beagle and the harrier are yelling on thy trail, or the fierce greyhound is snapping at the scent. Like the majority of our popular sports, Coursing has long been pardon the inevitable pun—a pursuit as well as a pastime. Before and since the days of my Lord Rivers and Colonel Thornton, "the long-dog" has been as regularly bred and trained for the purpose of racing as the blood horse for the turf. For him, as for the Olympic champion, there are Cups, and Plates, and Stakes to suit his years, and all the "pride, pomp, and circumstance" of the course. You see him led forth in gay apparel, his condition canvassed, his points scrutinized, his qualities speculated about in the ring. Next to the race-course, a meeting attended by the crack kennels is the place for spirited betting. Your professor of the leash maketh his book as systematically as your better round at Tattersall's; and let people abuse it never so much, a course is a stirring pastime. "Who that lives to walk or wander over the green earth—except, indeed, it merely be some sonneteer or ballad-monger—if he had time and could afford it, and lived in a tolerably open country, would not keep, at the very least, three greyhounds?" asks Christopher North; and we hold his question as fairly put But he is thinking only of the sport—the science of beating fallow, stubble, or lea—the jump the heart gives into the mouth at the cry of Soho!—the ecstacy with which you see the slim pet of particular partizans give the "go-by" to the pick of the county, and bear the quarry with a flight as fleet as that of the falcon's wing! . . . .

Away with your coursing on Marlborough Downs, where huge hares are seen squatted from a distance, and the sleek dogs, disrobed of their gaudy trappings, are let slip by a Tryer, running for Cups and Collars, before lords and ladies and squires of high and low degree,—a pretty pastime enough, no doubt, in its way, and a splendid cavalcade. But will it for a moment compare with a sudden and all unlooked for start of the "auld witch" from the burrweed-covered sea, when the throat of every pedestrian is privileged to cry "Halloo! hallo! halloo!" and whipcord-tailed greyhound and hairy lurcher, without any invidious distinction of birth or bearing, lay their deep breasts to the sward at the same moment and the same instant, and brattle over the lea after the disappearing Ears, lad flat at the first sight of her pursuers, as, with reverted eyes, she turns her face to the mountain? . . . . No, not a bit of it; and the unthinking and conventional, who deduced our theme from its thesis, little dreamt that it should be a true presentiment of this animated imagination.

'Twas on Wednesday last—no matter why or wherefore—that we sallied forth for a Cockney Coursing on—Leatherhead Downs People journey to the Rhine and to the Rhone in search of the picturesque: did they ever ride from Epsom to Dorking? They suspend, "naso adunco," all that is termed Cockney. Hath the bacchanal of the South such a vintage as the Cockney? was Philip of Macedon so mounted? did Pindar dream of the glories he can realise at his pleasure? Perhaps the limits of civilisation have not a spot more auspicious for the leash than Leatherhead—name unemphonious!—with its "boundless contiguity of downs." There, by grace of Mr Ladbroke, are held, on occasion, as pretty passages of coursing as the eye hath seen. The district is tossed into mighty waves of valley and upland, dotted with sweet little inlets of foliage, wherein harbour as nimble quarry as ever tried the stanchest blood and the fleetest foot. The tryst we write of was a humble one: here and there a denizen of the great metropolis might be seen cultivating the bright, brisk atmosphere, after a brace o' greyhounds true"—

From slip or leash there never sprang
More fleet of foot, more sure of fang.

But all was without pretension. In these days, when wealth seems the one thing that is sought or desirable, these notices of healthful relaxations may read mutatis mutandis. Nevertheless, when headache anchors the millionaire at the uneasy moorings of his pillow, or dyspepsia makes him prisoner in his elbow chair, it may be that, turning this recipé of the Surrey hills in his recollection, he shall avail himself of the prescription, and arise to his calling "a better man."

TATTERSALL'S.

MONDAY.—The number of events now in betting renders it impossible to do more than glance at the leading movements. Passing, therefore, the Liverpool Steeple Chase, and the Newmarket and Metropolitan Handicaps, we may observe briefly that Mendicant maintains a good position in the list of favourites for the Chester Cup, for which, too, Melsey Pea and Antler are rising in estimation; no others are fancied to any extent, and Bedlam, thanks to his owner, is gone to the rear. Of the Derby nags, we may select the three leaders, Horn of Chase, and Wanota, as having been in great favour, and in almost every case at an improvement. Nerissa is decidedly "looking up" for the Oaks.

LIVERPOOL STEEPLE CHASE.

9 to 1 agst Brunette (t)	25 to 1 agst Lester (t)
12 to 1 — Sansspan (t)	25 to 1 — Mallow (t)
12 to 1 — The Rotter (t)

25 to 1 agst Lord Antrim (t)	30 to 1 — Red Lancer (t)
18 to 1 — Pioneer (t)

NEWMARKET HANDICAP.

10 to 1 agst Portsmouth	20 to 1 agst Sir Martin
15 to 1 — Lynceus (t)	25 to 1 — Kashong

Brocardo was scratched this afternoon.

METROPOLITAN HANDICAP.

20 to 1 agst Sheraton (t)	40 to 1 agst Hannah Raine (t)

TWO THOUSAND GUINEAS STAKE.

7 to 1 agst Caerydmdam (t) | 150 to 100 agst Kent's Ist (t)

CHESTER CUP.

22 to 1 agst Mendicant (t)	40 to 1 agst Duke of Richmond (t)	66 to 1 agst Pal (t)
25 to 1 — The Lamb (t)	66 to 1 — Emigrant (t)	66 to 1 — Inheritress (t)
30 to 1 — Camera Obscura (t)	66 to 1 — Emigrant (t)	70 to 1 — Hannah Raine (t)
30 to 1 — Antler (t)	66 to 1 — Hermodel (t)	100 to 1 — Sandpiper (t)
30 to 1 — Punch	66 to 1 — Sir Tatton Sykes	200 to 1 — Robin Burns (t)
35 to 1 — Mickey Free (t)	66 to 1 — Bedlam	700 even on the field again) twenty-seven.

DERBY.

4 to 1 agst Kent's Ist	25 to 1 agst Caerydmdam (t)	35 to 1 agst Wanota
15 to 2 — Van Tromp (t)	30 to 1 — Mr. Merrin (t)	35 to 1 — Bedlam
19 to 1 — Retreve	30 to 1 — Horn of Chase (t)	50 to 1 — Bingham
19 to 1 — Planet (t)	35 to 1 — Red Hart	66 to 1 — Projectile
22 to 1 — Gismlit (t)	35 to 1 — Sir to Cotswold e

1500 even between Retreve and Planet.

NEWMARKET HANDICAP.

10 to 1 agst Mendicant	66 to 1 agst Dolo (t)

(taken)

25 to 1 — The Lamb	66 to 1 — Euclid colt (t)
28 to 1 — Antler	66 to 1 — Sweetmeat (t)
30 to 1 — Punch	66 to 1 — Sir Tatton Sykes	70 to 1 — Doleful (t)
33 to 1 — Camera Obscura	100 to 1 — Pitsallan	100 to 1 — The Promiser, 4 yrs
40 to 1 — The Flitch	66 to 1 — Newcourt (t)	(taken)

800 to 100 agst the Three year-olds (t)

DERBY.

15 to 2 agst Van Tromp	25 to 1 agst Caerydmdam	50 to 1 agst Bedlam (t)
10 to 1 — Epirote (t)	25 to 1 — Horn of Chase	50 to 1 — Bingham (t)
12 to 1 — Planet	40 to 1 — Liberator	50 to 1 — Old Port
22 to 1 — Gismlit (t)	40 to 1 — Lonsdale
	66 to 1 — Will-o'-the-Wisp (t)

OAKS.

15 to 1 agst Miami	—16 to 1 agst Nerissa	30 gr 1 Ellerdale

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"Gerald."—It is the custom in France to warn the Queen of danger when she is attacked by crying "check," but it is not usual to do so in this country.

"E. S. T."—It shall be looked at, and the solution supplied shortly.

"A. J." Holkham. Due attention shall be paid them.

"G. B. H., Bristol.—Your solution is obviously wrong; why should the Black King be moved to Q R 3rd at the second move?

"A Dublin Subscriber" is thanked for the games, and for his really valuable suggestion.

"D. F. L."—You may see the periodical named at any of the places of public resort for Chess-players; but we hold it to be the duty, as well to the veterans, of every real lover of the game, to enroll his name on the list of supporters of a Magazine devoted to the extension of Chess.

"M. R." The position is neat enough, and shall be given some day among our collection of Enigmas, if agreeable to you.

"M. N. C." Yes!—Somewhat too simple, except for very young practitioners; but we shall endeavour to find a number for it by-and-by.

"Occasional." In the position given, if White, conceiving he would lose by interposing his R, or playing his King out of the attack of the adverse Rook, persists in moving backwards and forwards his Rook and Knight's second quarters, and Black persist also in the repetition of the checks, then the game must be drawn. The player of the White pieces, however, must be very unexpert not to perceive, in the situation sent, that he can win the game easily.

"R. S. C." Your very pretty little stratagem shall appear speedily.

"Sopranist." You have only partially succeeded with the solutions this week.

"G. A. H."—We much prefer Problems which are solvable only in one way. Your solutions are, as usual, "quite correct."

"Peter Simple." You can obtain instruction in Chess of Mr. Kulper, the German player, upon extremely moderate terms. Apply at No. 5, adjoining the Rose and Crown Divan, on the Strand. The Problem you have forwarded is quite unsuited for publication.

"H. M. G." The subscription to the St. George's Club is three guineas per annum.

Solutions by "A. M. D." "S. R. C." "G. A. H." "B. T." "M. P." "Dublin." "J. W. R." "Sopracitta," "W. H. C." "Bridgnorth," and "T. R." are correct.

SOLUTION TO PROBLEM, NO. 160.

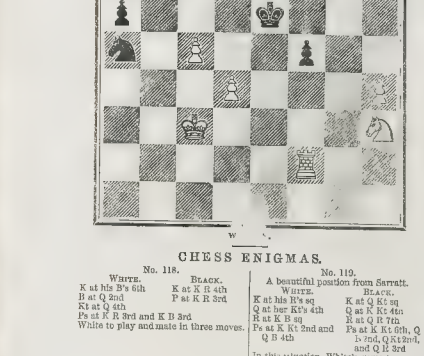
WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. K B to K Kt 8th	K to Kt 8th	5. Kt to Q 3rd	K to Kt 8th
2. K B to K R 7th (ch)	K to R 8th	6. Kt to Q B 8 sq (dis ch)	K to R 8th
3. Kt to K Kt 6th	K to R 8th	7. Kt to Q Kt 3rd (ch)	mate.
4. Kt to K 8th (dis ch)	K to R 8th

PROBLEM, NO. 161.

By MR. MC. G—Y.

White to mate in five moves.

BLACK.



WHITE.

CHESS ENIGMAS.

No. 118.

WHITE.	BLACK.
K at his B's 6th	K at K 6 4th
R at Q 3rd	P at K R 3rd
Kt at Q 4th
P s t K R 3rd and K B 3rd

White to play and mate in three moves.

No. 119.

A beautiful position from Sarratt.

WHITE.	BLACK.
K at his K's sq	K at Q K sq
R at his K R's 4th	Q at K Kt 4th
Kt at K B sq	Kt at Q R 7th
P s at K R 2nd and Q B 4th	P s at K R 6th, Q at Q Kt 3rd, and Q R 3rd

In this situation, White's game is apparently irretrievable; but, by a skilful manœuvre, he can draw it

No. 120.

WHITE.	BLACK.
P at K 4th	P at K 6th
	P at K 4th

White playing first, can mate in 3 moves.

GAME BETWEEN CAPTAIN KENNEDY AND MR. L——, ONE OF THE STRONGEST LONDON PLAYERS.

WHITE (Mr. L.)	BLACK (Capt. K.)	WHITE (Mr. L.)	BLACK (Capt. K.)
1. K P two	K P two	24. Kt takes K P (a)	Kt takes Kt
2. K Kt to B 3rd	Q Kt to B 3rd	25. Q R takes Kt	Kt to Q 2nd
3. K Kt to Q B 4th	K Kt to Q B 4th	26. Q takes Q P	Kt takes Q R
4. Q B P one	K Kt to B 3rd	27. Q takes Kt	B to K Kt 2nd
5. Q P one	Q P one	28. Q to Q 4th (b)	Q takes Q
6. K P one	K P one	29. P takes Q	Q R to Q Kt 5th
7. Q Kt P two	B to Q Kt 3rd	30. Q P one	R to Q 6th
8. Q R P two	Q R P two	31. B to Q sq	Q R to Q 5th
9. Q Kt P one	Q Kt to K 2nd	32. Kt to Q Kt 3rd	Q R takes B
10. Q B to K 3rd	Q B takes B	33. Kt takes R	R takes Kt
11. Q to K 2nd	K B to Q B 2nd	34. Q P one	R to Q Kt sq
12. K Kt to Q Kt 3rd	Q P one	35. Q P one	R to Q sq
13. Q Kt to Q 2nd	B to Q Q 2nd	36. K B P one	B to K R 4th
14. Q Kt P takes P	Q Kt P takes P	37. R to Q 6th	B takes K R P
15. Q B to Q B 5th	Q Kt to K Kt 3rd	38. K P one	B to K R 5th
16. K R P one	Q B to his sq	39. K to K 2nd	B to Q B 4th
17. Q to K 3rd	K B to Q 3rd	40. K takes Q R P	B to K 2nd
18. K to K R sq	Castles	41. K to K B 4th	R takes Q P
19. Q R to Q Kt sq	Q B to Q 4th	42. R to Q 6th (ch)	K to K 3rd
20. K to K Kt 2nd	B takes B	43. Q R P one	R to Q 8th (ch)
21. Q takes B	B takes Q P	44. R to K Kt 3rd	R to Q 6th (ch)
22. Q R to K sq	Q R to K Kt sq	45. K to Q B 4th	R to K 2 8th (ch)
23. P takes P	P takes P	46. K to K 4th	R takes K R P

And Black lost the Game.

(a) Badly played. The capture of this Pawn costs White "the exchange."
(b) White is forced to offer the exchange of Queens, otherwise he loses a piece.

BETWEEN MR. KIESERITZKI AND MR. PARDO.

The former game has Q's Rook, which must be removed from the Board.

WHITE (Mr. K.)	BLACK (Mr. P.)	WHITE (Mr. K.)	BLACK (Mr. P.)
1. K P two	K P two	21. K R to Kt 5th	Q P one
2. K P two	P takes P	22. Q Kt to K 4th	Q Kt takes Kt
3. K Kt to B 3rd	K Kt to B 3rd	23. P takes Kt	Q Kt to Q B 6th
4. K B to Q B 4th	B to R 5th (ch)	24. B to K 5th (b)	Q R to K sq
5. K Kt P one	P takes P	25. P takes Kt	R takes B
6. Castles	P takes K R P (ch)	26. Q to Q 2nd	R to K sq
7. K to R sq (a)	K B to his 3rd	27. Q takes Q P	R to K 7th (ch)
8. P to K 5th	Q P two	28. K to Kt 2nd	R to K 7th (ch)
9. P takes B	B takes P	29. K to Q sq	R to K sq
10. K B to K 2nd	Castles	30. Q to her 5th	Q to K Kt 3rd
11. Q P one	K Kt to his 5th	31. Kt to Kt 5th	Q to K R 4th
12. K Kt to his 5th	Kt to K R 3rd	32. R takes B P	Q to her 5th (c)
